The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield.

Mr. KING. I wish to ask a question of the Senator?

Mr. BINGHAM. Certainly; I yield.

Mr. KING. I did not quite comprehend the significance of the Senator's motion or his statement.

Mr. BINGHAM. The significance of it is this——

Mr. KING. Let me ask this question: Does the Senator mean that references heretofore made shall be expunged from the RECORD or that there shall be no further references?

Mr. BINGHAM. No. What I intended by my motion was this: In order to meet the situation where a resolution has been so worded as to give offense to hundreds of thousands of our fellow citizens and to give offense to the spirit of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, I intended to secure action whereby the resolution could be referred to the proper committee without having the wording of it printed in the RECORD, which is the case, as the Senator knows, as to at least 99 per cent of the resolutions which are referred to the committee without being printed in the RECORD.

Mr. KING. My question was induced by reason of the fact that the Senator used the word "further"—that no further reference be made to it in the RECORD.

Mr. BINGHAM. If I used that word, I ask that it be stricken out.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. BINGHAM. Certainly.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. It does seem to me that the Senate has control of its RECORD, and whether this is a resolution or whether it is not a resolution, the whole thing is now a part of the RECORD. I understand the motion of the Senator from New Jersey now, in substance repeated by the Senator from Connecticut, to be to expunge it from the RECORD.

Mr. EDGE. Exactly.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I submit the parliamentary inquiry to the Vice President whether that motion is in order?

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President, before the Chair makes a ruling——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The present occupant of the chair, without further consideration, believes that as the resolution has already gone to the committee the motion referred to by the Senator from Montana would not be in order; but a motion to expunge from the RECORD what would otherwise be printed in the RECORD would be in order.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That, as I understand, is now the motion of the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Connecticut yield to me?

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, the object of my motion was that the reference of the resolution to the committee stand as stated by the Chair, but that the reading of the resolution by the clerk be expunged from the RECORD.

Mr. EDGE and Mr. BLEASE addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield first to the Senator from New Jersey, and then I will yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, it makes absolutely no difference to me in what way the parliamentary action is secured, but the motion I made was exactly as stated by the Senator from Connecticut, and I made it before the resolution was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia. However, I am quite content to have it carried in the form in which it is now presented.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. BINGHAM. I will yield in a moment. My understanding of what the Senator from New Jersey said was that he wished to have the reading of the paper expunged. I do not think that the Senator from New Jersey, any more than myself, until I had examined it at the desk, realized that this indecent, obscene, doggerel verse was a part of the resolution, and therefore did not come under Rule XI, referred to by the Senator, because no one can object to the reading of a resolution.

Mr. EDGE. My first desire was to object to the reading of the resolution under Rule XI. Then, finding that the reading of the resolution had been completed, I made the motion that the matter be expunged from the RECORD. Upon a parliamentary inquiry being made by myself, the Vice President decided that it could not be done by a vote, but only by unanimous consent. Thereupon, I asked unanimous consent, which was refused.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President——

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina is recognized.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President, my reason for asking that the resolution be referred to the committee was that it be not printed in the RECORD or printed as a resolution until that committee had reported on it. Now, if the Senator from Connecticut, who is a friend of mine, as I am his friend, says that the resolution gives any offense to him, I will withdraw it.

Mr. BINGHAM. I thank the Senator. Then, I will change my motion.

Mr. BLEASE. I am not withdrawing it because it might give any offense to the Negro race. I do not want the Senator to understand that to be the case.

Mr. BINGHAM. I ask the Senator from South Carolina to listen to the change I shall make in the motion. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the resolution may be expunged from the RECORD.

Mr. BLEASE. I have no objection to that.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

LIMITATION OF TARIFF REVISION TO AGRICULTURAL SCHEDULE

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be stated.

The Chief Clerk read Senate Resolution 91, submitted by Mr. BORAH on the 13th instant, as follows:

Whereas it is the sense of the Senate that any amendment to the existing tariff law should be confined to agriculture and directly related products: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance is hereby instructed to limit its hearings, deliberations, recommendations, and report upon H. R. 2667 (the tariff bill) to the agricultural and directly related schedules.

Mr. BORAH obtained the floor.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. JONES. I desire to offer an amendment to the resolution; and I will state that I have modified the amendment which I offered the other day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment, as modified, will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of line 4, before the period, it is proposed to insert:

and any other line of industry in which there is and has been during the past few years a substantial slackening of activity, with a consequent decrease of employment, due to insurmountable competition from imports of the products of such industry.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the adoption of the amendment would mean, in my judgment, the defeat of the resolution. I really do not see why we can not have a direct vote upon the resolution.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. BORAH. In just a moment. It is perfectly clear to my mind, and I think it would be clear to the mind of anyone who would undertake to interpret the amendment, that there would be no limit to the revision which could be had under that amendment.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. BORAH. I do.

Mr. BINGHAM. Does the Senator think that his resolution, without the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington, meets the promise made by the Republican platform which was drafted in the committee of which the Senator from Idaho was a member?

Mr. BORAH. I am going to discuss that subject, Mr. President. I can not answer that question "yes" or "no"; but let me say that if the House had passed a bill in accordance with the platform, this resolution never would have been offered. The first violation of the platform was the bill which was passed by the other body.

Mr. BINGHAM. Does not the Senator think that the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington actually does bring his resolution in line with the platform?

Mr. BORAH. No; I do not. The special session was not in the mind of the makers of the platform.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. JONES. I just want to state that the amendment proposed by me conforms as nearly as I could conform it to the language of the President in his message calling Congress in extra session; and I can hardly agree with the suggestion of the Senator that it practically broadens the investigation indefinitely. I think it makes the limitation that the President suggests in his message.

Mr. BORAH. I think the Senator is in a measure correct; but the House had before it the language of the President, and apparently gave no consideration whatever to the language of the President; and the organization of the Finance Committee of the Senate, and the statements made upon the floor by the majority leader and the chairman of the Finance Committee, indicate that they are not going to follow the President's language in any sense whatever. It becomes necessary therefore to restrict the language of the President's message in order to enforce its observance.

Mr. JONES. I hope they will follow it if we indorse it.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the junior Senator from Washington?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. DILL. Does not the Senator think that the words "directly related schedules" are so indefinite that he ought to name the schedules to which the committee is to be confined?

Mr. BORAH. I am going to discuss that matter in a minute; and I think at least I can state my position with reference to those words, and the position and view of those who were instrumental in framing the resolution.

Mr. President, I look upon tariff revision, so far as the special session is concerned, as a part of the program of farm relief. It was, in my judgment, so understood during the campaign; and my only object and purpose in offering this resolution is to have an understanding, determined by the vote of the Senate, as to whether we are sincerely to undertake to treat revision as a part of farm relief, or whether we are going to undertake a general revision of the tariff at this special session which was to be devoted to farm relief.

I recognize the fact that it is difficult to draw a resolution so specific as not to call for construction, and that a construction may be placed upon this resolution that is out of line with its attempted purpose; but my object in presenting the resolution is to secure the sense of the Senate as to whether we are going to undertake in good faith to revise the tariff schedules so far as they relate to farm products, and to treat tariff revision in this special session as an element of farm relief, or whether we are going to make farm relief purely incidental, and enter into a general revision of the tariff; and if we do enter upon a general revision of the tariff we may be assured that it will be an upward revision. So, Mr. President, instead of following what was indicated by the President—a limited revision—we are going to have a general revision, and a general revision upward.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. I do not want to interrupt the Senator, because I am very much interested to hear his viewpoint that inspired the resolution; but the very point he makes in regard to the schedules representing industry being unfair or unjust, or that they will be still further raised, leads me to ask this question:

How can we ascertain the injustice of the present or existing or increased schedules of an industrial nature if, through the passage of this resolution, we deliberately close all the usual avenues, through committee investigation, of securing information?

In other words, if the present law is unjust, or if it is assumed that a report from the Finance Committee will be more so, then would it not be all the more necessary to have the facts adduced by the Finance Committee, so that by the same vote on the floor of the Senate it might so direct the committee to confine itself to agriculture that we would be in a position to vote intelligently whether schedules of an industrial nature should be raised or lowered?

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, as I said a moment ago, if there had been any evidence whatever of good faith in carrying out the language of the President's message to Congress, if there had been an effort to deal with the farm schedules and only such other schedules as would come within the terms of his message, this resolution would not have been offered. But a construction has been placed upon the message which was unjustified.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana and Mr. BINGHAM addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BORAH. Just a moment. But you may be assured of the fact that the evidence is at hand that the message of the President has been and is to be disregarded, and we are to have here a general revision. That has been stated frankly by those who are in a position to state the program before the Senate.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. BORAH. I do.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator says that he is opposed to the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES], does he not?

Mr. BORAH. Yes.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator says he is opposed to that; and yet the words of the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington are precisely the words of the President's message, and are exactly in line with the speech the President made in Boston during the campaign, and with the very idea which he put into the message calling this extra session together. Since the Senator is so interested in having the wishes of the President carried out, how can he object to what the Senator from Washington is attempting to do to carry them out?

Mr. BORAH. Do not misunderstand me. I am not so much interested in having the wishes of the President carried out as I am in having a revision of the tariff based upon the theory of farm relief, and in my opinion that is what the President intended by his language; and by reason of the fact that that language has been misconstrued, and is of such a nature that it covers the present situation as it is developing, I want to put a more restricted construction on that language in this resolution. I am by this resolution construing the President's message.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

Mr. BINGHAM. It is the same language.

Mr. BORAH. I know it is the same language; but the House paid no attention to that language. The Senate Finance Committee are paying no attention to that language.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

Mr. BINGHAM. Oh, I beg the Senator's pardon. If the Senator will look at the hearings of the only one of the subcommittees of the Finance Committee which I have been able to attend—namely, the one on the cotton schedule, which is now meeting—he will see that at the very opening of the hearings that language was read into the record, and the witnesses were told that it would be the effort of the committee to limit itself to carrying out that language; and yet the Senator says the Senate Finance Committee has made no such effort.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the Senator knows perfectly well that that language is susceptible of a construction which will permit a revision of any schedules where the parties come in and claim that they are in a distressed condition.

Mr. BINGHAM. Provided they can prove it.

Mr. BORAH. Yes; provided they can prove it; but you are entering upon the entire proposition of tariff revision. You would not revise any schedule under any circumstances, at any session, unless the facts in your opinion sustained it; but you are permitting, under that resolution, a showing upon all schedules with which people may be dissatisfied. And it is easy to know what will be the result.

Mr. BINGHAM. But, as the Senator from New Jersey pointed out, if the Senator does not permit us to hold a hearing on the subject, how are we going to know whether these words cover the situation or whether the situation meets the President's message or not?

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield; and to whom?

Mr. BORAH. The Senator from Indiana [Mr. ROBINSON] sought to interrupt me several minutes ago. I yield first to him.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President, I am surprised at the statement of the Senator from Idaho that this resolution would not have been offered if the proposed revision in the House had not been so general. I do not see where the Senate has any special control over the House. The Senate presumably takes care of its own business.

Mr. BORAH. Well, we had a vote on the debenture in the House.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I understood the Senator to say that the resolution offered by him is not in accord with the plank of the Republican platform which came from the resolutions committee, of which the Senator was a distinguished member. He also states that his resolution is not in entire accord with the language of the President which undertook to interpret that plank in the platform. His objection seems to be entirely that the House has done something he does not like. What warrant has the Senator for assuming that the Senate will not do what is right and proper, especially under the influence of the able Senator himself? Therefore, what reason is there for his resolution? The Senator admits that his resolution never would have been offered if the House had done something to please him.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, there never was anything put in the platform, nor was anything said in the campaign or at any other time, indicating a general revision of the tariff at this special session. A fair construction of the language, so far as the special session is concerned, shows that it related to farm relief, and the revision which was to be had was to have in mind farm relief. The President did, in his message, owing to one or two schedules, such as textiles, open up the question, so that one could go beyond that, but the House took advantage of that and entered into a general revision, and the Senate Finance Committee proposes to do the same thing.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President, how does the Senator know that the Senate will not do what it should?

Mr. BORAH. I have been here during three revisions of the tariff, and I know precisely what they will do.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Even so, Mr. President, if the Senator feels that the Senate would so far transgress the rules as to do something it should not do, how does he expect his resolution to prevent it, even if it were agreed to?

Mr. BORAH. If we have sufficient votes to pass the resolution, we will have sufficient votes to shape the revision, and I am starting early so that no one can claim estoppel.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. If we have sufficient votes to pass the resolution, we have sufficient votes to pass a decent tariff law in the Senate.

Mr. BORAH. That is what I want to find out early.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Why can we not do that without any curbs of any kind?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Comparatively recently—that is, on January 16, 1928—the Senate adopted a resolution known as the McMaster resolution, in which it expressed itself in this language:

> Resolved, That many of the rates in existing tariff schedules are excessive and that the Senate favors an immediate revision downward of such excessive rates, establishing a closer parity between agriculture and industry, believing it will result to the general benefit of all.

On the 16th of January, 1928, after weeks of debate on that resolution, with other clauses in it, the Senate adopted that resolution, thus declaring for a revision downward, by a vote of 54 to 34. So that so far as the Senate is concerned it quite recently announced a policy of revision downward. Now, we are told that revision upward is the program of the administration.

While this is being discussed, I would like to know who speaks for the President here. Some Senators say that the President wants a limited tariff revision, substantially as provided by the resolution of the Senator from Idaho, and other Senators say that he wants a general revision. Who knows?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President, as far as I am personally concerned, I simply want to say this, in answer to my good friend the Senator from Arkansas: I am speaking with reference to the Republican platform that was adopted at Kansas City, which the Senator from Idaho helped to write. That is what I am interested in and what I am talking about, and what the Senator himself said goes farther than his resolution. He further states that his resolution never would have been offered had the House done what he desired it to do. Therefore it seems to be assumed by this resolution that the Senate is incapable of doing what is right.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE and Mr. BARKLEY addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield?

Mr. BORAH. I am going to yield to the Senator from California and then I would like to have the floor a few minutes myself.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I certainly do not approve of the procedure just now in progress, namely, interrupting a Senator when he rises to address himself seriously to a grave matter. I am not offending against my view by asking the Senator one question, and after I shall have asked the question I shall be very glad to remain silent and hear his answer and his reasons for the resolution pending.

I hold in my hand what purports to be one of the planks adopted by the last Republican National Convention, which reads as follows:

> We realize that there are certain industries which can not now successfully compete with foreign producers because of lower foreign wages and a lower cost of living abroad, and we pledge the next Republican Congress to an examination, and, where necessary, a revision of these schedules, to the end that American labor in these industries may again command the home market, may maintain its standard of living, and may count upon steady employment in its accustomed field.

I will be glad to have the Senator, before he shall have concluded, point out to us wherein the House bill as it comes to us has gone beyond the scope and the meaning and the purpose of that plank in the Republican platform. I do not invite an answer now, but before the Senator shall have finished I trust he will express his views touching that matter.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I hope the Senate in listening will keep in mind that when that platform was drawn and adopted there was no discussion, no contemplation, no thought of a special session. The special session arose out of the distress of agriculture, and the work of the special session, aside from any work which might be done at a general session, was to be devoted to farm relief. As I said in the opening, I look upon tariff revision at the special session as a part and parcel of the program of farm relief. That plank of the platform could be carried out, if it was to be carried out and carried out strictly and technically, at a regular session, but we are now dealing with a special session, which was called solely and exclusively for the purpose of dealing with farm relief.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, surely the Senator does not mean that.

Mr. BORAH. Just a moment. I mean just exactly what I say.

Let us deal with this matter from the standpoint of a special session. The announcement for a special session was made by the President on October 28, 1928. He said:

> There are a number of questions, particularly agricultural relief, which urgently require solution and should not be delayed for a whole year. It is our most urgent economic problem.

We stated the same proposition in the platform at Kansas City, that the most urgent economic problem before the American people was that of farm relief, and it became so urgent during the progress of the campaign, not only economically but politically, that the President felt under the necessity of calling a special session to deal with it. That it is which brought us here, and now those who were opposed to a special session want to use it for their benefit.

Is there any Senator here who believes that we would be in session if it had not been for the farm condition? Would we have had any program at all to deal with prior to the general session if it had not been for the farm condition? We regarded that as urgent, as requiring specific and speedy action, and therefore the special session was called.

When the special session was called the President sent his message and indicated a limited revision of the tariff. It is true that he did not confine it entirely to farm relief, but he did confine it to limited revision.

Those who are here advocating the upholding of the President in his message have stated upon the floor that there should be no limited revision, that there should be a general revision, and the object and purpose of this resolution is to call the Senate back to the proposition of a limited revision.

Certainly it will not be contended that the President has not advocated and does not advocate now a limited revision. Certainly it will not be contended that he does not regard farm relief as the most urgent problem, and certainly it will not be contended that that is not uppermost in his mind when we are dealing with the tariff. In his speech at St. Louis the President said:

> There has never been a national campaign into which so large a discussion of the agricultural problem has entered as in this campaign. This is as it should be. It is the most urgent, economic problem in our Nation to-day. * * *
>
> Many factors enter into the solution of this whole problem. One is by the tariff to reserve to the farmer the American market; to safeguard him from the competition of imports of farm products. * * * Adequate tariff is essential if we would assure relief to the farmer.

At the present time, as I stated the other day, there are some $2,500,000,000 worth of farm products coming into our markets in competition with the American farmer, and it was that which the President had in mind when he proposed to deal with tariff revision at the special session.

The only thing which led the President to modify his proposition was the consideration of the textiles schedule, and if the House had confined itself to that matter, or if the Senate Committee on Finance would confine itself to it, there would be no occasion for this controversy at this time. But the House did not do so, the Senate Finance Committee does not propose to do so, and what I and others who are interested in is to know whether now, at this special session, not at a regular session but this special session, called for farm relief, we are going to enter upon a general revision of the tariff, in which the farmer will have a very inconsequential place, if the bill which passed the House is to be taken as a criterion, when we get through with it.

In his acceptance speech the President said:

> The most urgent economic problem in our Nation to-day is in agriculture. * * * The working out of agricultural relief constitutes the most important obligation of the next administration.

Bearing in mind, therefore, that the President urged from the beginning that the farm problem was the most urgent problem; bearing in mind that it was because of that urgent problem that he called the special session; bearing in mind that he asked for limited revision—the test upon this resolution will be whether we are to have a limited revision or a general revision.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. Does not the Senator think that the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] calls for limited revision in precisely the same words used by the President in calling the extra session?

Mr. BORAH. If I should construe it, I think it could be so construed; but if the Senate Finance Committee construes it, it will not be so construed.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the committees of the House and the Senate have paid no attention to the original language of the President, would they be any more impressed by its repetition in the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BORAH. The amendment offered by the Senator from Washington is perfectly satisfactory to those who are for general revision. It will be found when the vote is cast that all those in favor of general revision will vote for the amendment, and it will be perfectly satisfactory to them.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. BORAH. I will yield the floor pretty soon.

Mr. BINGHAM. Does the Senator think that his resolution would permit the discussion of tariff on textiles?

Mr. BORAH. My opinion is it would not, because if you let down the bars advantage will be taken to bring in everything.

Mr. BINGHAM. In other words, the Senator admits that his resolution goes much more drastically against what the President wished than any possible construction of the Senator from Washington.

Mr. BORAH. There are those who believe that under my resolution textiles could be included. I do not think so myself. The resolution was not so intended at the time it was drawn. But I will say to the Senator, and I will say to those who are opposed to the resolution, if they will confine themselves to farm schedules and textiles alone, there will be no controversy. But that is not what has been done; it is not what you propose to do. You propose to disregard the President's message, just as was done in the House.

Mr. BINGHAM. No, Mr. President; so far as I am concerned, I propose to follow it; but the President has certainly never limited it to textiles. The President specifically stated that he was interested and wanted us to look into a study of those industries "in which there has been a substantial slackening of activity during the past few years, and consequent decrease of employment."

Mr. DILL. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. DILL. The Senator just stated that some thought that under his resolution textiles would be included, and that others thought not. That is a fine example, I think, of the indefiniteness of the Senator's resolution, by which he would transfer to the Finance Committee a debate on whether or not things were included under the resolution. I again ask the Senator whether it would not be in the interest of clarity and swiftness of action by the committee for us to name the schedules to be included in the resolution?

Mr. BORAH. Of course, Mr. President, there are industries in the State of every Senator which would be cut out under the resolution. I realized that when the resolution was introduced. I have telegrams from my State, and undoubtedly every Senator has received similar messages, asking for duties upon articles which would not be covered under this resolution. The simple question presented by the resolution is whether Senators having those interests in their respective States are willing to surrender their views in regard to them during the special session and devote the special session to farm relief. Are we willing to do what we promised to do in this special session for farm relief. That is the real test under the resolution.

Mr. DILL. But the Senator has not answered my question as to indefiniteness.

Mr. BORAH. I do not think it is indefinite. When we say farm schedules, and those things which are directly related to it, I do not think it is indefinite. Of course, just what articles would be included would depend somewhat upon the hearings, but we could not have said farm schedules alone, because that would raise the question that if we passed, say upon hides, we certainly would have to deal with leather and shoes. But it is those commodities, and those only, which spring directly from the change which is made in certain agricultural products that will be benefited. I myself do not think that textiles would be included.

Mr. DILL. But the Senator does think there is room for an honest difference of opinion?

Mr. BORAH. I do not think they should be included.

Mr. GLENN and Mr. BINGHAM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BORAH. I yield first to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. GLENN. The Senator mentioned just now the hide and shoe schedules. Of course, our State is very greatly interested in both of those schedules. Is it the Senator's idea that the revision of the tariff should be considered as to hides and as to shoes alike?

Mr. BORAH. I think under the resolution if we put hides upon the dutiable list we would have to consider the other proposition because they would be directly affected.

Mr. GLENN. What would be the distinction between that situation and the situation existing as to cotton and wool?

Mr. BORAH. There is no duty on cotton and we are not likely to put on one.

Mr. BINGHAM. What about wool?

Mr. BORAH. I think wool would be included.

Mr. ODDIE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. ODDIE. Does the Senator from Idaho then feel that hides should be barred from consideration by the committee under his resolution?

Mr. BORAH. The Senator from Idaho has intimated nothing of the kind. Undoubtedly hides would come under the resolution.

Mr. ODDIE. Would hides be barred from consideration by the resolution, in the opinion of the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. BORAH. No.

Mr. ODDIE. Hides could be considered then if the Senator's resolution passes?

Mr. BORAH. Certainly they could be considered.

Mr. ODDIE. Then I want to ask the Senator from Idaho if metals and minerals will be considered?

Mr. BORAH. No, indeed. They are not agricultural products, though I may lose the Senator's vote thereby. Metals would not be included.

Mr. ODDIE. Does not the Senator realize that manganese is a very necessary product in farm relief? If we can get more manganese for farm relief it would be very helpful. Agricultural authorities have found that manganese is a very important item in the matter of increasing agricultural crop growth.

Mr. BORAH. Now we have a magnificent exhibition of those who have been construing the President's message and of those who are construing the declarations in the campaign. There is no duty, no article, no commodity anywhere to be found that would not come under the rule as the Senator would construe it.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. That is not a construction of the President's message. It is a construction of the resolution offered by the Senator from Idaho. I can find nothing in the President's message which says we shall consider only agriculture and matters related thereto. It very specifically states that there are probably many other industries which are to be considered.

Mr. BORAH. No; the President did not refer to agriculture alone, but he did refer to a certain rule by which we were to test the question of whether or not the schedule was to be dealt with, and that rule is utterly disregarded because it is said the farmer is in the United States and that he is affected in some way by anything that anybody else may do in the United States, and therefore farm relief is involved in any schedule which may come up.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. BRATTON. I was astounded a while ago to see one or two on the Republican side shake their heads when the Senator from Idaho said that hides should be considered under his resolution. In order to make a record of it, I think the Senator's view of it and mine are in accord. I understand items such as hides, beef, mutton, and wool, and those things produced by the farmer would fall squarely within his resolution. Is that the view of the Senator?

Mr. BORAH. That is my view. When we met here in 1921 we enacted the emergency tariff law dealing with agricultural products alone. There was no discussion whatever over the proposition that it was impracticable to do it, that we could not deal with agricultural products without dealing with other products, but we passed through the Senate an agricultural tariff bill dealing with agricultural products alone. If we would act in good faith, in accordance with the spirit of the campaign, we would come into this special session knowing that it is limited and give as scientific and thoughtful consideration to the various agricultural schedules as it is possible to do. Then if we want a general revision, if the President or Congress wants a general revision of the entire subject of tariff, it can be dealt with in the future. We are not asking to lower your schedules. God knows they are high enough. They were almost embargoes when the last tariff act was passed. We are not asking to lower them, but we are asking that the farmer be placed upon an economic equality, and the only way to do it is to give him help in accordance with and to the amount of the protection which industry already has.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. DILL. The Senator in answer to the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BRATTON] said that shoes would come under the resolution because of hides. That, of course, interprets his resolution for the committee. Will not the Senator interpret other subjects so the committee may have the benefit of his advice, or is it to be decided by the committee?

Mr. BORAH. To be candid, I do not think shingles would be included. [Laughter.]

Mr. DILL. I am not arguing about shingles, although I think in my State shingles are a matter of farm relief because 100,000 men would be able to go back to work if shingles were properly provided for. But I am not going to argue that question now. I was speaking from the standpoint of the definiteness or indefiniteness of the resolution. I want to know whether, if the Senator should state that in his opinion shoes and hides should be considered and textiles should not, that opinion is binding on the committee?

Mr. BORAH. I expect the committee in good faith to interpret the resolution in view of the evidence that is developed. There are some things which might appeal to us as coming under the resolution as directly relating to the farm schedules. There are some things we think of immediately. There may be other things which the evidence will develop as being related to the farm schedule. But I assume that the committee will undertake first to deal with the farm schedule, and, secondly, to find what is affected by reason of the fact that they have changed the tariff schedule in that regard. I am willing that the resolution shall go to them for construction.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. BRATTON. I want to correct a statement made by the Senator from Washington. He said the Senator from Idaho stated, in response to a question propounded by me, that shoes would come under the resolution. The Senator from Idaho did not make that observation in response to a question propounded by me. My question was confined to hides, beef, mutton, sheep, and wool. I do not think that shoes would come under the resolution, but I do not want to have the RECORD indicate that I agreed with that statement.

Mr. BORAH. If we were here in the same spirit to-day to do this work that we were in 1921, there would be no difficulty whatever in carrying out the resolution. If Senators will turn back to the debates in 1921 they will find there was not a single suggestion as to difficulty in dealing with farm schedules without dealing with all other schedules which might directly or indirectly be affected. They will find that we proceeded with all due dispatch to place a tariff law upon the statute books dealing with farm schedules alone. I do not desire to be harsh, but I undertake to say that the spirit in which the campaign was fought and the spirit in which the campaign was won in the agricultural States has departed from the councils and is not now controlling the shaping of legislation.

Mr. BINGHAM and Mr. SWANSON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BORAH. I will yield first to the Senator from Virginia, and then I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. SWANSON. If I understand the position of the Senator from Idaho, he voted against the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill. He thought there was not an equality of treatment between the farming interests and the industrial interests. Consequently he voted against that measure. If I remember correctly, the then Senator La Follette voted against it, he being another Progressive Republican, feeling that the industrial interests of the country had received greater benefits than agriculture had received.

The position of the Senator from Idaho now is that the extraordinary session of Congress was called to give relief to the farm industry. He believes that the inequality existing under the present tariff law ought to be equalized by the special session of Congress, and then if it is desired to have a general tariff bill after the equalization is made, it can be done at the general session. But I understand the Senator to insist that Congress was called into extraordinary session to create economic equality, so far as the tariff is concerned, between the industrial interests and the producing farmers' interests, and having been called here for that purpose it ought to confine its legislation to that purpose. The Senator says if there is any general tariff legislation after that, it can occur at the regular session. That is the position of the Senator, is it not?

Mr. BORAH. That is right.

Mr. SWANSON. And then that all industries which are included in the tariff act known as the Fordney-McCumber Act, on account of the increased rates on farm products, if they affect manufactured products, ought to be compensated because of the increase. The issue, as I understand it, is this: Shall we produce economic equality first at this extraordinary session between the industrial interests and the producing farmers' interests, and after the equality is produced then at the regular session have a general tariff bill if the Republicans favor it, which I think would be a great calamity for the people of the country?

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator referred to the rule of interpretation a few moments ago. I wonder if he objected to the rule or yardstick or test laid down by the President in his message calling this extraordinary session into being.

Mr. BORAH. I do not object to the yardstick as the President announced it, but I do object to the yardstick as it is being utilized by those whose power it is to utilize it. I am going to put some new directions on that yardstick if I can.

Mr. BINGHAM. The President specifically laid down in his message the test of necessity for revision, not as to whether the article produced would benefit or hurt the farmer, but as to whether there had been a substantial slackening of activity in an industry during the past few years. The Senator also seems to say very plainly that there is bad faith due to the fact that during the campaign the tariff situation was discussed merely as an agricultural measure and not as applying to industry. But may I call his attention to the fact that the platforms of the Democratic Party and the Republican Party alike referred to the necessity of safeguarding the American laborer by discovering the actual difference between the cost of production at home and abroad—and those words I quote from the Democratic platform.

Mr. BORAH. Why is it the Senator gets so much more enjoyment out of making a speech in my time than he would if he should make it in his own time?

Mr. BINGHAM. I hope the Senator will answer those arguments.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. GLASS. The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] disposed of the Senator from Washington [Mr. DILL] awhile ago by assuring him that shingles are not regarded as a staple farm product. The Senator from Connecticut might be quieted in the same way if the Senator from Idaho would assure him that wooden nutmegs would not be included either. [Laughter.]

Mr. BORAH. I am always glad to hear from the Senator from Connecticut, but it is more agreeable to proper procedure in debate for each Senator to make his speech in his own time. I know exactly what is the matter with the Senator from Connecticut; I know precisely how he feels about this matter, and if we were in regular session here I would not have any quarrel with him about the matter. But there was never any indication in the Kansas City convention or anywhere else that we were going to undertake a general revision of the tariff at this special session. The special session was to be dedicated to another purpose entirely. The Senator is talking about a resolution in the platform which related to the general policy of the party which might be carried out at a regular session of Congress; but the special session was not called for that purpose. The special session was called in part for a limited revision of the tariff. Now, the majority leader and the chairman of the Finance Committee say that we are going to have no limited revision; they say we are going to have a general revision. Who is it that is following the President's request? Who is it that is following the suggestion with reference to the special session when the leaders on this side say we are not going to have a limited revision, but are going to have a general revision?

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, with all due respect to my distinguished friend, it seems to me that the Senator's resolution violates the President's request more than anything else that has happened.

Mr. BORAH. The resolution of the Senator from Idaho does provide for a limited revision.

Mr. BINGHAM. But of itself it violates the President's request as to what the revision should be.

Mr. BORAH. It may provide for a more limited revision than the President requested, but the President did request a limited revision; the President's declaration was for a limited revision, which the Republican leaders are disregarding entirely, and, by reason of their disregarding that, it has become necessary to put a construction upon it to test here the question as to how far we are going.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me again, the platform which he and I helped to draw did pledge the next Republican Congress to an examination of the tariff; and this is the next Republican Congress.

Mr. BORAH. Yes; but the Senator is not sincere about that. The Senator knows perfectly well that we had no idea at all at that time of a special session, and that the special session came by reason of farm distress and that alone. When the Senator helped to write that platform, as I did, if anybody had put in there the words "at a special session," it would have been killed instantly; it never could have gone into the platform. We never contemplated a special session until farm distress forced it upon us. Congress is now in session for that purpose and that purpose only, and we are not in good faith carrying out the pledge which we made to the agricultural interests of the country if we undertake a general revision of the tariff at this time.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr President, the Senator dislikes to have any remarks made in his speech, but if he will pardon me, the Senator is responsible for this extraordinary session, is he not?

Mr. BORAH. I would not want to assume that responsibility, although I would be very glad if I could have it.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator had a very large part in securing the extra session. The pledge for an extra session came fairly early in the campaign, did it not?

Mr. BORAH. Not fairly early; it never came until the 26th of October. What was the Senator doing?

Mr. BINGHAM. The pledge did not come until the 26th of October?

Mr. BORAH. No.

Mr. BINGHAM. During the campaign the President in his Boston speech made reference to the necessity for tariff revision.

Mr. BORAH. But that was before the declaration for a special session.

The Senator has mentioned my connection with the special session. I gave out a statement within 20 minutes after I had had a conversation with the President about the condition in the agricultural States. I came from Joplin, Mo., for the purpose of a conference with the President upon that situation. I had a conference with the President, and I gave out this statement within 20 minutes after that, and this is the construction of the President's view at that time——

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to say that I am in no sense charging him with unfairness or with having changed his mind or with having misled anyone in the campaign, and I object to his charging me and others who spoke on Republican platforms in the industrial States with unfairness. We certainly led our hearers to believe that as soon as Congress met there would be a revision of the tariff in such a degree as industry and unemployment demanded.

Mr. BORAH. Did the Senator ever mention a special session in his speeches?

Mr. BINGHAM. I do not remember, Mr. President——

Mr. BORAH. No.

Mr. BINGHAM. But I certainly repeatedly mentioned the fact that the laborers in the factories might expect that as soon as a Republican Congress met we would have a revision of the tariff where it was needed for the purpose of reducing unemployment. I dislike to have the Senator charge me with unfairness. I am not charging him with changing his views, and he must not charge me with doing so.

Mr. BORAH. I say that when the Senator undertakes to apply the general declarations with reference to the policy of the party which had in contemplation a regular session to a special session he is unfair; that he is not dealing fairly with those to whom the special-session pledge was made.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. The Senator gives much emphasis to the words "special session." I agree with him, in that I do not think a special session was contemplated in the early part of the campaign, so far as that is concerned, but the fact remains that we are now in special session; we are considering the subject; we have all the machinery with which to consider the subject; the House has held hearings for weeks and weeks, and the Senate committee has subdivided and is holding further hearings. In view of the interpretation given in connection with the platform, is there any good reason why the Finance Committee should not receive and consider the plaints that come from so many citizens engaged in industries that need tariff protection?

Mr. BORAH. Why did not the Senator from New Jersey and the Senator from Connecticut talk about that when they were discussing the matter in the campaign?

Mr. EDGE. I did on every occasion when I discussed the tariff.

Mr. BORAH. I will read what the Senator said.

Mr. EDGE. Oh, I discussed that question.

Mr. BORAH. I will read what the Senator said.

Mr. EDGE. I will be glad to hear it.

Mr. BORAH. On the next day or the same day when the President issued his call for the special session on farm relief the Senator from New Jersey himself said:

> I discussed the situation with Mr. Hoover the last time I was in Washington, and I knew he was giving it serious consideration. I think it is a very wise move, and it will be possible to do something for farm relief at that session.

Mr. EDGE. The Senator from New Jersey apparently was discussing the proposed special session in response to a question asked him by some representative of the press; but did he in any way infer that at the time that subject was being considered he would absolutely pay no attention to the claims of that class of citizens who thought that they needed some relief? The Senator can not read that into the statement at all.

Mr. BORAH. Oh, yes. Mr. President, a special session was very unpopular with a large number of people, and particularly here in the Senate, and it was debated a long time whether or not it would be wise to call a special session on account of that situation. It was the agricultural States of the West which suffered economic inequality and were struggling to preserve their home market that compelled the special session. It never would have been called for any other purpose. I say that those gentlemen who were not wanting a special session but who were discouraging the calling of a special session, some of them doing so directly to the President, are now in favor of utilizing the extra session in order to protect their own particular interests and to make the farmer an inconsequential factor in the whole program.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. Has the Senator any evidence of any kind whatsoever that Senators from so-called industrial States, in which class I presume he would place me, are not sympathetic with the farmers' problem? I have spent three or four days since the Committee on Finance has been in session listening to those who have appeared in behalf of the chemical schedule, and I should say that almost 90 per cent of the witnesses who have appeared before that committee have discussed what I assume are matters directly connected with agriculture in connection with chemicals, such as casein, and other commodities of that character. I have found a disposition on the part of the committee, so far as I can interpret it, in connection with the witnesses who have come before the committee up to this time in relation to that schedule, to lower more rates rather than to raise them. Does the Senator take the position that a Senator from an industrial State has absolutely no sympathy with the farmers' trouble? I do not know of a single schedule that has been proposed by the representatives of the farming States for which I have not voted.

Mr. BORAH. I think the Senator has sympathy for them.

The Senator from Connecticut made reference to my part in the calling of the special session, and I did not get through discussing it. I am not at liberty, of course, to state all that happened; but I can state enough to make my position clear. I say that the special session originated solely with the question of granting farm relief.

Mr. BINGHAM. Was anything said about reapportionment?

Mr. BORAH. No; nothing was said about it.

Mr. REED. Or about national origins?

Mr. BORAH. Nothing was said about that.

Mr. BINGHAM. Did the Senator object to those questions being considered?

Mr. BORAH. Those are matters that were presented and acted upon here under the call for a special session without interfering with farm relief.

Mr. BINGHAM. Why did not the Senator introduce a resolution declaring it to be the sense of the Senate that we ought not to consider those questions?

Mr. BORAH. We had not at that time any farm question before us.

Mr. BINGHAM. We always have had that question before us.

Mr. BORAH. Will not the Senator rise and address the Chair so that I may get the drift of what he says? I do not want to lose anything.

After coming away from the interview with the President on October 26, I said:

> I am thoroughly in favor of an extra session of Congress. I would like to see the session called at once to first pass a tariff bill with the single view of increasing duties upon farm products.

I undertake to say at the time the suggestion of an extra session originated there was no discussion, no intimation, and no reference to any other schedule than the farm schedule. That was the beginning of the special session. The other matter was brought in afterwards for certain reasons but not during the campaign.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I wish to ask the Senator a question, for I am very deeply interested in what he is saying. Does not the Senator think that if by appropriate tariff legislation we can aid a manufacturing industry which to-day is languishing that will be of benefit to agriculture in this, that it will develop a market for the products of the farm?

Mr. BORAH. Oh, yes. What I am trying to do is to save that market which is being developed. The farmer has been told for 40 years that if he would be loyal to the protective tariff we would build up a home market, a home market more steady and more reliable, and therefore the protective tariff would be of great benefit to him. We built up the home market, and the American farmer was loyal to the protective system, but now the home market is in the possession of the foreigner. What I want to do at this special session is to take that home market out of the possession of the foreigner.

I do not care how much more it may be built up if we will give it over and dedicate it to the American farmer. At the present time there are some products of the farm which are driven out of the home market. The American farmer will have no recess. When he gets to the market he will find, if we take a recess, that it is still in the possession of the foreigner. I say that it is our duty first and speedily to throw the protection of tariff duties around the home market, and when we have done that we can take up the general proposition of tariff revision.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. BORAH. Yes.

Mr. BINGHAM. The best market that the farmers in New England have for their products is afforded by those who labor in the mills, many of whom are now unemployed. Does the Senator think by preventing us from taking up schedules affecting those New England industries which are in trouble that he is going to help the farmers of New England to sell their products?

Mr. BORAH. O Mr. President, the Senator from Connecticut is talking now about what Mr. McKinley told us years ago, that the New England market was the safeguard and surety of the American farmer, and it was, at the time when McKinley was speaking.

Mr. BINGHAM. I am referring to the Connecticut farmer chiefly.

Mr. BORAH. I know and I want to refer to something chiefly. It was when Mr. McKinley was speaking. We were seeking to build up the great consuming markets of New England and we did. We built them up by the protective tariff. Now what has New England done?—if the Senator wants to raise that question. It has been the leader in the reciprocity campaign in this country to give that market over to Canada and Argentina and Mexico.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, the Senator is very unfair if he is implying that I propose to vote against any of the increases in the agricultural schedules. In the House bill there are something over 136 changes in the agricultural schedule directly concerning the farmer.

Mr. SMOOT. There are 115, which is a greater number, less two, than in all the other schedules combined.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. SMOOT. I say that there are as many changes in the agricultural schedule as in all the other schedules, with the exception of two.

Mr. BORAH. Let us not talk about the niceties and the percentages, and so forth. What we want is the home market. We have not got it. What we are asking you to do is to give it to us, and to give it to us now. Then after the home market has been turned over to the American farmer, if you want to revise your schedules, that is your business; and the West has always supported you when you have been reasonable.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator need not look at me in that way and imply that I want a general revision of the tariff where it is not needed and does not specifically come under the test provided by the President in his message. But there can be no market for farm products among people who are out of work and whose factories are being closed; and that is the situation that I believe we should meet, and which we were specifically called together to meet.

Mr. BORAH. I know the Senator does not want any protection where it is not needed; but I have been here through three revisions, and I know what the word "needed" means. It not only means existence, as it does with the farmer now, but it means profits, and it means very large profits. What we are asking for is the right of existence. That is what the farmer is asking for.

Mr. BINGHAM. And that is what certain Connecticut manufacturers are asking for who, if the Senator's resolution goes through, will have to go to the wall and close their factories, and their men will be out of work. They are asking for existence, too.

Mr. BORAH. If the bill had been confined to that we might have a different situation. Let us discuss some of the things that are in the House bill.

Mr. BINGHAM. We can not even confine ourselves to it if the Senator's resolution goes through. We can not even investigate it.

Mr. BORAH. As an illustration of what is regarded as needed, the House put a duty upon cement. I have here a statement from a gentleman who is very familiar with that industry. He says:

> The modern cement mills in the eastern district, principally Pennsylvania and New York, use less labor to-day per barrel of output than they did prior to the war; and while labor has increased at the mills by possibly 30 per cent or 40 per cent above the pre-war cost, when it is definitely ascertained that the labor factor in a barrel of Portland cement prior to the war was about 10 cents, a 30 per cent or 40 per cent increase in labor could only mean about 5 per cent or 7 per cent extra to be charged to the present cost. The proposed duty of 30 cents per barrel on Portland cement, if put into effect, will impose an extra cost of 80 cents for each lineal yard of highway 20 feet wide, and this is about equal to $14 a mile.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield for a suggestion, the tariff fixed on cement in the House bill is 8 cents per hundred pounds.

Mr. BORAH. How much is that a barrel?

Mr. REED. About 30 cents. The Senator said 30 cents a hundred pounds.

Mr. BORAH. No; I said 30 cents a barrel.

Mr. REED. Then I apologize for interrupting the Senator.

Mr. BORAH. This statement continues:

It might surprise you to learn that the price of Portland cement shipped into the New York market from Pennsylvania has not varied a fraction of a cent per barrel on the f. o. b. car price for nearly two and a half years. This should be positive proof that there exists to-day a close understanding among the Portland-cement manufacturers to maintain prices; and against this evidence they are asking for a duty where the total import of foreign cement in the United States is equal to only 1½ per cent.

That is one of the schedules which the House took care of in its program of granting relief to the farmer.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, may I ask one question there?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. It seems to me that cement can be used as an illustration as well as many other commodities, perhaps, in the House bill. The fact remains that, rightly or wrongly, that is in the House bill—cement, 8 cents per hundred pounds, or approximately 30 cents per barrel. In view of the fact that one-half of the legislative machinery has been gone through, and that is in the bill, the House have their rights. We, of course, have no question in our minds as to that, especially in the initiation of a tariff bill. Now, we must meet that on the floor. Why, then, is it not all the more businesslike to permit the Finance Committee of the Senate to get the other side of that story?

The Senator quotes a letter from some one, no doubt an authority, giving his view; but the Senator proposes to prohibit the Finance Committee from getting a complete review of the wisdom of that schedule as well as many others. Certainly, as a matter of practical mechanics, when the bill comes before the Senate, if the Finance Committee is prohibited from considering these schedules, there will be amendments offered on the floor. Many other matters will undoubtedly be under discussion.

I should think, in order to justify the Senator's viewpoint, that he would want all the information we could adduce in the Finance Committee, because we are going to meet that argument on the floor just the same. It is a part of the bill at this minute. The bill must go to conference. In other words, we can not bodily throw out the House provisions. We can, of course, in effect; but they go to conference just the same. Why is it not the proper and businesslike thing to do, I repeat, to have all the information we can secure in order to debate that question freely here, and not close the avenues of information?

Mr. BORAH. Now, Mr. President, what does a general revision mean?

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, is not the Senator going to answer that question? If the Senator will pardon me, I should really like to know what his objection is to our securing the information, using our best judgment about it, and bringing it on the floor of the Senate, where he and those who think like him, if they agree that it is improper, can vote the amendment down or vote the original part of the bill down.

Mr. BORAH. Are the Senator from New Jersey and the Senator from Connecticut through now?

Mr. BINGHAM. I hoped the Senator would answer that question.

Mr. BORAH. Of course, I should prefer to conduct my speech in my own way; but I will yield to the Senator from Connecticut and I will conduct it according to his suggestion.

Mr. President, I do not care anything about the information upon that proposition, because I do not want to consider that schedule at this session at all.

Mr. BINGHAM. No matter how much it may be needed?

Mr. BORAH. I do not care anything about it at this special session. I do not want to consider it at this special session. I want to limit the revision at this special session to farm products. That is the reason why I am opposing the consideration of these other schedules. Of course, if I were going to consider those schedules, I should want information upon both sides; but what I am seeking to do is to cut out at this special session all schedules except farm schedules.

Mr. EDGE. But, Mr. President, this other matter is already in the bill.

Mr. BORAH. Exactly; and if you will bring it in here we can take it out in a few minutes.

Mr. EDGE. Without information?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, we can not take it out so that it will not be in conference. The House has acted. What does the Senator want the committee to do—have no bill at all? That is what would be the result in conference.

Mr. BORAH. Does the Senator assume now that because it was in conference we would have to yield on it?

Mr. SMOOT. No; but we would have to yield on it, more than likely, if we desired to have any legislation at this session.

Mr. BORAH. Very well, Mr. President. If that is the situation, we might just as well know it here upon this 17th day of June, 1929, because there are those of us in this Chamber who now say, since that has been said by the Senator, that if anything like the House bill comes in here, if it is within their power, we are not going to have any legislation.

Mr. SMOOT. That is the first time I have heard such a statement made or intimated. I have never heard it before from a Senator or from anyone outside.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator has just said that unless we yield to the House on this, of course we will have no bill.

Mr. SMOOT. No; I did not say that positively. I said that the House would have a say as to the provisions in the House bill, and if they would not yield to our proposition then we could have no bill. It is not a question of what the Senate would do; the conferees on the part of the Senate would be instructed to contend for the Senate's position; but the House might disagree with the Senate conferees.

Mr. BORAH. Oh, I understand all that. Why lecture here upon what the House may do? I understand all that; but what I say is: If the House conferees take the position that things like cement and glass and iron and steel and those other matters that they have dealt with are to go into this bill or we would have no bill, so far as I am individually concerned, I will meet them on that proposition.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that they may not go in the bill when we report it.

Mr. BINGHAM and Mr. KING addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. To whom does the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BINGHAM. Does the Senator take the position that he would rather not have any increases in the agricultural schedules than let certain very seriously crippled industries secure the protection which they need at this time?

Mr. BORAH. Oh, no; but I take the position that if certain of these schedules that are now in the House bill come into your bill, I having investigated them, if they must stay there or have no bill, we will have no bill if I can prevent it.

Mr. BINGHAM. Certain schedules?

Mr. BORAH. Yes.

Mr. BINGHAM. But not all of them?

Mr. BORAH. No; not all of them; but I have investigated the subjects of glass and cement and other things, and I know there is not a shadow of justification for the schedules which they have sent here.

Mr. REED. What kind of glass, Mr. President? Will the Senator specify?

Mr. BORAH. Every kind.

Mr. REED. The bill does not increase the present duties on plate glass or window glass.

Mr. BORAH. I said every kind that is in the bill. There is pretty nearly everything there, from a glass eye to a mirror. [Laughter.]

Mr. REED. The Senator will find, I think, that the present duties were fixed by the President after consideration of the facts presented by the Tariff Commission. The House bill merely reaffirms the decision of the President. Does the Senator think we are going to succeed in getting the House to recede from that?

Mr. BORAH. I said that I do not know what the House is going to do. I am simply saying what I am going to do. I do not know what the House will do. I am, however, controlling my own course.

Mr. President, when interrupted by the Senator from Connecticut or the Senator from New Jersey, I had started to ask, What does a general revision mean? The Senator from Indiana [Mr. WATSON], the leader of the majority, said the other day that in his opinion a general revision meant no bill; and that is my opinion, too. If we have a recess, go away from here for five or six weeks, and come back in the middle of August or the first of September and have a general revision here, it will be practically impossible to put through a general revision by the 1st day of December. The Payne-Aldrich bill was here five months, I think; and, in my opinion, a general revision will inevitably result in such delay that we will be practically unable to get anything like a satisfactory bill by the 1st of December.

In my judgment it is not fair, it is not just to the American farmer, to ask him to wait here until we can adjust all these other matters which were no part of the campaign and no part in the pledge, and take the chance, in addition to that, of not having any protection at all.

Now, Mr. President, just a word in conclusion.

One thing will not be denied, that the great dominating, controlling issue of the campaign was to place the farmer upon an economic equality with the other parts of the country. Nobody will deny that that was the controlling, dominating pledge in the campaign so far as the matters with which we are now dealing were concerned. It was admitted at Kansas City, it was admitted all through the campaign, it was admitted here when the special session was called, that the farmer was not upon an economic equality with the rest of the country. Therefore we pledged speedy legislation for the purpose of bringing that about. The second proposition, which was perfectly plain, was that we were going to legislate as speedily as possible for the purpose of bringing about an economic equality. The great, dominating questions in the campaign were the protection of the farmer, economic equality for the farmer, and speedy relief for the farmer.

The special session was called for that purpose. If we go into a general revision, the chances are, first, that it will be indefinitely delayed. Another chance is that the bill will not be passed at all. The special session which was called for the farmer will have gone by without relief being provided for him. Secondly, if we go into a general revision, if it is in consonance with any tariff revision I have ever seen, the raising of the prices of the things which the farmer has to buy will outweigh by far the amount of duty the farmer will secure upon his own products.

Understand me, therefore, Mr. President, that I am pleading only for the action of the special session. I am not attacking these industries. I do not know what their situation is except as to those which I have examined in the bill which passed the House. What I am asking is that the special session be devoted to farm relief.

Mr. HEBERT. Mr. President, I should like to address myself briefly to the subject matter of the resolution offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH].

While I am in sympathy with the aims of those Senators who are endeavoring to secure the relief which agriculture needs, yet I am not unmindful of the fact that the conditions in industry in this country demand some measure of consideration. Therefore I am opposed to the resolution of the distinguished Senator from Idaho, which would limit the hearings, deliberations, recommendations, and report of the Committee on Finance upon H. R. 2667, the pending tariff bill, to the agricultural and directly related schedules.

I have come here, as a representative of my State, with a mandate to favor protection for American industries so clear that I could not, in justice to myself, disregard it. Were I to favor any postponement by the Senate of the consideration of tariff legislation as it affects industry I should feel that I had been recreant to my trust; and that I shall not do.

If there was any one issue clearly before the people of this country at the election of 1928, so far as my own State is concerned, it was the tariff issue. It was discussed by all candidates for office throughout the campaign. It was clearly defined. It was well understood by the voters, and so important was it considered, not only by the people of my State but by the candidates who sought the support of the electorate, that Democrats, as well as Republicans, were open advocates of a system of adequate protection to our industries; and they promised, if elected, that they would support measures to accomplish that end. This, in brief, is my justification, if indeed one be needed, for assuming to speak thus early during my term of service in this body.

There has been considered and passed at the present special session of Congress a bill designed to provide relief for agriculture. I voted in favor of that measure; and while I do not see in its provisions a panacea for all of the ills of agriculture in this country, yet I do expect that it will bring about better conditions in those activities through a broader understanding of the problems with which they are concerned. It is a beginning. We may be, and I think we shall be, called upon to legislate further in behalf of agriculture; but in my opinion the present law will be only a halfway measure, if indeed it amounts to that, unless there be coupled with it a consideration of possible and necessary changes in the tariff law now on our statute books.

In my advocacy of tariff legislation at this time I am only adhering to the declaration of the Republican Party in its platform adopted at Kansas City in 1928, as well as to the pronouncements of the President of the United States during the campaign following that convention and since.

On the question of the tariff, I quote from that platform:

> Nor have these manifest benefits been restricted to any particular section of the country. They are enjoyed throughout the land either directly or indirectly. Their stimulus has been felt in industries, farming sections, trade circles, and communities in every quarter. However, we realize that there are special industries which can not now successfully compete with foreign producers because of lower foreign wages and a lower cost of living abroad, and we pledge the next Republican Congress to an examination and, where necessary, a revision of these schedules, to the end that American labor in these industries may again command the home market, may maintain its standard of living, and may count upon steady employment in its accustomed field.

In his address of acceptance, delivered at Stanford University, California, August 11, 1928, Mr. Hoover, in speaking on the subject of commerce and industries, said:

> Commerce and industry have revived. Although the agricultural, coal, and textile industries still lag in their recovery and still require our solicitude and assistance, yet they have made substantial progress. While other countries engaged in the war are only now regaining their pre-war level in foreign trade, our exports, even if we allow for their depreciated dollar, are 58 per cent greater than before the war. Constructive leadership and cooperation by the Government have released and stimulated the energies of our people. Faith in the future has been restored. Confidence in our form of government has therefore been greater.

In his address delivered in Boston on October 15, 1928, Mr. Hoover, speaking upon the tariff, referred to it as one of the most important economic issues of the campaign. Speaking of the Tariff Commission, he referred to it as a most valuable arm of the Government. He added, however:

> But the American people will never consent to delegating authority over the tariff to any commission, whether nonpartisan or bipartisan. Our people have a right to express themselves at the ballot upon so vital a question as this. There is only one commission to which delegation of that authority can be made. That is the great commission of their own choosing—the Congress of the United States and the President.

And he added:

> No tariff act is perfect. With the shifting of economic tides some items may be higher than necessary, but undoubtedly some are too low. This is particularly true so far as New England is concerned. New England has many protected industries. One important branch of them, the cotton and woolen industries, have not for the past few years been in a satisfactory condition. They comprise about 26 per cent of New England's industrial life. Their depressed condition has not been peculiar to New England. The same situation is prevalent throughout the world and is due largely to the same factors—style changes, production in new areas, and decided changes in the trends of consumption.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> Any change in the present policy of production would, without question, result in a flood of foreign textile products, which would mean no less than ruin to New England industries, both manufactures and workmen.

These are some of the pronouncements which the voters of my State had in mind; these are some of the promises upon which they relied when they cast their ballots at the election last November.

To be more specific in relation to the present state of the textile industry in New England I have prepared a table, which I will ask to have inserted in the body of my remarks, showing the dividends paid by the cotton industry of New Bedford and Fall River, Mass., since the passage of the tariff bill of 1922. It shows, for example, that the average annual dividends paid to their stockholders by the cotton mills of those cities in 1922 averaged from $8 per annum in Fall River to $9.72 in New Bedford, whereas in 1928 the annual dividends averaged from $2.20 in New Bedford mills to $2.40 in the Fall River mills. What is true of the mills located in the cities which I have mentioned is likewise true of the textile industry in the State whose people I have the honor to represent.

I do not wish to have it understood that I am desirous of balancing the books of our manufacturers in New England or in any other part of the country. I merely wish to show that the state of the industries to which I refer, so far as New England is concerned, is not prosperous and that necessarily those who are employed in those industries can not be covered.

As another indication of the need of careful consideration of legislation looking to bettering the conditions of this industry, I call attention to the percentage of working capacity employed in the cotton mills of New England, and I shall also include a schedule showing these percentages. They are based on a single shift capacity of eight or nine hours a day. As an illustration of the existing depression, it appears from these figures which I have secured that the cotton mills of New England during the years 1922–23, operated on a basis of 86 per cent of their capacity, whereas in 1927–28 they operated on a basis of 70 per cent of their capacity.

Referring to a circular of the Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, showing the activity in the cotton-spinning industry for April, 1929, we find that the average spindle hours for that month in the United States were 251, whereas for the New England States they were 173.

Of course, I realize it may be urged that the depression in industry in New England, and particularly in cotton textiles, is not due wholly to competition from abroad, that it is due in some measure, and it is claimed in some quarters, in large measure, to changes in styles, to overproduction, and to the use of other fabrics. Nevertheless, we in New England do know that our manufacturers in the textile industry have suffered from ever-increasing importations from abroad, even since the passage of the tariff act of 1922. But whether or not we are justified in our claims, we do contend that it is a subject which should have the serious consideration of this Congress and of the Committee on Finance in the course of its present deliberations. We do know that the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives, which has given much thought and consideration to this question, and has held numerous hearings upon it, stated in its report accompanying the proposed tariff act of 1929 that—

> The principal item reported under the cotton schedule is cotton cloth, of which imports in 1928 were valued at $15,360,465.

As a result of their consideration of this subject, they reported increases in duties on cotton yarns, countable cotton cloth, and other items of like nature. In the consideration of the textile industry as it relates to the production of wool fabrics, the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives has provided an increased duty, based, as it says, on the estimated differences between costs of production here and in England.

The need of protection to our industries is not confined to textiles. It is felt in other lines, including manufactures of iron and steel, of which we have many and large concerns in our State. Some of these industries are, and for severals years have been subject to competition from abroad which has necessitated the curtailment of production in some instances to as much as 50 per cent. In some cases where many hundreds of skilled workmen are employed, I think I am justified in saying that the curtailment has been even greater than 50 per cent. Surely instances like these are deserving of the earnest consideration of this Congress.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Rhode Island will suspend while the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is Senate Resolution 19, relative to the proposed amendment of paragraph 2 of Rule XXXVIII.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] is not in the Chamber at the moment, but I know the request I am going to make would meet with his approval. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, I desire to state in this connection that I have no intention of attempting to prevent a vote on the Borah resolution, voting, of course, on the Jones amendment first. I trust that debate will be so limited that we may have a vote on the resolution this afternoon. The reason why I say that is because there are a number of Senators on both sides of the Chamber who desire to leave the city to-night or to-morrow, and I think the vote being about equally divided between the two sides, they would like to be recorded before leaving. Therefore, so far as I am concerned, I trust we will proceed as rapidly as possible to the vote.

I have no objection to the request of the Senator from Nebraska.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the unfinished business is temporarily laid aside and the Senate continues the consideration of Senate Resolution No. 19. The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. HEBERT] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Rhode Island permit an inquiry before he proceeds?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Rhode Island yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. HEBERT. I yield.

Mr. KING. I have listened with interest to what the Senator has said. I assume he is in favor of a general revision, and particularly a revision upward, so far as it would affect the products of the New England States. If I am in error, I would be glad to be corrected in my interpretation of the Senator's position.

Mr. HEBERT. I do not see how the Senator can arrive at that conclusion from what I have said. I am in favor of an investigation of all schedules which affect industry in the country. I have so stated in the course of my remarks.

Mr. KING. That would mean, then, a revision of all schedules.

Mr. HEBERT. That does not necessarily follow. I have said that I am in favor of an examination and investigation of all schedules.

Mr. KING. The Senator has mentioned the wool and cotton schedules, iron and steel, and of course all relevant products, as well as agriculture. So I am somewhat at a loss to determine if there is anything in the whole category of American commodities affecting the welfare of the people that would not come within the broad scope of the generalization indulged in by the Senator.

Mr. HEBERT. The Senator confuses what I have said on the subject, because I have not asked for a general revision. I have asked for a general investigation of all schedules affecting industry and of all schedules affecting agriculture as well.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator permit another question?

Mr. HEBERT. Certainly.

Mr. KING. If there is an investigation, there must be a purpose behind it. The purpose obviously is an increase of rates. Is not that true, and does not the Senator's argument lead to the position that we must have a general revision predicated, first, upon an investigation of all the schedules?

Mr. HEBERT. That would not necessarily follow. It might be that many schedules would bear a reduction, whereas many schedules would justify an increase.

During the discussion of the measure for farm relief it was brought out here that we imported annually agricultural products of a value of some $2,000,000,000 and that the farmers of our own country should be placed in position to provide these foodstuffs. As I recall it, the statement was made on this floor that we should so legislate that the American market should be made available to the American farmer. With this statement I am in hearty accord, but I maintain that it should be made to apply to industry as well as to agriculture. I have repeatedly said to the people of my State that I should favor legislation which would give to the American manufacturers the control of the American market. I still adhere to that proposition. I am not unwilling, however, to have it apply to agriculture; but, being willing that it shall so apply, I must insist that industries shall not be entirely overlooked.

The problems of agriculture and industry are so interwoven that, in my judgment, we can not do justice to the one if we fail to consider the other, for if we eliminate all investigation of industry in the consideration of the proposed tariff, we shall disarrange those delicate adjustments which make for prosperity in all lines of endeavor. For instance, if those engaged in the manufacture of cotton goods in New England are not to have steady employment because of depression in that industry, brought on in whatever measure by competition from abroad, then it will follow that the farmers of the country will cease to have a market for their products so far as New England is concerned. The same is true in other lines of endeavor in the industrial States, for, after all, the great markets for the farm's products of this country are to be found in the populous centers in the industrial States. The prosperity of the farmer, therefore, is dependent upon that of the industrial wage earner; and so, if we are to limit our consideration of tariff legislation to such schedules as affect agriculture alone, I believe that we should not only be doing an injustice to industry but, indeed, we shall be making what will amount to an idle gesture on behalf of agriculture.

I believe the subject of tariff legislation should be approached by this Congress in a spirit of cooperation. In no other way, in my judgment, can we legislate for the best interests of all concerned. For my own part, I promise that I shall give the most sincere consideration to the demands of agriculture, but I bespeak for the industries of my State, as well as for those of every other State, a like consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the request of the Senator from Rhode Island to have certain tables printed in the RECORD in connection with his remarks will be granted.

The tables are as follows:

Dividends paid by the cotton industry in New Bedford and Fall River, Mass., since the passage of the last tariff act

Year	New Bedford		Fall River
	Average dividends
	Quarterly	Annual	Quarterly	Annual
1922[1]	$2.43	$9.72	$2.00	$8.00
1923	1.74	6.96	2.06	8.24
1924	1.28	5.12	1.61	6.44
1925	1.32	5.28	.93	3.72
1926	1.02	4.08	.72	2.88
1927	.79	3.16	.73	2.92
1928	.55	2.20	.60	2.40

[1] Tariff act of that year did not go into effect until fall.

Percentage of working capacity employed in New England cotton mills during same period

(Percentages are based on a single-shift capacity of 8 or 9 hours a day)

Year:	Percentage of capacity
1922–23	86
1923–24	64
1924–25	67
1925–26	69
1926–27	77
1927–28	70

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the main dispute on the passage of the resolution introduced by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] seems to be whether the President is for it or whether he is against it. Little has been said about the merits of the resolution, but most of the debate came about on the disagreement on the part of Senators as to whether President Hoover would like us to confine our tariff revision to farm products or whether we should have a general revision. As one of those anxious to find out what the President's idea is on this question it becomes necessary for me to weigh the arguments pro and con in order to reach a conclusion which will influence my vote.

Mr. President, from my analysis of the arguments thus far made I am bound to conclude that the resolution is an administration measure. First, it is introduced and sponsored by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], who more perhaps than any other one man was relied upon in the recent campaign to bring victory to the Hoover forces. It was he who secured from President Hoover in the middle of that national contest a promise that if he were elected he would call a special session of Congress. It was the Senator from Idaho who was relied upon to lead the fight from one end of the Nation to the other.

Secondly, the Senator from Iowa [Mr. BROOKHART], who I see honoring me with his presence, is in favor of the resolution. All through that contest throughout the great agricultural West it was the voice of the Iowa colonel resounding from every stump that brought to the support of President Hoover the vast vote of the farmers in that great community. On agricultural matters particularly he was quoted by the leaders of the Hoover campaign more than any other Senator, more than any other campaigner.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to call for a quorum?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SACKETT in the chair). Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Mississippi for that purpose?

Mr. NORRIS. No, Mr. President, I must decline to yield.

His words of wisdom—whether they were words of wisdom is somewhat doubtful now, but they were considered words of wisdom then—were heralded throughout the country as coming from the leader of agriculture, an expert on agriculture.

Then, thirdly, the resolution is enthusiastically supported by the junior Senator from Kansas [Mr. ALLEN], who left his quiet and more remunerative occupation of journalism to come to the Senate for the sole and only purpose of putting on the statute books the wishes of President Hoover.

With this array of distinguished Senators in its favor and supporting it, it seems to me I am justified in reaching the conclusion that this is an administration resolution.

There is only one fly in the ointment. The great Senator from Indiana [Mr. WATSON], our leader on this side of the Chamber, seems to be against the resolution. But if that would bring doubt to one who wanted to carry out the President's wishes, he might get great justification for the conclusion that I have reached by looking over recent history. We travel so rapidly in this age that unless we record historical announcements from day to day as they come up, we are apt to forget them, and because nobody else has undertaken to make a record of them, it seems that I had better undertake the unpleasant and difficult task.

Mr. President, have we forgotten the ides of March? Have we forgotten that beautiful Sabbath Day on the 3d of March when, as we supposed at the time, presenting a united front and carrying out the wishes of our new leader who in a few hours was to be installed in the White House, we met in this Senate Chamber and fought the first battle on the question of the repeal of the national-origins clause?

It is true, Mr. President, that in the great campaign which had just preceded some Republican followers had gone astray and followed false gods, but on this occasion, like the prodigal son of old, in sackcloth and ashes, in humiliation and submission, they had quietly come back into the fold of the faithful. We supposed that on that occasion we were going to administer a knock-out blow to the national-origins clause; but, Mr. President, to our disappointment and dismay, we found when the battle was over that, instead of knocking out the national-origins clause and carrying out the wishes of Mr. Hoover, we ourselves were ignominiously knocked out, and after the roar of musketry and cannon had died away, and some of us had raised our bleeding and wounded bodies from the blood-stained ground, through the disappearing smoke and carnage of battle, when we looked across "no man's land," we saw our great leader, but, instead of following Hoover, we saw him, a new leader, who had just been installed in office here, triumphantly and pleasantly smoking the pipe of peace in the camp of the common enemy. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, to proceed with the recital of these historic events, just a few days ago we fought the second battle over the national-origins clause. Again united, as we supposed, we made a second effort to please the President of the United States and to carry out one of his recommendations by administering defeat to the national-origins clause; but when, on that occasion, the name of the great Senator from Indiana, our leader, was reached on the roll call, there was silence; there was no response. At a time when we needed his vote, when we needed his inspiring and cheering voice, when we needed his influence, when we needed his assistance, he was not there, although we had seen him just a few minutes before in his place in the Senate, and we saw him but a few moments after the vote was taken sitting in his accustomed seat, bearing the emblems of his official leadership and position.

So, Mr. President, I say we should not pay so much attention to the wishes of our senatorial leader. It may be that our senatorial leader, and our presidential leader alike, on those historical occasions are not in harmony. I think, therefore, I am justified in reaching the conclusion which I stated at the beginning of my remarks. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Mr. President, that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FESS] will have to revise his list of pseudo-Republicans; he will have to place on that honored roll the great name of our distinguished leader, the Senator from Indiana [Mr. WATSON].

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I should like very much to have a vote upon the pending resolution before long, and I intend now to take but a few moments of the time of the Senate. I can not see any good reason why the resolution should be adopted. I am quite sure that it is not in conformity with the declarations of the President before the late presidential campaign or after the campaign. I have before me now the first message of the President to Congress, and I want to read what he said upon that occasion:

> In considering the tariff for other industries than agriculture, we find that there have been economic shifts necessitating a readjustment of some of the tariff schedules. Seven years of experience under the tariff bill enacted in 1922 have demonstrated the wisdom of Congress in the enactment of that measure. On the whole it has worked well. In the main our wages have been maintained at high levels; our exports and imports have steadily increased; with some exceptions our manufacturing industries have been prosperous. Nevertheless, economic changes have taken place during that time, which have placed certain domestic products at a disadvantage and new industries have come into being, all of which creates the necessity for some limited changes in the schedules and in the administrative clauses of the laws as written in 1922.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> No discrimination against any foreign industry is involved in equalizing the difference in costs of production at home and abroad and thus taking from foreign producers the advantages they derive from paying lower wages to labor. Indeed, such equalization is not only a measure of social justice at home, but by the lift it gives to our standards of living we increase the demand for those goods from abroad that we do not ourselves produce. In a large sense we have learned that the cheapening of the toiler decreases rather than promotes permanent prosperity because it reduces the consuming power of the people.

Mr. President, I shall not read further. That statement, as I have stated, was made in the first message of President Hoover to the Congress of the United States. The House of Representatives has acted in accordance with the message as to the revision of the tariff. There is no Senator present but will admit that there are inequalities in the existing tariff law affecting other industries than the industry of agriculture. I wish to say that the House of Representatives recognized that and has made the following changes——

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. SMOOT. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. Am I to understand that the Senator from Utah approves the House bill?

Mr. SMOOT. I did not say that, but I had reference to the changes made by the House bill in the schedules other than that relating to agricultural products. There are some rates in the House bill of which I do not approve. I wish, however, to call the attention of the Senate to the changes the House has made in the various tariff schedules, so that Senators may see that the House had one idea above all others, namely, that the agriculture should be afforded relief, for the changes in the agricultural schedule made by the House of Representatives equal within 2 the changes made in the other 13 schedules of the bill.

Mr. BORAH. Is the Senator from Utah speaking of the number of changes?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; I will also come to the increases made in the duties and call the attention of the Senate to the very few decreases which were made, so that Senators may see what increases in the agricultural schedule have been made, and also the increases made in the other schedules as well.

In the chemical schedule there are 93 paragraphs, there are 215 basic articles, and the tariff increases proposed by the House are 20. In the earthenware schedule there are 37 paragraphs; there are 55 basic articles, and the rates on 14 of them are increased by the bill of the House of Representatives. The metals schedule has 101 paragraphs; there are 250 basic articles and there were only 14 increases made. In the manufactures of wood schedule there are 30 basic articles, and the House increased the duty in 3 instances. In the tobacco schedule there are 4 paragraphs, 3 basic articles, and the House has changed 2. In the agricultural schedule there are 80 paragraphs; there are 150 basic articles, and the House has increased the duty in the case of 115. In the spirits and wines schedule there are 9 paragraphs, with 12 basic articles, and the House has changed 2. In the cotton schedule there are 20 paragraphs; there are 25 basic articles and the House has changed 30.

I ask, Mr. President, that the entire list of these schedules, with the action of the House thereon, may be printed in the RECORD without reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

Schedule	Paragraphs	Basic articles	Tariff increases proposed
1. Chemicals	93	215	20
2. Earthenware	37	55	14
3. Metals, etc	101	250	14
4. Wood, etc	9	30	3
5. Sugar, etc	4	6	3
6. Tobacco	4	3	2
7. Agriculture, etc	80	150	115
8. Spirits and wines	9	12	2
9. Cotton, etc	20	25	30
10. Flax, etc	22	31	13
11. Wool, etc	19	18	8
12. Silk, etc	12	20	7
13. Rayon (a new schedule)
14. Papers and books	13	60	6
15. Sundries	59	250	15

Outside of Schedule 1 (chemicals) the total increases in rates in the House bill were 117, not including agriculture.

The total rate increases in agriculture were only two less than the total rate increases in all other 13 schedules in the bill.

Not including chemicals and agriculture—total increases	117
Total increases in rates in agriculture alone	115

This indicates that the House bill, after all, favors agriculture as much as all industrial schedules outside of chemicals.

Mr. SMOOT. There are 115 increases in the House bill in the agricultural schedule, while other increases number but 117; in other words, in the other 13 schedules of the House bill but 117 changes have been made, while in the agricultural schedule 115 have been made.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah yield to me for a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. SMOOT. I yield.

Mr. REED. Does the Senator from Utah think that those contrasting figures give a complete picture of the situation? It occurs to me that agriculture has been treated even better than those figures would indicate. We have found in the work we have done so far on the chemical schedule that many chemicals which I would never associate with agriculture at all are made out of low-grade agricultural products that would not otherwise be sold, and that the benefit in that case goes directly to agriculture, in keeping the manufacture of such chemicals in this country. Butyl acetate is one of them. I never heard of it before. It goes into photographic films. That does not sound like an agricultural product, but it uses 8,000,000 bushels of domestic low-grade corn. There is a change which has been made directly for the benefit of agriculture.

Mr. SMOOT. I will also say that of the principal agricultural organizations of the country interested in certain oils and fats without a single exception desire an increase in the rates on those items.

Mr. REED. Of course, all of them do. Casein affords another illustration, and yet the Senator includes those among his 117 changes in the other parts of the bill. It seems to me that the proportion is much greater in favor of the agricultural items.

Mr. SMOOT. I simply wanted to make a statement to the Senator of the actual changes under the schedules; and I have already done that. If the Senator wants to know what are the increases in the House bill on agricultural products, I have taken particular pains to go over most of them. They are as follows:

Cattle, from 1½ to 2 and 2 to 2½ cents a pound.

Fresh beef and veal, from 3 cents to 6 cents a pound—100 per cent.

Sheep, from $2 to $3—an increase of 50 per cent.

Mutton and goat meats, from 2½ to 5 cents a pound—an increase of 100 per cent.

Lamb, from 4 to 7 cents a pound.

Swine, from one-half cent a pound to 2 cents a pound.

Pork, from three-fourths of a cent a pound to 2½ cents a pound.

Bacon and hams, from 2 cents a pound to 3¼ cents a pound.

Lard, from 1 to 3 cents a pound.

Lard compounds, from 4 to 5 cents a pound.

Reindeer meat and venison, from 4 to 6 cents a pound.

Milk, fresh or sour, from 2½ cents to 5 cents.

Buttermilk, from 1 cent to 5 cents.

Cream, from 20 cents to 48 cents a gallon.

Butter, from 8 to 14 cents. Substitutes are raised to the same rate.

Cheese, from 5 to 7 cents.

Poultry, from 3 to 6 cents.

Dressed birds and poultry, from 6 to 8 cents; turkeys, to 10 cents.

Eggs, per dozen, 8 to 10 cents.

Buckwheat, from 10 cents per hundred to 25 cents per hundred.

Corn, from 15 cents per bushel of 56 pounds to 25 cents per bushel.

Rough rice, from 1 cent to 1¼ cents; hulled rice, from 1¼ cents to 1½ cents.

Apricots, from 1 to 2 cents.

Citrons or citron peel, candied, from 4½ cents to 8 cents.

Figs, from 2 cents to 5 cents.

Limes, from 1 cent to 2 cents.

Grapefruit, from 1 cent to 1½ cents.

Pineapples, from 22½ cents a crate to 35 cents a crate.

Peanuts, not shelled, from 3 cents to 4¼ cents; shelled, from 4 cents to 7 cents.

Edible nuts, shelled, from 1 cent to 10 cents; unshelled, from 1 cent to 5 cents.

Soy beans, from one-half of 1 cent to 2 cents.

Beans, cowpeas, green or unripe, from 1 cent to 3½ cents; dried, from 1¾ cents to 2½ cents.

Peas, green or unripe, from 1 to 2 cents; dried, from 1 to 1¾ cents; split, from 1 cent to 1¾ cents.

Onions, from 1½ cents to 2 cents.

Irish potatoes, from 50 to 75 cents per hundred pounds.

Tomatoes in natural state, from one-half of 1 cent to 3 cents.

Rice straw, from $1 per ton to $10 per ton.

I desire to say that the rest of the schedule is about in the same proportion, although these are the principal items on which the House has acted.

Now, I want to refer to the treatment that the farmers of this country got under the last Democratic tariff bill, and show the Senate just what changes were made in that bill.

For instance, beef and veal, fresh, were on the free list.
Cattle were on the free list.
Tallow was on the free list.
Oleo stearin was on the free list.
Goats were on the free list.
Lamb, fresh, was on the free list.
Mutton was on the free list.
Sheep were on the free list.
Bacon and hams were on the free list.
Lard was on the free list.
Lard compounds and substitutes were on the free list.
Pork, fresh, was on the free list.
Pork, prepared, was on the free list.
Swine were on the free list.
Meats not otherwise specifically provided for were on the free list.
Cream was on the free list.
Milk, fresh, was on the free list.
Milk, condensed or prepared, was on the free list.
Eggs in shell were on the free list.
Birds, live, except poultry, were on the free list.
Buckwheat flour was on the free list.
Buckwheat, hulled and unhulled, was on the free list.
Corn was on the free list.
Rye was on the free list.
Wheat was on the free list.
Flour was on the free list.
Potatoes were on the free list.

Mr. NORBECK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; I yield to the Senator.

Mr. NORBECK. I just want to suggest that it does not make any difference to the wheat producer of this country, as I see it, whether wheat is on the free list or not.

Mr. SMOOT. That will lead to quite a discussion, Mr. President. I am quite sure that the farmers of the country do not want wheat to go on the free list. I am sure of that, whether the Senator thinks there is no advantage coming from it or not.

It does seem to me, Mr. President, that there is no necessity for having this resolution pass the Senate. The bill is before the committee. The committee has divided up into subcommittees. Everybody is going to have a chance to be heard. It will take us perhaps until about July 10 to finish the hearings. The country will be satisfied, at least so far as the hearings and the action of the Senate are concerned, if the representatives not only of the farmers but of the industries of the country have a chance to come and tell their story to the committee; and it will not take very much longer, I think, than if we undertook now to consider only agricultural products and directly related schedules. In fact, I do not know just how we could decide that question. What is a directly related schedule? You could say "a related product," and of course that we could not possibly do in a tariff schedule; but if you say "a related schedule," a schedule means the whole schedule. No matter whether there is one item in it or many items, that schedule, then, is to be considered; and it does seem to me that it would not hasten the consideration of the bill and the passage of a law if we undertook to pass this resolution.

I know that a tariff bill ought to be passed which will do everything that a tariff bill can do to advance the interests of the farmers of this country. There is no one in the Senate, there is no one in the country, in my opinion, who has not the same feeling and the same idea; and I know that the Finance Committee of the Senate as now organized will give every industry a chance to be heard. Whether or not any changes will be made is for the full committee to decide; but I know that demands are being made which in many cases I consider unreasonable demands, and I know that the Finance Committee can not and will not comply with them. Wherever there is a real necessity, however, wherever an industry shows beyond a question of a doubt that there is a real necessity for an increase, I am sure the Finance Committee will give consideration to that demand.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; I yield to the Senator.

Mr. FESS. The Senator has mentioned 117 changes in schedules other than the agricultural schedules. I should like to ask the Senator a question in regard to parliamentary procedure. Suppose the resolution now under consideration passes. Would that be an instruction to the representatives of the Senate, when they get into conference, not to consider anything that is not agricultural or immediately related to agriculture?

Mr. SMOOT. As chairman of the committee, I should take the passage of this resolution as an instruction to that effect.

Mr. FESS. What is the effect on a conference if, before the conference is had, there are instructions to the conferees, What would be the attitude of the other House?

Mr. SMOOT. I think the result would be that the bill would go into conference, and if the House did not yield we would come back to the Senate and ask for instructions; or, if we did yield to the increases made in the House bill outside of the agricultural schedules—and some of them I do not want to yield to—of course, they would be in conference.

Mr. FESS. My only concern was this: The House bill would be in conference with all of those items; but if the Senate had instructed its conferees not to consider those items, what would be the attitude of the House in the conference?

Mr. SMOOT. I say, I think before any action could be taken by the conferees on the part of the Senate they would have to have instructions from the Senate.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. SMOOT. I do.

Mr. BORAH. It seems to me that this resolution does not relate to the matter which the Senator is discussing.

Mr. FESS. I will state that I had noted that—that it relates only to the action of the committee.

Mr. BORAH. Yes.

Mr. FESS. But, if the Senator will permit me, I should like to have the opinion of the Senator from Idaho as to whether instructions to the committee would not be tantamount to instructions to the Senate?

Mr. BORAH. No; I do not think so.

Mr. FESS. Of course, that makes some difference.

Mr. SMOOT. Then the Senator takes the position that we are simply to consider the agricultural schedules and those directly related thereto, and leave all the other amendments of the House unacted upon by the committee, and report the bill to the Senate, and then have the Senate pass upon them without even having hearings upon them. That would be the effect of it.

Are we at the present time in a position to answer the questions that would have to be answered? I think we ought to have the fullest investigation of every item in this bill that is to be considered on the floor, and that the committee members ought to be in a position to answer any questions that may be asked by any Member of this body. If there is an increase, why should the increase take place? If there is a decrease, why should there be a decrease? If there is a transfer from the free list to the dutiable list, why was the transfer made? And the same thing if there is a transfer from the dutiable list to the free list. I can not see how that can be done if we are to close the doors now and have no hearings whatever upon those items.

Mr. President, in conclusion I will simply say that I can not see any good to come from the resolution, but I can see a great deal of injustice to come from it as far as the Finance Committee is concerned.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator a question. I assume that the Senator from Utah will be one of the conferees on the tariff bill.

Mr. SMOOT. More than likely.

Mr. JONES. If the committee is not permitted to hold its hearings and go into these House items, I am wondering what position our conferees would be in with reference to those items in conference with the House committee. In other words, would you be in a position to controvert properly with them over their items?

Mr. SMOOT. We would be at a great disadvantage.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah has analyzed the House bill. I desire to put into the RECORD a discussion of the House bill by the leading agricultural organizations of the country, together with a telegram from the Minneapolis Tribune and a number of other telegrams from farm organizations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

TARIFF BILL DOES NOT GIVE ADEQUATE PROTECTION TO AGRICULTURE

The proposed tariff act of 1929 (H. R. 2667) allows some increases of duties on commodities that come in competition with products of farms in the United States, but the bill generally does not satisfy farmers because it does not provide adequate duties on major products of the farm, according to the conclusions reached by representatives of 12 farm organizations after consideration of the bill.

The position of the farm organizations is explained in a statement sent to Members of the Senate and House of Representatives and signed by representatives of the following organizations: National Grange American Farm Bureau Federation, National Cooperative Milk Producers, American Dairy Federation, National Producers, Dairy Union, American Cotton Growers' Exchange, American National Livestock Association, National Livestock Producers' Association, American Fish Oil Association, Texas and Oklahoma Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, Southern Tariff Association, and the tariff committee of the National Poultry Council.

The full statement sent to Members of the Senate and the House of Representatives follows:

"Representatives of the farm groups and allied organizations whose names are attached to this communication have come to a unanimous conclusion regarding the treatment accorded agriculture in the proposed tariff act of 1929 (H. R. 2667).

"Because of the far-reaching effect of this tariff legislation, we have concluded that an obligation rests upon the organizations we represent to make known to you and to the public our views as to the extent to which the treatment accorded agriculture approaches fulfillment of the Republican Party's platform pledge.

"1. The bill allows some increases of duties on commodities that come into competition with products of farms of the United States. Those increases will be beneficial to the agricultural producers. But the bill generally will not satisfy farmers because it does not provide adequate duties on major products of the farm.

"2. The Republican Party at its last convention included in its declarations as to tariff the following pledge:

"A protective tariff is as vital to American agriculture as it is to American manufacturing. The Republican Party believes that the home market, built up under the protective policy, belongs to the American farmer, and it pledges its support of legislation which will give this market to him to the full extent of his ability to supply it."

MEASURE SAID TO FAIL TO FULFILL PLEDGE

"Our examination of the proposed duties in the light of this definite pledge that the domestic market is to be reserved for agricultural producers of this country convinces us that the bill in important instances has fallen far short of meeting the responsibility of carrying out this pledge to agriculture.

"3. The bill also denies to the agricultural producers of the United States any measure of protection against products imported from the Philippine Islands. This denial was made in the face of the legal right to impose such duties, although the principle is admitted and declared in the bill. The continued granting of such privileges to residents of the Philippine Islands at the expense of our agriculture constitutes one of the most important obstacles to our agriculture becoming normal and regaining its rightful share of the national income.

"4. The bill also fails to recognize a very serious problem which has become a real concern to our producers during the past decade. This problem has to do with the principle of levying import duties upon products which, although different, can be substituted for commodities produced in this country. The effect of competition through substitution is just as important to us as the effect of direct competition commodity by commodity.

"With regard to the neglect in the bill of this principle, we call attention to the long list in the schedules covering oils and fats and the raw materials from which such oils and fats are extracted, nearly all of which are interchangeable in whole or in part. This principle of substitution is also found operative with respect to other commodities.

DANGEROUS PRINCIPLE INVOLVED

"5. We are also alarmed by the fact that a very dangerous principle was extended in its application when, in addition to olive oil, palm-kernel oil, which was transferred from the free list to the dutiable list, was allowed to come into the country free of duty when rendered unfit for edible purposes. This proviso may be considered as the entering wedge of the industrial users to get the principle made generally applicable to a large range of oils and fats in case at any time they should lose their fight to keep such commodities on a low scale of duties or on the free list.

"6. We are herewith itemizing some of the important commodities imported into this country which should have higher rates than are provided for in the bill as reported:

"The oils and fats and their oil-bearing raw materials as found in paragraphs 53, 54, 55, 57, 58, 701, 703, 760, 1728, 1732, 1734, 1794; dairy products as found in paragraphs 19, 707, 708, 709, 710; hides, paragraph 1693; live cattle, 701; long-staple cotton, paragraph 1662; tapioca and sago starch, paragraphs 1755, 1781; dried eggs, paragraph 713; berries, paragraph 736; cherries, paragraph 737; figs, paragraph 740; dates, paragraph 741; peaches, paragraph 745; beans, paragraph 763; mushrooms, paragraph 766; peas, paragraph 767; onions, paragraph 768; potatoes, paragraph 769; tomato paste and canned tomatoes, paragraph 770.

"The above list is by no means complete, and other items may be justifiably added to it as result of later consideration by ourselves and others.

"We also ask that title 3, section 301, of the bill be so changed as to make dutiable agricultural products of the Philippines imported into this country, with the understanding that the revenues thus derived shall be segregated and turned into the treasury of the Philippine government.

"7. The Democratic platform also made promises of tariff increases to agriculture. That platform stated:

"'It is a fundamental principle of the party that such tariffs as are levied must not discriminate against any industry, class, or section. Therefore, we pledge that in its tariff policy the Democratic Party will insist upon equality of treatment between agriculture and other industries.'

"In view of this pledge of the Democratic Party, and in view of the manifest failure of the new tariff bill to keep the Republican Party pledge, we now rely upon the friends of agriculture of both parties of the House and the Senate to use every effort to correct these manifest injustices."

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 16, 1929.

Senator WILLIAM E. BORAH,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

On behalf of the agricultural interests of Minnesota and North and South Dakota, we congratulate you upon your resolution demanding that the Republican Party's pledges to agriculture be fulfilled. We want you to know that the Northwest is behind you in this fine fight you are waging on behalf of the farmer.

It is the opinion of the Northwest that many of the increases secured by industry in the Hawley bill not only fail to square with the Republican Party's promises but in a large measure nullify the advantages won by agriculture in the purely agricultural increases.

The great number of increases secured by industry has shocked the Northwest and given rise to the impression that, unless drastic action is taken by the Senate, the Hawley tariff bill will widen rather than narrow the spread between industry and agriculture.

Recently the Tribune forwarded to Senator SMOOT a telegram of protest against the Hawley bill. This protest was signed by 220 organizations in the four Northwestern States representing over 300,000 citizens. Inasmuch as your resolution will come up in the Senate Monday, time does not permit getting the signatures of the representative organizations to you before the resolution comes to a vote. The Tribune is certain that those organizations that signed the telegram of protest addressed to Senator SMOOT will gladly sign this telegram indorsing your resolution.

The Tribune is asking these organizations to sign this message and will wire their signatures to you as soon as possible.

THE MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 17, 1929.

Senator W. E. BORAH,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

About 1,000 farm people assembled at Pinelake voiced unanimous approval of your resolution limiting tariff consideration to farm products and schedules of articles affecting market of farm products. These farmers are members of Minnesota Farm Bureau and the large Pine County Holstein Breeders Association.

JOHN B. IRWIN,
President Minnesota Holstein Association.

HICKLEY, MINN., June 16, 1929.

Senator BORAH,
Congress of United States, Washington, D. C.:

Pine County Farm Bureau, with a membership of over 600 farmers, strongly favor the resolution introduced by yourself and sincerely hope that it will be adopted. Raising tariff on farm produce and then increasing tariff on what he has to buy will not help. Your resolution should be adopted.

A. P. JENSEN, President.
ASKOV A. W. SOMMERS, Secretary.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 15, 1929.

Senator W. E. BORAH,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

The Minnesota Holstein Association of more than 1,600 breeders appreciate your resolution restricting consideration to tariff affecting the market of United States farm products. This gives the Republican Senate and House a chance to keep faith with the farmers and support the election pledges of the President.

JOHN D. IRWIN, President.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 15, 1929.

Senator WILLIAM E. BORAH,
Washington, D. C.:

We are 100 per cent back of you in your stand on agricultural tariff's special session called for consideration of agricultural problems and what agriculture has received so far only excuse for boosting industrial rates. Congress should either act in accordance with campaign pledges or adjourn and go home. We admire your courage in taking stands you do.

LAND O' LAKES CREAMERIES (INC.).

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I have a great many telegrams, among them a great many telegrams from labor organizations, opposing this resolution most strenuously, and giving the reasons for their opposition. Perhaps other Senators have received the same telegrams. I do not know.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, apropos of the statement just made by my colleague, I wish the Senate to know that for perhaps more than a year Matthew Woll, a vice president of the American Federation of Labor, pretending, I think, to speak for the American Federation of Labor—but many strong labor men denounced his position—has advocated, and advocated before our committee, a repeal of the Sherman law, and of the Clayton Act, and of all antitrust legislation, so as to permit monopolies not only in manufactured products but in all products, so far as the monopoly might be interdicted or prohibited by the antitrust laws, so that if Matthew Woll speaks for labor, I have no hesitancy in saying that Matthew Woll, and labor, so far as he speaks for it, are in a combination, not a very honorable one, with the monopolists of the United States who are trying to fasten upon the American people a system of exploitation that will be injurious to the consumer.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, at the Thirty-seventh Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, held in Buffalo, N. Y., that organization considered certain resolutions, and I suppose the Senator knows what those resolutions are. I am quite sure that the labor organizations of the country, if the resolutions which have been made public reflect their real sentiments—I do not know whether they passed them or not, but they have been printed—are in favor of a tariff law carrying duties sufficient to equalize the cost of production of goods in the United States and the cost of production of similar goods in foreign countries.

Mr. President, I just want to say one other word, though not in connection with this matter, because I think it is perhaps worthy of consideration by the Senate. After reading the thousands upon thousands of letters that come to the Finance Committee, hundreds and hundreds of letters on every subject, I have come to this conclusion as to the conditions existing in America: The result of the mass production that has been inaugurated in the United States has been the cheapening of goods manufactured in the United States to those concerns involved. The result has been that the smaller manufacturer, who now carries on his business as he did in years past, is the class now knocking at the door for assistance. We do not see appearing before the committee the representatives of the concerns producing by mass production in the United States. It is the smaller manufacturer, the man who employs 100 or 200 men.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, are the manufacturers of cement included?

Mr. SMOOT. The manufacturers of cement?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Yes. Does the Senator refer to those as small manufacturers?

Mr. SMOOT. No, Mr. President; I did not refer to everyone who appeared, but I will say that the great mass of the witnesses who come before the Finance Committee represent that class of manufacturers.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. How about the producers of steel?

Mr. SMOOT. I have no letter from the producers of steel. I have not a single, solitary letter from them. I have some from the small tool manufacturers in Ohio and some of the smaller concerns that are manufacturing in a small way, but I have not a single, solitary letter from nor have I been approached by United States Steel representatives.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The bill as it passed the House does deal with those schedules.

Mr. SMOOT. That is what I say; it does deal with them, and I think we ought to deal with them. If the Borah resolution shall be passed, we can not deal with them, but we shall have exactly the same rates as are provided by the House, and they must be voted upon in this body with no hearings whatever.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, the net result of the passage of the so-called Borah resolution without such amendment as is suggested by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES], or an amendment bringing about the same result, would be simply a transferal of argument and debate, without inquiry and investigation, from the Finance Committee to the floor of the Senate.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. Why would it not be practicable and possible for the Finance Committee to go forward on the agricultural schedules, and report upon them? It does not make any difference what report the Committee on Finance might make, there will be amendments offered from the floor upon all schedules, perhaps, which the committee has not covered, or upon which they have not made a satisfactory report.

Mr. EDGE. Exactly; but if the Finance Committee were denied the opportunity of hearing witnesses now appearing, under oath, in the regular and usual manner, the Senate would be denied the opportunity of having the facts when the numerous amendments, so well prophesied by the Senator from Idaho, will be offered from the floor of the Senate. I am informed—and I have privately discussed the subject with one Senator who is, I think, third from the oldest Senator in the body in point of service—that this is the first time that an effort has been made to instruct a standing committee of the Senate as to the course it should follow in considering a measure referred to it in the ordinary way. Of course, the Senate has gone on record time after time, in resolutions, expressing their viewpoint as to policies on many subjects, but I repeat that in considering a measure, either introduced in the Senate or having been passed by the other House and received in the usual way by the Senate, and then referred to the committee, so far as I have been able to ascertain, this is the first effort that has ever been made to direct a standing committee as to how it should proceed in its inquiry in order to obtain the facts to present to the Senate for further consideration.

I do not propose to take the time of the Senate to discuss at all the merits or the alleged merits or demerits of the schedules covering industry and those covering agriculture. I deplore all the apparent effort to divide those two great responsibilities. We are here exercising our best judgment for the common good of the common country, and, as has been frequently stated, one class of industry, whether on the farm or in the factory, can not reach anywhere near a maximum of prosperity without the other class of industry being also successful.

Right along that line, I have agreed many times that, although the cause of it is sometimes hard to analyze and define, there is a great depression in the farming industry, and I am prepared, as a member of the Finance Committee, and have been as a Member of the Senate for 10 or 11 years, to review and consider any matter in the interest of agriculture, and to go the absolute limit, in what has appealed to me as being wise, in endeavoring to help the farmers in any direction in which they have sought help from the Congress.

When we are just commencing an investigation of tariff conditions, that technicalities should be resorted to, or an inquiry as to whether the word "next" means a special session or a regular session, seems to me entirely outside of the purview of the responsibility which everyone of us should assume.

The fact remains that we are considering the fundamental revision of the tariff, and when we consider the fundamental revision of the tariff, be it agriculture or be it industry, I can not conceive any possible justification for refusing even to listen to a representative of any class of industry, or of any class of agriculture, which desires, through its representatives, to appeal to the Congress or to the committee of the Congress having under consideration such a measure.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. KING. Does not the statement just made by the Senator, particularly when he said when we are considering the fundamentals of the tariff, imply that there shall be a comprehensive and sweeping investigation and consideration of the entire tariff question——

Mr. EDGE. Investigation; yes.

Mr. KING. And that means, of course, a revision upward or a revision downward, or a maintenance of the status quo, dependent upon whether the cupidity of those who appear before us makes sufficient appeal to the consciences of the Senators.

Mr. EDGE. In view of the fact, for the first time, to the best of my knowledge, all witnesses appearing before the subcommittees of the Finance Committee are now presenting their statements under oath; in the future that evidence will, under our recognized laws, occupy a somewhat different position from what has been termed ex parte evidence or testimony which may have been heretofore submitted by witnesses not under oath.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. Has the Senator found, before the subcommittee of which he is a member, the same condition to exist that has occurred before the subcommittee of which I am a member, namely, that about one-half of the witnesses who desire to appear are appearing in behalf of a reduction of schedules?

Mr. EDGE. I am very glad the Senator reminded me of that, or I might have forgotten it; I intended to refer to it. I will say that up to 12 o'clock to-day a decided majority of the witnesses who have appeared before the subcommittee considering the oil and chemical schedules—and, of course, I am only stating this from memory—have applied for reductions in existing duties, and I might say, further—and I have a memorandum of this on my desk—the second witness appearing before the committee considering the chemical schedule, when we first opened the hearings last Friday convinced me, unless evidence to the contrary can change my viewpoint, that an article for which he was appealing for a transfer from the basket clause, carrying 25 per cent ad valorem, to the free list, should be so transferred. So that there may not be any generalities in the presentation; may I state that plea referred to the importation of containers containing a certain type of gas which is used in a patented article, and which, under the sworn testimony of the witness, can not be produced satisfactorily in this country. I repeat I was convinced the 25 per cent ad valorem should come off. That is one little incident in connection with the second witness appearing before the committee on the chemical schedule in answer to the question of the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. KING. I think the Senator will state—I am sure he will as soon as his attention is called to the matter—that substantially every person who has asked for a reduction has been an importer, and those are the only ones, may I say, so far as I now recall, who have sought to prevent an increased price of products to the consumer.

Mr. EDGE. Of course, Mr. President, we all admit that in the make-up of any tariff bill in the past—and the same will be true in the future—so far as witnesses are concerned, to a great extent the witnesses are moved by their own more or less selfish viewpoint. That we can not avoid. But I repeat, we can get the facts, whether an importer is seeking a lower tariff or an American producer is seeking proper protection. It is the duty of the Finance Committee to secure the information and to transmit it for the consideration of the Senate.

We are faced with this situation, as I view it. I referred to it briefly at the outset. We recognize the House—certainly there can not be any question under the Constitution about it—as that part of the Congress which must initiate tariff legislation. They have passed a tariff bill. It has completed one-half of its legislative journey. It is now before the Senate Finance Committee. Through no resolution of the Senate can we ignore that bill. That bill in due time, whatever resolution is passed by the Senate, will be reported by the Finance Committee to the Senate for consideration. If we are confined to a consideration of the agricultural schedules our report will contain such decisions as we arrive at regarding those schedules, but the House bill will, of course, come before the Senate intact in its relation to other schedules. What is then going to happen?

Various suggestions have been made this morning about the element of time. How can time be saved by this suggested procedure? What will happen naturally will be that representatives of various sections of the country, feeling all the more positive that the interests of their constituents have not been given proper consideration or rather ignored, will introduce amendments and endeavor to secure what they feel their industries deserve. The Senate then will face the problem of attempting to decide intelligently whether increases or reductions proposed by amendments are justified or otherwise. We will not save one minute of time. On the contrary, as a matter of common-sense analysis, we will add to the time, because in the debates we will not have the benefit of sworn testimony, sworn investigation, sworn advice that would enable the proponents of this or that proposal to argue with the facts at hand. I can not see any object to be gained by the passage of the resolution, except a loss of time; and certainly that provides no help for the farmer. The resolution means a bill will be passed by the conference committee, and we might as well face it; and without any real, businesslike opportunity having been given to review the schedules passed by the House, with unsatisfactory results that any other Senator can prophesy just as well as I can.

Referring to the suggestion so frequently made by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] this morning, I can not see why the special session, under any interpretation either of the President's message or speeches, or of the ofttimes repeated plank of the Republican platform, in considering a tariff measure, should confine itself to any one particular class of industry or activity. Nothing the Senator from Idaho has said has convinced me his proposal would be in the interest of agriculture itself if those who claim to represent agriculture really want a tariff bill enacted into law.

Mr. BORAH. Then what does the Senator understand the President to mean when he used the expression "limited revision"?

Mr. EDGE. I did not intend to take the time to discuss that, but if the Senator desires me to do so I will. I do not want to be misunderstood. What the President said has been read I think several times this morning and at other times.

Mr. BORAH. What did he mean by "limited revision"?

Mr. EDGE. He meant exactly what he said. I have not any doubt about it and I will read what he said.

Mr. BORAH. I know what he said, but I want to know what he meant. The Senator said my proposition tends to limit the consideration of the committee to certain schedules. The President declared for limited revision. What did the President mean by "limited revision"?

Mr. EDGE. I am entirely in agreement with the President on the meaning of the words "limited revision."

Mr. BORAH. What did the President mean?

Mr. EDGE. I will try to advise the Senator what I am sure he means, and if that coincides with the President's views I shall be very happy because I am always very happy to be in agreement with him.

"Limited revision" means, according to my view, a revision of those schedules that have been adversely affected through economic conditions through a period of seven years, the most disturbed period following the most destructive war of history. "Limited revision" means a revision upward or downward of agriculture or industry or any activity that has been affected during that time adversely. That is my definition of limited revision.

Mr. BORAH. That definition is limited revision with no limit. That would include an investigation of all schedules.

Mr. EDGE. Absolutely. I think there should be an investigation of all commodities, so that representatives desiring to present their viewpoint or their situation may do so, but I still retain the word "revision" then as entirely a matter for the committee to decide. So far as I am concerned, I would be entirely satisfied by the sworn evidence adduced by the committee.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator has stated a rule which I presume would be the rule which the committee would follow under all circumstances.

Mr. EDGE. I assume so. I think they should.

Mr. BORAH. Then the President's term "limited revision" really has no significance at all, because under the Senator's proposition he would go ahead and examine all industries, all schedules, all commodities, and wherever he felt there was need of protection he would give it.

Mr. EDGE. If they applied to the committee and presented their case, that is the only way I can see that we can find out whether they come under what I presume is the Senator's analysis of the President's statement—whether they have suffered unemployment, whether anything has happened in the last few years to place them in a position that they should receive some help and consideration from their Congress. That is "limited." I assume many of them will not be able to make a case even if they should appear.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator would not give protection where it was not needed, would he?

Mr. EDGE. I tried to make that clear.

Mr. BORAH. And would give it where it is needed?

Mr. EDGE. Yes.

Mr. BORAH. That would be true under any revision. That would be true in the making of any tariff bill, would it not?

Mr. EDGE. Yes.

Mr. BORAH. Then, the word "limited" really has no significance whatever, because the Senator would follow exactly the same rule and the same procedure and the result would be precisely the same as if the word "limited" had not been used at all.

Mr. EDGE. The Senator tries to make a distinction which, in my judgment, is not justified by the interpretation which every one of us have attempted to apply to the President's message. It would seem to me that the test of necessity for revision is to consider whether there has been a substantial slackening of activity in an industry during the past few years and a consequent decrease of employment due to insurmountable competition in the products of that industry. How can the Finance Committee provide a yardstick from President Hoover's message convening this Congress without permitting the representatives of any industry that desires to try to demonstrate the necessity for a revision coming before the committee?

Mr. BORAH. Let me ask the Senator a question.

Mr. EDGE. I have asked the Senator from Idaho a question.

Mr. BORAH. I am asking this question to illustrate my position. Suppose the President had said nothing about limited revision or undertaken to establish a yardstick, but had simply said there should be a revision of the tariff. What different procedure would the Senator follow under those circumstances than that which he claims the right to follow now?

Mr. EDGE. Fundamentally none. I would listen to the American citizen who cared to come before the committee when we were considering a general tariff bill which the House had already passed.

Mr. BORAH. Then, we have arrived at the point where the term "limited revision" has been eliminated. The Senator is going forward precisely the same as if the word "limited" had not been used by the President.

Mr. EDGE. No; the Senator can not assert that position for me. I made it perfectly clear, I think, and will reiterate it that it must be demonstrated to me that the industry needs help. If it is demonstrated that an industry does need help that can be secured through a revision of the tariff, then so far as I am concerned I believe it is my duty to try to secure it for them.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator would pursue that course with any bill he was undertaking to write involving the tariff, would he not?

Mr. EDGE. Yes; and I think the proposition presented by the President is very clear.

Mr. BORAH. In what respect does it change the Senator's attitude as to what commodity or what schedule should be considered?

Mr. EDGE. I have said many times it does not do so so far as hearing those appearing before the committee were concerned.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator would do that if there was no word "limited" used?

Mr. EDGE. Yes; except we have a rather definite yardstick of unemployment, general disruption through conditions throughout these unusual economic periods, and I am quite sure I would be a little more insistent under this formula than I would in dealing with a general revision.

Mr. BORAH. I think the word "limited" has evaporated.

Mr. EDGE. I would like to ask the Senator a question while we are in colloquy. The Senator said on June 10 in debate with certain other Senators:

> I think if we could have a tariff based upon that principle it would be a just tariff; but I do not think the present tariff is based upon that principle.

This referred to the difference between cost of production at home and abroad. I will not take the time to read the preceding argument.

Then later on in the same discussion the Senator said further:

> I have no desire to change the principle as between the manufacturer and the farmer. I am perfectly willing to apply the same principle to both. What I am asking for and what we are asking for is the application of the principle to the farmer the same as to industry.

I would like to ask the Senator from Idaho, with tariff revision under consideration, always recalling that the House has revised many industrial schedules that must be or will be considered by the Senate in one form or another, either by the committee in an orderly way or on the floor of the Senate in a disorderly way—with that situation facing us, how are we going to apply the yardstick of equality between industry and agriculture if we do not obtain the facts?

Mr. BORAH. I would proceed precisely as we did in 1921. If I had under consideration industry, of course I would apply the same rule to it that I would to agriculture, to wit, the difference between cost of production at home and abroad. I would make no distinction and would not discriminate against industry upon that principle. What I am contending for is that we do not at this time take up the question of the industries. The Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] sotto voce says the House has already done it. That does not make any difference whatever with reference to the proposition now before us. The Senate can control its investigation and determine upon what schedules it will consider and what commodities it will pass upon just as if the House had not passed upon them.

Mr. EDGE. Does the Senator, knowing the parliamentary situation of such procedure perfectly well, think a more satisfactory tariff bill for either agriculture or industry, or both, would be written by the conference committee with the House having given the consideration they have to the industrial schedules and to agriculture, and with the Senate absolutely refusing to give any consideration to industry, but sending over such changes as they see fit to make in the agriculture schedules alone? Does the Senator approve of that method of legislating?

Mr. BORAH. I do in these circumstances because I think the House ought not to have considered those schedules under the present condition of affairs in the special session.

Mr. EDGE. The facts are that the House have some rights in the matter, and in my judgment have prior rights, and they have already done so.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. While the Senator from New Jersey and the Senator from Idaho were discussing this particular point I wanted to call attention to the fact that in the President's message the words "limited revision" were not used. Actually what the President said, in the paragraph immediately preceding that read by the Senator from New Jersey, and previously referred to in the debate, was this:

> Nevertheless, economic changes have taken place during that time—

That is, since 1922—

> which have placed certain domestic products at a disadvantage—

That, I assume, refers to agriculture—> and new industries have come into being, all of which creates the necessity for some limited changes in the schedules—

He does not say in the agricultural schedules; he does not limit it all. He says—> some limited changes in the schedules and in the administrative clauses of the laws as written in 1922.

Then, in order to explain what is meant by "limited changes in the schedules," he goes on in the very next sentence:

> It would seem to me that the test of necessity for revision is, in the main, whether there has been a substantial slackening of activity in an industry during the past few years.

How in the world is the Finance Committee or the Senate or the Congress to know whether there has been a substantial slackening in any industry if we are not to have the condition of that industry investigated?

Mr. BORAH. All I have to say in regard to that is that, so far as the House of Representatives is concerned, it gave no regard to that rule whatever. As to the slackening of industry and unemployment, in the case of at least three or four industries, it can not be said that it paid any attention whatever to that rule.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Jersey yield for a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. HARRISON. These quotations are from utterances of the President made some time ago. Is there any Senator on the other side of the Chamber close enough to the President to state what he meant when he talked about a "limited revision" of the tariff?

Mr. EDGE. I can not answer the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HARRISON. I did not think the Senator from New Jersey could do so.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, without presuming for a moment to speak for the President—in fact, I have had no conversation with him on the subject at all and I do not want to be misunderstood—but having known the public character of the President for a number of years, it would seem quite evident when in his campaign he delivered the speech in Boston in which he called attention to the necessity for tariff revision, and when in his message calling this session together he called attention to the kind of revision he wanted, that it would be almost lacking in courtesy or in appreciation of his honesty as the leader of a great party to suggest that he has changed his mind since he sent in his message at the beginning of the extra session.

The fact remains, Mr. President, with all due respect to the Senator from Idaho, that although he had a great deal to do with calling into being this extraordinary session, he hoped that it would be limited to agricultural products solely, and was very much annoyed to find that it was not so limited in the paragraph of the President's message to which I have just referred. Now, the Senator from Idaho is trying to get the Senate to agree with him. I do not blame him in the least, but I do not like the suggestion that we have changed our position since the campaign.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator from Connecticut was one of the Senators who did not want a special session at all.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Does anybody here contend that we are to be controlled entirely by some expression of the President? I have been laboring under the impression that we were charged with a duty, and have the constitutional power to discharge that duty according to our best judgment.

Mr. BORAH. I was under that impression also until the debenture proposition came up.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Even then perhaps he was right; I thought he was. I wish to have explained at some stage of the discussion the point I have suggested. If I am to be governed by party pronouncements, I take my stand upon the Republican platform. I have to add, however, that I see no disagreement between that platform and any utterance of the President of the United States.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, I will conclude my remarks in just a moment, although I am always willing to be interrupted.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. The increase in the tariff on agricultural products will increase the price which the farmer gets for his products. Is not that true?

Mr. EDGE. That is the theory.

Mr. TYDINGS. Will not the price of the things which the farmer buys be increased under the increased rates of the tariff?

Mr. EDGE. That is the same theory.

Mr. TYDINGS. If we increase the tariff on what the farmer has to sell on the one hand and then take it away from him on the other hand by increasing the tariff on the commodities he must buy, is the farmer relieved by the tariff bill?

Mr. EDGE. Some of us are trying to find the proper balance, and the Senator from Idaho, I will say very frankly—I have read his statement and I concur absolutely in that portion of it at least—has announced that is his viewpoint, as it is my viewpoint, that a proper protective tariff should represent the difference in the cost of production at home and production abroad, plus transportation and other expenses.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield further to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. Will there be any profit for the farmer if we increase his ability to buy and then raise the price of the things which he has to buy equivalent to that increase in his ability to buy?

Mr. EDGE. The best answer to that, Mr. President, is that we have done this thing many times during the last 70 years, the last time being in 1922. We had dire prophesies of disaster, but two Republican Presidents have been elected since that time, and if the theory is wrong it will be for the American people alone to decide.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Of course, under that situation, the farmer could continue to reduce his cost of living and have his living conditions impaired.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President——

Mr. EDGE. I yield further to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator did not give me a direct answer to my question.

Mr. EDGE. The people of the United States gave a direct answer to the question at the last election and the election preceding.

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; they gave their answer on the issue that a certain man should stay over on the other side of the water at that time. But if the price of the farmer's products will yield him more profit under increased tariff rates, and yet he is forced to pay more for the goods he has to buy, I do not think, as a matter of logic, that the Senator can maintain that the farmer will get any practical benefit if both the tariff on his products and the tariff on what he buys shall be raised.

Mr. EDGE. I do not understand the Senator's reference to somebody on the other side.

Mr. TYDINGS. Well, I have little faith in what the election decides, because usually the worst demagogue wins. However, I should still like to get an answer to my question as to how the farmer can get any benefit under the tariff if the tariff on the commodities he buys is to be increased in proportion to the increase in the tariff on the commodities which he sells.

Mr. EDGE. If the farmer proceeds to market his goods at a profit under the Republican protective tariff, which we certainly hope he can do, when he makes a profit, just as when the manufacturer makes a profit, he is able to move along quite satisfactorily.

Mr. TYDINGS. But if we raise the price of the things which he has to buy, so that his profit is all dissipated when he comes to buy, he is in exactly the same position as he was before.

Mr. EDGE. We are trying to work out a tariff bill which will raise his profit sufficiently so that he will be able to share in the prosperity of the industrialists, and, so far as I am concerned, I am absolutely committed to that viewpoint.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. KING. May I say to the Senator, in view of his repeated reference to the tariff of 1922, that one of the reasons assigned by my Republican friends at that time, and by some Democrats, for the enormously high rates was to benefit, first, the manufacturer, and it was contended that there would leak down to the farmers and to the agricultural interests of the United States sufficient benefit so that they would likewise be profited by the tariff act. In other words, it was an act in the interest of agriculture as well as manufacturing. Now my Republican friend from New Jersey contends that the farmers are not prosperous; that they were not benefited by that act; and he proposes, as I understand him, now to give the benefit to the farmers by increasing the tariff upon their products, but at the same time to increase the tariff upon manufactured products, so that the present disparity will be perpetuated, if not increased.

Mr. EDGE. Of course, the Senator from Utah knows perfectly well that the Senator from New Jersey does not think anything of the kind; but I am not going to take time to enter into the usual traditional tariff debate, so far as the difference between the viewpoint held by the Senator from Utah and that held by the Senator from New Jersey is concerned. If I may be permitted to conclude my remarks, I will return to the thought that I presented at the opening. I can not subscribe to the necessity of abrogating the recognized responsibility as well as the prerogatives of a standing committee in order to consider the pending tariff bill. I repeat that, because I think I have made clear that in either event the Senate must face the duty of considering the industrial schedules. Therefore, I can not understand why Senators would not prefer to face that responsibility with sworn testimony and evidence at their command. By adopting the pending resolution we will save nothing in time, but will lose a great deal in the opportunity to carry out an important responsibility in a businesslike manner.

If by the passage of the so-called Borah resolution we could eliminate discussion of industrial schedules, there might be some reason for its adoption, but that can not possibly be accomplished. The House bill is before us; the House bill must be acted on; the House bill must be returned with whatever changes the Senate shall adopt. Why, under those circumstances, individual Senators should be denied an opportunity to have the facts is beyond my comprehension.

It seems that those who take the opposite viewpoint from that which I am endeavoring to express proceed on the theory that a sort of blanket indictment is justified against the industrial rates on the ground that they are too high; that the industries are robbing everybody else. I do not question in the slightest degree that some of the tariff rates affecting industrial schedules are too high, but the only way in the world that we can prove that is to go through the course of procedure the Finance Committee has adopted.

It is unfair to the industrial world to say, as has been asserted time after time, that the industrial schedules are robbing the people. If they are robbing the people, let us have the facts under oath. The Finance Committee is organized for that purpose. The Democratic members of the committee are there to cross-examine every witness and to secure legal testimony, so that for the first time in the history of the Congress when we finish our hearings we can present to this body legal evidence upon which the tariff may properly, judiciously, and fairly be formulated. I repeat, if industrial schedules are unjust, why refuse to secure the facts?

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator a question or rather make an observation in that connection.

Mr. EDGE. If the Senator from Indiana desires to make an observation, I will yield the floor to him.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I want the Senator to answer the question. As I understand, Mr. President, some of the Members of this body, most of them on the other side and some on this side, insisted that the House should vote on the question of debenture, stating that they could not be excused from that responsibility, and finally they had their way, and the House did vote on the debenture. Now, the House sends over here a tariff bill. Is it not inconsistent for us now to refuse to vote on the House bill, when some of our Members have very recently insisted that the House vote on a Senate amendment?

Mr. EDGE. If the Senator desires my viewpoint, supplementing his, the fact is that we insisted through two efforts, finally successfully, to have the House vote on the debenture plan when they argued—I can not attempt to settle the merits of the discussion—that there was a constitutional question involved; and yet they receded and did vote. In this case, however, there can not be any constitutional question involved, excepting a constitutional responsibility on the part of the House to initiate a tariff bill. No one can question that. They have performed their constitutional responsibility; the bill has been transmitted to the Senate; and now we proceed to tell them that we will not vote upon it, or at least that we will not consider it in the usual way in which bills are considered.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. And if the House were to be considered discourteous to the Senate in refusing to vote on a question that did involve a matter of constitutionality, is not the Senate even more discourteous now, when that question is not involved, in refusing to vote on a question submitted to the Senate by the House?

Mr. EDGE. I should certainly think so.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I shall not speak more than a few minutes on this question.

The first matter to which I desired to ask attention, though, was that which was just touched on by the Senator from New Jersey in his reply to the Senator from Indiana. Under the Constitution, of course, the House had the sole right to initiate this legislation. Having that right, it had the equal right to determine what schedules it would consider and what not. It had a right to interpret the message of the President as it saw fit, and to send us a bill that, in its judgment, was necessary to bring both agricultural and general business rates up to a sufficiently protective level. Therefore, it is utterly incongruous for us to attack the House as if they had no right to do what they did.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. BORAH. I have not heard any attack upon the House. Has the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. REED. I have. I thought I heard several attacks on the House.

Mr. BORAH. It is no discourtesy to the House to disagree with them as to a bill, I trust.

Mr. REED. It is a discourtesy to the House to refuse even to consider the amendments they have put in a tariff bill.

Mr. BORAH. We would have a perfect right, without any discourtesy whatever to the House, to report back here a bill striking out everything except the enacting clause and substituting a wholly new bill.

Mr. REED. Quite true; but it is a profound discourtesy to the House, in my judgment, for us to instruct our committee not even to consider the action of the House on these other schedules.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. REED. I yield next to the Senator from Indiana; but I want to retract my promise to finish in 10 minutes.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President, I understood the Senator from Idaho himself to say this morning that the House had acted in a manner displeasing to him, and that if the House had acted in a manner pleasing to him he would not have offered this resolution. That may not be discourteous, but it is something like it.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. REED. I yield to the Senator from Idaho to reply.

Mr. BORAH. I did not consider it a discourtesy to disagree with the provisions of the House bill; and if there were not a very great exigency here I doubt if anybody would suggest it.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana and Mr. BINGHAM addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. REED. I yield first to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I did understand the Senator to say, however, that because the House had acted in the manner it had—and the inference certainly was there that the action of the House was not correct—that because it had acted in that way, the Senator insisted on offering this resolution to hobble and hamstring the Senate, and reduce the Members thereof in some degree to a form of intellectual servitude.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BINGHAM. May I say to my distinguished friend from Pennsylvania—I think he was here at the time—that it is my recollection that the Senator from Idaho used the words "bad faith" in connection with what the House had done; and if that is not a reflection on the Members of the House, or at least the majority of the House who passed the bill, I do not understand the use of the words "bad faith" or the use of the word "reflection."

Mr. BORAH. The great sensitiveness of the Members of the Senate in regard to the House now is very appealing to me. I intended no discourtesy to the House when I said that I wholly disagreed with the House bill, and I wholly disbelieved that it is in accordance with the President's message. That, to my mind, is no discourtesy to the House. It is a difference of opinion.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, this debate is showing more and more that for a Senator to have the floor merely converts him into a standing instead of a sitting audience. [Laughter.] In the chinks in the conversation, so to speak, I have just two or three suggestions that I should like to make.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. Before the Senator does that let me say that I should be very glad if we could amend the rules, while we are amending them, so that a Senator who has the floor really will have the floor. No one suffers more than myself from interruptions.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair might state that no Senator is obliged to yield unless he desires to do so.

Mr. BORAH. I understand that perfectly, and have understood it for some time.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, if the Senator from Pennsylvania will yield, there is no one who shows more courtesy in yielding than the Senator from Idaho.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield; and to whom?

Mr. REED. To anyone, Mr. President. [Laughter.]

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania has the floor.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. If the Senator from Pennsylvania will permit me, I should like to propound just one other question to the distinguished Senator from Idaho.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I object. [Laughter.]

Mr. REED. I think I will ask the Senator to do his propounding in his own time.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. All right. I was simply going to ask a question.

Mr. REED. Last Thursday I made a half hour's speech on the unfinished business at that time, and I finished it 4 hours and 15 minutes after I started; and I was supposed to have the floor all that time. I shall not take so long now.

What I meant by saying that this would be a discourtesy to the House is that the adoption of a resolution instructing our committee not to give any consideration to certain action of the House in advance of any study of the questions involved, without hearing any witnesses, is, in my judgment, a deep discourtesy. I say the adoption of this resolution would be and should be offensive to the House of Representatives. But let us suppose, now, that the resolution were adopted, and, as practical legislators, let us see how it would work out. Let us consider the mechanism of the process by which we would try to find what were agricultural products and their related industries, or whatever the phrase is.

This morning, with the courtesy of the Senator from Idaho, I gave one instance—that of a chemical known as butyl acetate, which we came upon in our investigations a day or two ago. It is one of the materials that go into the making of photographic films—kodak films, moving-picture films, and things of that sort. I should have said, in my ignorance, "Why, this strangely named chemical, butyl acetate, which is used for making kodak films, certainly has nothing to do with agriculture. Why should we consider that? We have had orders from the Senate not to consider anything but agricultural products." And yet, when we called the first witness on that subject, we discovered that this chemical is made from fermented corn, usually the poorest grade of corn, the sort of thing that a farmer can not sell; and last year alone 8,000,000 bushels of corn went into the manufacture of that strange chemical!

Had we acted in the best of good faith in carrying out such a resolution as that proposed by the Senator from Idaho, we would have passed that over, and we would not have heard a witness. We would have said, "Why, that has nothing to do with agriculture. We will not even hear you. You men have come to Washington to testify. No matter how important to you your industry may be, it is not important to the farmer; so go on back home, unheard."

You see, in the actual working out of the thing we can not run down the bill and select out those items that relate to agriculture. You have to have your hearings first, before you know whether they do or do not; and when the House has had its hearings on the subject, and the House as a body has acted, and our committee has had its hearings and made its investigation, how much time are we going to save for the sake of agriculture if we merely throw that subject out of consideration after hearing the witnesses, or if we act on the information we have? When the bill comes before the Senate, somebody who is interested in butyl acetate, or whatever the topic may be, will offer the amendment here, so that in the Senate at least as much time is going to be devoted to each item as if this resolution had never passed. And then we go to conference, only partly informed, to deal with the House, already offended by our action in refusing to consider on its merits what they have done; and we certainly are not going to abbreviate the process of conference by that method. So the Senate will readily see that from the standpoint of saving time this resolution will cost us time instead of saving it for us.

Then let us consider some other illustrations of the same thing.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator permit a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. KING. Does not the Senator think that any person with ordinary intelligence, or with the aid of some Tariff Commission representative, could go through this bill and in two hours, or at least half a day, very easily point out the items that might come within the category of agricultural relief?

Mr. REED. That is a very interesting suggestion, and this is a great chance to try it out, because the Senator from Utah, who asks me the question, has far more than ordinary intelligence; and I should like to ask him how he would solve three or four typical questions. Would the Senator say that cotton textiles were agricultural products within the meaning of the Borah resolution, and could be considered?

Mr. KING. Does the Senator ask me that question?

Mr. REED. Yes; I am asking that question of the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. If the Borah resolution declares for the consideration only of agricultural products and all related commodities, I will readily admit that many might determine that textiles that were the product of cotton would come within the provisions of the resolution.

Mr. REED. I see. Then on the language of the original Borah resolution, which limits our study to the agricultural and directly related schedules the Senator would consider the tariff on cotton textiles? Is that right?

Mr. KING. I said that many would consider that that was a related product.

Mr. REED. Oh, no; I beg the Senator's pardon. I want him to tell us what he would say.

Mr. KING. Oh, well, I shall reserve my judgment upon that.

Mr. REED. Then the Senator is not so clearly and deeply convinced that it is or is not a directly related product that he would undertake to tell us now what his view is?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I want to be entirely frank with my friend, because he is always very frank with me, and, I know, with the Senate. My interpretation is that textiles which were the direct product of cotton would come within that category; but, let me ask the Senator, can there be any controversy as to hundreds and thousands of items comprehended within a general tariff bill as to whether or not they would be allocated under the head of agricultural products? Would coal? Would manganese?

Mr. REED. There would be endless controversy as to whether they were directly related products, and the Senator and I, I am afraid, in all our friendship, would not ever agree about cotton textiles or woolen textiles, or shoes. Whoever thought a shoe was an agricultural product? But if you are going to protect hides you have to consider shoes or you will drive the entire shoe-manufacturing industry out of the United States.

Mr. GLENN and Mr. EDGE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON in the chair). Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. REED. I yield first to the Senator from Illinois, who first asked me to yield.

Mr. GLENN. I think, if I correctly understood the author of the resolution this morning, he stated, in answer to a question asked him, or asked the Senator from Utah, that he would not consider textiles within the purview of the resolution.

Mr. REED. I so understood him, and that is why I was glad to get the opinion of the Senator from Utah if I could.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, that is a point to which I wanted to call attention. The Senator from Utah said it was directly related. The Senator from Idaho, in answering me earlier in the day, said it was not directly related. There you have two leaders who do not agree.

Mr. REED. Precisely, and let me suggest to the Senator from Washington, at whom a rather derisive remark about shingles was directed this morning, that if I had to interpret the Borah resolution I should say that shingles are just as much agricultural articles as corncobs are.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield there?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. DILL. From the standpoint of securing a tariff on shingles the Borah resolution would be to the advantage of those who want such a tariff because it would probably be interpreted to shut out any evidence against having such a tariff and just arbitrarily strike them off, and if the Borah resolution were not adopted, those who opposed the tariff on shingles could come in and present their evidence. So from that standpoint those of us who want the tariff would be better off.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. KING. I want to qualify an observation I made. If there was a tariff and the raw article was not dealt with, then obviously under the Borah resolution there would be no consideration given to the schedules affecting the finished products.

Mr. REED. I am not sure why that is obvious. If woolen textiles are kindred to the agricultural products of wool, and therefore we can consider woolen textiles, why can we not also consider cotton textiles on the same theory?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. May I suggest that that would scarcely be a limitation? If a duty is imposed upon agricultural products entering into manufactures, it would be absolutely necessary to put compensatory duties upon such manufactures.

Mr. REED. Precisely.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That would be necessarily implied, it would seem to me. Accordingly if you increased the tariff on woolens, as in the bill as it passed the House, then you would put a duty on the manufactured products of wool; so that those would be related. If there is no duty on cotton, I find it difficult to conceive how, under the Borah resolution, cotton textiles would be regarded as falling within the scope of the resolution.

Mr. REED. My recollection is not definite, but I think there is a duty on long-staple cotton.

Mr. HARRISON. No. There was, but it was repealed.

Mr. SMOOT. There is a proposition to put a duty on it now.

Mr. REED. Whatever we do with the tariff on long-staple cotton, or whatever we do with the tariff on ordinary cotton, leaving it on the free list is tariff action.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The same situation exists with respect to shoes. Of course, shoes are not agricultural products, not ever so considered, but if you put a duty on hides, justice requires that you put a compensatory duty on shoes.

Mr. REED. Of course, that is so. That is what I tried to explain a moment ago when I said that if you did not, you would drive the whole industry of shoe manufacturing out of the country. Yet when we begin to consider shoes under a limitation to agricultural products, we have ourselves in a strange paradox.

Mr. NORBECK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. NORBECK. The difficulty is not in understanding that shoes call for a tariff if hides do; the difficulty is in understanding why, if you put a 50-cent duty on the hide, it should call for putting $10 on shoes made from that hide.

Mr. REED. I have not heard anybody suggest a $10 duty on shoes.

Mr. NORBECK. Twenty per cent ad valorem.

Mr. REED. I do not know much about $50 shoes.

Mr. NORBECK. The Senator is not fair in his statement.

Mr. REED. What is unfair about it?

Mr. NORBECK. The Senator said $50 shoes, did he not?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. NORBECK. The number of shoes that are made from a hide, a great number of pairs, each having 20 per cent ad valorem, will run the tariff on the products of one hide up to $10.

Mr. REED. Of course, a large part of that cost is labor.

Mr. NORBECK. Yes; but the excuse for that duty is the 50-cent tariff placed on the cowhide. It is based on that alone to start with.

Mr. REED. Let me go on farther and show why, in justice to the farmer, this resolution should not pass. There are a number of articles, and some of them of great importance, in this bill, now taxable, which ought, by every law of common sense, to go on the free list. Those inevitably affect the farmer.

Take steel and manufactures of steel. There is no duty on ordinary steel products under the 1922 law. Nobody has suggested any duty on them in the proposed law, so far as I know. Yet the cheaper steel can be purchased the cheaper is going to be harvesting machinery and other steel articles which the farmer wants. That is obvious. At the present time we are putting a wholly unnecessary duty on manganese, which goes into steel manufacture. Ninety-five per cent of the manganese comes from abroad, and always will. If there was ever an item which ought to go on the free list, that is one of them.

Mr. ODDIE and Mr. SHORTRIDGE addressed the Chair.

Mr. REED. If I am right, then I ask the Senate to take that only as an illustration. I do not expect the Senator from Nevada or the Senator from Montana ever to agree with me.

Mr. ODDIE. I want to mention to the Senator the fact that manganese has been discovered in a good many of our States, and I think before this discussion is over we shall be able to bring out some facts before the Senate showing that we have an abundant supply in this country that can be relied on, and that we do not have to rely on foreign importations. Furthermore, I believe we will bring out the fact that manganese is a highly necessary item in the agricultural industry, because agricultural experts have found that the use of manganese in the soil has increased its productiveness to a very large extent.

Mr. REED. The Senator has helped me with another reason.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. Let me answer this. Perhaps I am all wrong, and perhaps the Senator from Nevada is all right, but in either event the decision is important to the farmer and ought to be made intelligently, and not made by the Senate after a debate between my friend and myself here on the floor, without the benefit of any evidence.

I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator has not forgotten that in the House they took from the free list hoes and rakes and forks, and put a 30 per cent ad valorem duty on them.

Mr. REED. I have not forgotten that, and I think that is one of the things our committee ought to scrutinize very carefully.

Mr. HARRISON. I am glad to hear the Senator say so.

Mr. REED. But we could not do it under the Borah resolution.

Mr. BORAH. But if you did it without the Borah resolution, it would be discourteous to the House.

Mr. REED. Not at all. We do not owe the House any duty of agreeing with them, but we do owe them the duty of giving some consideration to what they send us.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator is passing upon one of these items, saying it ought to be taken out, before there ever has been a hearing before the committee or any evidence produced on the subject. He is just as discourteous to the House as it is claimed I was when I differed with them with reference to the scope of the investigation.

Mr. REED. I am giving one side of it, and the Senator from Nevada gives the opposite side. We will all of us hold our judgment in abeyance until we get the evidence. We will not condemn an industry—as the Senator from Idaho this morning condemned the cement industry—by comparing the production of the whole country with the imports when he knows, or should have known, that the imports can not get more than a hundred miles in from the seaboard. It is wholly unfair to compare the importations with the production that originates in the Mississippi Valley.

Mr. BORAH. I know that the cement industry is practically a monopoly in the United States.

Mr. REED. Then, the Senator knows more than I do. I think the evidence will demonstrate the contrary.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. DILL. The Senator from Idaho may not know that Belgian cement is laid down on the Columbia River, in the Northwest, at a lower price, because of lack of a tariff, than the price at which it can be made and hauled 100 miles by our American firms.

Mr. REED. Absolutely.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. This short colloquy in regard to cement seems to me to be one of the best illustrations that could be given to demonstrate the absolute necessity of getting the facts. The Senator from Idaho read from one letter. He apparently has reached his conclusion.

Mr. BORAH. Not from that one letter.

Mr. EDGE. I did not say he had reached his conclusion from the one letter, but he read from one letter, and apparently from various sources reached his conclusion. The Senator from Pennsylvania very properly draws attention to the fact that because of the weight of cement it can not be transported great distances on account of the freight rate. There is an honest difference of opinion. I am not criticizing the viewpoint of the Senator from Idaho. Neither am I accepting entirely the viewpoint of the Senator from Pennsylvania. But I do say there is a commodity taken from the free list and put on the dutiable list for the first time, and if there ever was an illustration of the fact that the Senate should have the facts, this furnishes it. That is an absolute innovation in our tariff.

Mr. BINGHAM. The colloquy between the Senator from Pennsylvania and the Senator from Nevada in regard to manganese is an illustration of the fact that Senators differ, and that they ought to have the information in regard to the matter but have not it.

Mr. REED. Let me give the Senate one or two further illustrations, perhaps just as a reminder of the multitude of details that go into one of these tariff bills. I have been impressed afresh at every day's hearing with the great variety and complexity of the industry of this country, and somewhat humiliated by my own ignorance on very many of the topics that come up for discussion in these hearings.

For example, the House has increased the duty on powdered chalk. It has been shown to us by some of the witnesses—and perhaps they are right; we have not closed the hearings—that the duty imposed on powdered chalk is of no benefit except to factories that employ about 200 men in America, and will put out of business the putty industry. I did not know there was powdered chalk in putty; perhaps other Senators did not know that. It will put out of business the American calcimine industry, which at present exports to the whole Western Hemisphere, all for the benefit of three or four very small powdering establishments employing a couple of hundred men.

I would not have known anything about that had we not had the hearings on it. But powdered chalk is not an agricultural commodity. Yet every farmer uses calcimine. Do we want to raise the price of calcimine to the farmer $6 or $7 a ton, or do we not? How can we tell until we have a hearing?

Mr. BORAH. All of which illustrates the worth of these hearings. The House called 1,100 witnesses, had hearings for two or three months, and made this awful blunder of which the Senator has spoken.

Mr. REED. I do not know yet whether or not it is an awful blunder, but I do know that very much of what the House has done has been accepted by both sides. Let me give another illustration. The House took no action, and, so far as I know—I have not investigated it fully—had no hearings on the matter of the tariff on automobiles. I have the impression that we could, with advantage to the United States, entirely remove that item from the dutiable schedule, and that it would be to the great advantage of our foreign trade to do that. Under the Borah resolution we could not look at it, because an automobile is not an agricultural product, although, if my eyes have borne me true witness in riding through the agricultural States of the Middle West, there is an automobile on every farm in that bankrupt region.

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President, the Senator seems to have decided that the tariff on automobiles ought to be removed, and I agree with him that it ought to be. I do not see any occasion for any hearings on that in any of the subcommittees. He can offer that as an amendment from the floor, and we can pass it.

Mr. REED. If such an amendment were offered, I would vote against it in my present state of absence of information. I do not believe we ought to act blindly in regard to a vast industry like that. But I have been told by many men in the business that they think it would be to their interest, and to the interest of the country, to repeal that particular duty. This is something which ought to be investigated and acted on with information, not blindly. I would vote against the suggestion right now because I would not want to act ignorantly, but I would like to investigate it.

Those witnesses coming before us are human beings like ourselves, and, like us, are very largely made up of selfishness. Of course they speak out of selfishness, as does every other human being. The world would fly apart if it were not held together by intelligent selfishness. Tariff bills always will be based on the selfish interests of the Nation. That is the reason why we have a Nation of individuals whose selfish interests run practically alike. It is no reflection on a tariff bill to say the men who testified were selfish. We have had some examples of extreme intelligence and farsighted selfishness, and I want to instance one that occurred Saturday.

The largest importer of camphor in the United States asked us to take camphor off the free list and expose it to a heavy tariff. That sounded so strange that of course we at once asked his motive. He replied, "At present Japan has complete monopoly of natural gum camphor. Germany has a complete practical monopoly of synthetic camphor. At present we are absolutely at the mercy of those two nations. I hope you will put a duty on it and make us pay more, because in the long run it will create an industry in this country that will make synthetic camphor, and we will be independent of the monopolies in those two other countries." If that is not an intelligent selfishness I can not imagine what would be.

I think I have given enough illustrations to show that the consideration we are giving to the bill will in many cases result in decreases in the present tariff to the advantage of the farmer and townsmen alike. I think the committee ought to be permitted to go ahead and do its work intelligently instead of forcing us to fight out here on the floor of the Senate a lot of those issues with no proof save the unsworn assertions of Senators on the different sides of the controversy who in the best of faith may make mistaken statements. We will go at it much more intelligently if we are working on a record of testimony from witnesses who know the facts of their own knowledge.

Finally, Mr. President, if anyone will travel through the country that lies to the north of us he will find that all the distress in the world is not in the Corn Belt of the Mississippi Valley. Drive from here to New York City. Go through Reading. There will be found half a dozen blast furnaces stone cold. They have not run for years. Why? Because the iron that they would have made had they run has been furnished by a company in British India which pays its laborers from 11 to 14 cents for a 9-hour day and whose freight rates from India to Philadelphia are almost as low as the rates from the central Pennsylvania furnaces to Philadelphia. The labor difference is about 90 per cent of the American cost. That industry to-day is dead. The farms of the Middle West are running, but the blast furnaces north of here are stone cold. The villages are disappearing. The population is going and yet they are just as good Americans, just as much entitled to our protection, as the farmer who drives to town in his own automobile to-night to see the movies.

Go up through the coal fields and you will find whole counties prostrate. They, too, have an overcapacity like the wheat farmers of the Northwest. Those people, if relief could be brought to them, need relief just as much as those who will get the advantage of the $150,000,000 appropriation we have made this afternoon. They are just as good American citizens as the farmers of the Middle West. They are entitled to no more, but just as much consideration. Why we should pass a bill to help one group of citizens and neglect another group I am utterly unable to understand. For that reason I hope the resolution will be defeated.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, in reply to some things which were said by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] this afternoon when he so courteously yielded to me at various times, I would like to point out the fact that on the 7th of March, three days after he became President, Mr. Hoover sent out his call for the extraordinary session and in that call there was nothing limiting legislation to agriculture. His proclamation was quite short. The second paragraph of it reads as follows:

> Whereas legislation to effect further agricultural relief and legislation for the limited changes in the tariff can not in justice to our farmers, our labor, and our manufacturers be postponed.

It seems to me there is only one inference which may be drawn from that statement, and that is that when on the 7th of March the President decided that the public interests required that the Congress of the United States should be convened in extraordinary session it was to effect further agricultural relief to help the farmers, to help labor, and to help the manufacturers, and specifically so stated. Therefore it seems to me not only lacking in courtesy to the House but lacking in courtesy to the President, who called us in extra session because he believed the country needed an extra session, not to have hearings covering the needs of the manufacturer just as much as the needs of the farmer. If that sentence means anything, it means just that thing.

Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho stated a few moments ago that I was opposed to the extra session. I do not know where he derived that information. I certainly never opposed it in any public speech. I certainly never went to the President of the United States, either solicited or unsolicited, and asked him not to call an extra session. It happens that I believe that an extra session frequently leads to a good deal of trouble and does not always accomplish that for which it is called, notably the session that was called to consider the subsidy for the American merchant marine. It happens that I had planned to go with other commissioners appointed by the President to study the situation in a very small group of islands concerning a very small number of people, but a situation which was believed to be acute and needing attention, and that for that reason I hoped that I might have the opportunity of doing whatever little service might be performed in that way even though the weather were very hot there, and not have to devote myself all summer to an extra session.

Therefore I was not anxious to see an extra session come; but whether I favored it or not has not the slightest thing to do with the argument nor with the question as to whether we are going to do what the President called us together to do in his proclamation and what he specifically asked us to do in his message to Congress. I maintain that the resolution offered by the Senator from Idaho is in direct contravention with the proclamation of the President and the President's first message.

The Senator from Idaho has offered a number of animadversions about bad faith in the campaign and has accused me of not talking about the tariff during the campaign, as though it were a matter which was of very great importance one way or the other. He said the principal issue of the campaign was agriculture and the immediate need for helping agriculture.

It is very natural for all of us to listen chiefly to our own speeches. Sometimes there is no one else to listen. Fortunately, the Senator from Idaho, for one, has never failed in having a large audience. He addressed most magnificent audiences during the campaign. He did more than any other person perhaps, at least outside of the leaders of the two parties, to determine the results of the campaign and to help those results forward, and I respect him for it.

It is true that in his speeches he made no reference, or very little reference—I regret that I did not have the opportunity more than two or three times of listening to them over the radio—to the necessities of industry, for any relief to be brought to the manufacturers referred to in the President's message. Therefore it is perfectly natural that he should say that the principal interest in the campaign and the principal issue was farm relief.

But if he had had to listen to speeches in Connecticut, and I do not refer only to those which I made, but to others, he would have heard a great deal about the tariff, because in that State, although agriculture is our special business and although our people are deeply interested in the schedules on dairy products, still our principal business is manufacturing. Many of our manufacturers are having an extremely hard time. Some are closing; others will have to close in the near future if they do not get relief. Some have been holding on for several years in the hope that the Tariff Commission might get around to studying their question sufficiently to make a recommendation.

May I quote just a few words from two speeches, one of which I made on September 17, 1928, in which, while referring to the candidate of the Republican Party, I said:

With his wide knowledge of world affairs he has been able to foster our foreign trade in the face of increasing foreign competition as no previous Secretary has ever done. With his training as an engineer and his genius for arriving at the best and most efficient way of doing things, he has played a stupendous part in the elimination of waste in many of our industries, and it is that increased efficiency which enables our factories to hold their own in world competition. At the same time, with his personal knowledge of foreign living conditions, he knows how supremely important it is for us to maintain the protective tariff. He appreciates fully that if his dream of happy homes for America is to come true, we can not afford to allow our markets to be flooded by products made by poorly paid foreign labor. The Democrats claim that they have recently been converted to this doctrine, but only a few months ago the Democratic candidate for Vice President and those who follow his leadership in the Senate voted that the tariff should be lowered and declined to agree to my amendment, which stated that there were certain articles on which the tariff should be increased.

Following that, in a speech delivered over the radio for the Columbia broadcasting chain on Friday, October 12, the subject of the address being "Hoover, the Builder," I stated:

If you ask me what Hoover is going to build with in the future, I can give you a long list of tools and building material, but I will content myself with only three. * * *

In the second place, Hoover is going to use another important Republican contribution to American building material, namely, the protective tariff, which our friends the Democrats have been fighting for many years, even down to last winter, when nearly every Democratic Senator went on record as favoring a lowering of the tariff. In his speech in Tennessee Hoover said:

"I advocate strengthening of the protective tariff as Henry Clay, of Kentucky, advocated it"—

He did not say, "I advocate strengthening the agricultural schedules alone." He said:

"I advocate strengthening of the protective tariff as Henry Clay, of Kentucky, advocated it; not as an abstract economic theory but as a practical and definite policy of protecting the standards of living of the American family. The purpose of the tariff is not to balance the books of business corporations, but to safeguard the family budget. With increasing pressure from countries of lower standards of living it has become the fundamental safeguard of the American workman and the American farmer. A retreat to the Underwood tariff schedule on farm produce would ruin millions of our farmers to-day."

That is the end of his quotation. Now, if I may be pardoned for quoting from my own remarks for a moment, I went on then to say:

It is fair to state that one of the principal tools with which Hoover will have to build is the protective tariff.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President——

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho certainly needs no defense at my poor hands, but I should like to observe that what he has been contending for at this short session of Congress is what he said Mr. Hoover stood for prior to the election, and the only difference now is that the Senator is exactly where he was before the election, although some of those for whom he spoke are not in the same place.

Mr. BINGHAM. The speech of President Hoover, from which I quoted, was delivered in Tennessee before the election. Furthermore, in his Boston speech, which was delivered on Monday evening, October 15, Mr. Hoover discussed at considerable length the question of the tariff as being a most important point. That speech, which was delivered in the heart of New England, was listened to by practically everyone in New England who had a radio, for all were interested to know what he thought about the tariff. There had been, as the Senator from Idaho has said, a great deal of talk about farm relief and other matters in the other speeches of the President, but when the President came into that section of the country, whose very bread and butter depends upon the tariff, he particularly wanted them to know what he thought about it. If the Senator desires I will read from that speech.

Mr. TYDINGS. Will the Senator let me interrupt him at that point?

Mr. BINGHAM. And that speech was delivered three or four weeks before the election.

Mr. TYDINGS. I agree with what the Senator says, but let me point out to him——

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President——

Mr. TYDINGS. I will ask the Senator, please, to let me finish the colloquy with the Senator from Connecticut. Mr. Hoover made only about four campaign speeches, and in only one of those speeches, as I recall, did he take up the subject of farm relief. On the other hand, the Senator from Idaho made dozens of campaign speeches to exceptionally large audiences. Mr. Hoover remained silent while the Senator from Idaho was saying what the President would do if he were elected. I listened to a great many of the speeches of the Senator from Idaho, and certainly no one——

Mr. BINGHAM. Did they convert the Senator?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; they did largely, and that is the reason I am voting with the Senator from Idaho in this instance.

Mr. BINGHAM. Is he voting as the Senator from Idaho asked him to?

Mr. TYDINGS. We were both for the same thing then, and we are both for the same thing now.

Mr. BINGHAM. In other words, both were for Mr. Hoover during the campaign?

Mr. TYDINGS. Oh, no; I had better sense than that. However, I should like to say to the Senator that it is recognized that the Senator from Idaho brought more votes to the now President of the United States than any other 15 men in the whole country together.

Mr. BINGHAM. Does the Senator mean including the Democratic Party? [Laughter.]

Mr. TYDINGS. I am not jesting. The Senator can rely on a jest when he can not controvert my statements by cold facts.

Mr. BINGHAM. I beg the Senator's pardon; I am far from jesting. I have heard mentioned the names of certain members of the Democratic Party who contributed very largely to the result of the campaign.

Mr. TYDINGS. If Mr. Hoover then remained silent, knowing that the Senator from Idaho was interpreting his position on the farm-relief program during all the time when the Senator from Idaho occupied the front page of almost all the dailies, it ill behooves the President now to take issue with the position set forth by the Senator from Idaho.

This was to be a farm-relief session. The President said specifically, after a visit of the Senator from Idaho to the White House just before the session was called, that there would be a session called to deal with farm relief; and certainly, after the support which the Senator from Idaho secured for him before the election, I do not think those who supported Mr. Hoover can with good grace take issue or find fault when the Senator from Idaho is simply trying to do now what he said Mr. Hoover would do if he were elected.

Mr. BINGHAM. Does the Senator from Maryland say that Mr. Hoover only referred to farm relief in one of his speeches?

Mr. TYDINGS. No; I say that he made one speech dealing with farm relief as a subject. Most of his speeches dealt with nothing except happier homes.

Mr. BINGHAM. That seems to have been a fairly popular topic. I should also call attention of the Senator from Maryland to the fact that if there is basis for his argument, there is equal basis for a tariff argument, for in only one of his speeches did Mr. Hoover stress the tariff. In other words, having decided to let the Democrats do most of the talking and be elected on that basis, it was not necessary for him to mention the tariff in more than one speech or to mention farm relief in more than one speech.

Mr. TYDINGS. I will observe that with the mass mind in this country as it is, the best way to get elected is to do no talking, and I suppose that accounts for much of the majority that a certain candidate received at the last election.

Mr. BINGHAM. That is an astonishing statement coming from the Senator from Maryland, who only a few hours or perhaps minutes ago said on the floor of the Senate—and I trust I shall quote him correctly—that the way to get elected in these days was to be a prize demagogue and that no one could be elected unless he had demagogic characteristics.

Mr. TYDINGS. And there was ample proof of the accuracy of that statement at the late November election.

Mr. BINGHAM. But now the Senator claims that the way to get elected is to say nothing. If to say nothing is the trademark of a demagogue, then we shall have to change our attitude toward demagogues.

Mr. TYDINGS. When a man is selected to be a leader and has not sufficient courage to lead, he becomes the worst kind of a demagogue.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield to me for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield the floor, although I will be glad to yield to the Senator if he wishes to ask me a question.

Mr. WHEELER. I notice the Senator from Connecticut and the Senator from New Jersey both lay great stress upon the fact that in his Boston speech the then candidate for President, Mr. Hoover, now President Hoover, emphasized the tariff, and they said that the people up in that section generally heard that speech. I was wondering if that was the reason why both Massachusetts and Rhode Island went Democratic.

Mr. BINGHAM. In other words, Mr. President, my friend from Montana agrees with the very brilliant remark made by the Senator from Maryland, that the best way to get elected is to say nothing, because he infers that having talked about the tariff that was the reason why he was defeated in those States.

Mr. WHEELER. No; I do not. The Senator apparently does not understand the question I asked him. I said that I understood the Senator laid great emphasis upon the fact that Mr. Hoover made a speech on the tariff in Boston.

Mr. BINGHAM. I did so in answer to the argument made on the floor by the Senator from Maryland that Mr. Hoover had not talked about the tariff until after the election and that the quotations from Mr. Hoover's call for the extra session and from his first message to Congress were the first evidence we had that we needed tariff legislation. I pointed out to the Senator the speech delivered in the campaign three weeks before the election in which Mr. Hoover laid great stress on the necessity of revising the tariff.

Mr. WHEELER. He made that speech at Boston, and I was——

Mr. BINGHAM. It was broadcasted all over the country; there was no concealing it.

Mr. WHEELER. And I was wondering if that was the reason he lost Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator knows the reason for that, as well as I do.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, this extra session was called, as is perfectly well understood, under a promise given by the President of the United States during the late campaign when he was a candidate for that office. The Washington Star of October 27, 1928, tells of the promise referred to. I quote from it as follows:

> Herbert Hoover announced to-day that if the Republican Party is returned to power he would call an extra session of Congress to deal with farm relief if adequate legislation should not be enacted at the coming session.
>
> "The question of a special session of Congress after March 4 in the event of the return of the Republican Party has been under discussion for some time"—

That is quoted—

> said a formal statement issued by the Republican presidential candidate.
>
> "There are a number of questions, particularly agricultural relief, which urgently require solution and should not be delayed for a whole year. It is our most urgent economic problem. I should hope it can be dealt with at the regular session this fall and thus a special session avoided. If, however, that can not be accomplished I would, if elected, not allow the matter to drift, and would of necessity call an extra session so as to secure early constructive action."

It is likewise, Mr. President, quite generally understood that that pronouncement was made by the President of the United States at that time due to the persuasion of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], the author of the resolution now before the Senate. The newspaper article continues:

> Senator BORAH discussed the farm problem during a luncheon conference with Hoover yesterday afternoon. There were indications that Hoover sent for BORAH with a view to obtaining his views upon the special-session proposal.

It was the depressed condition of agriculture, Mr. President, then, that was the occasion for the calling of this extra session, called, as has been stated, upon the suggestion of the Senator from Idaho. There was no other industry in the country at that time which seemed to be in such a situation as to call for immediate action by the Congress of the United States or whose claims could not be deferred until taken up in regular order at the general session. Indeed, Mr. President, at the very time that this pronouncement was put out the country was being told that we were enjoying not only phenomenal but unexampled prosperity; but now on the floor of the Senate we are told to-day that not only was that not true but that there were many industries that were prostrate, including the blast-furnace business, spoken of by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED], and the cement business, spoken of by other Senators; that they have been in that condition for several years past, and that the condition is so critical that it becomes necessary to take care of them at this special session of Congress. Accordingly, the House of Representatives has undertaken to take care of them (the farmers) in the bill which came to us a few days ago, in which the duty on brick, theretofore free, is fixed at $1.25 a thousand; the duty on cement, theretofore free, is now fixed at 8 cents a hundredweight, or the equivalent of 30 cents a barrel; shingles, theretofore free, are to bear a duty of 25 per cent; cedar lumber, theretofore free, is to bear a duty of 25 per cent; maple and birch lumber, theretofore free, is to bear a duty of 15 per cent. Cabinet furniture, not generally understood to be an agricultural product or one immediately related to agriculture, theretofore bearing an ad valorem rate of 33⅓ per cent, is raised to 40 per cent. Linen handkerchiefs, likewise not grown on the farm, theretofore bearing a duty of 45 per cent, are raised to 50 per cent; light bulbs, now used in farmhouses as well as in houses in the city, theretofore bearing a duty of 20 per cent, are now to bear a duty of 30 per cent. Building granite, scarcely to be classed as an agricultural product, theretofore bearing a duty of 50 per cent, is now increased to 60 per cent. Surgical instruments—surgical instruments, bear in mind—theretofore bearing a duty of 45 per cent, are raised to 70 per cent.

These are but samples of the increases that may be looked for with others to be added by the Senate, increasing the burden of the present tariff which the Research Bureau of the American Farm Bureau Federation states, costs the farmers of the United States upwards of $300,000,000 annually.

Mr. President, as might be expected, these increases have raised a furor in the agricultural Northwest. Some time ago—perhaps a month or six weeks ago—a representative of the Farm Bureau Federation made a speech in the city of Pittsburgh, at the time when it was beginning to be noised about that the tariff bill would embrace articles other than commodities produced upon the farm. He went there apparently for the purpose of impressing upon those who were agitating that course the unwisdom of it, and he then declared, what must be admitted by all to be a sound economic principle, that if the duty be raised upon agricultural products and likewise raised upon commodities generally the tariff might as well be let alone, because whatever advantage should accrue to the farmer by reason of the increased duties upon his products would be overcome, as suggested here this afternoon by the Senator from Maryland, by the increased price that he would be obliged to pay for the other favored commodities.

I thought it was a bold thing on the part of this representative of the farming interests of the country to make such a speech as that in that citadel of protection, but obviously, so far as the House is concerned, a futile thing.

The opposition to this course, and the disappointment which it has provoked throughout the agricultural Northwest, is reflected in the attitude of the Minneapolis Morning Tribune, a stalwart Republican paper published in the very heart of an overwhelmingly Republican country. Its issue of June 5 carries a significant cartoon illustrating the farmer carrying the additional burdens which would be imposed upon him by the tariff bill as it came from the House; and, as has been repeatedly said here, with the Finance Committee of the Senate constituted as it is—the great majority of the members coming from the region east of the Mississippi, if not east of the Alleghany Mountains—it is vain to expect that any mitigation of the situation will result from any consideration given to the bill by the Senate Committee on Finance. That journal has been so wrought up by the situation as it presents itself to-day that it circulated in the Northwest country, and had signed, a telegram of protest by some 300 farm organizations representing some 300,000 individuals. It seems to me so important that I venture to read it:

> MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 3, 1929.
>
> To the Hon. REED SMOOT,
> Chairman Finance Committee,
> United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:
>
> We business men and farmers of the agricultural Northwest had certain definite promises from the Republican Party and the Republican candidate for President last fall. In the present tariff bill, especially in regard to the proposed tariff on the farmer's building material and the lack of sufficient increases in the tariffs on what the farmer has to sell, we see a failure of the Republican Party to keep those promises so solemnly made.

We understand quite distinctly that the present special session of Congress was called primarily and exclusively to help the farmer. The tariff was to be amended in the interests of the farmer, yet we find what we consider wholly unjustifiable increases in the tariffs on the farmer's building material. The sum total of the farmer's trouble, as everyone knows, is the spread between the cost of that which he buys and the prices of that which he sells. Instead of narrowing this spread, the tariff on shingles, lumber, brick, and cement only increases it. The farmer is the country's chief user of shingles. Any increase in the cost of shingles will come largely out of the farmer's pocket. The farmer is a large user of cement. He uses cement in the construction of his farm buildings, for fence posts, and pays his share of the cost of cement roads.

The cement industry is one of the most highly organized in the country, and is organized chiefly in the interests of the industry. We can not understand that this industry needs help at the expense of the already distressed farmer.

With a due appreciation of the labors of your committee, we can not see how these proposed increases square with the campaign pledges of the Republican Party and of the President. We earnestly urge that all building material in which the farmer is chiefly interested be put on the free list. We also urge increases in duties on agricultural imports such as are advocated by the Northwest delegation in Congress. We feel that we have a right to ask this in good faith, in view of the promises made to us during the last campaign.

Signed by the Minneapolis Tribune, Frederick E. Murphy, publisher, in its own behalf, and in behalf of the following representative organizations and individuals of Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Montana, and Wisconsin.

* * * * * * *

The signers are headed by the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation.

In the issue of the paper referred to is an editorial commenting on this telegram which I feel justified in reading. It is headed:

THE NORTHWEST IS TO BE CONGRATULATED

The Tribune wishes to thank the multitudinous citizens of the Northwest who appended their signatures to the mighty telegram now in the hands of Senator SMOOT. No less than 220 organizations were represented on the message; and in many instances the officers of the organizations had to call the members together and lay the project before them. In a world as busy as ours all this meant no inconsiderable inconvenience; yet the inconvenience was cheerfully ignored, and the response was as prompt and unequivocal as it was cordial. The mere fact that 220 organizations and individuals representing, in the aggregate, 300,000 Northwest citizens, could, on such short notice, be mobilized into an army actively defending the interests of the Northwest is most heartening. Here we have concrete evidence as to the kind of citizenship we have in the Northwest. Ours is clearly an alert, vigilant, aggressive, intelligent, and informed citizenry, ready, at a second's notice, to drop the day's work, and enlist in the service of the common cause. That is proof that we have a magnificent spirit in this part of the country, and that the Northwest is able, when the emergency arises, to shed petty differences, and present a solid and impressive front.

And make no mistake about it—that Gargantuan telegram will exert a profound effect upon the Senate. When 300,000 people speak with a single voice, Congress pauses and listens. Public opinion is, and always has been, democracy's sovereign; and a Congress knows that public opinion is invading Washington when a telegram representing the sentiments of 300,000 American citizens stalks into the Capitol. Congress may dismiss expressions of individuals or small groups as not representative of any considerable section of public opinion; but when 300,000 citizens from a far-flung area embracing six agrarian States set forth their views in a telegram, Congress knows that it is dealing with a tremendous force.

We have hopes that the huge group, so hastily assembled to sign the telegram, will not, of necessity, be demobilized—that is, in spirit. The Northwest's fight for the redemption of the Republican Party's pledges to the farmer is not yet won. A long battle lies ahead. The industrial East will continue fighting us throughout the summer. As the tariff bill now stands, agriculture has secured roughly 60 upward raises while industry has secured something in the neighborhood of 900. That is like nothing we heard in the campaign. We heard no speakers stumping the Northwest and speaking as follows:

"Come on, agriculture; vote for us, and we'll solemnly promise you that every time we give industry 15 upward tariff raises we'll give you one."

No; that wasn't what was said. We were told that agriculture was to be put on a plane of parity with industry as regards the tariff. Our impression was that this time industry would be left out in the cold while the agricultural schedules would be tilted upward until they struck an even balance with the industrial schedules. The industrial East is willing enough to give the farmer 1 raise every time it gets 15 for itself, but we can't see that that is such a good bargain for the farmer or that it is agricultural-industrial "parity" or that it is a fulfillment of the party pledges.

That is why we hope the Northwest citizens who so enthusiastically responded to our petition for signers will remain, so to speak, a reserve. There may be a necessity for the Northwest to assert itself forcibly again during the summer—possibly several times. We trust that these citizens, who already have demonstrated their loyalty to the Northwest, will regard themselves as part of a volunteer corps of defense, ready to spring to action if and when the occasion demands.

Meanwhile we congratulate our Northwest citizens upon their splendid morale. Their response exceeded our most extravagant expectations, and in its spontaneity, fervor, and epic dimensions this demonstration of loyalty to the Northwest was the finest thing of its kind that ever happened in our part of the world.

Now, Mr. President, I desire to recur to a statement made in the telegram, as follows:

The sum total of the farmer's trouble, as everyone knows, is the spread between the cost of that which he buys and the prices of that which he sells.

At the time we began consideration of the farm relief bill I asked of the Department of Agriculture information concerning what that spread at that time amounted to. The information came to me from the Economic Bureau of the Department of Agriculture that at that time the purchasing power of farm products as compared with the purchasing power they had for the 5-year period from 1909 to 1913, inclusive, was 73 per cent. In other words, the farmer can now buy only 73 per cent of the commodities that he could with the products of his labors during that 5-year period; and since then the price of wheat has gone down until I had a letter from Wolf Point the other day to the effect that on that day it was commanding a price of 64 cents a bushel in that market.

Mr. NORBECK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. NORBECK. The ratio price of wheat as compared with the pre-war purchasing power would be $1.50 a bushel, would it not?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I have forgotten just exactly what the figures are, but my recollection is that it should be something like $1.40. That is to say, the prices of other commodities have risen to such an extent that in order to preserve the purchasing power of wheat it ought to be somewhere about $1.40.

Mr. President, we spent a long time in dealing with that subject and we have this afternoon appropriated $150,000,000 for the purpose of overcoming this spread between the price of what the farmer sells and what he buys; and now we propose to overcome whatever good will arise from that bill by increasing again the price of everything that he buys!

Mr. President, some reference was made here to the discourtesy that it is said would be shown to the House by the action contemplated by this resolution.

This special session, as I say, was called for the express purpose of giving relief to the farmer. It has been repeated again and again, and the truth can not be overlooked, that the problem of bringing the farmer's industry up to a level with other industries economically can not be solved by any single piece of legislation. Accordingly, on the 16th day of May the Senate passed unanimously a bill recommended unanimously by the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, recommended by the Department of Agriculture; in fact, drafted by the Department of Agriculture, approved by the Budget, and specifically approved by the President of the United States, to promote the establishment of laboratories for the testing of protein in wheat, and for carrying on experiments and research for the purpose of determining how best to grow wheat containing protein in a high percentage, the conditions under which the protein content in wheat may be increased, and other information of that character. The bill went to the House. It lay upon the Speaker's desk for nine days, until the 25th day of May, when it was referred to the Committee on Agriculture, and there it sleeps. The House has not passed any resolution that it will not consider that bill during the current session of the Congress, but its conduct is just as expressive as though it did do so.

The Senate a week ago passed a bill fathered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] for the purpose of giving some further relief to farmers growing perishable products sent into interstate commerce. That bill has gone over to the House, and, so far as my information goes, it has been ignored in exactly the same way.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I do.

Mr. BORAH. I was informed by a Member of the House who is interested in the bill that the committee which will have charge of the bill declined to consider it at this session.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. My information concerning the protein bill is exactly to the same effect. I may say that I have been studiously endeavoring—I fear rather offensively endeavoring—to induce the Agricultural Committee over in the House to realize that the bill to which I first referred is a bill for farm relief. Indeed, Mr. President, I dare say I violate no confidence in saying that the President of the United States regards it as altogether important that the Farm Board should have the benefit of that bill in order that it may properly grade wheat going upon the market.

It was said here this afternoon by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK], who is thoroughly well informed upon these matters, that wheat carrying a duty of 42 cents a bushel might just as well be upon the free list. Of course, he referred to the wheat ordinarily grown in this country; and it is not contended by anyone who knows anything about the subject that the duty on wheat is effective in any regard except with respect to the high-grade protein wheat grown in Canada, with which the high-grade protein wheat raised in this country competes. So that in order to make the tariff on wheat effective we must have full information, and the means of securing full information concerning the protein content of wheat. I am informed that in exactly the same way the House does not consider that the exigencies of the case are such as to require action upon that matter at this special session, but that it does require action to increase the duty upon cement, upon lumber, upon furniture, upon maple boards, and these other commodities to which I have referred in my remarks here.

I do not consider it at all as an affront to the House to say to it that, in the judgment of the Senate, at this special session legislation ought to be confined to measures that have relation to the particular object for which the special session was called, namely, farm relief, and to act accordingly.

Mr. President, some reference was made here to-day to manganese, and some little risibility was excited by the statement made by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. ODDIE] that the duty on manganese has direct reference to farm relief; that manganese is now used extensively as a fertilizing agent.

I was astonished to learn in Florida, when I visited that State some six weeks ago, that manganese is being extensively used there for the purpose of fertilizing lands devoted to the culture of tomatoes; whereupon I secured bulletins from the Department of Agriculture in which reference was made to fields fertilized by manganese and the results as compared with other fields that were not thus treated, and further information given showing the extraordinary results arrived at by the use of this new-found fertilizer.

Mr. President, I am subjected to all manner of importunities from my State, deeply interested in duties upon chrome and manganese, which the Senator from Pennsylvania says we can not have because that would increase the cost of producing steel, to oppose this resolution; but I am unwilling at this special session to support a proposal to go into a general revision of the tariff, which I can anticipate would mean nothing less than the imposition of enormous additional burdens upon the farmers of this country, in order to get a duty upon chrome and manganese, however important they may be to our State, and they are vastly important, because our State promises to become the great producer of those commodities. I am perfectly content to allow that matter to await action at a general session of the Congress, seeing that we waited for adequate encouragement of that character during all these years.

I hope the resolution of the Senator from Idaho will be adopted.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen	Dill	Hayden	Overman
Barkley	Edge	Hebert	Patterson
Bingham	Fess	Heflin	Pine
Blease	Fletcher	Howell	Ransdell
Borah	Frazier	Johnson	Reed
Bratton	George	Jones	Robinson, Ark.
Brookhart	Gillett	Kean	Robinson, Ind.
Broussard	Glass	King	Sackett
Burton	Glenn	La Follette	Schall
Capper	Goff	McKellar	Sheppard
Caraway	Goldsborough	McNary	Shortridge
Connally	Greene	Metcalf	Simmons
Copeland	Harris	Moses	Smith
Couzens	Harrison	Norbeck	Smoot
Cutting	Hastings	Norris	Steck
Dale	Hatfield	Nye	Stelwer
Deneen	Hawes	Oddie	Swanson
Thomas, Idaho	Trammell	Vandenberg	Waterman
Thomas, Okla.	Tydings	Walsh, Mont.	Watson
Townsend	Tyson	Warren	Wheeler

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague [Mr. BLAINE]. I ask that the announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. SCHALL. My colleague [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] is detained from the Senate by illness.

Mr. HEFLIN. My colleague [Mr. BLACK] is absent on account of illness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] to the resolution offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH].

Mr. WATSON. I was about to move that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow at 12 o'clock. I had been informed that three or four Senators wanted to speak, but they have just notified me that if we may have a vote now they will not speak.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I do not wish to make any speech, but I want to make perfectly plain the reason for the vote I am about to cast.

I do not wish to see the resolution of the Senator from Idaho defeated by indirection. He is entitled to a straight vote on his resolution. Therefore I shall vote against the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington, although I shall not vote for the resolution of the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I shall detain the Senate just a few minutes. I would have spoken before, but I did not know a quorum would be developed so quickly. I am not going to say what I had intended to say, but I want to say just a few words as to what led me to offer the amendment which I have presented.

Much has been said with reference to the President's attitude. I think the best way to judge of his attitude is to read what he said in the special message calling the Congress together. I think that correctly states his attitude. In the very first sentence of his special message to Congress he said:

> I have called this special session of Congress to redeem two pledges given in the last election—farm relief and limited changes in the tariff.

Again, in the same message he said, often discussing farm relief, in discussing the tariff, although I will not read all of it:

> It would seem to me that the test of necessity for revision is in the main whether there has been a substantial slackening of activity in an industry during the past few years, and a consequent decrease of employment due to insurmountable competition in the products of that industry.

Mr. President, the amendment I have proposed adds to the proposal of the Senator from Idaho the following:

> And any other line of industry in which there is and has been during the past few years a substantial slackening of activity, with a consequent decrease of employment, due to insurmountable competition from imports of the products of such industry.

This, as nearly as I could frame the amendment, covers the language and the attitude of the President of the United States, and I think it covers his attitude pretty generally.

I want to say that I am very much in accord with the ideas of the Senator from Idaho with reference to tariff revision at this session of the Congress. I do not believe we should go farther than the President suggests in his message. I think the first and prime consideration is the relief of agriculture through the tariff, that the other is really subordinate. But the President recognizes that there are some particular industries or particular lines of industry which are in a bad way. It is only through the tariff that they can get relief. So that is incorporated in his message, and that, I think, is what Congress should follow.

I think the country is generally prosperous, and I want to read something, which can not be classed as political, from a document which I just got hold of the other day, ran across by accident, really. It comes, I think, to every Senator, probably every month, or at certain stated times. It is a statement by the National City Bank of New York as to economic conditions, Government business, and United States securities. This is for June, 1929. I think I shall read a brief extract from it. It can not be classed as partisan or political.

> Trade and industry during the month of May have held close to the high level of previous months and the seasonal recession has been distinctly less than usual. Measured in terms both of volume and profits business is making an outstanding record, and one that is all the more impressive by reason of the unfavorable money conditions with which it has had to contend.

Factory employment, according to the Department of Labor, has increased rapidly this spring and is running 6 per cent ahead of last year, with pay rolls averaging 11 per cent higher. Of 23 major classifications of industry reported by the department only 4—leather, fertilizer, lumber, and stone, clay and glass products—show a reduction of working forces, marked gains appearing in iron and steel, automotive, agriculture implement, nonferrous metal, and machine tool lines. Consumption of electric power in industry is reported 14 per cent ahead of last year, while railway carloading of revenue freight is exceeding all previous records, the gain for the week of May 18 being 4.2 per cent as compared with the corresponding week of 1928, and 1.8 per cent compared with 1927.

In the steel industry blast furnaces and rolling mill operations are holding close to capacity, and production during the first four months was 11 per cent ahead of last year and at the unprecedented rate of 56,000,000 tons annually. Despite this record production, there is said to be enough forward orders on the books to carry the mills well into the summer and to minimize the usual slowing down. Unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation are the largest in over three years, and earnings of the steel industry for the second quarter doubtless are in line with the excellent results achieved in the first.

The unusual momentum of steel production and demand is a source of surprise to both buyers and sellers, and the explanation seems to be the large increase in automobile demand this year, which is believed to account for perhaps three-fourths of the gain in steel production. Five years ago the motor industry used approximately 10 per cent of the country's steel output; last year it used 18 per cent, and this year it is using 23 per cent.

Monthly production of automobiles continues at a rate far in excess of any previous year, notwithstanding which conditions in the industry are reported sound, with car stocks generally normal, owing to good retail distribution and rapidly expanding exports. It is conceded that manufacturing schedules doubtless will have to be cut later in the year, but as manufacturers are watching the market closely the industry feels confident that overproduction will be avoided.

* * * * * * *

All in all the business situation of the moment appears exceptionally favorable, with production in most lines well adjusted to demand, with a high consumer purchasing power, low inventories, and a generally stable price level. It is a pity under these circumstances that a condition of credit has developed which is creating uncertainty and which, if it continues, can scarcely fail to affect business adversely.

Mr. President, it seems to me, in the face of a general statement like that with reference to general prosperity throughout the country, that a general revision of the tariff is unjustified, is unwarranted, and that the action recommended by the President is as far as we should go. In my amendment as I offered it yesterday I referred, not by name, to industries peculiarly depressed. There was some amusement, apparently, in the minds of some who supposed that I was referring to shingles. I had shingles in mind. I had something else in mind also, however. I had in mind the textile industry, which I have heard of for some time as being in such distress. I remember that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BINGHAM] stated to me several times that particular lines of the textile industry in his State are being threatened with destruction by the importation of certain classes of goods from Germany with which our people can not compete. I do not know how many other conditions there may be like it.

I want to say just a word or two about the shingle industry in my State.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question before he proceeds to discuss shingles?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. EDGE. In view of the fact that the Senator has read from the statement just now, I assume that he would include as under the purview of his resolution, quoting from the article as an illustration, in addition to lumber, leather, fertilizers, stone, and clay and glass products, as having shown a falling off during the time covered by the report.

Mr. JONES. But there did not appear to be a very serious falling off.

Mr. EDGE. But using that as the Senator did as an illustration, does the Senator believe, if his amendment is adopted, that the Finance Committee should investigate glass and stoneware? I happen to be chairman of the subcommittee to which that subject has been referred. Does the Senator believe the subcommittee would be justified in hearing the representatives of those industries in order to know whether they would come under the terms of the Senator's amendment?

Mr. JONES. I think the committee would be justified, because the idea would be that the committee would get the facts upon which it would base its decision as to whether or not the conditions came under the terms of the resolution. The committee, of course, would have to ascertain the facts before it could be determined, but language of this kind would be in the nature of an instruction to the committee that unless it found from the facts that such was the condition, then it should not report tariff increases for such industry.

Mr. President, I am not going to discuss the shingle industry at any length, but I want to call attention briefly to the situation. We have some 15,000 or 20,000 people employed in the shingle industry in our State. It is true the industry is not existent all over the country. Heretofore we have been producing about two-thirds of all the shingles used in the United States, but by reason of competition from an adjoining country that business is going and has been going increasingly to another country instead of to our own people, and our mills have been closing. Bankruptcy has been brought to many of them and is faced by many more. If the policy of protection to American industry is good for one industry in this country, it should be applied to other industries of the country. I know that the shingle industry is not as widespread as agriculture, but has it come to the point where we are going to grant protective duties only to industries that are coextensive with the country? I do not think so.

In my State the prosperity of the shingle industry means a great deal to the farming people of my State. With 15,000 or 20,000 people employed in the shingle mills of the State of Washington furnishing a market for the farm production of our State, it can not be jeered at or laughed at or cast aside lightly. Our farmers, the agriculturists of our State, are interested and vitally interested in the prosperity of the shingle industry. Are we going to disregard the agricultural interests of the State of Washington along with the shingle interests and industry of that State? If we continue any longer to keep shingles on the free list, the shingle industry will be gone. There have been fifteen or twenty thousand people employed, but they are growing less in number every year. The mills are going out of business and the employees are going into something else and the agriculturists of our State will lose that market.

Mr. President, we must not overlook the fact that this bill has come to us from the House of Representatives. The items covered by it may not be what we would like. The action of the House may be broader than we would like. But it seems to me that the only way we can properly and wisely deal with it is by having our committee consider the matter and acquaint themselves with the conditions, take the results that the Senate may place in the hands of our conference committee, and, with the action of the Senate and with the information that the committee has acquired out of the hearings, it can deal with the question properly in conference. But if we take it away from the committee and do not allow them to acquaint themselves with the facts and conditions of the various matters in controversy, then it seems to me our conference committee will be at a decided disadvantage in conference. I hope that from the conference will come a bill in line with the President's message to deal primarily with agriculture and then with those lines of industry which show essential depression, but it seems to me that the wise way is to give our committee the opportunity to investigate and determine the facts and get all the information possible, so as to enable them and us to discuss and decide the question in a proper manner with the House conferees.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I would much prefer to pass on the tariff bill in the open Senate item by item than to have some sort of measure passed through here for the moment under an uncertain and confusing resolution like this, referred to the conference committee representing the two Houses, and then have the conferees write "a general tariff bill" which would then be reported back to the Senate. I want the Senate to pass on the bill when we will have ample time and opportunity day after day to discuss and vote on the items that go into the bill. I want the opportunity right here in the Senate to fight to cut down rates that I think are too high and I want the opportunity right here in the Senate to increase the tariff rates for the farmer that I think are too low.

Mr. President, in the United States of America, southward the star of industry takes its way. Many of the textile industries of New England cotton spinners are moving down into that glorious section of our country. I bid them welcome and I want them to know that their manufactured cotton products will be properly cared for and protected in the sunny land of Dixie.

The South will not permit them to suffer from ruinous competition with the pauper labor and cheap manufacturing concerns of Europe. We had just as well speak plainly on that subject now, and as a southern Democrat I gladly make that announcement. It is a condition and not a theory that confronts us. I favor a tariff tax or import duty against the cotton that is now coming into our country from foreign countries at the rate of 500,000 or 600,000 bales a year in competition with cotton produced in the United States.

I want certain other farm products of the South taken care of in the tariff bill that is going to be passed at this session of Congress. We are confronted with a very unsatisfactory situation on the pending Borah resolution. It is puzzling and confusing to some of us. The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] says that textiles are not related to farm products and could not therefore be considered if his resolution is passed. That would be unfair and unjust to the cotton producer and cotton spinner. The farmer comes to market in my town and sells a bale of cotton to the spinner in my county and, Mr. President, we have more cotton spindles under one roof in my county than in any other county in the South. The spinner buys that bale of cotton from a farmer and spins it into cloth. The merchant in the agricultural section takes it into his store and sells it back to the same people, perhaps, in the same county, but because that farm product has been spun by a textile industry or cotton mill into cloth, it is not, according to the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] even close enough akin to a farm product—think of it—to be given fair treatment, safeguarded, and protected in a tariff bill at this session of Congress if this resolution is adopted.

Then the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] says that he thinks it would be entitled to consideration. Now, there are two distinguished leaders—one a Republican and one a Democrat, both for the resolution—at loggerheads on that subject. They can not agree on this matter which vitally affects the whole cotton industry of the South. So far as I am concerned, I prefer to let whatever we do here for or against the farmer be in the "open Senate" in a general bill, because I want to tell the friends of agriculture in this body that they are not going to be permitted to pass any agricultural tariff bill by itself that will give any benefit to the farmer. We saw what happened to the debenture plan. We provided for debentures on a bill that pertained purely and wholly, singly and solely to the farmer, on a farm relief bill, and we saw a surgical operation performed on the bill—a major operation—in the House at the other end of the Capitol. They took the tariff debenture plan out of the measure entirely; a provision which would have benefited the cotton farmers of my State $10 a bale and the wheat growers of the West 21 cents a bushel was eliminated. Why? Because it was purely a farm relief bill. I am trying to convey to you the practical sense of the situation that confronts us.

Now, if the Senate should strip the tariff bill of every provision except those affecting agriculture it would have just as much chance to pass through both branches of Congress and reach the President as a snowball would have to last indefinitely down yonder in that hot region in which Pluto dwells. [Laughter.]

They would defeat and kill outright any measure that gave the benefit of a protective tariff solely to the farmers. I think we all know that, and then they would pass a tariff bill that would leave the farmer out entirely. The only hope we have is to put whatever legislation for the benefit of the farmer we propose to pass at this extra session of Congress into a general tariff bill. I think most Senators know that. Our only hope to get a fair deal for the farmer in a tariff bill is in the open Senate.

If those here who claim to be the friend of the farmer will join with me and others from the South, we can benefit the farmer by increasing the rates on his products that should be increased and by holding down the rates in the tariff schedules that are hard, oppressive, and indefensible on the people generally.

One other suggestion, and then I am through. The House of Representatives has the right under the Constitution to originate revenue measures—tariff measures. It has originated one at this session and passed it, and it is said to be a monstrous piece of tariff legislation, but we have the right to go through it, to cut it down, and to change it altogether. But what are we proposing to do under the Borah resolution? We are about to lay out a plan and tell the House that we are going to consider a certain phase of the tariff bill and no other; that the House can take that and pass it or go home. Well, that is not the way to handle the matter. I would offer a substitute resolution, except for my desire to permit Senators to have a vote on the Borah resolution, to instruct the Finance Committee of the Senate to confer with the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives to see if it is possible to agree on a program to limit our activities on tariff legislation at this session of Congress to the matters set out in the Borah resolution. Do that and if both Houses of Congress agree to that program I will fight all the way down the line for that program. But the House will not agree to it and you know it. So the Borah resolution does not in any way solve our distressing problem.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, in order that there may be no misunderstanding about how my vote shall be interpreted I want to say that the subcommittee on Schedule 4, dealing with wood and manufactures of wood, had a 6-hour session to-day. I am heartily in favor of the amendment to the pending resolution proposed by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES]. It seems to me by every kind of interpretation that that amendment would carry out the purpose for which the extra session was called. In voting for the Jones amendment, however, I wish it to be understood that I approve of that amendment only, and in no way may my vote be interpreted as a vote in favor of the House bill. I am in entire disagreement with many of the items in that bill, but I do not conceive how any possible action on many parts of that bill can be had without proper hearings by the Finance Committee. So far as I am concerned, if the Borah resolution shall be adopted there will be no more hearings on Schedule 4. A hearing on that schedule is set for 9.30 o'clock to-morrow morning, but should the Borah resolution be agreed to there will be no continued hearings on it in spite of the fact that there are many provisions of the House bill which deal with Schedule 4. I want it understood that a vote for the Jones amendment by me is not in any sense a vote for the House bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment to the pending resolution proposed by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES].

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I do not desire to delay a vote on the amendment to the resolution, but I simply wish to say that, in my opinion, the adoption of the Jones amendment would utterly destroy the effect of the proposal to limit the revision of the tariff in accordance with the resolution which I have submitted.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, in view of the remarks just made by the Senator from Idaho, I desire to say that if the Jones amendment to the resolution shall not be adopted, I shall vote vote against the resolution.

Mr. SMOOT and others called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALLEN (when his name was called). On the pending resolution I have a special pair with the junior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT]. Not knowing how the junior Senator from Connecticut would vote upon the Jones amendment, I withhold my vote.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE (when Mr. BLAINE's name was called). I wish to announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. BLAINE] has a general pair with the junior Senator from Maine [Mr. GOULD]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS]. I have been unable to obtain a transfer of that pair. If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "nay," and I am advised that the Senator from Colorado, if present, would vote "yea" on this question.

Mr. FESS (when Mr. KEYES's name was called). On this vote the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES] is paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD]. If the Senator from New Hampshire were present, he would vote "yea," and the Senator from Minnesota, if present, would vote "nay."

Mr. NORBECK (when Mr. MCMASTER's name was called). My colleague [Mr. MCMASTER] is unavoidably absent from the city. He is paired with the junior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK]. If the junior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MCMASTER] were present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. ODDIE (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with my colleague the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], who has just left for Nevada. If he were present, he would vote "nay." If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS], who is detained from the Senate on account of illness in his family. I therefore withhold my vote. If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. SWANSON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK]. If the Senator from Maine were present, he would vote "yea," and if the Senator from Alabama were present he would vote "nay." I vote "nay."

Mr. COPELAND (when Mr. WAGNER's name was called). My colleague [Mr. WAGNER] is necessarily detained from the Chamber. If he were present, I understand he would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

The result was announced—yeas 38, nays 39, as follows:

YEAS—38

Bingham	Glenn	McNary	Steiwer
Broussard	Goff	Metcalf	Townsend
Burton	Goldsborough	Moses	Trammell
Couzens	Greene	Patterson	Vandenberg
Dale	Hastings	Ransdell	Walsh, Mass.
Deneen	Hatfield	Reed	Warren
Dill	Hebert	Sackett	Waterman
Edge	Heflin	Shortridge	Watson
Fess	Jones	Smoot
Gillett	Kean	Steck

NAYS—39

Barkley	Fletcher	La Follette	Simmons
Blease	Frazier	McKellar	Smith
Borah	Glass	Norbeck	Swanson
Bratton	Harris	Norris	Thomas, Idaho
Brookhart	Harrison	Nye	Thomas, Okla.
Capper	Hawes	Overman	Tydings
Caraway	Hayden	Pine	Tyson
Connally	Howell	Robinson, Ark.	Walsh, Mont.
Copeland	Johnson	Schall	Wheeler
Cutting	King	Sheppard

NOT VOTING—18

Allen	Gould	Oddie	Stephens
Ashurst	Hale	Phipps	Wagner
Black	Kendrick	Pittman	Walcott
Blaine	Keyes	Robinson, Ind.
George	McMaster	Shipstead

So the amendment of Mr. JONES was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution submitted by the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH, Mr. MCKELLAR, and others called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALLEN (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the junior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WALCOTT]. If he were present he would vote "nay," and if I were permitted to vote I should vote "yea."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE (when Mr. BLAINE's name was called). Making the same announcement as before concerning the pair of my colleague [Mr. BLAINE], I wish to state if he were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. NORBECK (when Mr. MCMASTER's name was called). My colleague [Mr. MCMASTER] is unavoidably absent from the city. He is paired with the junior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "yea." If the Senator from Wyoming were present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. ODDIE (when his name was called). I am paired with my colleague [Mr. PITTMAN] and withhold my vote. If my colleague were present, he would vote "yea," and if I were at liberty to vote I should vote "nay."

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS] and therefore withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. SWANSON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. Black] and vote "yea." I desire to state that if the junior Senator from Alabama were present he would vote "yea," and if the senior Senator from Maine were present he would vote "nay."

Mr. COPELAND (when Mr. WAGNER's name was called). Making the same announcement as before relative to the absence of my colleague [Mr. WAGNER], I wish to announce that if he were present he would vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. GEORGE. I have a pair with the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS]. I have been unable to obtain a transfer of that pair. I am advised that if the Senator from Colorado were present he would vote "nay." If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. JONES. I desire to announce that the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES] has a pair on this question with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD]. If the Senator from New Hampshire were present, he would vote "nay," and if the Senator from Minnesota were present he would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 38, nays 39, as follows:

YEAS—38

Barkley	Bratton	Caraway	Cutting
Blease	Brookhart	Connally	Fletcher
Borah	Capper	Copeland	Frazier
Glass	La Follette	Robinson, Ark.	Thomas, Okla.
Harris	McKellar	Schall	Tydings
Harrison	Norbeck	Sheppard	Tyson
Hawes	Norris	Simmons	Walsh, Mont.
Hayden	Nye	Smith	Wheeler
Howell	Overman	Swanson
King	Pine	Thomas, Idaho

NAYS—39

Bingham	Glenn	Kean	Steck
Broussard	Goff	McNary	Steiwer
Burton	Goldsborough	Metcalf	Townsend
Couzens	Greene	Moses	Trammell
Dale	Hastings	Patterson	Vandenberg
Deneen	Hatfield	Ransdell	Walsh, Mass.
Dill	Hebert	Reed	Warren
Edge	Heflin	Sackett	Waterman
Fess	Johnson	Shortridge	Watson
Gillett	Jones	Smoot

NOT VOTING—18

Allen	Gould	Oddie	Stephens
Ashurst	Hale	Phipps	Wagner
Black	Kendrick	Pittman	Walcott
Blaine	Keyes	Robinson, Ind.
George	McMaster	Shipstead

So Mr. BORAH's resolution was rejected.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 15) providing for the printing of 1,000 additional copies of the consolidated hearings held before the committee relative to "Tariff act of 1929."

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 3966. An act to fix the compensation of officers and employees of the legislative branch of the Government;

H. R. 4016. An act making an appropriation to carry out the provisions of the agricultural marketing act, approved June 15, 1929; and

H. J. Res. 100. Joint resolution authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., to begin October 5, 1929.

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

The following bills and joint resolution were severally read twice by their titles and referred as indicated below:

H. R. 3966. An act to fix the compensation of officers and employees of the legislative branch of the Government; to the calendar.

H. R. 4016. An act making an appropriation to carry out the provisions of the "Agricultural marketing act," approved June 15, 1929; to the Committee on Appropriations.

H. J. Res. 109. Joint resolution authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., to begin October 5, 1929; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

SUMMER ADJOURNMENT

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, I submit a privileged concurrent resolution, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The concurrent resolution will be stated.

The Chief Clerk read the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 16), as follows:

Resolved, etc., That when the Senate adjourns on Wednesday, June 19, 1929, it stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian on Monday, August 19, 1929.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. WATSON. My understanding is that this is a privileged motion and not debatable.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is not debatable; but does the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. WATSON. I yield for a question.

Mr. BORAH. I did not catch the language of the resolution which the Senator offered.

Mr. WATSON. Let it be stated again.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will restate the resolution.

The CHIEF CLERK. Concurrent resolution:

Resolved, etc., That when the Senate adjourns on Wednesday, June 19, 1929, it stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian on Monday, August 19, 1929.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I make the point of order against the resolution that it is contrary to the Constitution of the United States, which says that neither body of Congress shall adjourn longer than three days without the consent of the other body.

The VICE PRESIDENT. This is a concurrent resolution.

Mr. NORRIS. As the Secretary read it, he said "that when the Senate adjourns, * * * it stand adjourned" until a certain day in August.

Mr. WATSON. Will the Secretary restate the first part of it?

The CHIEF CLERK. Concurrent resolution:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring)——

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I desire to make a motion to amend. That will be in order anyway.

Mr. WATSON. That is in order.

Mr. NORRIS. If the Senator from Indiana says it is in order, that settles it. [Laughter.]

Mr. WATSON. I say so.

Mr. NORRIS. I move to strike out the words "August 19" and insert "September 16."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, is that a debatable proposition?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is not.

Mr. BORAH. A motion of this nature is not debatable?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is not debatable.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I move to amend the amendment by changing the date to September 3.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I accept the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska modifies his amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I will accept the Senator's suggestion.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, I do not accept it.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I move to lay both of those motions on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on laying the resolution on the table.

Mr. MOSES. The resolution, or the amendment?

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Virginia will state it.

Mr. GLASS. I desire to know, if that motion prevails, if it does not carry the whole thing to the table?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It does.

Mr. HEFLIN. I did not want to do that, Mr. President. I do not think we ought to recess for more than six weeks.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, a point of order. A motion to lay on the table is not debatable.

Mr. HEFLIN. I withdraw my motion.

Mr. BORAH. I ask for the yeas and nays upon the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The yeas and nays are demanded. Is the demand seconded?

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, what is the question?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry? Are we voting on the amendment, or——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS], as modified by the suggestion of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BINGHAM], making the date September 3. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before, I withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. SWANSON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. GEORGE. I have a pair with the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS]. I am advised that if present he would vote as I expect to vote, and I therefore vote. I vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 44, as follows:

YEAS—35

Barkley	Frazier	McNary	Schall
Blease	Glass	Norbeck	Shortridge
Bratton	Harris	Norris	Smith
Brookhart	Hawes	Nye	Smoot
Burton	Hayden	Oddie	Steck
Copeland	Howell	Overman	Steiwer
Couzens	Johnson	Patterson	Tydings
Cutting	King	Reed	Walsh, Mont.
Dill	La Follette	Sackett

NAYS—44

Allen	Fletcher	Heflin	Thomas, Idaho
Bingham	George	Jones	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Gillett	Kean	Townsend
Broussard	Glenn	McKellar	Trammell
Capper	Goff	Metcalf	Tyson
Caraway	Goldsborough	Moses	Vandenberg
Connally	Greene	Pine	Walsh, Mass.
Dale	Harrison	Ransdell	Warren
Deneen	Hastings	Robinson, Ark.	Waterman
Edge	Hatfield	Sheppard	Watson
Fess	Hebert	Simmons	Wheeler

NOT VOTING—16

Ashurst	Hale	Phipps	Stephens
Black	Kendrick	Pittman	Swanson
Blaine	Keyes	Robinson, Ind.	Wagner
Gould	McMaster	Shipstead	Walcott

So Mr. NORRIS's amendment as modified was rejected.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I move to amend by inserting at the proper place the date of September 10, and on that I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. WATSON. What is the amendment?

Mr. TYDINGS. To make the date September 10.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. To strike out "August 19, 1929," and insert in lieu thereof "September 10, 1929."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] has demanded the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). Making the same announcement of my pair, I am advised that the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS], if present, would vote as I expect to vote, and I therefore vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as to my pair as on the previous vote, I am informed that the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS], if present, would vote as I shall vote, and therefore I vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. SWANSON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], but I understand that if present he would vote as I shall vote, and therefore I vote. I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. KING. I have a general pair upon this vote with the junior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MCMASTER], and, in his absense, I withhold my vote.

Mr. HEFLIN. My colleague [Mr. BLACK] is absent on account of illness. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 57, nays 23, as follows:

YEAS—57

Allen	George	Kean	Shortridge
Bingham	Gillett	McKellar	Smoot
Blease	Glass	McNary	Steck
Bratton	Glenn	Metcalf	Steiwer
Broussard	Goff	Moses	Swanson
Burton	Goldsborough	Oddie	Townsend
Capper	Greene	Overman	Vandenberg
Connally	Harris	Patterson	Walsh, Mass.
Copeland	Harrison	Ransdell	Walsh, Mont.
Couzens	Hastings	Reed	Warren
Dale	Hatfield	Robinson, Ark.	Waterman
Deneen	Hayden	Robinson, Ind.	Watson
Dill	Hebert	Sackett
Edge	Heflin	Schall
Fess	Howell	Sheppard

NAYS—23

Barkley	Frazier	Norris	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Hawes	Nye	Trammell
Brookhart	Johnson	Pine	Tydings
Caraway	Jones	Simmons	Tyson
Cutting	La Follette	Smith	Wheeler
Fletcher	Norbeck	Thomas, Idaho

NOT VOTING—15

Ashurst	Hale	McMaster	Stephens
Black	Kendrick	Phipps	Wagner
Blaine	Keyes	Pittman	Walcott
Gould	King	Shipstead

So the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 16) was agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That when the Senate adjourns on Wednesday, June 19, 1929, it stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian on Monday, August 19, 1929.

SURVEY OF ESCAMBIA RIVER AND TRIBUTARIES

Mr. FLETCHER. I report back favorably, without amendment, from the Committee on Commerce the bill (H. R. 3671) to authorize and direct a survey to be made of the Escambia River and its tributaries, Alabama and Florida.

I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause a survey to be made of the Escambia River and its tributaries, Alabama and Florida, with a view to the control of floods in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of an act entitled, "An act to provide for control of the floods of the Mississippi River, and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes," approved March 1, 1917, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for such purposes.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FEDERAL FARM RELIEF FUND

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, from the Committee on Appropriations I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 4016) making an appropriation to carry out the provisions of the agricultural marketing act, approved June 15, 1929. The bill makes an appropriation of $151,500,000 for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the bill which we recently passed providing for relief of agriculture in the United States. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I understand this bill carries $1,500,000 for administrative purposes under the farm relief act?

Mr. WARREN. Yes; $1,500,000 is for administrative purposes.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. And $150,000,000 for a revolving fund under the provisions of the farm relief act recently passed by Congress?

Mr. WARREN. The bill provides for the appropriations the Senator suggests.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for carrying into effect the provisions of the act entitled the "Agricultural marketing act," approved June 15, 1929, including all necessary expenditures authorized therein, the sum of $151,500,000, to be immediately available, of which amount $150,000,000 shall constitute a revolving fund to be administered by the Federal Farm Board as provided in such act, and $1,500,000 shall be available until June 30, 1930, for administrative expenses in executing the functions vested in the Federal Farm Board by such act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I ask that the letter from President Hoover and the letter from the Acting Director of the Budget, which I send to the desk, may be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the letters presented by the Senator from Wyoming will be printed in the RECORD.

The letters referred to are as follows:

JUNE 15, 1929.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith for the consideration of Congress an estimate of appropriation for the Federal Farm Board for $151,500,000, to be immediately available, for commencing operations under the provisions of the act entitled the "Agricultural marketing act," approved June 15, 1929.

This estimate provides $150,000,000 of the $500,000,000 authorized to be appropriated by the act as a revolving fund for use in making loans or advances, and the amount of $1,500,000 authorized for the administrative expenses of the Federal Farm Board until June 30, 1930.

The details of this estimate, the necessity therefor, and the reason for its submission at this time are set forth in the letter of the Acting Director of the Bureau of the Budget, which is transmitted herewith and with which I concur.

I should add that the additional amounts which will be needed by the board can not be determined except by the board itself, but as Congress might shortly recess I have thought it desirable that a preliminary sum should be provided. If the board finds it necessary to have further funds, it should be possible to make provision for them in ample time, as Congress will no doubt be in session by the time they are required.

Respectfully,

HERBERT HOOVER.

JUNE 15, 1929.

The PRESIDENT.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith for your consideration an estimate of appropriation for the Federal Farm Board for $151,500,000 to be immediately available, of which amount $150,000,000 is for a revolving fund to be administered by the board, and $1,500,000 is for administrative expenses of the board until June 30, 1930, as follows:

"For carrying into effect the provisions of the act entitled the 'Agricultural marketing act,' approved June 15, 1929, including all necessary expenditures therein authorized, to be immediately available, $151,500,000, of which amount $150,000,000 shall constitute a revolving fund to be administered by the Federal Farm Board as provided in said act, and $1,500,000 shall be available until June 30, 1930, for administrative expenses in executing the functions vested in the Federal Farm Board by said act, $151,500,000."

This estimate covers $150,000,000 of the $500,000,000 authorized to be appropriated by the act as a revolving fund for use in making loans or advances, and the full amount of $1,500,000 authorized for the administrative expenses of the Federal Farm Board until June 30, 1930. The purpose of the estimate is to provide immediately sufficient funds to enable the board to commence operations under the act.

The foregoing estimate of appropriation is to meet legislation which has been enacted since the transmission of the Budget for 1930, and its approval is recommended.

Very respectfully,

R. O. KLOEBER,
Acting Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

OPEN EXECUTIVE SESSIONS

Mr. JONES. I ask that the unfinished business be laid before the Senate.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the resolution (S. Res. 19) submitted by Mr. JONES, May 6, 1929, to amend paragraph 2 of Rule XXXVIII, relating to proceedings on nominations in executive session.

RECESS

Mr. WATSON. I move that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow at 12 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate (at 5 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) took a recess until to-morrow, Tuesday, June 18, 1929, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, June 17, 1929

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Blessed Father in Heaven, be with us to-day. Give us the vision that lends glory to common tasks and that sheds splendor on obscure talents. Let Thy Spirit stir mysterious aspiration in all. Crown us with a new power coming from beyond ourselves; then shall we have real and lasting weight of character. Expel from our breasts every thought of hate, envy, strife, covetousness, and vulgarity. Cause love, joy, and peace to grow and blossom in all our lives. Bless us with the consciousness of right doing and right living. These are of eternal value, for they that thus do Thy will shall shine as the brightness of the firmament and shall be crowned with everlasting honor. Through Christ our Savior. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday last was read and approved.

BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. CAMPBELL of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on June 14, 1929, present to the President, for his approval, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 1. An act to establish a Federal Farm Board to promote the effective merchandising of agricultural commodities in interstate and foreign commerce, and to place agriculture on a basis of economic equality with other industries.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who informed the House that on the following dates the President approved and signed bills of the House of the following titles:

On June 6, 1929:

H. J. Res. 82. Joint resolution making appropriations for additional compensation for transportation of the mail by railroad routes in accordance with the increased rates fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

On June 7, 1929:

H. J. Res. 61. Joint resolution to amend the appropriation "Organizing the Naval Reserve, 1930."

On June 11, 1929:

H. R. 3083. An act to amend subsection (a) of section 26 of the trading with the enemy act, as amended by the settlement of war claims act of 1928, so as to authorize the allocation of the unallocated interest fund in accordance with the records of the Alien Property Custodian.

On June 12, 1929:

H. J. Res. 91. Joint resolution to provide for the payment of certain expenses of the United States Pulaski Sesquicentennial Commission;

H. R. 3663. An act making appropriations for the payment of certain judgments rendered against the Government by various United States courts; and

H. J. Res. 86. Joint resolution making an appropriation for the International Red Cross and Prisoners of War Conference at Geneva, Switzerland, in 1929.

On June 13, 1929:

H. J. Res. 83. Joint resolution to make available funds for carrying into effect the public resolution of February 20, 1929, as amended, concerning the cessions of certain islands of the Samoan group to the United States;

H. J. Res. 93. Joint resolution amending an appropriation for a consolidated school at Belcourt, within the Turtle Mountain Indian Reservation, N. Dak.; and

H. R. 3548. An act to continue, during the fiscal year 1930, Federal aid in rehabilitating farm lands in the areas devastated by floods in 1927.

On June 14, 1929:

H. R. 3600. An act to amend section 5 of an act entitled "An act authorizing Maynard D. Smith, his heirs, successors, and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the St. Clair River at or near Port Huron, Mich," approved March 2, 1929, and being Public Act No. 923 of the Seventieth Congress;

H. J. Res. 73. Joint resolution to amend the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Hospital of Paris," approved January 30, 1913; and

H. J. Res. 88. Joint resolution making an additional appropriation for the extension to the post-office building at Corinth, Miss.

On June 15, 1929:

H. R. 1. An act to establish a Federal Farm Board to promote the effective merchandising of agricultural commodities in interstate and foreign commerce, and to place agriculture on a basis of economic equality with other industries; and

H. J. Res. 97. Joint resolution making appropriations toward carrying out the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for the establishment of a municipal center in the District of Columbia," approved February 28, 1929.

On June 17, 1929:

H. R. 1648. An act to amend section 5 of the second Liberty bond act, as amended.

MUSCLE SHOALS

Mr. BROWNING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech I made over the radio.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROWNING. Mr. Speaker, in accordance with leave granted me to extend my remarks I submit herewith a speech recently delivered by me over the radio from Washington, touching farm relief and the disposition of Muscle Shoals.

The address is as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience, Congress is now in extra session for the declared purpose of granting farm relief. The President has shown by his letter to Senator McNARY opposing the debenture plan that he is against any legislation that will raise the price of farm products. The privileges of government under our present laws are practically all given to other industry, and many of them at the expense of agriculture; and this has brought about the farmers' principal troubles. But the President's first interest politically is to protect industries in these law-given privileges, and he is determined that they shall not be divided with agriculture.

So we must look elsewhere under this administration for any relief to farming than to the privilege of advancing prices. That privilege is reserved for industry only under the President's decree. The so-called farm relief bill which has passed the House recently was guarded by rules in its consideration which made it impossible to offer as amendment a plan that would increase the price of farm products, or grant the power to do so.

But there is a possibility of benefit in it if administered by a friendly board. That possibility lies in the way of moving closer together the farmer and the consumer of his product. In round numbers, the farmer receives seven and one-half billions of dollars for the food crop he raises each year. The consumer pays for that crop, delivered to his kitchen, twenty-two and one-half billions. I know there is a vast legitimate charge for processing and transportation to be counted, but it can be easily shown that all this could be met and then the farmer receive just double his present return for food crops without advancing the price to the consumer. If the Farm Board contemplated in the pending bill, with all the broad powers and resources granted at its command, will eliminate the useless charges and tolls taken from his products in transit, the farmer will materially benefit because of it. But if the board spends its effort in stabilizing farm prices below the cost of production, in dabbling with temporary surpluses that settle nothing permanently, the half billion dollars given the board to operate on will be wasted, with no benefits resulting.

In addition to this bill, the administration now proposes tariff revision as a measure of farm relief. A tariff bill has been brought into the House which seems to have administration sanction. It will cost the farmer many times over what amount of benefit he can possibly derive from the few increased rates given his products in it, a very small amount of which can be affected favorably. The advances on what he will have to buy will be many millions of dollars out of his pocket more than he can possibly realize from the few crumbs dropped to him.

Under pretense of relieving the farmer, the President, after calling an extra session with loud acclaim, is now in the act of butchering him, or holding the coats of those who are butchering him, to make a holiday for the Mellon-Grundy privilege crowd. In other words the farmer is found suffering from tariff poisoning, and Doctor Hoover is giving him a compounded dose of arsenic. He asked for bread; the President is giving him a stone. Less than 1 out of every 10 increases in the bill is on farm products. Virtually all of them are on industry and can have but one possible result—to "relieve" the farmer of what he has left.

If it is sincerely desired to help the farmer's plight, I call up for consideration a matter which if settled rightly would relieve agriculture, add greatly to our national resources and national defense, stimulate industrial development, and reimburse the Government for large expenditures already made. I refer to that wonderful power and navigation project partially completed at Muscle Shoals, Ala. The nature and purposes of this great plan seem to have been the most talked of and the least understood of any undertaking by the Government in recent years. As a war measure and a permanent plan of national defense the Government expended $130,000,000 on a dam and nitrate plant there. The act authorizing this construction provided for the production of nitrates there to be used in the manufacture of explosives in emergencies. To guarantee an adequate supply at all times for this purpose the Congress said this nitrogen should be used for the manufacture of fertilizer when no emergency existed.

Peace came and the immediate urge subsided. In the general let down from a war pitch selfishness seemed to permeate everything. Fertilizer manufacturers saw in the completion of this project the production of cheaper fertilizer, so that they have tirelessly fought this consummation. The so-called Power Trust, seeing the possibility of a monopoly of great power resources in that section, joined in the fight to keep it out of any hands that would develop it, as they do not yet need it and desire no competition. As the project stands, with one dam in operation, the Alabama Power Co. is leasing some 20 per cent of the power generated at 2 mills per kilowatt-hour, and other power is wasting.

Over 300 miles above Muscle Shoals, up on the Clinch River in the State of Tennessee, is a proposed site for a dam, known as Cove Creek. It is not a power dam primarily, but a storage dam. It is held by engineers that by constructing a dam at this point there will be formed an inland lake covering 53,000 acres of land. Its purpose will be to store the water at flood time and release it at normal low-water periods so as to keep the flowage at all dams below constant; thereby doubling the primary power of every dam. You can readily see that Cove Creek is the key to the whole Tennessee River Valley power possibilities, including Muscle Shoals. Few, if any, of these dams would be economically justified without this regulation from Cove Creek.

A serious question has arisen over the respective rights of the Federal Government and the State of Tennessee if the Government constructs Cove Creek for purely power purposes. This is occasioned by the lack of settled property rights in the potential power of our rivers. I take the position that the bed of a river and the water that flows over the bed is the property of the State through which it is passing. The Government can only control as to navigation and flood regulations. The power, I believe, belongs to the State, to the people thereof. And since the Government has been contemplating the taking over of Cove Creek, a majority of the Tennessee delegation in Congress has insisted that the rights of our State should be recognized in any act that authorizes the taking. But these rights can easily be adjusted, in my opinion, and the differences heretofore existing on this account need not delay this great development for a moment. All we have ever asked is a fair recognition of the elemental property rights of the State of Tennessee.

Assuming that these rights will be recognized, I venture to suggest the greatest measure of farm relief yet proposed to this session of Congress. There is pending what is known as the Madden bill for leasing this property to the American Cyanamid Co. Under this bill the Government would construct Cove Creek Dam. It would construct Dam No. 3 at Muscle Shoals, and thereby increase by 150 miles or more the navigable waters of the Tennessee River. It grants to lessee use of three other dam sites just below Cove Creek. All this property is leased for a term of 50 years. In return the cyanamide company is to pay the Government 4 per cent on all this investment, less an amount chargeable to navigation, and to excess prices of construction of Dam No. 2 in war time. Said company is also to pay an amortization charge each year sufficient to amortize the entire cost of all construction in 100 years. In addition to this, lessee agrees to manufacture a certain amount of concentrated fertilizer suitable for the use of our farmers at cost, plus 8 per cent. Lessee also announces its intention to use the balance of power generated by the leased property for the operation of electrochemical manufacturing plants.

But the principal concern we now have is with the fertilizer program. Mr. W. B. Bell, president of the American Cyanamid Co., assures us that his company is now making a concentrated fertilizer by the cyanamid process known as ammo-phos, which consists of 13 parts ammonium and 48 parts phosphate, or 61 per cent plant food. With this proportion, one ton of ammo-phos contains five times as much plant food as a ton of ordinary fertilizer, as mixed to-day. Four hundred thousand tons of this product is promised the farmer, at a reduction in cost of from 40 to 50 per cent. This will be the equivalent of 2,000,000 tons of fertilizer such as he buys to-day. The entire consumption per year in the United States is around 7,000,000 tons. The cyanamide product in this concentrated form can be shipped economically to most any part of the United States. With the plant located on the Tennessee, the farmers will have advantage of the cheapest transportation. It can reach by water all points on that river, the Cumberland, the Ohio, the Mississippi, and their tributaries.

The saving on freight rates and this reduction in price on so great a portion of this necessity would mean many millions of dollars saving to a depressed industry. The Government last year only received $186,000 net income from the sale of power at Muscle Shoals, after expenses of upkeep and operation were deducted, on a present investment of $130,000,000.

Naturally the fertilizer makers will oppose this bill. I sympathize with any industry that is about to be disturbed by progress, but I maintain that our farmers should not be charged this huge economic handicap simply because some capital is tied up in a worn-out industry. Above all classes in America to-day, they are entitled to be aided by modern, scientific methods in the production of their necessities. To throttle progress and economy in the production of fertilizer would be a high crime against almost one-third of our population now struggling to overcome fearful economic odds.

The farmers need this relief, oh, so much! The Government needs to turn a losing investment into a profitable one. Industry needs the power now hog tied by the procrastination in completing and disposing of Muscle Shoals. There is potential power on the Tennessee and its tributaries amounting to five or six million horsepower, enough to meet the demands of industry and public utilities for a century.

The South once thought its citizenship had been financially ruined by the liberation of 4,000,000 slaves. Yet, on this one river system, fifteen times that power is wasting constantly as the waters roll toward the sea, unused. It is not a sectional, but a national use for which we are trying to employ this great resource. It is a God-given heritage, and the people should no longer be kept out of its use and enjoyment.

In a special session, called for and dedicated to farm relief, how can those in control justify a failure to utilize this great plant for the farmer's use? We are urging the President, we are pleading with the organization leaders of the House and Senate, to delay no longer. Every available fact about this project and its possibilities are of record. Occasion for its greatest need is here. Mr. President, put it on the program for this special session and give us a chance to settle it for the untold benefit of agriculture.

TEMPORARY ASSISTANT FLOOR MANAGER OF TELEPHONES

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, I present a privileged resolution from the Committee on Accounts.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 53

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of the contingent fund of the House, compensation at the rate of $1,830 per annum, payable monthly, for the services of a temporary majority assistant floor manager of telephones, to be appointed by the Doorkeeper of the House. The compensation and employment hereby authorized shall start from April 15, 1929, and terminate June 15, 1929.

Mr. GARNER. From what committee does this come?

Mr. UNDERHILL. From the Committee on Accounts.

Mr. GARNER. Is it a unanimous report?

Mr. UNDERHILL. It is.

The resolution was agreed to.

INTERNATIONAL PETROLEUM EXPOSITION

Mr. O'CONNOR of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table House Joint Resolution 109, authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., to begin October 5, 1929, and for its immediate consideration.

I will say that the resolution has the approval of the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH], who is the ranking Republican member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs in the absence of the chairman; the approval of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. LINTHICUM], the ranking minority member; the approval of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER], minority floor leader; the approval of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. TILSON], majority floor leader. For the information of the House I desire to state that for a number of years the International Petroleum Exposition has been held at Tulsa, Okla. This resolution authorizes the President to send an invitation to the States of the Union and to foreign countries to attend and participate in the exposition. It is an identical resolution with others that have heretofore passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. GARNER. As I understand Mr. Speaker, this is the usual resolution and it entails no expense on the Government.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Oklahoma. It does not provide for the appropriation of any money.

Mr. GARNER. And the gentleman does not expect to ask for any appropriation?

Mr. O'CONNOR of Oklahoma. No; and we never have.

Mr. HASTINGS. None was asked for last year.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Oklahoma. No; the oil business is so hard up that we will let the tail go with the hide [laughter] and stand all the expenses.

Mr. HASTINGS. It is very important to Oklahoma and I hope there will be no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is authorized to invite by proclamation, or in such other manner as he may deem proper, the States of the Union and all foreign countries to participate in the proposed international petroleum exposition, to be held at Tulsa, Okla., beginning October 5, 1929, for the purpose of exhibiting samples of fabricated and raw products of all countries used in the petroleum industry and bringing together buyers and sellers for promotion of trade and commerce in such products.

SEC. 2. All articles that shall be imported from foreign countries for the sole purpose of exhibition at the International Petroleum Exposition upon which there shall be a tariff or customs duty shall be admitted free of the payment of duty, customs fees, or charges, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but it shall be lawful at any time during the exhibition to sell any goods or property imported for and actually on exhibition, subject to such regulations for the security of the revenue and for the collection of import duties as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe: Provided, That all such articles when sold or withdrawn for consumption or use in the United States shall be subject to the duty, if any, imposed upon such articles by the revenue laws in force at the date of withdrawal; and on such articles which shall have suffered diminution or deterioration from incidental handling and necessary exposure, the duty, if paid, shall be assessed according to the appraised value at the time of withdrawal for consumption or use, and the penalties prescribed by law shall be enforced against any person guilty of any illegal sale, use, or withdrawal.

The resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. O'CONNOR of Oklahoma, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

APPROPRIATION FOR THE AGRICULTURAL MARKETING ACT

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 4016) making appropriations to carry out the provisions of the agricultural marketing act approved June 15, 1929.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H. R. 4016

A bill making an appropriation to carry out the provisions of the agricultural marketing act, approved June 15, 1929

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for carrying into effect the provisions of the act entitled the "Agricultural marketing act," approved June 15, 1929, including all necessary expenditures authorized therein, the sum of $151,500,000 to be immediately available, of which amount $150,000,000 shall constitute a revolving fund to be administered by the Federal Farm Board as provided in such act, and $1,500,000 shall be available until June 30, 1930, for administrative expenses in executing the functions vested in the Federal Farm Board by such act.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Indiana is entitled to 20 minutes and the gentleman from Tennessee to 20 minutes.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, under the farm bill which passed this House and the Senate and which has been signed by the President, there is an authorization for an appropriation of $500,000,000. The appropriation asked here is for $151,500,000, $150,000,000 of which is for carrying out the purposes of the act, and the rest is for administrative expenses.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. Will the gentleman state why he did not appropriate the entire $500,000,000?

Mr. WOOD. Because of the fact that there is no immediate necessity for it. There is no need to appropriate more money than is necessary.

Mr. GARNER. How does the gentleman know about the necessity for it?

Mr. WOOD. I call the attention of the gentleman from Texas to what the President said in his letter:

The additional amounts which will be needed by the board can not be determined except by the board itself, but as Congress might shortly recess I have thought it desirable that a preliminary sum should be provided. If the board finds it necessary to have further funds, it should be possible to make provision for them in ample time, and Congress will no doubt be in session by the time they are required.

Mr. GARNER. If I understand the gentleman correctly, the President said that he had no knowledge of what funds will be necessary to conduct this business for which this appropriation is made. Does he contemplate that Congress will take a recess, or does the gentleman contemplate that Congress will be in session until the wheat and cotton crops are handled?

Mr. WOOD. So far as the recess is concerned, I am not an authority on recessing. I have had my misgivings about the recess, but in any event it would take some time to set up the machinery for the transaction of this business under the act, and it occurs to me that not more than $150,000,000 certainly could be used before we would get back here in the event there is a recess. If there is no recess, we could take care of the question when it arises.

Mr. GARNER. I do not see how that can occur to the gentleman from Indiana unless he has some knowledge of what amount will be necessary. It seems to me that if we can trust the board with $150,000,000, we can as well trust them with $500,000,000. Does the gentleman suppose the President is unwilling to trust the board with the entire amount?

Mr. WOOD. Certainly not. As he states in his letter as to the exact amount that may be needed no one can tell until the board is organized; they may not need the entire $500,000,000.

Mr. GARNER. If we should appropriate $500,000,000, the gentleman does not anticipate that the board would use it unless it is needed?

Mr. WOOD. Certainly not; but why appropriate a fixed amount for any activity when there is not that much money needed? We do not do it with reference to any other appropriation.

Mr. GARNER. Certainly not, because we know what is needed. But the gentleman says that the President says we do not know how much money will be necessary to run this board.

Mr. WOOD. That is correct.

Mr. GARNER. Why not give the board the full amount and then it can act and use the money which Congress authorizes. By giving them only $150,000,000 now, if Congress is in recess, we give them the opportunity to say that Congress did not give them enough money.

Mr. WOOD. There would be some force to the gentleman's argument if it were not for the fact that we are going to be here in almost continuous session during this summer; we will be in session, so all agree if a recess is had, not later than the last of August or the first of September, and by that time in all probability the board will be organized and they will have some knowledge as to what their wants will be. It occurs to me there is no more necessity for appropriating more money than this than there would be for any other institution when the money is not needed.

Mr. ADKINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD. Yes.

Mr. ADKINS. In the coming wheat crop we may have a surplus of 150,000,000 or 200,000,000 bushels. In the event that the board should act upon the coming wheat crop, they would organize the stabilization corporation and start to take off the market the surplus of 200,000,000 bushels. If they should do that, of course, there would not be enough money to take it all off. Is there any arrangement whereby they could go on and do that without an appropriation being made?

Mr. WOOD. I take it that they would have to act within the appropriation; but admitting what the gentleman states as a possibility, that there may be 150,000,000 to 200,000,000 bushels of a surplus, the board will have at least $150,000,000 with which to take care of it.

Mr. ADKINS. That is a probable surplus now.

Mr. WOOD. In all probability they would not need to take up all of the 200,000,000 bushels if we had that much of a surplus. I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I do not care to take up the time of the House with the discussion of this resolution. We have had no hearings upon it. As a matter of fact, I do not know just what information could have been developed if we had had hearings, because, as the President has indicated in the letter from which the gentleman from Indiana read, until the farm board has been actually appointed and has considered the matter, everyone is at sea, so to speak, with reference to the amount of money that may be needed at an early date. I am prepared to vote for whatever sum the President, in his judgment, thinks would be necessary. I would have supported a larger amount if he had asked it. I realize that just such a contingency as the gentleman from Texas refers to and as has been referred to also by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ADKINS] may happen.

We will be very soon in the midst of crop moving, and it may appear that a great deal more money will be needed for the major crops, such as cotton, wheat, corn, tobacco, and possibly other crops. The amount here appropriated may be by no means sufficient when the time comes when the money is actually and positively needed. But that is not a responsibility, of course, that rests on us. The President himself is responsible for the administration of this law which has recently been passed, and if in his judgment $150,000,000 is all that is needed now I am willing to accept that amount, although I would have voted for a larger amount. But in view of what has been said, I think it can be said fairly now that if later on it should develop that a larger sum should have been asked for, surely Congress will not be responsible for that. I am sure nobody on either side would oppose the granting of the entire sum fixed by the bill.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS. Yes.

Mr. JONES of Texas. If an additional amount is appropriated, it would simply be available in the Treasury until needed?

Mr. BYRNS. Undoubtedly.

Mr. JONES of Texas. And if that were done, they could use it in the event that an emergency arose?

Mr. BYRNS. Yes.

Mr. JONES of Texas. If they would need more than $150,000,000, they would be compelled to wait until Congress came back and the appropriation were made and the money available?

Mr. BYRNS. That is true.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Then, why not make the entire amount available and let the board use what they need in their discretion?

Mr. BYRNS. As I said, I would be perfectly willing to vote for the entire amount provided in the law. But this is all that the President has requested and all that is before us. As a matter of fact, I think, with the gentleman from Texas, that Congress could well afford to appropriate the entire amount, because, as suggested by him, it will not be expended unless the Farm Board decides that it ought to be expended, and if the Farm Board which we hope will function and relieve agriculture believes that the entire sum is needed for the benefit of agriculture, they should have it when needed and not have to wait until an additional appropriation is made.

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS. Yes.

Mr. ALMON. Does not the gentleman think the entire amount of the appropriation, the $500,000,000, or part of it, would have a very wholesome effect on the minds of the American farmer and assure him that the money would be available, and not leave in doubt the question whether the remainder of the money would be had hereafter?

Mr. BYRNS. I think that would be so.

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS. Yes.

Mr. DENISON. Of course, the success of the farm relief plan as embodied in this legislation is going to depend largely on the good judgment of the board itself. That is true, is it not?

Mr. BYRNS. Yes.

Mr. DENISON. Does not the gentleman from Tennessee think it would be a mistake for us here to be continually butting in now and trying to tell the board what to do?

Mr. BYRNS. I think so; but I do not think the appropriation of the full amount of $500,000,000 could be construed as interfering with the farm board. It would rather be an indication to the farm board that Congress is willing to give all the aid in its power.

Mr. DENISON. Is it customary for Congress to make these great appropriations, even if authorized by law, before the executive department asks for them?

Mr. BYRNS. No; and that is the reason why I favor this resolution.

Mr. DENISON. If we should go ahead and appropriate the full amount, some one would introduce a resolution directing the board to go ahead and spend it.

Mr. BYRNS. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS].

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, I want to express my surprise and disappointment at the fact that not more than $150,000,000 is contained in this appropriation. Of course, I am going to support that amount, but when the farm relief bill came in from the Committee on Agriculture it contained an authorization of $500,000,000, and many of us on both sides of the aisle criticized the bill for the reason that it did not contain an actual appropriation. But it came from the legislative committee, and the legislative committee was not authorized to do anything else other than to report an authorization and not an actual appropriation. It is a mistake when we try to shirk responsibility. It is ours. We have led the country to believe that this revolving fund is going to carry $500,000,000. It will not do it. There is an authorization, but not an appropriation, of $500,000,000. The act, as I understand, was approved by the President on Saturday, and the fact of its approval was reported to the House only a moment ago. The people of the country are going to be disappointed when we go to our several homes during the recess and are asked why we did not make the full appropriation of $500,000,000. You will be compelled to say, "The President estimated $150,000,000 as enough." The President does not make a definite statement in his letter. The President's letter merely indicates that, so far as he has present knowledge, that $150,000,000 is all that is needed. We may take a recess this week, and it may be that the House will not reassemble until November. Now, in the meantime you will have a 900,000,000-bushel crop of wheat to aid in marketing, and you will not only have a surplus of 200,000,000 bushels to deal with but you will have the entire crop to stabilize and you will need more than $150,000,000 to stabilize the wheat crop.

Let me invite your attention to the fact that the average crop of cotton is approximately 14,000,000 bales. We exported last year 8,546,419 bales of cotton. The cotton-picking season begins in lower Texas in August, and soon therefore our cotton marketing season is on. We produced last year 2,839,959,000 bushels of corn. The moving and marketing of corn will begin in the early fall.

In my judgment, this board should have the entire revolving fund at its disposal, namely, $500,000,000.

Let us quit talking about evading responsibility on our part. The responsibility for the origination of appropriations is with the Congress. The responsibility of this legislation is with the Congress, and I am sure, at this stage of the game, the Congress itself has as much information as to how much it thinks this board should have or will be required as the President of the United States or as the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois and Mr. ADKINS rose.

Mr. HASTINGS. I have only about two minutes remaining. You have plenty of time to reply to me or else I would yield.

For us to fail to make the full appropriation is deception to the public. The people, through the press, have been led to believe that we were going to make available the full amount of $500,000,000 and not wait for developments as to future appropriations.

Every Member will be embarrassed in answering the inquiries of your constituents when you have to tell them that only $150,000,000 has been actually appropriated and made available, especially when you will have to advise them that it may be an indefinite length of time before the Congress of the United States is going to assemble again.

I am in favor of making now the entire appropriation of $500,000,000 as a revolving fund, and I favor placing that amount at the disposal of the board and making it available for use as the occasion may require.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HASTINGS. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. One hundred and fifty million dollars is not simply chicken feed; it is an awful lot of money, and nobody need be embarrassed.

Mr. HASTINGS. Oh, if the gentleman does not know anything more about agriculture than his question indicates—I have tried to explain here that we produced last year approximately 900,000,000 bushels of wheat, 2,839,959,000 bushels of corn, and that we produced in 1928 approximately 14,000,000 bales of cotton, and of course the gentleman or anyone else who knows anything at all about agriculture knows that $150,000,000 is an insufficient amount to handle or stabilize these major crops.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. The gentleman certainly is not trying to have the entire country believe that the United States Government is going to buy all of these three crops. That is deception.

Mr. HASTINGS. Everyone knows that we authorized an appropriation of $500,000,000.

Why, after extended hearings both in the House and Senate, did we authorize an appropriation of $500,000,000 as a revolving fund if it was not thought that that amount would be needed? As I have tried to explain, the three major crops of wheat, corn, and cotton will mature and be harvested and marketed perhaps before Congress reconvenes after we recess. I am trying to make it clear that the full amount of $500,000,000 should be appropriated as a revolving fund now. We should throw our full financial force behind this board to begin with if we hope to make the law a success.

You say we may not need it. We will need it between now and November, during the crop-marketing season, if we are ever going to need it. If we do not need it this year, why did we authorize $500,000,000 to be appropriated? We did that and led the country to believe that the amount is now available.

There were no hearings on this bill. No committee has reported it. There is no report to show why the amount of $150,000,000 was estimated for.

I am trying to discharge my full duty as a friend of agriculture by calling attention to the fact that we should vote the entire appropriation.

This bill comes up on suspension day, and no amendment is in order. The records show that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill. Let the country understand that no amendment under these circumstances can be offered, not an "i" dotted nor a "t" crossed, and for that reason no one in the House has attempted to amend the bill. My hope is that the Senate will give it more detailed consideration and amend the bill so as to appropriate the full amount, and if it does and such an amendment comes back to the House, the House should concur in it.

Practically every speech made while the farm bill was under consideration in the House and in the Senate referred to the fact that it established a revolving fund of $500,000,000. That amount was authorized. After the bill had been passed and signed by the President an estimate for only $150,000,000 is submitted, and only that amount is carried in this bill.

During the war we appropriated $1,000,000,000 to stabilize wheat alone. Everyone recognizes that agriculture is in a deplorable condition. It should receive adequate assistance at once. I submit that no one has attempted to make any explanation satisfactory to the friends of agriculture why the amount of the revolving fund is reduced through this appropriation to $150,000,000.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Indiana to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The question was taken, and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

COMPENSATION OF OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH OF THE GOVERNMENT

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 3966) to fix the compensation of officers and employees of the legislative branch of the Government.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following positions and annual (except where specified otherwise) rates of compensation are hereby established:

SENATE

OFFICE OF THE VICE PRESIDENT

Secretary to the Vice President, $4,620; clerk, $2,400; assistant clerks—one $2,280, one $2,160.

CHAPLAIN

Chaplain of the Senate, $1,680.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

Secretary of the Senate, including compensation as disbursing officer of salaries of Senators and of contingent fund of the Senate, $8,000; assistant secretary, Henry M. Rose, $4,500; chief clerk, who shall perform the duties of reading clerk, $5,500 and $1,000 additional so long as the position is held by the present incumbent; financial clerk, $5,000 and $1,000 additional so long as the position is held by the present incumbent; assistant financial clerk, $4,200 and $600 additional so long as the position is held by the present incumbent; minute and journal clerk, $4,500 and $1,000 additional so long as the position is held by the present incumbent; principal clerk, $3,840; legislative clerk, enrolling clerk, and printing clerk at $3,540 each; chief bookkeeper, $3,600; librarian, $3,360; executive clerk, file clerk, and assistant journal clerk at $3,180 each; first assistant librarian and keeper of stationery at $3,120 each; assistant librarian, $2,460; skilled laborer, $1,740; clerks—three at $3,180 each, one $2,880, one $2,760, two at $2,400 each, two at $2,040 each; two assistant keepers of stationery at $2,040 each; assistant in stationery room, $1,740; messenger in library, $1,560; special officer, $2,460; assistant in library, $2,040; laborers—two at $1,620 each, three at $1,380 each, one in stationery room, $1,680.

DOCUMENT ROOM

Superintendent, $3,960; first assistant, $3,360; second assistant, $2,700; assistant, $2,040 in lieu of position authorized by Senate Resolution 342 of the Seventieth Congress; two clerks at $2,040 each; skilled laborer, $1,740.

COMMITTEE EMPLOYEES

Clerks and messengers to the following committees: Agriculture and Forestry—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Appropriations—clerk, $7,000 and $1,000 additional so long as the position is held by the present incumbent; 2 assistant clerks at $4,200 each; 3 assistant clerks at $3,000 each; 2 assistant clerks at $2,220 each; messenger, $1,800. To Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Banking and Currency—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220. Civil Service—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Claims—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; assistant clerk, $2,580; 2 assistant clerks at $2,220 each. Commerce—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220. Conference majority of the Senate (in lieu of positions authorized by S. Res. No. 50 of the 71st Cong.)—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; 2 assistant clerks at $2,580 each; assistant clerk, $2,220. Conference minority of the Senate—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; 2 assistant clerks at $2,580 each; assistant clerk, $2,220. District of Columbia—clerk, $3,900; 2 assistant clerks at $2,880 each; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Education and Labor—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Enrolled Bills—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Expenditures in the Executive Departments—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerks, $1,800. Finance—clerk, $4,200; special assistant to the committee, $3,600; assistant clerk, $2,880; assistant clerk, $2,700; assistant clerk, $2,400; 2 assistant clerks at $2,220 each; 2 experts (1 for the majority and 1 for the minority) at $3,600 each; messenger, $1,800. Foreign Relations—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800; messenger, $1,800. Immigration—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Indian Affairs—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Interoceanic Canals—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Interstate Commerce—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; 2 assistant clerks at $2,580 each; assistant clerk, $2,220. Irrigation and Reclamation—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Judiciary—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; 2 assistant clerks at $2,580 each; assistant clerk, $2,220. Library—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Manufactures—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Military Affairs—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,400; 2 assistant clerks at $2,220 each. Mines and Mining—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Naval Affairs—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; assistant clerk, $2,400; 2 assistant clerks at $2,220 each. Patents—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Pensions—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,580; 4 assistant clerks at $2,220 each. Post Offices and Post Roads—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; 3 assistant clerks at $2,220 each; additional clerk, $1,800. Printing—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Privileges and Elections—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Public Buildings and Grounds—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Public Lands and Surveys—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,880; assistant clerk, $2,580; 2 assistant clerks, at $2,220 each. Revision of Laws—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,400; assistant clerk; $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Rules—clerk, $3,900, to include full compensation for the preparation biennially of the Senate Manual under the direction of the Committee on Rules; assistant clerk, $2,880; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800. Territories and Insular Possessions—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,580; assistant clerk, $2,220; additional clerk, $1,800.

CLERICAL ASSISTANCE TO SENATORS

Clerical assistance to Senators who are not chairmen of the committees specifically provided for herein, as follows: Seventy clerks, at $3,900 each; 70 assistant clerks, at $2,400 each; and 70 assistant clerks, at $2,220 each. Such clerks and assistant clerks shall be ex officio clerks and assistant clerks of any committee of which their Senator is chairman.

Seventy additional clerks, at $1,800 each, 1 for each Senator having no more than 1 clerk and 2 assistant clerks for himself or for the committee of which he is chairman; messenger, $1,800.

OFFICE OF SERGEANT AT ARMS AND DOORKEEPER

Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper, $8,000; 2 secretaries (1 for the majority and 1 for the minority), at $5,400 each; 2 assistant secretaries (1 for the majority and 1 for the minority), at $4,320 each; messengers—5 (acting as assistant doorkeepers, including 1 for minority), at $2,400 each; 37 (including 1 for minority), at $2,040 each; 1 at $1,560, 1 at card door, $2,880; clerk on journal work for CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, to be selected by the official reporters, $3,360; Deputy Sergeant at Arms and storekeeper, $4,440; clerk, $2,460; stenographer in charge of furniture accounts and records, $1,740; upholsterer and locksmith, $2,400; cabinetmaker, $2,040; 3 carpenters at $2,040 each; janitor, $2,040; skilled laborers—4 at $1,680 each, 1 at $1,560; laborer in charge of private passage, $1,680; 3 female attendants in charge of ladies' retiring rooms, at $1,500 each; 3 attendants to women's toilet rooms, Senate Office Building, at $1,500 each; telephone operators—chief, $2,460, 7 at $1,560 each; night operator, $1,380; telephone page, $1,260; laborer in charge of Senate toilet rooms in old library space, $1,200; press gallery—superintendent, $3,660, assistant superintendent, $2,520, messenger for service to press correspondents, $1,740; laborers—3 at $1,320 each, 34 at $1,260 each; 21 pages for the Senate Chamber, at the rate of $4 per day each, during the session.

Police force for Senate Office Building under the Sergeant at Arms: Special officer, $1,740; 16 privates, at $1,620 each.

POST OFFICE

Postmaster, $3,060; chief clerk, $2,460; wagon master, $2,040; 7 mail carriers, at $1,740 each; 2 riding pages, at $1,440 each.

FOLDING ROOM

Foreman, $2,460; assistant, $2,160; clerk, $1,740; folders—chief, $2,040, 7 at $1,560 each, 7 at $1,380 each.

CAPITOL POLICE

Captain, $2,460; 3 lieutenants, at $1,740 each; 2 special officers, at $1,740 each; 3 sergeants, at $1,680 each; 44 privates, at $1,620 each.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON PRINTING

Clerk, $4,000 and $800 additional so long as the position is held by the present incumbent; inspector under section 20 of the act approved

January 12, 1895 (U. S. C. title 44, sec. 49), $2,820; assistant clerk and stenographer, $2,400; chief indexer, $3,480; cataloguers—one, $3,180, two at $2,460 each.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

OFFICE OF THE SPEAKER

Secretary to the Speaker, $4,620; parliamentarian, $4,500, and for preparing Digest of the Rules, $1,000 per annum; assistant parliamentarian, $2,760; clerk to Speaker, $2,400; clerk to Speaker, $1,440; messenger to Speaker's table, $1,740; messenger to Speaker, $1,680.

CHAPLAIN

Chaplain of the House of Representatives, $1,680.

OFFICE OF THE CLERK

Clerk of the House of Representatives, including compensation as disbursing officer of the contingent fund, $8,000; journal clerk, two reading clerks, and tally clerk, at $5,000 each; enrolling clerk, $4,000 and $1,000 additional so long as the position is held by the present incumbent; disbursing clerk, $3,960; file clerk, $3,780; chief bill clerk, $3,540; assistant enrolling clerk, $3,180; assistant to disbursing clerk, $3,120; stationery clerk, $2,880; librarian, $2,760; assistant librarian, and assistant file clerk, at $2,520 each; assistant journal clerk, and assistant librarian, at $2,460 each; clerks—one, $2,460, three at $2,340 each; bookkeeper, and assistant in disbursing office, at $2,160 each; four assistants to chief bill clerk at $2,100 each; stenographer to the Clerk, $1,980; assistant in stationery room, $1,740; three messengers at $1,680 each; stenographer to journal clerk, $1,560; laborers—three at $1,440 each, nine at $1,260 each; 15 telephone operators at $1,560 each; substitute telephone operator when required, at $4 per day; property custodian and superintendent of furniture and repair shop, who shall be a skilled cabinetmaker or upholsterer and experienced in the construction and purchase of furniture, $3,960; two assistant custodians at $3,360 each; locksmith and typewriter repairer, $1,860; messenger and clock repairer, $1,740.

OFFICE OF SERGEANT AT ARMS

Sergeant at Arms, $8,000; Deputy Sergeant at Arms, $3,180; cashier, $4,920; two bookkeepers at $3,360 each; Deputy Sergeant at Arms in charge of pairs, pair clerk and messenger, and assistant cashier, at $2,820 each; stenographer and typewriter, $600; skilled laborer, $1,380.

Police Force, House Office Building, under the Sergeant at Arms: Lieutenant, $1,740; 19 privates at $1,620 each.

OFFICE OF THE DOORKEEPER

Doorkeeper, $6,000; special employee, $2,820; superintendent of House press gallery, $3,660; assistant to the superintendent of the House press gallery, $2,520; chief janitor, $2,700; messengers—17 at $1,740 each, 14 on soldiers' roll at $1,740 each; laborers—17 at $1,260 each, 2 (cloakroom) at $1,380 each, 1 (cloakroom) $1,260, and 7 (cloakroom) at $1,140 each; 3 female attendants in ladies' retiring rooms at $1,680 each; attendant for the ladies' reception room, $1,440; superintendent of folding room, $3,180; foreman of folding room, $2,640; chief clerk to superintendent of folding room, $2,460; 3 clerks at $2,160 each; janitor, $1,260; laborer, $1,260; 31 folders at $1,440 each; shipping clerk, $1,740; 2 drivers at $1,380 each; 2 chief pages at $1,980 each; 3 telephone pages at $1,680 each; 2 floor managers of telephones (1 for the minority), at $3,180 each; 2 assistant floor managers in charge of telephones (1 for the minority), at $2,100 each; 41 pages, during the session at $4 per day each; press-gallery page, $1,920; superintendent of document room (Elmer A. Lewis), $3,960; assistant superintendent of document room, $2,760 and $420 additional so long as the position is held by the present incumbent; clerk, $2,320; assistant clerk, $2,160; 8 assistants at $1,860 each; janitor, $1,440; messenger to pressroom, $1,560.

SPECIAL AND MINORITY EMPLOYEES

For the minority employees authorized and named in the resolution of April 15, 1929—1 at $3,180 (J. J. Sinnott), 5 at $2,820 each.

Assistant foreman of the folding room, authorized in the resolution of September 30, 1913, $1,980.

Laborer, authorized and named in the resolution of April 28, 1914, $1,380.

Laborer, authorized and named in the resolution of December 19, 1901, $1,380.

Clerk, under the direction of the Clerk of the House, named in the resolution of February 13, 1923, $3,060.

Successors to any of the employees provided for in the five preceding paragraphs may be named by the House of Representatives at any time.

Office of majority floor leader: Legislative clerk, $3,960; clerk, $3,180; assistant clerk, $2,100; janitor, $1,560.

Conference minority: Clerk, $3,180; assistant clerk, $2,100; janitor, $1,560. The foregoing employees to be appointed by the minority leader.

Two messengers, one in the majority caucus room and one in the minority caucus room, to be appointed by the majority and minority whips, respectively, at $1,740 each.

POST OFFICE

Postmaster, $5,000; assistant postmaster, $2,880; registry and money-order clerk, $2,100; 34 messengers (including one to superintend transportation of mails) at $1,740 each; substitute messengers and extra services of regular employees, when required, at the rate of not to exceed $145 per month each; laborer, $1,260.

OFFICIAL REPORTERS OF DEBATES

Six official reporters of the proceedings and debates of the House at $7,500 each; assistant (John J. Cameron), $3,000; clerk, $3,360; six expert transcribers at $1,740 each; janitor, $1,440.

COMMITTEE STENOGRAPHERS

Four stenographers to committees, at $7,000 each; janitor, $1,440.

COMMITTEE EMPLOYEES

Clerks, messengers, and janitors to the following committees: Accounts—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,460; janitor, $1,560. Agriculture—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,460; janitor, $1,560. Appropriations—clerk, $7,000 and $1,000 additional so long as the position is held by the present incumbent; assistant clerk, $5,000 and $1,000 additional so long as the position is held by the present incumbent; three assistant clerks at $3,900 each; assistant clerk, $3,600; two assistant clerks at $3,300 each; messenger, $1,680. Banking and Currency—clerk, $2,760; assistant clerk, $1,740; janitor, $1,260. Census—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Civil Service—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Claims—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $1,740; janitor, $1,260. Coinage, Weights, and Measures—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Disposition of Useless Executive Papers—clerk, $2,760. District of Columbia—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,460; janitor, $1,260. Education—clerk, $2,760. Election of President, Vice President, and Representatives in Congress—clerk, $2,760. Elections No. 1—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Elections No. 2—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Elections No. 3—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Enrolled Bills—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Expenditures in Executive Departments—clerk, $3,300; janitor, $1,260. Flood Control—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Foreign Affairs—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,460; janitor, $1,260. Immigration and Naturalization—clerk, $3,300; janitor, $1,260. Indian Affairs—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,460; janitor, $1,260. Insular Affairs—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Interstate and Foreign Commerce—clerk, $3,900; additional clerk, $2,640; assistant clerk, $2,100; janitor, $1,560. Irrigation and Reclamation—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Invalid Pensions—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,880; expert examiner (Norman E. Ives), $2,700; stenographer, $2,640; janitor, $1,500. Judiciary—clerk, $3,900; assistant clerk, $2,160; assistant clerk, $1,980; janitor, $1,500. Labor—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Library—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Merchant Marine and Fisheries—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Military Affairs—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,100; janitor, $1,560. Mines and Mining—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Naval Affairs—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,100; janitor, $1,560. Patents—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. Pensions—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,160; janitor, $1,260. Post Offices and Post Roads—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,100; janitor, $1,560. Printing—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,560. Public Buildings and Grounds—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $1,740; janitor, $1,260. Public Lands—clerk, $2,760; assistant clerk, $1,740; janitor, $1,260. Revision of the Laws—clerk, $3,300; janitor, $1,260. Rivers and Harbors—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,460; janitor, $1,560. Roads—clerk, $2,760; assistant clerk, $1,740; janitor, $1,260. Rules—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,100; janitor, $1,260. Territories—clerk, $2,760; janitor, $1,260. War Claims—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $1,740; janitor, $1,260. Ways and Means—clerk, $4,620; assistant clerk and stenographer, $2,640; assistant clerk, $2,580; clerk for minority, $3,180; janitors—one, $1,560, one $1,260. World War Veterans' Legislation—clerk, $3,300; assistant clerk, $2,460.

The offices, positions, and rates of compensation hereinbefore specified shall be in lieu of those enumerated under the same captions in the legislative appropriation act for the fiscal year 1930, approved February 28, 1929, and the appropriations contained in such act for the compensation of the officers and employees of Congress are hereby made available toward the payment of the compensation of the officers and employees of Congress at the rates and in the numbers specified in this section.

The indefinite appropriations for the compensation of pages for the Senate and House of Representatives, contained in the act entitled "An act making appropriations for certain expenses of the legislative branch incident to the first session of the Seventy-first Congress," approved April 26, 1929, are hereby made available for the compensation of such pages at the per diem rates specified herein.

The appropriation for "Public printing and binding," contained in the legislative appropriation act for the fiscal year 1930, is hereby made available for the compensation of the chief indexer and cataloguer of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at the rates specified herein in lieu of the rates specified in such appropriation.

CLERK HIRE, MEMBERS, DELEGATES, AND RESIDENT COMMISSIONERS

SEC. 2. The clerk hire for each Member, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner shall be at the rate of $5,000 per annum and shall be paid in accordance with the act of January 25, 1923 (U. S. C. title 2, sec. 92): Provided, That no person shall receive a salary from such clerk hire at a rate in excess of $3,900 per annum. The appropriation for "Clerk hire, Members, Delegates, and Resident Commissioners," contained in the legislative appropriation act for the fiscal year 1930, is hereby made available toward the payment of clerk hire as provided in this section.

ARCHITECT OF THE CAPITOL

SEC. 3. Section 2 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the classification of civilian positions within the District of Columbia and in the field services," approved March 4, 1923 (U. S. C. title 5, sec. 662), is hereby amended so as to include within the definition of the term "department," contained in the second paragraph of such section, the office of the Architect of the Capitol: Provided, That this section shall not operate to reduce the compensation of the present incumbent in any position nor to prevent the Architect of the Capitol from employing professional and technical services in connection with construction projects at such rates of compensation as he may deem necessary in the public interest.

The appropriations under the office of the Architect of the Capitol, contained in the legislative appropriation act for the fiscal year 1930, are hereby made available toward giving effect to the provisions of this section.

SEC. 4. Hereafter employees detailed from the Bureau of Pensions to duty with committees of Congress having jurisdiction of pension legislation shall not receive additional compensation while on such detail at a rate in excess of $50 per month each.

SEC. 5. The short title of this act shall be the "legislative pay act of 1929."

SEC. 6. This act shall take effect on July 1, 1929, and the act entitled "An act to fix the compensation of officers and employees of the legislative branch of the Government," approved May 24, 1924, is hereby repealed after June 30, 1929.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. GLOVER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman from Arkansas opposed to the bill?

Mr. GLOVER. Yes; I am.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Arkansas in opposition to the bill.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I reserve my time.

Mr. GLOVER. Mr. Speaker, ladies, and gentlemen, I want to say that I am opposed to this bill for more reasons than one. First of all, I am opposed to this bill because it was introduced in this House on the 14th day of June, 1929, and this is now the 17th day of June. The bill has had no consideration by the House or by a committee, so far as I know. It could have had no intelligent consideration in the time it has been before this body.

Mr. BLAND. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GLOVER. Not just now.

Mr. BLAND. I will say I am in accord with the gentleman's view.

Mr. GLOVER. I will yield in a moment.

When an important matter like this is to be brought before the Congress it ought to have careful consideration.

We were brought here in this session of the Congress for the purpose of considering legislation in the interest of the farmer. This bill came into my hands about five minutes ago. I have not had time to read it. I got a copy of the Senate bill, which I presume is an exact copy of this one, and have scanned it over some. We met here for the sole purpose of trying to legislate in the interest of the farmer. I want any man or woman on the floor of this House to tell me the relationship between a farmer and this bill.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GLOVER. No, sir; not just now. I am satisfied that the gentleman might possibly make an explanation of that kind, but I am sure it will not be satisfactory to me at least. It may be to the farmers of the country, but he may have that time to do it as far as I am concerned. When I take this bill and figure it up it carries with it about $800,000 additional expense for this House and the other body.

You say you want to help the farmer. You can save the farmer $800,000 at least if you will defeat this bill. This bill carries with it an additional thousand dollars for clerk hire for each Member of Congress of both the House and Senate. We have 435 Members and that would be $435,000 in this House alone if it only applied to the House Members. But it carries that for the other body. And then, in addition to that, there is not a single position as I look over the bill but what is raised about 25 per cent.

Mr. SIMMONS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GLOVER. Not just now. The bill increases the price we are to pay for every employee mentioned in it. There is an additional appropriation here for the President of the Senate's assistants and also for the Speaker of the House. The expense of the office of the Speaker of the House is increased from $13,700 to $21,140. I think we have a Speaker that can handle this job by himself. [Laughter.] I think when it comes to adding additional employees and charging it back under the pretext that you are going to help the farmer it is an absolute absurdity. And there is not a man in the House but what knows it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GLOVER. Not just now. Four hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars additional that goes for clerk hire. Now, gentlemen, I believe that we ought to have efficiency everywhere. I want efficiency in my office, and I say to you that I can have it under the present conditions. I have two persons working in my office. When I came here to Congress I made an inquiry of what there was available for me to give to my district of 12 counties and I found in the Agricultural Department that I had 163,000 bulletins there for distribution. I have two employees and we have sent out in two months over 70,000 of these bulletins to the voters and the farmers in my district. [Applause.]

I say to you that I can take my force and send out all that is necessary under the present salary, and they are both very much pleased with their jobs. Neither has asked to be relieved, and if they could not do the work I have a dozen on my waiting list that would be glad to take their places.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield now?

Mr. GLOVER. No; I am afraid the gentleman from Wisconsin would ask me something about the eighteenth amendment, and I decline. [Laughter.]

Mr. MAAS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GLOVER. Not just now. I realize, gentlemen, that I may be standing alone in opposing this bill. I challenge you to be men and women, to go on record, and let the farmers know that you are ready and willing to do something for them. Will you do it? I ask you to do it.

A MEMBER. We have just given the farmers $150,000,000.

Mr. GLOVER. Yes; and now you are taking $1,000,000 of that back.

SEVERAL VOICES. Oh, no.

Mr. GLOVER. You are taking $800,000 of it back, and that comes pretty near to a million as I figure it. [Cries of "Vote! Vote!"]

I know you want to vote. I know you want to go on record. I will be glad to see you in the RECORD, and I hope we have enough that will stand up here and put you on record. I want you to go back home to your people and say, "Yes; I went up there to help the farmers, and I increased the salary of my force, and you will have to pay them. I helped you out of $1,000 in that way, and 434 more in the House did the same thing."

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GLOVER. Yes.

Mr. GREEN. If the Congress has anything to add to my State, rather than to add it in the way of salaries, I wish it would send it to the sufferers from the Mediterranean fly.

Mr. GLOVER. Yes; I know that you want tariff on blackstrap and fruit-fly remedies down there, and I expect they need them. I say to you that we had better give it to the extermination of the boll weevil or something of that kind rather than to come here and put it into this sort of waste.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GLOVER. Yes.

Mr. BLAND. Could we not much better put it into post offices throughout the country?

Mr. GLOVER. Absolutely so. I have in my district of 12 counties two little post offices owned by the Government, and if you were to put them up for sale to-day they would not bring $40,000; and the idea of talking about going out and taking money that ought to be used for that purpose and putting it into such a thing as this! We ought to be ashamed of it. That is the way I look at it.

Mr. MOREHEAD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GLOVER. Yes.

Mr. MOREHEAD. I want to heartily concur with the gentleman that everyone who is in favor of or opposed to this bill ought to have a chance to go on record, and I agree at least with the gentleman's statement in that respect. We ought to be willing enough and courageous enough to put ourselves on record for or against this bill.

Mr. GLOVER. Not only that, but I hope the gentleman will be courageous enough to vote against the bill; and if he will do that, he will be of some help to his people.

There are so many objections in this bill that I can not discuss them all in 20 minutes. There is one provision raising the salaries very high and then giving $1,000 extra to the employee so long as that present employee is serving. You fellows have been talking about a bounty. You are going to give to these fellows an additional thousand dollars in the way of a bounty as long as they stay there. I believe we ought never to have inefficient service; we ought to have the best, and if the present employees need that the others ought to have it also. It is not right to come here with a provision of that kind in this bill. I remember very well a short time ago when the question came up here of raising Congressmen's salaries, and that was a proposition something like this. I read that RECORD carefully. I remember that the gentleman from Texas, Mr. BLANTON, stood on the floor of this House, as shown by the RECORD, and voted for the right, and I would be willing for one, to sacrifice the amount raised on my salary, raised by that act, and let it go back to my people in the form of post offices and any relief to them where they absolutely need it.

Mr. MOREHEAD. And I want to further state that I indorse very much the gentleman's attitude in regard to taking snap judgment and bringing in a bill of this magnitude at this particular time. I further state that if given the opportunity I shall vote against the bill, because I think it is unfair and unjust legislation at this time. [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. GLOVER. Not only that, but when this bill was read here by the Clerk I dare say that there were not three people in this House who heard it read, because of the confusion in the Hall. Who knows what it contains? Very few in this body.

A MEMBER. Everybody.

Mr. GLOVER. Yes; "everybody." That is the trouble. There are too many "everybodies" here that are to be benefited by this. In addition to that, I would like to have an investigation made and published to the world of just how some are spending what they get now. I ask you to go back and tell your folks how you do it.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GLOVER. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I agree with the gentleman that it might be well to learn how some of the allowance is allotted, but the gentleman said something a moment ago with reference to some employees who are granted $1,000 additional. Does the gentleman know those employees?

Mr. GLOVER. I do not.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Does the gentleman realize their value to the House and the Senate, and that they could not be replaced for twice the amount that we are appropriating for the work that they are doing?

Mr. GLOVER. I never did believe that one man holds a monopoly on wisdom or anything of that kind. I believe there are other men just as efficient as the men employed now, and I have not one word of criticism against any employee in any department of this work, but I say that when you try to tell me that one man is the only man who can do a certain class of work, I resent it.

Mr. BLAND. Then the bill might be amended, if considered under the ordinary rules of the House, and those clerks who are entitled to it could be taken care of properly.

Mr. GLOVER. Absolutely.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GLOVER. Yes. I shall be glad to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The gentleman mentioned the work done in his office. From the talk about the work in his office we would be led to the conclusion that the only work performed by the gentleman's clerks consists in sending out agricultural bulletins. If that is the truth, I see no necessity for raising their salaries.

Mr. GLOVER. I will say to the gentleman that my office work has not been confined to that alone. Not a letter has come into my office that has not been answered within 12 hours after its arrival there. Not only that, but every interest of my constituency when they have appealed to me has been looked after since I have been here, and I shall continue to do that. [Applause.]

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Of course, the gentleman knows that no Member is obliged or compelled to take this increase. The gentleman can continue his force at their present rate and thereby curtail the amount appropriated by that much.

Mr. GLOVER. And I realize there is no danger whatever of the gentleman from New York doing that.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Oh, I am not going to do it, because I believe in paying a decent, living wage.

Mr. GLOVER. I do also, but I do not believe in playing this kind of a game. Not only that, but there are employees in this bill who are drawing large salaries who do not work six months in the year. There is no reason for this bill coming up at this time in the manner in which it does. It is a brand-new baby, it is only three days old, and here you are trying to put whiskers on it in three days. [Laughter.] I say to you that it is not right, and I appeal to the conscience of every woman and man in this House who has a right to vote to cast your vote against this measure. [Applause.]

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. UNDERHILL].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, my personal sympathies are with the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. GLOVER]. I so frequently have been placed in the same position of a hopeless, helpless minority of one that I certainly can sympathize with him, even if I do not sympathize entirely with his remarks.

This is not a brand-new baby by any means. It had its birth some two or three years ago, and I had to adopt it in its infancy. I nurtured it, gave it a great deal of time, attention, and care, and then introduced it to this body. I found myself in the position of the gentleman from Arkansas, with not a friend in the House, not because I raised salaries—for I did, and they ought to be raised. [Applause.] There is no group of employees in the Government service outside of the legislative group who has given such value for the services rendered as they are giving here. My contention, however, is that this bill does not go far enough, and I will mingle one or two brickbats with the bouquets I hand the Appropriations Committee. They have done a marvelous job. Only those of us who have gone through a similar experience can realize the tremendous pressure brought to bear and the necessity of extensive study in order that justice and equity may be the guiding influence. So I do not raise any question in reference to the increases in salary in the legislative department. My contention is that the committee did not go far enough. I realize that it would have added to the troubles and trials and tribulations and possibly jeopardize the bill if it had. But they should have discharged some 21 employees who are a disgrace to the Government, who affect adversely the morale of other employees, and who ought not to be allowed to remain on the pay roll for one more day.

I do not want to embarrass the committee or embarrass an individual by calling anybody by name, but I made a thorough investigation of the situation and found that there are about 20 employees who had little or nothing to do but draw their breath and sign the pay roll. The other employees, although some of them work only six months in the year, have to work pretty hard during that six months' period, and they were paid a pitiful wage.

One of the contentions of the gentleman from Arkansas is that some of the present employees are given extra pay so long as they hold certain positions. That is the sensible, business way to do it. Heretofore we fixed salaries indiscriminately and raised an important position to a salary commensurate with the work, and then when that employee unfortunately passed out of the picture a new and green man was employed and was paid an excessive wage as a beginner. It is my contention that that was all wrong, and that we should have these positions classified, and that when a man became efficient, as our reporters are and as our clerks are, then that man should receive a salary commensurate to the service he renders.

But I can not reconcile my position with the position taken by the committee when they allowed four pair clerks to remain on the roll when the work is done by the minority and majority whips. I can not reconcile my position with theirs when they provided for an assistant or deputy sergeant at arms, whose only duty is to bring the mace upstairs and take it down again. The last incumbent did not do that. In the session previous to this one of the pair clerks was doing that work. I can not reconcile my position with the employment in the House and Senate of some men who bring discredit on the positions they occupy and the Members they serve.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. UNDERHILL. Yes.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois. I think the gentleman is in error as to the Assistant Sergeant at Arms. He has many duties to perform in addition to those described by the gentleman from Massachusetts. He is a deputy sergeant at arms, and he serves processes for the House. It is true that the man who formerly held that position was ill and not here, but like many others he was still kept on the roll.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Conditions change, and very probably they have changed in the past two years. Otherwise the Committee on Appropriations would never have brought in an increase of salary for this individual and perpetuated him in office.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. UNDERHILL. Certainly.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I find myself very much in sympathy with the contention of the gentleman. How can we realize and carry out the suggestion the gentleman has made under this method of procedure?

Mr. UNDERHILL. It can not be done; my idea was, and it ought to be, that we should introduce this in a regular session, discuss it thoroughly, and let Members such as myself, who have a load on my chest, offer amendments to the bill. I gave four months of vacation time to this work. It cost me personally $2,000 to make this investigation, and I brought in a classification of employees and recommendations that I thought was really worthy of consideration. Because I touched that holy of holies, patronage, because I proposed to discharge unworthy employees, it developed that certain employees protected by patronage had more power than a Member of Congress had who had given his time to a careful inquiry and report of conditions. They prevented the consideration of that bill.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have been sore for two years because of the treatment I received, and I hope when I get rid of this bile I shall feel more friendly toward some Members of the House. The facts are that this ought not to be presented at this time. But, nevertheless, the fact is that it is going to go through and no one Member can stop it. [Applause.]

Mr. SIMMONS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERHILL. Yes.

Mr. SIMMONS. The statement was made by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. GLOVER], in his denunciation of this bill, that each Member of Congress is to receive $1,000 additional under the bill. I think it ought to be made plain to the Members of the House that no Member of the Congress is to receive one cent additional under this bill.

Mr. UNDERHILL. I suppose the chairman of the committee will make that clear.

Mr. GLOVER. The gentleman is in error about that. I said the clerks to the Members.

Mr. SIMMONS. The gentleman twice said that the Members would get the $1,000.

Mr. UNDERHILL. The Members know perfectly well the large volume of work in their offices. I have had a sympathy for the Members and have felt as though there ought to be a larger sum appropriated for their assistance.

Why, it is not for the Members; it is for the people back home. You can give more efficient service to the people back home; you can spend more of your time on the floor of the House; you can spend more of your time in the departments. If you have sufficient funds, you can get an efficient secretary, and not be confined to a clerk, or a stenographer, or a typist for some of this departmental work which means so much to the people back home.

The bill is a fine bill, Mr. WOOD; it is a fine bill, Mr. MURPHY; it is a good bill, Mr. BYRNS; but I do wish you had gone down to the roots of the matter and made it a much better bill by discharging some 20 employees who have no business here on the Hill and are liable to cause a scandal if they are permitted to remain.

Mr. McCORMACK of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERHILL. I am through.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I will not take very much time with reference to this measure. All of you who have read the report are fully cognizant of what this bill contains and what changes have been made.

It includes an equalization of the salaries of practically 2,500 people in the House and in the Senate. It has been generally known that there has been a disparity in the compensation for the services rendered on this side and those rendered over there that has not been well for the conduct of public business. Those over on the other side doing work comparable to the work of clerks upon this side have been receiving more pay and it occurred to various Members of the House that, if possible, there should be some arrangement made whereby, as nearly as we could, we would arrive at a plan where similar services on this side would be paid the same as on the other side.

I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. UNDERHILL] for the compliment he has paid this committee. It has not been an easy task, and I hope that such a job will never fall to my lot again. We have done conscientiously what we thought was right.

We have raised to an exceptional degree only those salaries where exceptional service is being rendered, and I think if you go from one end of the bill to the other and pick out the individual cases where exceptions have been made you will find no fault with the exceptions if you are cognizant of the work and the labor that the men holding these positions are doing.

The salary fixed in this bill for those who are serving here on the Hill is a little bit lower in many respects than the salary fixed in the executive departments, and I would have you bear this in mind. There is not a clerk here on the Hill who has the retirement privilege. When he goes out, he goes out forever without any hope of any pension coming to him.

There is another reason if any preference is to be made it should be made in favor of those upon the hill, and that is because of the fact they have to pay all their expenses. They have to pay their railroad fare back and forward and this amounts to a considerable item. True, some of those who are employed here do not give their services for the entire year, but the service they render while here as compared with the volume of service rendered in the executive departments while they are at work, I suspect amounts to more in the number of hours put in than in the executive departments.

So we have no apologies to make for this report or for this measure. If there are any Members here who feel they do not need the increase that has been given for their clerk hire, they do not have to accept it, and the gentleman from Arkansas was in error when he said that each Congressman is increasing his pay $1,000. If he is cognizant of the law, he knows that is not correct.

Mr. GLOVER. The gentleman misunderstood me. I said that the secretaries or the clerks would get an additional thousand dollars. I am not unaware of the facts.

Mr. WOOD. If the gentleman from Arkansas finds he can send out all the bulletins that are necessary in his community and answer all the letters with the force he has, there is nothing in the bill to compel him to accept any more. [Applause.] But there are those here who do need extra services. There are clerks serving as secretaries to Congressmen that I am free to say are of more value to their districts than the Congressman himself.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. WOOD. Yes.

Mr. UNDERHILL. There are a number of employees on this pay roll receiving less than $900 a year. Think of asking a man to work for the Government and support a family on $900, and there are 50 of them.

Mr. WOOD. With reference to that matter, I will say that we adopted a general plan for raising the bulk of these salaries, which follows:

Present salaries:	Amount of increase annually
For employees receiving less than $2,000	$240
For employees receiving $2,000 and over but less than $3,000	300
For employees receiving $3,000 and over but less than $4,000	360
For employees receiving $4,000 and over but less than $5,000	420

The addition of these flat rates has been made and in establishing the salary the rate has been fixed at the nearest figure which would give an even sum divisible by 12 in monthly factors of $5. For example, the salary of the largest group of law-paid employees is now $1,010. The addition of the $240 brings the salary to $1,250, and $10 has been added, making the rate $1,260, which is an amount evenly divisible in $5 monthly increments. By applying the flat rates to existing salaries it works out on a percentage basis which is not more than 25 per cent for any salary less than $2,000, not more than 15 per cent for any salary from $2,000 and over but not more than $3,000, and not more than 10 per cent for any salary of $3,000 and over.

By adopting a flat rate of increase the salary of those at the top of one bracket and those at the bottom of the next higher bracket were adjusted so that the one in the lower bracket would not receive more after the increase than the one in the next upper bracket. It required a great deal of adjusting to do this.

I think from first to last if we are to pay those who serve us here according to the same rules that the same service has been receiving in the executive departments we ought to all be for this bill. I am not in favor of discriminating against those who serve us and favoring those who are in the executive departments.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD. I yield.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Will the gentleman agree to one amendment?

Mr. WOOD. I will not accept any amendment.

Mr. HUDSON. I was about to ask the same question. May I call the gentleman's attention to this item on page 10 in the office of the Sergeant at Arms—you give the lieutenant $1,740 and the privates $1,620 each. You are putting all the responsibility of the entire police management of the House Office Building, with its office force to maintain order and everything else, and asking this man to do it at a difference of $120. It seems to me that is not quite a fair distribution. I wish the gentleman might accept an amendment.

Mr. WOOD. If we were to do that we would have to do it all along the line for those receiving a like salary. This bill may not be a perfect measure, but it is as nearly perfect as it was possible to make it.

Mr. UNDERHILL. You have considered the case of every employee.

Mr. WOOD. Yes.

Mr. UNDERHILL. That serves notice on the Committee on Accounts to which committee all these appeals are made, that all resolutions for further increase of pay shall go from now on into the wastebasket.

Mr. WOOD. I want to say to the gentleman that these individual resolutions have been the bane of this whole business. Members of the House are constantly beseeched by some one in their district for increase of pay, and the Member introduces a resolution increasing the salary of that one particular person when it may be that there are hundreds of others in just the same position with the same character of work and their salary is not increased at all. So you see what happens. That same thing is true and practiced moreover on the other side than it is here. This committee was appointed to review this situation, and I hope the bill will have the acceptance of at least two-thirds of the Members of the House. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. GLOVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas demands the yeas and nays.

The question of ordering the yeas and nays was taken, and seven Members rose, not a sufficient number.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BLAND) there was 168 ayes and 18 noes.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote as showing that no quorum is present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia makes a point of no quorum. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and twenty-one Members present, a quorum. Two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules are suspended and the bill is passed.

LIST OF MINNESOTA SOLDIERS BURIED IN AMERICAN CEMETERIES IN EUROPE

Mr. MAAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a list of the World War veterans of Minnesota buried in France.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAAS. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House, Minnesota is proud of the loyal part her sons have always taken in defense of our country. The record of her sons' achievements in war has been indeed glorious. It was the first State, through its distinguished governor, to offer volunteers to President Lincoln when civil strife threatened disruption of the Union.

Nowhere in the annals of any war is there a more noble or inspiring example of courage, devotion, and unfaltering loyalty than the brave and successful rush of Colonel Colvill's First Minnesota Volunteers at Gettysburg that stopped Pickett's charge, and without doubt won the battle and probably the Civil War at the sacrifice of 83 per cent of the strength of the regiment.

On every front Minnesotans did their heroic part.

The Thirteenth Minnesota in the Philippines during the war with Spain and subsequent insurrection played a most significant and successful part.

The participation of Minnesota boys in the World War carried on the best traditions and added new glories to an already fine and noble record.

A great many sons of Minnesota gave their lives in that great conflict and lie buried in France, Belgium, and England.

The names, organizations, and grave locations of those brave, courageous youths of Minnesota who made the supreme sacrifice and who forever will sleep in foreign cemeteries near those dread battle fields I wish to make a matter of permanent record. The list has been furnished to me by our very efficient Quartermaster General of the United States Army. The list is as follows:

KEY TO NAMES OF PERMANENT CEMETERIES IN EUROPE

FRANCE

No. 1232. Meuse-Argonne American Cemetery, Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, Meuse.

No. 1764. Aisne-Marne American Cemetery, Belleau, Aisne.

No. 34. Suresnes American Cemetery, Suresnes, Seine (near Paris).

No. 636. Somme American Cemetery, Bony, Aisne.

No. 608. Oise-Aisne American Cemetery, Seringes-et-Nesles, Aisne.

No. 1233. St. Mihiel American Cemetery, Thiaucourt, Meurthe-et-Moselle.

BELGIUM

No. 1252. Flanders Field American Cemetery, Waereghem, Belgium.

ENGLAND

No. 107-E. Brookwood American Cemetery, Brookwood (near London), England.

Deceased soldiers from Minnesota buried in cemeteries in Europe

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
FIRST DIVISION
Bockenhauer, Benj. F.	Pvt. Co. E, 16 Inf.	1232	39	35	A
Carlson, Albert R.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 16 Inf.	1232	13	10	E
Fela, Frank Felix	Pvt. Co. A, 16 Inf.	1233	20	6	B
Goodspeed, Fredk. N.	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Co. 16 Inf.	1232	19	29	C
Kowasewich, Tady	Pvt. Co. M, 16 Inf.	608	29	3	D
Kruger, Ben A.	Pvt. Co. L, 16 Inf.	1232	8	28	B
Petrimean, Geo.	Sgt. Hq. Co., 16 Inf.	1232	29	21	C
Schultz, Tom	Pvt. Co. E, 16 Inf.	608	27	7	C
Stanley, Arthur R.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 16 Inf.	34	30	8	B
Gaylord, Arthur R.	1 lt. Co. I, 18 Inf.	636	1	22	D
Durand, Simson J.	Cp. Co. L, 18 Inf.	608	12	25	A
Hassell, Zolo G.	Sgt. Hq. Co. 18 Inf.	1232	23	1	C
Hoban, Michael	Pvt. Co. C, 18 Inf.	1232	19	31	D
March, Erwin	Cpl. Co. I, 18 Inf.	1233	8	10	B
McCarty, Eugene H.	Pvt. Co. B, 18 Inf.	1232	17	12	F
Keary, David W.	Cpl. Co. E, 18 Inf.	608	20	36	B
Raabe, Theodore E.	Pvt. Co. D, 18 Inf.	1232	9	6	C
Seeland, Albert	Pvt. Co. A, 18 Inf.	1232	4	43	H
Elliott, Clark R.	Lt. col. 26 Inf.	608	16	5	D
Molander, Axel R.	Sgt. Co. H, 26 Inf.	608	10	13	D
Swanson, Paul E.	Pvt. Co. L, 26 Inf.	608	26	29	D
Bertelson, Peter	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 28 Inf.	1232	29	36	D
Frydelund, John O.	Sgt. Co. C, 28 Inf.	608	3	13	A
Hayek, Edward	Cpl. Co. E, 28 Inf.	636	3	15	C
Rosemoen, Theodore	Pvt. Co. B, 28 Inf.	1764	36	5	B
Sager, Frank	Pvt. Co. D, 28 Inf.	608	11	25	D
Schmaal, Arthur	Cpl. Co. M, 28 Inf.	1232	33	24	E
Koth, Christ	Mech. Co. D, 1 Br. M. G. Bn.	636	6	19	C
Frank, Oscar C.	Pvt. Co. C, 2 Br. M. G. Bn.	636	8	16	C
Lande, Armin	Pvt. Co. C, 2 M. G. Bn.	608	34	13	D
Zengel, Geo.	Pvt. Co. A, 2 M. G. Bn.	608	12	9	C
Moberg, Carl E.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 6 F. A.	1232	25	34	C
Cary, Clifford L.	Pvt. Bty. F, 7 F. A.	1232	9	6	D
Keating, Edw. J.	Sgt. 1 Trn. Mtr. Bty.	1233	7	28	D
Smith, Chas. T.	Pvt. Co. A, 2 F. S. Bn.	1233	11	1	C
SECOND DIVISION
Anderson, Ole M.	Pvt. Co. K, 9 Inf.	1232	20	24	A
Arnold, Wm. E.	do.	1232	40	10	F
Beecher, Floyd C.	do.	1232	36	23	A
Gatrell, Clarence R.	Pvt. Co. F, 9 Inf.	608	13	39	D
Greber, Charley	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 9 Inf.	1764	34	10	A
Halvorson, Odean H.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H, 9 Inf.	1232	5	37	A
Hietala, Rudolph	do.	1232	12	30	E
Kath, Louis F. T.	Pvt. Co. D, 9 Inf.	1232	35	12	B
Lee, Harold C.	Cpl. Co. A, 9 Inf.	1764	36	12	A
Sherman, Elmer C.	Pvt. Co. D, 9 Inf.	1232	29	17	H
Vos, Nicholas	Pvt. Co. F, 9 Inf.	1764	62	12	B
Walsh, Leo	do.	1232	17	18	H
Anderson, Wm. J.	Pvt. Co. B, 23 Inf.	1232	26	18	D
Bergen, Geo. E.	Pvt. Co. F, 23 Inf.	1232	32	35	G
Bjornhang, Herman	Cpl. Co. C, 23 Inf.	1233	36	10	B
Earley, Eugene J.	Pvt. Co. F, 23 Inf.	1233	8	3	D
Faike, Harold	Cpl. Co. E, 23 Inf.	608	23	14	D
Flatner, Lawrence M.	Pvt. Co. G, 23 Inf.	1232	32	22	D
Flont, Thos.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 23 Inf.	1232	28	18	A
Hanson, Nick	Pvt. Co. F, 23 Inf.	1233	27	3	B
Ketcham, Arthur	Pvt. Co. I, 23 Inf.	1232	6	13	H
McBride, Leo A.	Pvt. Co. B, 23 Inf.	1764	60	9	B
Sholaas, Hubert R.	Pvt. Co. M, 23 Inf.	1232	8	37	A
Swenson, Harold T.	Cpl. Co. A, 23 Inf.	608	29	32	B
Weisser, Frank R.	Pvt. Co. I, 23 Inf.	1233	19	1	D
Woliscroft, Lewis E.	Pvt. Co. L, 23 Inf.	1232	15	29	E
Zimny, Mike	Pvt. Co. M, 23 Inf.	1232	9	12	C
Ferch, Aaron John	1 lt. 67 Co. 5 Regt. U. S. M. C.	1232	5	35	B
Arneson, Ludwig Oscar	Pvt. 55 Co. 5 Regt. U. S. M. C.	1233	28	27	C
Bergdahl, Carl Frithiof	Cpl. 55 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	32	43	H
Burdick, Edw. Michael	Pvt. 18 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	34	10	3	B
Cobb, Fred W.	Cpl. 49 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	13	22	A
Dingle, Richard Wallace	Pvt. 20 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1764	62	7	B
Donohue, Wm. Alfred	Pvt. 1 cl. 49 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	22	13	F
Duncan, Frank	Cpl. 17 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	22	41	B
Erwin, Jos. A.	Pvt. 17 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	31	28	E

Deceased soldiers from Minnesota buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
SECOND DIVISION—con.
Fischer, Robt. McCauglin.	Cpl. 20 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1764	46	2	A
Hatfield, Harry Stuart	Pvt. 8 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	11	25	E
Kroll, Fred Wm	Pvt. 20 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	14	22	G
MacConnell, Chas. Franklin.	do	1764	89	8	A
McDermott, Edw. John.	do	1233	10	28	C
Meighen, Thos. Virgel	Pvt. 49 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	34	27	7	B
O'Connell, Richard Clement.	Pvt. 55 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	6	17	H
Olson, Chas. Arthur	Pvt. 8 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1233	36	22	B
Reany, Harvey Withrow.	Pvt. 7 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1233	20	8	B
Stenmark, Nelo August	Pvt. 67 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1764	53	1	B
Johnston, Scott Martin.	2 lt. 76 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	34	21	4	B
Adwell, Palmer Alexander.	Pvt. 79 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1764	26	10	A
Ahl, Max Henry	Cpl. 95 Co. 6, Regt., U. S. M. C.	608	6	16	C
Dalquist, Oscar Edw	Pvt. 80 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	608	2	30	B
Farrant, Oliver Chapman.	Sgt. 95 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	34	5	4	C
Haugsten, Nils Olaf	Pvt. 78 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	608	11	37	D
Hart, Herbert LeRoy	Pvt. 96 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	30	15	H
Isaacs, Solomon	do	1764	8	12	B
LaBelle, Clarence Richard.	Pvt. 78 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	38	30	E
Markham, Burt Austin.	Pvt. 80 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1233	28	29	D
Murphy, Michael Jas	Sgt. 97 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	608	14	11	C
Suominen, Tuurie Henry.	Cpl. 75 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1764	43	2	B
Tompkins, Wm	do	1232	7	40	B
Van Camp, Geo. Miller.	Sgt. 97 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	3	13	F
Walling, Arthur Nathaniel.	Pvt. 79 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	19	23	B
Watson, John Howard.	Pvt. 96 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	24	40	D
Williams, Carl Oscar	do	1233	15	22	D
Wisted, David Gilbert.	Pvt. 82 Co. 6 Regt. U. S. M. C.	1764	24	1	A
Peterson, Harold R	Wag. Sup. Co. 4 M. G. Bn.	1233	1	9	B
Carnegie, David	Pvt. 15 Co. 6 M. G. Bn. U. S. M. C.	1232	34	35	H
Hansen, Reuben Edwin	Pvt. 23 Co. 6 M. G. Bn. U. S. M. C.	1232	20	26	B
Bailey, Harold N	Cpl. Bty. A, 15 F. A	1232	37	23	G
McGinnis, John (Miller, John, jr., alias).	Cook Bty. C, 17 F. A	1232	7	36	C
Hankins, Walter	Cpl. Co. A, 2 Engrs	1232	16	15	C
Staton, George L	Wag. Tk. Co. 2 Engrs	608	14	36	A
Nelson, Arthur E	Sgt. 1 cl. Co. C. 1 F. S. Bn.	1764	28	11	B
Allen, Wm. L	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 2 Mil. Pol.	1764	45	8	A
THIRD DIVISION
Mook, Peter	Hrshr. Hq. Tp	1232	11	37	A
Dougherty, Francis E	Capt. Hq. Co. 4 Inf	1232	30	18	H
Klanska, Frederic L	Pvt. Co. F, 4 Inf	1232	38	3	E
Lund, Frank	Pvt. Co. C, 4 Inf	1232	11	28	A
Burelback, Nicholas J	Cpl. Co. C, 7 Inf	1232	6	44	C
Goetz, Helmath A	Pvt. Co. B, 7 Inf	1764	78	1	A
Erickson, Melvin	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 30 Inf	1232	12	34	E
Hardy, Walter	Pvt. Co. K, 30 Inf	1232	16	43	E
Kirkpatrick, Ray	Pvt. Co. M, 30 Inf	1232	10	26	B
Langemo, Nickolaie	do	1232	14	35	G
Layton, Arthur J	Pvt. Co. G, 30 Inf	608	19	34	A
Parker, John P	Pvt. 1 cl. 30 Inf	608	20	2	B
Pickett, Leonard	Pvt. Co. F, 30 Inf	1232	28	14	C
Bangert, Emil H	Pvt. Co. H, 38 Inf	1232	11	15	H
Cross, Chas. O	Pvt. Co. A, 7 M. G. Bn	1764	21	11	A
Neldon, Philip E	Pvt. Co. D, 9 M. G. Bn	608	20	39	A
Olsen, Axel W	Cpl. Co. C, 9 M. G. Bn	1232	37	43	C
Peterson, Leo C	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. B, 10 F. A	1232	37	41	G
Strand, Ola H	do	1232	10	4	D
Simonis, John	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. E, 18 F. A	608	21	19	C
Anderson, Andrew C	Pvt. Bty. B, 76 F. A	1233	11	24	D
Easter, Geo. R., jr	Pvt. Hq. Det. 6 Engrs	1233	31	19	D
Gilkey, Edw. N	Pvt. Co. E, 6 Engrs	1764	16	10	A
Smith, Earl A	Wag. 6 Engrs. Tn	1233	22	18	A
Harris, Wm. Geo	Sgt. M. D. Vet. Field Unit	34	36	2	A
FOURTH DIVISION
Baumann, Walter F	Pvt. Co. B, 39 Inf	1232	8	12	E
Demel, Adolph	Pvt. Co. G, 39 Inf	608	28	22	C
Goltz, Herman F	Cpl. Co. I, 39 Inf	608	22	32	B
Jelk, Arvid J	Pvt. Co. D, 39 Inf	1764	26	6	B
Jenson, Hesley E	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L, 39 Inf	1232	8	26	D
Mellin, Arthur A	Pvt. Co. I, 39 Inf	608	1	12	D
Myhre, Willid P	Pvt. Co. E, 39 Inf	608	22	1	C
Niemozyk, Peter	Pvt. Hq. Co. 39 Inf	1232	26	3	H
Peterson, Carl V	Pvt. Co. I, 39 Inf	608	10	7	D
Roy, Harry	Mech. Co. G, 39 Inf	608	19	12	D
Schreiber, Fred C	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 39 Inf	608	33	17	A
Schwieger, Arnold	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 39 Inf	1232	20	38	F
Wiener, Louis	Pvt. Co. A, 39 Inf	1232	8	1	H

Deceased soldiers from Minnesota buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
FOURTH DIVISION—con.
Arnet, Philip G	Pvt. Co. E, 47 Inf	608	22	6	D
Asmus, Hugo	do	608	14	18	B
Grondal, Magnus	Pvt. Co. C, 47 Inf	608	7	6	B
Hanson, Rubin	Cpl. Co. L, 47 Inf	608	8	8	B
Hansen, Alfred B	Pvt. Co. G, 47 Inf	1232	1	12	A
Hunett, Ray	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L, 47 Inf	608	10	5	B
Johnson, Albin R	Pvt. Co. B, 47 Inf	608	2	8	A
Johnson, Gustaf	do	608	13	31	C
Johnson, Olof M	Pvt. Co. D, 47 Inf	608	30	16	A
Kilen, Thorvald	Pvt. Co. E, 47 Inf	608	35	11	D
Kopple, Julius A	Pvt. Co. M, 47 Inf	608	20	4	C
Keensing, Wm	Pvt. Co. F, 47 Inf	1764	16	8	A
Lamaack, Peter	Pvt. Co. E, 47 Inf	1232	11	7	C
Meyer, Bennie A	Pvt. Co. H, 47 Inf	608	17	7	D
Mullaurt, Emil L	Pvt. Co. G, 47 Inf	608	24	7	B
O'Connell, Cyril J	Pvt. Co. K, 47 Inf	1232	37	23	F
Ofstad, Martin	do	1232	10	6	E
Scalise, Angelo	Pvt. Co. K, 47 Inf	608	18	5	A
Simon, Carl	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 47 Inf	1232	5	15	H
Skogen, Halyard H	Pvt. Co. K, 47 Inf	1764	3	4	B
Smith, Leon N	Pvt. Co. L, 47 Inf	608	6	8	A
Trebesch, Albert	Pvt. Co. I, 47 Inf	608	8	9	A
VonBeheen, Fredk	Pvt. Co. F, 47 Inf	608	6	37	B
Wright, Clarence O	Pvt. Co. M, 47 Inf	608	4	9	A
Adamson, Robt. L	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 58 Inf	1764	38	2	B
Anderson, Alfred W	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Co., 58 Inf	1232	7	25	F
Anderson, Nels	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 58 Inf	608	17	34	D
Burwan, Andro	do	608	3	12	D
Callawaert, Alberis	Pvt. Hq. Co., 58 Inf	1232	4	21	H
Das, Henry	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 58 Inf	1764	17	2	A
Daskam, Melvin W	Pvt. Co. B, 58 Inf	608	6	24	C
Defoe, Peter	Pvt. Hq. Co., 58 Inf	1232	24	21	C
Fisher, John	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 58 Inf	1232	33	15	H
Gear, John	Pvt. Co. F, 58 Inf	1232	37	28	E
Giantvalley, Vincent L	Cpl. Co. E, 58 Inf	1764	18	1	A
Gourd, Charley	Cpl. Co. C, 58 Inf	1232	17	6	H
Gustafson, Herman F	Pvt. Co. B, 58 Inf	608	38	24	A
Heppner, Jacob G	Pvt. Co. H, 58 Inf	1232	8	6	F
Johnson, Victor	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H, 58 Inf	1232	31	31	B
Lamb, Ralph	Pvt. Co. D, 58 Inf	608	27	28	C
Lancello, John A	Pvt. Co. E, 58 Inf	608	10	28	C
Lee, Otto	Cpl. Co. A, 58 Inf	1232	28	25	E
Maleski, Anton	Cpl. Co. E, 58 Inf	1764	41	12	A
Marquardt, Geo	Pvt. 1 cl. M. G. Co., 58 Inf.	608	10	11	D
Narzee, Stanley	Pvt. Co. D, 58 Inf	608	29	2	C
Nelhein, Lars L	Pvt. Co. K, 58 Inf	1764	70	6	A
Nilsson, John	Pvt. Co. E, 58 Inf	1764	32	2	B
Olson, Carl	do	608	20	19	C
Peterson, Axel J	Pvt. Co. K, 58 Inf	608	15	11	D
Pordum, Harry E	Pvt. Co. C, 58 Inf	608	14	12	C
Trenda, John M	Pvt. Co. B, 58 Inf	608	32	18	B
Lane, Melvin L	Pvt. Co. D, 59 Inf	1764	55	13	A
Morgenthaler, Anton	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 59 Inf	1764	73	4	A
Peterson, Thorwald	Sgt. Hq. Co. 59 Inf	1232	29	26	G
Reece, Herbert R	Cpl. Co. I, 59 Inf	1232	14	6	F
Sunfict, Martin	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L, 59 Inf	1764	90	8	A
Swift, Robt. J	Pvt. Co. F, 59 Inf	1232	23	40	C
Floding, Edw. W	Pvt. Co. C, 11 M. C. Bn	1232	30	17	G
Olson, Arthur J	Pvt. Co. C, 12 M. G. Bn	1233	26	19	A
FIFTH DIVISION
Jans, Max T	Pvt. Co. L, 6 Inf	1232	14	19	F
Johnson, Arngrim J	do	1232	10	44	D
Othoudt, Lester	do	1232	19	8	D
Perrizo, Frank D	Pvt. Co. E, 6 Inf	1232	31	16	F
Ployhart, Martin A	do	1232	16	22	F
Gorgoschilitz, Jacob J	Sgt. Co. K, 11 Inf	1233	2	14	D
Frame, Esery L	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L, 61 Inf	1233	17	12	D
Viall, Frank C	Wag. Sup. Co. 61 Inf	1232	13	17	A
Christopher, John W	Sadlr. Co. A, 7 Engrs	1233	13	19	D
Wene, Aino	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 7 Engrs	1232	30	14	A
Graves, Irving L	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 9 F. S. Bn	1232	16	7	A
Nelson, Lloyd O	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 9 F. S. Bn	1233	2	25	B
SIXTH DIVISION
Brooks, Leo A	Pvt. Co. K, 53 Inf	1232	35	12	H
Hellerud, Benneth	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H, 53 Inf	1232	23	35	D
Kaplon, David	Pvt. Co. F, 53 Inf	1232	37	16	F
Klaudinger, John L	Pvt. Co. E, 53 Inf	1232	13	37	C
Pedersen, Hans W	Cpl. Hq. Co. 53 Inf	1233	29	1	A
Peterson, Albert E	Pvt. Co. D, 53 Inf	1232	8	16	F
Pitich, Johan	Pvt. Co. M, 53 Inf	1232	17	10	D
Holanbeck, Theodore F	Pvt. Co. E, 53 Inf	1232	27	42	B
Veit, Willie J	Pvt. Co. D, 53 Inf	1232	39	34	C
Suren, Frank J	Pvt. Co. B, 18 M. G. Bn	1232	10	10	F
SEVENTH DIVISION
Dubinsky, John	Pvt. Co. M, 34 Inf	1233	36	14	D
Hall, Andrew O	Pvt. Co. A, 55 Inf	1233	26	12	D
Erickson, Axel T	Pvt. Co. G, 56 Inf	1233	11	7	C
Franklin, Walter H	Cpl. Co. B, 56 Inf	1232	14	27	D
Mittet, Alex	Pvt. Co. E, 56 Inf	1233	20	29	D
Odegard, Swan	Pvt. Co. G, 56 Inf	1233	14	10	B
Olsen, Sigurd	Pvt. Co. I, 56 Inf	1233	18	28	D
Larson, Curty G	Pvt. Co. M, 64 Inf	1233	4	5	A
Eggen, Richard	Pvt. Co. E, 5 Engrs	1233	25	29	C
TWENTY-SIXTH DIVISION
Born, Edward	Pvt. Co. E, 101 Inf	1232	36	38	G
Baumann, Albert B	Pvt. Co. A, 102 Inf	1233	32	7	D
Frederiksen August C	do	1233	8	29	C
Kladt, Einard T	Pvt. Hq. Co., 102 Inf	34	17	11	A
Peterson, Gust A	Pvt. Co. A, 102 Inf	1232	3	12	H
Shanesy, Walter J	Pvt. Co. E, 103 Inf	1232	6	19	E
Mohr, Wm. J	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 104 Inf	1232	34	20	G
Brown, Wallace O	Pvt. Bty. B, 102 F. A	1233	31	21	C
Whiting, Robt	Pvt. Bty. E, 102 F. A	1233	31	21	B

Deceased soldiers from Minnesota buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
TWENTY-EIGHTH DIVISION
Pusari, Otto	Pvt. Hdqrs	34	31	6	B
Adams, Wm. H	Pvt. Co. F, 109 Inf	1232	12	36	D
Anderson, Allen V	Pvt. Co. G, 109 Inf	1232	32	9	C
Bartel, Otto G. A	Pvt. Co. F, 109 Inf	1232	19	44	B
Christiansen, Jons	Pvt. Co. A, 109 Inf	1232	4	36	B
Degenza, Rocco	Pvt. Co. B, 109 Inf	1232	19	2	D
Erickson, Jonas M	Pvt. Co. A, 109 Inf	608	9	34	D
Hewins, Jas. G	do	1233	35	5	C
Lampi, Svante	Pvt. Co. H, 109 Inf	1232	37	35	B
Loiso, Victor	Pvt. Hdqrs	1232	33	45	A
Moen, Sever	Pvt. Co. E, 109 Inf	1232	2	6	F
Oberg, Olof J	Pvt. Co. A, 109 Inf	1232	40	22	H
Pomponio, Giambuttista	do	1233	31	2	C
Templeton, Jas. A	Pvt. M. G. Co., 109 Inf	1232	12	35	B
Volavka, Henry	Pvt. Co. L, 109 Inf	608	7	18	B
Dommer, John F	Pvt. Co. F, 110 Inf	1232	19	20	B
Regelking, Elwell G	Pvt. Hq. Co., 110 Inf	1232	3	33	G
Haugen, Kjalmar	Pvt. Co. G, 110 Inf	1232	20	30	A
Anderson, Otto A	Pvt. M. G. Co., 111 Inf	1233	29	22	D
Bakken, John S	Pvt. Co. H, 111 Inf	1232	30	40	C
Bartelt, Rudolph T	do	1232	21	12	E
Boomgarden, Kelly	Pvt. Co. E, 111 Inf	1232	9	17	E
Burns, Mike V	Pvt. Co. H, 111 Inf	1232	31	27	C
Hermann, Philip	do	1232	11	24	D
Miller, Raney	Pvt. Co. C, 111 Inf	1233	30	26	C
Schuetz, Paul R	Pvt. Co. F, 111 Inf	1233	19	6	D
Schulz, Martin Joe. T	do	1233	35	14	D
Shelley, Howard C	do	1232	25	28	C
Ternes, John	Pvt. Co. C, 111 Inf	1232	36	34	F
Sorenson, Stefanus	Pvt. Co. B, 112 Inf	1233	18	16	B
TWENTY-NINTH DIVISION
Fallon, Hubert	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 114 Inf	1232	34	3	B
Werner, Mathias	Pvt. Co. L, 115 Inf	1232	17	7	F
Widislauckis, Jos	Pvt. Co. C, 115 Inf	1232	13	35	E
THIRTIETH DIVISION
Fischer, John	Pvt. Co. L, 117 Inf	636	15	11	B
Hendricks, Robt. T	Pvt. Co. A, 117 Inf	636	1	33	A
Nys, Leon J	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L, 117 Inf	636	12	24	A
Peterson, Henry B	Pvt. Co. M, 117 Inf	608	7	39	D
Quamme, Albert O	Pvt. Co. F, 117 Inf	636	15	8	A
Schultz, Charley E	Pvt. Co. A, 117 Inf	636	12	14	A
Sorum, Adolph M	Pvt. Co. H, 117 Inf	636	10	8	C
Aldrich, Grover C	Pvt. Co. M, 118 Inf	636	14	6	C
Connelly, Wm. F	Pvt. Co. K, 118 Inf	636	3	34	A
Hegland, Bernhard	Pvt. Co. F, 118 Inf	636	11	5	D
Jacobson, Edwin	Pvt. Co. I, 118 Inf	636	15	23	A
Kiesel, Louis N	Pvt. Co. F, 118 Inf	636	4	20	A
Martin, Miles H	Pvt. Co. D, 118 Inf	636	15	17	B
Moe, Carl N	do	636	1	11	D
Nelsen, Christian	Pvt. Co. I, 118 Inf	636	1	14	A
Reioux, Leo O	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 118 Inf	636	15	24	E
Ridenour, Warren H	Pvt. Co. H, 118 Inf	636	3	34	B
Thompson, Arthur A	Pvt. Co. C, 118 Inf	636	10	14	D
Weagel, Ralph J	Pvt. Hq. Co. 118 Inf	636	3	12	A
Whalen, Ray T	Pvt. Co. L, 118 Inf	636	7	14	A
Engelbart, Irving B	Cpl. Co. B, 119 Inf	636	10	15	A
Groskrentz, Wm. E	Pvt. Co. K, 119 Inf	636	12	34	B
Jensen, Conrad G	Pvt. Co. F, 119 Inf	636	12	1	B
Ross, Wendell A	Pvt. Co. M, 119 Inf	1252	8	2	B
Schraheck, Ole S	Pvt. Co. A, 119 Inf	636	8	29	A
Shodall, Enoch	Cpl. Co. F, 119 Inf	636	16	22	A
Thomason, Soloman L	Pvt. Co. C, 119 Inf	636	5	8	C
THIRTY-SECOND DIVISION
Bach, Jos. E	Pvt. Co. M, 125 Inf	1232	19	34	H
Boor, Wm. P	Pvt. Co. E, 125 Inf	1232	9	44	A
Carvounis, Jas. J	Pvt. Co. M, 125 Inf	1232	4	35	G
Distler, Geo. A	Pvt. Co. E, 125 Inf	608	10	29	C
Johnson, Andrew M	Pvt. Co. L, 125 Inf	1232	26	19	G
Johnson, Cecil A	Pvt. Hq. Co. 123 Inf	1232	25	36	C
Kimbel, Ray J	Sgt. Co. E, 125 Inf	1232	3	44	A
Lyngen, Geo. H	Pvt. Co. K, 125 Inf	1232	9	13	A
Olson, Chester N	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 125 Inf	608	21	8	A
Olsson, Herbert T	Pvt. Co. K, 125 Inf	608	37	36	D
St. Anthony, Frank	Pvt. Co. F, 125 Inf	608	13	16	D
Trautman, Otto	Pvt. Co. M, 125 Inf	1232	5	6	H
Vasilion, Haralobos	do	1232	10	22	D
Lade, Arthur	Pvt. Co. B, 126 Inf	1232	22	22	D
Lea, Martin	Pvt. Co. I, 126 Inf	608	3	37	B
Leslie, Martin O	Cpl. Co. B, 126 Inf	1232	36	19	D
Lund, Otto T	Pvt. Co. M, 126 Inf	608	23	11	B
Mather, Harry	Pvt. Co. D, 125 Inf	1232	30	6	A
Barteit, Ernest	Pvt. Co. H, 127 Inf	1232	28	26	B
Dally, Theodore J	Pvt. Co. E, 127 Inf	1232	33	22	A
Diamond, Jack	do	1232	30	45	C
Frahman, John	Pvt. Co. D, 127 Inf	1232	3	24	F
Gosswiller, Robt. C	Pvt. Co. I, 127 Inf	1232	10	4	E
Grugel, Mike	Pvt. Co. F, 127 Inf	1232	11	35	A
Hagen, Geo. C	Pvt. Co. D, 127 Inf	1232	25	17	E
Hoihjelie, Ole L	Cpl. Co. B, 127 Inf	1232	9	32	D
Janke, Otto A. W	Pvt. Co. D, 127 Inf	1232	28	36	H
Kartiak, Martin	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 127 Inf	1232	9	32	B
Kelly, Julius J	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 127 Inf	34	24	1	B
Miganovich, Blazo M	Pvt. Co. E, 127 Inf	1233	18	11	B
Ansems, Thos	Pvt. Co. E, 128 Inf	1232	40	20	A
Ball, Glenn J	Pvt. Co. G, 128 Inf	34	11	8	B
Bebier, Jas. J	Pvt. Co. D, 128 Inf	1232	35	31	H
Bjorbeck, Lars	Pvt. Co. G, 128 Inf	1232	28	34	B
Bruno, Peter	Pvt. Co. E, 128 Inf	1232	34	20	A
Eastlund, Ole A	do	1232	17	2	E
Erickson, Jens M	Pvt. Co. G, 128 Inf	1232	19	15	C
Gjerue, Almer E	Pvt. Co. E, 128 Inf	1232	38	17	K

Deceased soldiers from Minnesota buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
THIRTY-SECOND DIVISION—continued
Hadtrath, Byron J	Pvt. Co. C, 128 Inf	1232	4	25	D
Haugen, Emil	Pvt. Co. F, 128 Inf	1232	34	7	B
Hesdal, Michael	Pvt. Co. M, 128 Inf	1232	3	37	E
Hougard, Sam R	Pvt. Co. C, 128 Inf	1232	8	37	G
Jensen, Emil A	Pvt. Co. A, 128 Inf	1232	16	38	G
LeBuda, Emil	Pvt. Co. C, 128 Inf	1232	7	38	D
Novack, Fred C	Pvt. Co. H, 128 Inf	1232	7	11	F
Petersen, Ernst A	do	1232	34	38	G
Svenkeson, Geo	Pvt. Co. G, 128 Inf	1232	36	20	A
Young, Linsley A	Pvt. Co. B, 128 Inf	1232	11	8	C
Polubitz, Wyllem F	Pvt. Co. F, 107 Amm. Tn	1232	34	28	D
THIRTY-THIRD DIVISION
Besonowich, Rada	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 129 Inf	1232	1	20	F
Chamberlain, Alphonso A	Pvt. Co. C, 129 Inf	1232	35	40	G
Eisel, Matte	Pvt. Co. G, 129 Inf	1232	33	30	A
Servid, Leo	Pvt. Co. A, 129 Inf	608	6	19	B
Paddock, Bernard J	Pvt. Co. D, 130 Inf	1232	16	32	C
Fredrickson, Hildor	do	1233	2	22	B
Jensen, Waldemar	do	1232	31	30	C
Johnson, Ernest B	Pvt. Co. K, 130 Inf	1232	20	41	C
Johnson, Walter E	Pvt. Co. B, 130 Inf	34	17	2	B
Knutson, Albert	Pvt. Co. C, 130 Inf	1232	13	41	B
Schue, Daniel I	Pvt. Co. I, 130 Inf	1232	31	16	B
Thompson, Oscar L	Pvt. Co. H, 130 Inf	1233	27	15	D
Haessly, Harry J	Pvt. Co. C, 131 Inf	636	7	25	C
Haugrud, Oscar O	Pvt. Co. K, 131 Inf	636	16	17	C
Howe, Earl J	Pvt. Co. D, 131 Inf	1232	7	8	A
Kyle, Cecil F	Sgt. Co. B, 131 Inf	1232	31	20	G
Lampo, Edw. M	Pvt. Co. D, 131 Inf	1232	37	28	A
Larson, Benmote O	Pvt. Co. K, 131 Inf	1232	9	4	B
Loken, John	do	1232	9	28	H
Rinnick, Harold C	Pvt. Co. G, 131 Inf	636	4	18	D
Olson, Walter A	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 131 Inf	1232	27	9	F
Week, Alfred	Pvt. Co. H, 131 Inf	636	4	19	C
Barstad, John M	Pvt. Co. F, 132 Inf	1232	22	9	C
Butler, David W	Pvt. Co. H, 132 Inf	1232	17	7	B
Lindbloom, Gustave	Pvt. Co. D, 132 Inf	1232	11	33	A
O'Brien, Jas	Pvt. Co. H, 132 Inf	1232	18	39	A
Olson, Emil J	Pvt. Co. I, 132 Inf	1233	16	1	C
Poston, Geo. S	Pvt. Co. L, 132 Inf	1232	10	27	F
Romsos, Anton	Pvt. Co. H, 132 Inf	636	5	19	D
Scherrpa, Felix	Pvt. Co. M, 132 Inf	1232	7	36	B
Swanson, Carl E	Pvt. Co. K, 132 Inf	1232	14	42	A
Wold, Melvin	Pvt. Co. F, 132 Inf	1232	18	1	B
Anderson, Wm	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 124 M. G. Bn.	1233	31	15	D
Carlson, Alex	Pvt. Co. E, 137 Inf	1233	5	21	A
Casebeer, Fred	do	1232	34	39	H
Larson, John F. L	do	608	23	36	A
Nordin, Edw. C	Pvt. Co. B, 137 Inf	1232	10	34	A
Orlandech, John	Pvt. Co. M, 137 Inf	1252	17	34	F
Tibbling, Reuben O	Pvt. Co. A, 137 Inf	1232	7	33	D
Zimmer, Ernest W	do	1232	30	20	C
Anderson, Nels L	Pvt. Co. I, 138 Inf	1232	36	12	C
Davis, Bernard F	do	1232	6	16	C
Dworsky, Edw. J	Pvt. Co. G, 138 Inf	608	29	38	B
Machovec, Leo R	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 138 Inf	1233	18	8	C
Roth, Chas. J	Sgt. Co. F, 138 Inf	1232	34	26	G
Swanson, Chas	Pvt. Co. I, 138 Inf	1232	23	43	F
Wolbeck, Frank	do	1232	17	1	E
Ahl, Gust E	Pvt. Co. B, 139 Inf	1232	37	15	D
Bonnes, Olof E	Pvt. Co. D, 139 Inf	1232	34	25	B
Dale, Martin H	Pvt. Co. E, 139 Inf	1232	19	13	C
Gustafson, David A	Pvt. Co. K, 139 Inf	1232	30	15	C
Hill, Wm. C	Pvt. Co. C, 139 Inf	1232	20	6	C
Johnson, Geo. C	Pvt. M. G. Co., 139 Inf	1233	20	8	C
McCaffrey, John F	do	1233	20	20	C
Nagel, Albert L	Pvt. Co. E, 139 Inf	1232	23	33	C
Oswald, Wm. M	do	1232	38	33	C
Qual, Robt	Pvt. Co. F, 139 Inf	1232	26	7	E
Sharkey, Wm. J	Pvt. Co. M, 139 Inf	1232	3	10	H
Steber, Louis E	Pvt. Co. I, 139 Inf	636	3	11	B
Stowers, Walter C	Pvt. Co. D, 139 Inf	1232	17	38	E
Svenson, Wilhelm	do	1232	7	23	D
Welliver, Delbert M	Pvt. Co. F, 139 Inf	1232	4	7	H
Beall, Cambridge G	Pvt. Co. A, 140 Inf	1232	2	12	C
Runnie, Clarence R	Pvt. Co. G, 140 Inf	1232	18	6	C
Solvskar, Toryus	Pvt. Co. I, 140 Inf	1233	6	23	D
THIRTY-SIXTH DIVISION
Peterson, Oscar E	Pvt. Co. F, 144 Inf	1233	5	4	A
THIRTY-SEVENTH DIVISION
Fossum, Wm. T	Pvt. Co. M, 148 Inf	1252	15	2	A
Fruth, Norbeth L	Pvt. Co. F, 148 Inf	1252	14	4	D
Huovinen, Jacob	Pvt. Co. L, 148 Inf	1252	12	2	A
Iverson, John	Pvt. Co. B, 148 Inf	1252	13	4	D
Johnson, Axel B	Pvt. Co. G, 148 Inf	1252	18	1	C
Norrs, Marius	Pvt. Co. I, 148 Inf	1233	4	21	D
Perone, John	Pvt. Co. B, 148 Inf	1252	12	1	A
Taberman, Arthur J	Pvt. Co. M, 148 Inf	636	3	3	A
Wilson, John L	do	1252	19	1	A
Wold, John	Pvt. Co. K, 148 Inf	1252	19	4	D
Fladhammer, Alfred	Pvt. Co. B, 136 M. G. Bn	1233	31	25	D
THIRTY-NINTH DIVISION
Heim, Harry R	1 lt. Co. A, 114 Engrs	1233	18	5	A
FORTIETH DIVISION
Fraser, Arthur D	Pvt. Co. M, 157 Inf	1233	11	20	A
Lahti, Wm. H	Pvt. Co. L, 159 Inf	1233	3	4	C

Deceased soldiers from Minnesota buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
FORTY-FIRST DIVISION
Chatterton, Charlie H.	Sgt. Co. E, 163 Inf.	608	21	12	A
Ryan, Timothy F.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty F, 148 F. A.	608	19	29	B
Shannon, Robt. J.	Pvt. Co. K, 116 Engrs.	608	28	30	B
FORTY-SECOND DIVISION
Borgen, Andrew E.	Pvt. Co. A, 165 Inf.	1232	31	36	H
Dell, Elmer J.	do	1232	33	35	F
Hogan, Harold J.	Pvt. Co. C, 165 Inf.	1232	5	31	B
Jeno, Wilfred	Pvt. Co. A, 165 Inf.	608	14	1	B
Johnson, Geo. A.	do	608	34	13	C
Kennedy, Geo. F.	do	1232	39	32	E
Moreau, Louis E.	Pvt. Co. F, 165 Inf.	608	6	8	B
Novak, Frank L.	do	608	12	12	B
Smith, Geo. L.	Pvt. Co. H, 165 Inf.	608	6	9	B
Collins, Roy E.	Pvt. Co. M, 166 Inf.	1232	38	29	B
Fox, Jos. F.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G, 166 Inf.	1232	24	33	E
Hanson, Roy L.	do	1764	66	8	A
Johnson, Ingbert M.	Pvt. Co. L, 166 Inf.	608	15	8	A
Lampert, Robt. A.	Pvt. Co. G, 166 Inf.	608	4	9	B
Hosher, Jos. A.	Pvt. Co. H, 166 Inf.	608	10	1	B
Hebert, Earl B.	Pvt. Co. M, 168 Inf.	1232	25	15	H
Allie, Francis	Pvt. Co. B, 151 F. A.	1764	23	7	A
Buckley, Walter H.	Cpl. Co. E, 151 F. A.	608	22	16	C
Christie, John S.	Sgt. Co. C, 151 F. A.	1232	40	14	D
Laidlaw, Wm.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 151 F. A.	1232	22	11	H
Lorenz, Grant W.	Pvt. M. D. 151 F. A.	608	25	25	A
McArthur, Chas. L.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 151 F. A.	1232	7	30	C
Nelson, Lester N.	Pvt. Hq. Co. 151 F. A.	1232	37	5	H
York, Guy E.	Cpl. Co. E, 151 F. A.	1232	9	45	D
SEVENTY-SIXTH DIVISION
Simmons, Jedediah R.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. A, 303 F. A.	1233	15	14	D
SEVENTY-SEVENTH DIVISION
Arkman, Frank	Pvt. Co. L, 305 Inf.	1232	28	32	F
Larson, Martin	do	1232	4	16	C
Lucma, Sam	do	1232	19	9	F
Lund, Soren	Pvt. Co. M, 305 Inf.	1232	38	20	D
Hanson, Alfred M.	Pvt. Co. D, 306 Inf.	1232	14	26	G
Hughes, Peter E.	Pvt. Co. L, 306 Inf.	1232	40	6	C
McCarty, Howard T.	Pvt. Co. G, 306 Inf.	1232	6	14	E
Robinson, Chas. A.	Pvt. Co. K, 306 Inf.	1232	37	11	H
Anderson, Oscar P.	Pvt. Co. C, 307 Inf.	1232	13	34	H
Davis, Ephraim J.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 307 Inf.	608	30	5	C
Haug, Gunder	Pvt. Co. E, 307 Inf.	1764	35	12	B
Hendrickson, Alfred J.	Pvt. Co. K, 307 Inf.	1233	18	22	B
Johnson, Johan A.	Pvt. Co. H, 307 Inf.	1232	7	19	H
Kobernat, Jas. E.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 307 Inf.	1232	21	18	B
Larson, Henry	Pvt. Co. L, 307 Inf.	608	6	39	D
Lekan, Mike	Wag. Co. K, 307 Inf.	1232	39	2	B
Leyendecker, Thos.	Pvt. Co. L, 307 Inf.	1232	21	2	D
Olsen, Hans H. E.	Pvt. Co. A, 307 Inf.	1232	4	34	D
Oselius, Hjalmar J.	Pvt. Co. L, 307 Inf.	1232	39	5	H
Palmer, Albin F.	Pvt. Co. H, 307 Inf.	1232	28	32	H
Skogen, Edwin B.	Pvt. Co. L, 307 Inf.	1232	38	6	H
Steiner, Albert C.	Pvt. Co. E, 307 Inf.	1232	38	3	F
Stender, John H.	Pvt. Co. D, 307 Inf.	1232	35	34	B
Swenson, Horace A.	Pvt. Co. C, 307 Inf.	1232	5	32	H
Artwine, Joe	Pvt. Co. K, 308 Inf.	1232	25	14	H
Bakker, Dick W.	Pvt. Co. E, 308 Inf.	1232	5	16	B
Blackwood, Robt.	Pvt. Co. K, 308 Inf.	608	13	15	D
Buth, Harry O.	Pvt. Co. H, 308 Inf.	1232	34	2	B
Evenson, Ed.	Pvt. Co. M, 308 Inf.	1232	30	29	E
Hanson, Theodore	Pvt. Co. H, 308 Inf.	1232	35	8	B
Manthey, Albert M. S.	Pvt. M. G. Co., 308 Inf.	1232	16	26	B
Matejcek, Hugo W.	Pvt. Co. D, 308 Inf.	1232	38	16	H
Mattson, Wm.	Pvt. Co. E, 308 Inf.	1232	40	23	B
Osttun, Conrad N.	Pvt. Co. K, 308 Inf.	608	27	20	A
Otto, Herman A.	Pvt. Co. I, 308 Inf.	1232	19	1	A
Rehmann, Albert	do	1232	30	5	H
Richardson, John W.	do	1232	8	27	G
Roddewig, John	Pvt. Co. D, 308 Inf.	1232	38	27	D
Rye, Robt. J.	Pvt. Co. M, 308 Inf.	1232	36	27	D
Spiettstoszer, Ferdinand A.	Pvt. Co. K, 308 Inf.	1232	4	40	H
Styczynski, Jos.	Pvt. Co. A, 308 Inf.	1232	31	1	G
Tollefson, Theodore	Pvt. Hq. Co., 308 Inf.	1232	34	9	B
Gaughn, Thos. J.	Pvt. Bty. C, 304 F. A.	608	9	25	C
Olson, Eric	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. C, 304 F. A.	608	19	5	C
Peeha, Gust	Pvt. Hq. Co., 304 F. A.	1232	15	21	D
Pierson, Owen C.	Pvt. Bty. C, 304 F. A.	608	17	13	A
Swenson, Walter R.	Pvt. Bty. F, 304 F. A.	608	25	10	D
Toliefson, Herman P.	Pvt. Bty. C, 304 F. A.	1233	20	20	B
Aasgaard, Almer M.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 305 F. A.	608	11	7	D
Jackson, Jackob E.	Wag. Sup. Co., 305 F. A.	608	19	7	D
Lindblom, Henry	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. E, 306 F. A.	1232	19	23	D
Pederson, Johnny	Pvt. 302 Trn. Mts. Bty.	1233	32	24	A
Polidori, Nono	do	608	13	10	C
Geer, Samuel	Pvt. Co. C, 302 Engrs.	1252	8	31	E
SEVENTY-EIGHTH DIVISION
Appelen, Ernest	Pvt. Co. B, 309 Inf.	1232	14	26	B
Gardewine, Raymond	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 309 Inf.	1232	26	23	C
Johnson, Knute S.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 309 Inf.	1232	35	15	B
Kelash, Frank	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 309 Inf.	1232	18	17	B
Lundstrom, Charlie	Pvt. Co. E, 309 Inf.	1232	39	1	A
Michalski, Wm.	Pvt. Co. D, 309 Inf.	1232	33	14	B
Peterson, Oscar E.	Pvt. Co. F, 309 Inf.	1232	31	15	B
Peterson, Walter	Pvt. Co. I, 309 Inf.	1232	31	32	G
Stone, Kendall P.	Pvt. Co. K, 309 Inf.	1764	39	11	B
Viken, Jos. A.	Pvt. Co. F, 309 Inf.	1233	22	1	C

Deceased soldiers from Minnesota buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
SEVENTY-EIGHTH DIVISION—continued
Woebkenberg, Fred	Cpl. Co. D, 309 Inf.	1232	33	13	A
Youngberg, Henry W.	Pvt. Co. M, 309 Inf.	1232	18	27	B
Albertson, Carl O.	Pvt. Co. M, 310 Inf.	1232	21	8	B
Johnson, Frank F.	Pvt. Co. K, 310 Inf.	1232	17	19	D
Larson, Norman	Pvt. Co. I, 310 Inf.	1232	16	11	E
Robertson, Albert C.	Pvt. Co. D, 310 Inf.	1232	38	7	A
Snell, Stephen	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 310 Inf.	1232	17	11	G
Unger, Ernest	Pvt. Co. C, 310 Inf.	1232	11	42	F
Zimmerman, Edw. Geo.	Pvt. Co. A, 310 Inf.	1232	38	10	B
Cantu, Peter Edw.	Pvt. Co. B, 311 Inf.	1232	40	14	F
Foss, Harry A.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 311 Inf.	1232	33	16	B
Joyce, Thos. J.	Pvt. Co. I, 311 Inf.	1232	5	26	C
Nomeland, Jim J.	Pvt. Co. D, 311 Inf.	1232	21	9	B
Ongstad, Henry T.	Pvt. Co. A, 311 Inf.	1232	35	2	B
Anderson, Alfred A.	Pvt. Co. A, 312 Inf.	1232	38	28	B
Baker, John T.	do	1232	5	12	E
Kramer, Julius J.	Pvt. Co. F, 312 Inf.	1232	22	32	E
Nassen, Ernest C.	Pvt. Co. I, 312 Inf.	1232	38	25	F
Nelson, Hans	Pvt. Co. M, 312 Inf.	1233	29	2	B
Senkyr, Frank G.	Pvt. Co. D, 312 Inf.	1232	38	13	C
King, Emil	1 lt. 303 San. Tn.	1233	14	7	B
Mann, Wm. P.	Pvt. Co. K, 315 Inf.	1232	8	34	E
Petersen, Harold	Cpl. Co. B, 304 F. S. Bn.	1233	22	9	B
Peterson, Henning O.	Pvt. Co. C, 304 F. S. Bn.	1232	11	25	C
EIGHTIETH DIVISION
Berglin, John E.	Pvt. Co. C, 317 Inf.	1232	17	24	G
Strand, John B.	Pvt. Co. K, 317 Inf.	1232	1	8	D
Nelson, Axel Emanuel.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H, 320 Inf.	1233	17	5	B
EIGHTY-FIRST DIVISION
Lohrke, Herman	Pvt. Co. K, 321 Inf.	1232	26	23	F
Swanman, Leslie S.	Pvt. Co. A, 324 Inf.	1232	39	42	A
Swanson, Edw. B.	do	1233	29	24	D
EIGHTY-SECOND DIVISION
Burud, Charley B.	Pvt. Co. F, 325 Inf.	1232	30	24	C
Frondal, Gilbert	Pvt. Co. I, 325 Inf.	1232	20	5	E
Hendershot, Louis H.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 325 Inf.	1233	19	13	B
Henkemeyer, John G.	Pvt. Co. D, 325 Inf.	1232	5	15	G
Miennert, Frank A.	Pvt. Co. L, 325 Inf.	1232	10	5	E
Reed, Allan G.	Pvt. Co. D, 325 Inf.	1232	26	4	E
Wachholz, Herman C.	Pvt. Co. A, 325 Inf.	1232	36	12	B
Courbot, Leon E.	Pvt. Co. C, 325 Inf.	1232	1	12	E
Hannula, John	Pvt. Co. G, 326 Inf.	1233	5	8	C
Hendrickson, Otto	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 326 Inf.	1232	38	8	H
Jendro, Paul	Pvt. Co. K, 326 Inf.	1232	19	19	C
Johnson, Andrew T.	Pvt. Co. E, 326 Inf.	1232	6	9	E
Bohis, John F.	Sgt. Co. A, 327 Inf.	1232	10	27	C
Johnson, Oscar	Pvt. Co. A, 327 Inf.	1252	1	9	E
Latendresse, Albert P.	do	1232	25	9	C
Lundberg, Frank H.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 327 Inf.	1233	32	11	D
Myhre, Melvin	Pvt. Co. M, 327 Inf.	1232	26	8	B
Olson, Olaf	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 327 Inf.	1233	14	10	D
Buens, Thos. M.	Pvt. Co. M, 328 Inf.	1232	9	36	F
Impola, John W.	Pvt. Co. L, 328 Inf.	1232	26	16	G
Martinson, Albert	Cpl. Co. B, 328 Inf.	1232	4	12	D
Peteruka, Elia	Pvt. Co. E, 328 Inf.	1232	27	42	F
Phillips, Nick M.	do	1232	6	10	H
Richter, Fred	Pvt. Co. C, 328 Inf.	1232	32	27	E
Tygus, Gustave	Cpl. Co. C, 328 Inf.	1232	7	7	C
Nielsen, Adolph M.	Pvt. Co. B, 319 M. G. Bn.	1233	7	19	A
Nissen, John A.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 320 M. G. Bn.	34	32	7	A
Peterson, Wm. F.	Pvt. Co. A, 320 M. G. Bn.	1232	19	32	C
Fossum, Binar	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 307 Engrs.	1232	13	10	C
Hendricks, Gordon S.	Wag. Co. B, 307 Amm. Tn.	1233	20	19	B
EIGHTY-THIRD DIVISION
Keller, Roy H.	Pvt. Co. C, 323 M. G. Bn.	608	17	27	D
EIGHTY-FOURTH DIVISION
Paulson, Helmer	Pvt. Co. E, 336 Inf.	107-E	8	1	D
Moe, Emil	Pvt. Co. A, 326 M. G. Bn.	608	3	27	B
EIGHTY-SIXTH DIVISION
Anderson, Axel G.	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Co. 341 Inf.	34	24	2	A
Diederichs, Carl	Pvt. Co. A, 341 Inf.	34	35	3	A
Knaus, Jos.	Pvt. Co. C, 341 Inf.	34	9	22	A
Lee, Helmer	Pvt. Co. L, 341 Inf.	34	31	14	A
Aussant, Chas.	Pvt. Co. B, 342 Inf.	34	14	20	A
Knaus, Ludwig Godfrey	Pvt. M. G. Co. 342 Inf.	107-E	12	2	B
McDunn, Giles B.	Pvt. Co. A, 342 Inf.	34	28	2	A
Wilcox, Ralph O.	Pvt. Co. B, 342 Inf.	608	23	18	D
Arbelus, Robt.	Pvt. Co. E, 343 Inf.	34	1	6	A
Brown, Bernard	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 342 Inf.	107-E	3	1	A
Gray, Gideon	Pvt. Co. K, 343 Inf.	107-E	8	3	B
Jorgenson, Emil	Pvt. Co. L, 343 Inf.	107-E	7	5	C
Nielsen, Carl V.	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Co. 343 Inf.	34	8	4	A
Nieminen, Michael	Pvt. Co. E, 343 Inf.	34	16	9	A
Piquette, Geo. Theodore.	Pvt. Co. B, 343 Inf.	107-E	3	5	C
Sabrowsky, Emil Herman.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 343 Inf.	107-E	13	2	D
Slotsve, Henry	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 343 Inf.	107-E	8	7	C
Stahl, Geo. Jos.	Pvt. Co. M, 343 Inf.	107-E	14	3	C
Westrum, Alvin Oris.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 343 Inf.	107-E	6	6	D
Gilroy, Francis Richard.	Pvt. Co. B, 332 M. G. Bn.	107-E	8	5	A

Deceased soldiers from Minnesota buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
EIGHTY-SIXTH DIVISION—continued
Nelson, Alfred	Pvt. Co. A, 332 M. G. Bn.	107-E	17	5	C
Hansen, Geo. A	Pvt. Co. D, 333 M. G. Bn.	107-E	6	5	C
Anderson, Nels	Pvt. Bty. E, 331 F. A.	107-E	14	2	B
Momyr, Alfred	Pvt. Bty. C, 331 F. A.	107-E	2	2	B
Schultz, Wm. Adolph	Pvt. Bty. E, 331 F. A.	107-E	9	4	B
Sauer, Fred John	Pvt. Bty. D, 332 F. A.	34	6	12	A
Sauer, Art. N	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. E, 332 F. A.	34	20	5	A
Christopherson, Earl Otis.	Pvt. Hq. Co. 333 F. A.	34	32	12	A
Larson, Eddie	Pvt. 311 Trn. Mtr. Bty.	636	8	12	A
Olsen, Louis	do	636	13	21	A
Anderson, Oscar E	Pvt. Co. D, 311 Engrs.	34	18	14	A
Gruelen, John	Pvt. Co. B, 311 Engrs.	34	9	8	A
Johnson, Isaac Martin	Pvt. Co. A, 311 Engrs.	34	39	7	A
Hanson, Ludvig	Pvt. Co. E, 311 Amm. Tn.	608	7	27	A
Miller, Henry Albert	Pvt. 341 F. H. 311 San. Tn.	107-E	10	5	C
EIGHTY-SEVENTH DIVISION
Bastmann, Johannes G	Pvt. Hq. Co. 346 Inf.	34	29	3	C
Whitmore, Don A	Sgt. Co. B, 348 Inf.	608	2	23	B
McKenney, Alfred W	Wag. 312 Trn. Mtr. Bty.	34	24	4	A
Crowe, Thos. F	Cpl. Co. C, 312 Engrs.	34	11	5	A
Halverson, Andrew N	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 312 F. S. Bn.	34	9	3	C
Keiser, Andrew	Sgt. Co. D, 312 Amm. Tn.	34	11	12	A
EIGHTY-EIGHTH DIVISION
Cullen, Frank M	Pvt. Co. D, 349 Inf.	1232	35	25	F
Sutherland, John R	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 349 Inf.	1232	37	28	D
Brown, Vivus W	Pvt. Co. B, 350 Inf.	1232	26	26	E
Sather, Bernhard	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 352 Inf.	1232	37	45	D
Jackson, Wm. G	Pvt. Co. G, 339 M. G. Bn.	1232	16	23	H
Wese, Arthur J	Pvt. Bty. E, 337 F. A.	1764	1	8	B
Heison, Otto	Pvt. Bty. A, 339 F. A.	1764	6	8	B
Honeyman, Bruce R	Capt. Co. A, 313 Engrs.	1232	30	23	E
Swenson, Alfred M	Capt. 313 Engrs.	34	2	5	B
Schroeder, Alois T	Hrshr. Co. E, 313 Amm. Tn.	1232	20	44	A
Sovich, Geo. M	Pvt. Co. E, 313 Amm. Tn.	1232	6	39	D
Anderson, Harold	Pvt. Co. M, 353 Inf.	1232	38	31	D
Johnson, Leonard	Cpl. Co. A, 353 Inf.	1232	8	44	D
Keller, Ignatz	Pvt. Co. E, 353 Inf.	1232	35	41	A
Kronlokken, John	Pvt. Co. L, 353 Inf.	1232	20	32	A
Schultz, Fred J	Pvt. Co. H, 353 Inf.	1232	33	17	A
Zabroki, Stanley B	Pvt. Co. K, 353 Inf.	1233	4	17	C
Zenk, Leo Leander	Pvt. Co. M, 353 Inf.	1232	32	12	B
Bomsta, Max B	Pvt. Co. F, 354 Inf.	1232	40	11	C
Buberge, Fredk. C	Pvt. Co. A, 354 Inf.	1232	28	4	C
Grothe, Martin	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 354 Inf.	1232	9	21	F
Jensen, Herman G	Mech. Co. K, 354 Inf.	1233	23	3	D
Lampe, Chris H	Pvt. Co. E, 354 Inf.	1232	31	11	B
McCormick, Martin	Pvt. Co. G, 354 Inf.	1232	35	30	H
Menzel, Edward	Pvt. Co. B, 354 Inf.	1232	29	32	E
Ostlund, Andrew J	Pvt. Co. G, 354 Inf.	1232	32	25	A
Jensen, Tineus J	Pvt. Co. D, 341 M. G. Bn.	1232	11	28	C
Moyer, Howard W	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 342 M. G. Bn.	1232	21	9	D
NINETIETH DIVISION
Adams, Carl A	Pvt. Co. E, 357 Inf.	1232	12	46	C
Ahern, Arthur Edw	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 357 Inf.	1232	23	34	D
Besserud, Lewis E	Pvt. Co. E, 357 Inf.	1233	32	15	C
Bratsch, Paul E	Pvt. Co. A, 357 Inf.	1233	22	12	B
Budahl, Peter G	Pvt. Hq. Co. 357 Inf.	1232	13	4	E
Cedarholm, Louis M	Pvt. Co. M, 357 Inf.	1233	33	3	C
Church, Geo. R	do	1233	17	16	B
Clark, Geo. B	Pvt. Co. D, 357 Inf.	1232	33	23	G
DePerry, Antoine J	Pvt. Co. E, 357 Inf.	1233	23	7	D
Enright, Michael D	do	1232	4	15	B
Ferguson, Chas	Pvt. Co. K, 357 Inf.	1232	15	40	A
Hovland, Helmer	Pvt. Co. A, 357 Inf.	1233	10	14	B
Hurley, Jas. T	Cpl. Co. D, 357 Inf.	1232	6	45	A
ckson, Geo	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 357 Inf.	1233	31	11	D
Jarvi, Edward	Pvt. Co. A, 357 Inf.	1232	19	18	G
Jendro, Steve	do	1232	4	10	F
Johnson, Herman	Pvt. Co. G, 357 Inf.	1233	23	27	D
Langer, Victor B	do	608	4	21	D
Lebacken, Melvin R	Pvt. Co. K, 357 Inf.	1232	38	36	B
Lundholm, Chester	Pvt. Co. C, 357 Inf.	1232	26	13	D
Nairn, Geo. Ellis	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 357 Inf.	1233	24	26	C
Nilsson, Johan	Pvt. Co. C, 357 Inf.	1232	16	3	D
Nykreim, Sophus M	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 357 Inf.	1232	28	46	C
Olson, Jack	Pvt. Co. A, 357 Inf.	1232	30	3	H
Olson, Ole M	Pvt. Co. C, 357 Inf.	1233	3	24	D
Olson Olof	Pvt. Co. E, 357 Inf.	1233	24	7	B
Rosser, Charley	Pvt. Co. C, 357 Inf.	1232	12	8	C
Rothie, Wm	Pvt. Co. G, 357 Inf.	1233	13	28	C
Solie, Henry	Mech. Co. C, 357 Inf.	1233	36	24	A
Bakken, Oscar C	Pvt. Co. D, 358 Inf.	1232	40	17	E
Bannick, Frank J	Pvt. Co. C, 358 Inf.	1233	15	24	B
Berg, Wm. E	do	1232	24	18	D
Borak, Chas	Pvt. Co. E, 358 Inf.	1233	22	2	C
Gorkow, John H	Cpl. Co. D, 358 Inf.	1233	31	2	B
Hoopes, Harold E	Pvt. Co. E, 358 Inf.	1232	4	32	B
Johnson, Lewis C	Cpl. Co. B, 358 Inf.	1232	16	46	C
Larson, Geo. H	Pvt. Hq. Co., 358 Inf.	1232	34	29	G
Lee, Roy	Pvt. Co. B, 358 Inf.	1233	36	14	B
Milli, Lorenz	Pvt. Co. G, 358 Inf.	1232	23	13	F
Overlie, Orin A	do	1233	20	22	C
Paquin, Isadore Joe	Pvt. Co. C, 358 Inf.	1233	18	24	B
Pearson, Erick G	Pvt. Co. I, 358 Inf.	34	14	10	A
Podgerski, Frank	Pvt. Co. C, 358 Inf.	1232	13	22	G

Deceased soldiers from Minnesota buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
NINETIETH DIVISION—continued
Saari, Yalmer	Pvt. Co. D, 358 Inf.	1233	18	28	B
Scharfbillig, Frank J	Pvt. Co. B, 358 Inf.	1232	11	13	B
Warren, Clifford L	Pvt. Co. D, 358 Inf.	1233	33	2	D
Young, Chauncey	Pvt. Co. B, 358 Inf.	1232	23	46	C
Zeaman, Eddie	Pvt. Co. D, 358 Inf.	1233	6	28	B
Carlson, Thure W. M	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 359 Inf.	1232	15	32	D
Coussemeier, Henry	Pvt. Co. E, 359 Inf.	1233	24	15	D
Grosse, Edmund P	Pvt. Co. H, 359 Inf.	1233	3	24	C
Johnson, Carl P	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H, 359 Inf.	1233	33	27	C
Knoll, Frank J	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 359 Inf.	1233	32	14	D
Kruger, Walter E	Pvt. Co. F, 359 Inf.	1232	25	8	B
Matthies, Wilfred	Pvt. Co. H, 359 Inf.	1233	4	18	B
Mulier, Eco H	Pvt. Co. K, 359 Inf.	1233	22	24	C
Roering, Ben	Pvt. Co. A, 359 Inf.	14	32	8	B
Scholz, Gerhard H	Pvt. Co. H, 359 Inf.	1233	15	23	B
Yoeckel, Clarence E	Pvt. Co. D, 359 Inf.	1232	23	10	A
Alfsen, Ole C	Pvt. Co. M, 360 Inf.	1232	21	38	G
Yelland, John H	Pvt. Co. I, 360 Inf.	1232	5	43	A
Carlson, Julius	do	1232	36	28	E
Danielson, Melvin C	Pvt. Co. B, 360 Inf.	34	36	4	A
Fairbanks, Geo. F	Pvt. Co. F, 360 Inf.	1232	8	41	F
Fosmbs, Berut A	Pvt. Co. I, 360 Inf.	1233	28	10	C
Huber, Jos. L	Pvt. Co. E, 360 Inf.	1233	23	16	B
Johnson, Carl F	Pvt. Co. G, 360 Inf.	1232	21	20	A
Malmgren, Nels	Pvt. Co. B, 360 Inf.	1233	8	22	C
Myrin, Harry	Pvt. Co. G, 360 Inf.	1232	19	5	A
Quigley, Howard C	Pvt. Co. D, 360 Inf.	1232	20	3	A
Rubin, Alfred	Pvt. Co. G, 360 Inf.	1232	32	33	D
Pohl, Ralph L	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 345 M. G. Bn.	1232	6	8	A
Sollom, Gustav A	Pvt. Co. B, 345 M. G. Bn.	1233	11	18	B
Harrison, Ervie W	Pvt. Co. E, 315 Engrs.	1233	24	12	D
NINETY-FIRST DIVISION
Barthle, Albert L	Pvt. Co. L, 362 Inf.	1232	22	18	F
Carlson, Edward	Pvt. Co. C, 362 Inf.	1232	22	40	G
Eliason, John	Pvt. M. G. Co. 362 Inf.	34	1	17	A
Odegaard, Albert	Pvt. Co. A, 362 Inf.	1232	4	30	D
Rydell, Axel T	Pvt. Co. L, 362 Inf.	1252	14	1	D
Terrill, John M	Pvt. Co. F, 362 Inf.	1232	29	42	E
Carlson, Fred T	Pvt. Cas. Co., 363 Inf.	1233	24	21	B
Christensen, Saml. J	Pvt. Co. F, 363 Inf.	1232	8	38	A
Garrison, Job A	Pvt. Co. M, 363 Inf.	107-E	4	1	D
Johnson, David F	Pvt. Co. G, 363 Inf.	1232	22	40	H
Kicker, Emil A	Pvt. Co. M, 363 Inf.	1232	37	4	C
Paarmann, Wm. J	Pvt. Co. I, 363 Inf.	1232	17	33	A
Westerberg, Irvin A	Pvt. Co. M, 363 Inf.	1232	22	43	A
Bortie, Oscar R	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 364 Inf.	1232	4	4	D
Hagestande, Siver	Pvt. Co. G, 364 Inf.	1332	26	27	E
NINETY-THIRD DIVISION
Harris, Clark M	Pvt. Co. C, 369 Inf.	1232	12	26	G
NONDIVISIONAL ORGANIZATIONS
Golden, Chas	Sgt. Sup. Co. 5, Army Cps.	1232	33	31	A
Wold, Ernest G	1 lt., 1 Aero Sq.	1764	60	10	B
Roth, Irving J	1 lt., 49 Aero Sq.	1232	2	21	F
Cutter, Edw. B	1 lt., 90 Aero Sq.	1232	12	21	F
Moody, Richard Willard.	2 lt., 129 Aero Sq.	608	22	5	A
Gallaghan, Barney J	Sgt. 1 cl., 273 Aero Sq.	107-E	13	3	B
Campbell, Chas. (alias Douglas, Chas.).	Sgt. 341 Aero Sq.	34	15	4	C
Squire, Yale H	1 lt. 2 Avi. Instr. Ctr.	608	27	9	C
Edmondson, Walter O	1 lt. Cas. Air Serv.	34	25	4	B
Kingsley, Kenneth F	Pvt. Hq. Det., 32 C. A. C. Brig.	608	7	31	A
Johnson, Otto M	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. D, 44 C. A. C. Regt.	1233	30	16	B
Carlson, Oscar C	Wag. Bty. E, 45 C. A. C. Regt.	34	29	2	A
Orlande, Morris I	Pvt. Bty. B, 51 C. A. C. Regt.	1233	16	2	B
Johnson, Fritz	Pvt. Bty. A, 70 C. A. C.	608	19	21	A
Gustofson, Robt. H	Pvt. Bty. A, 73 C. A. C.	608	20	19	D
Medinnis, Chas	1 lt. Hq. Co. 3 Bn., 75 C. A. C.	608	37	31	D
Jacobson, Harry	Pvt. Bty. A, 3 Cp. Art. Pk.	34	17	6	C
Nelson, Harry L	Pvt. Co. A, 3 Cp. Art. Pk.	34	24	3	C
Ramberg, Oscar	Pvt. Bty. A, 3 Cp. Art. Pk.	34	12	2	C
Searl, Percy T	Pvt. Bty. B, 3 Cp. Art. Pk.	34	28	5	C
Miller, Eddie B	Pvt. Am. Co., 11 M. D.	1232	27	6	A
Donaldson, Glenn S	Pvt. 1 cl. Sec. 606 U. S. A. A. Serv.	1232	38	31	E
Gammell, Warren S	Sgt. 1 cl. U. S. A. Sec. 568.	1232	1	3	C
Lubrecht, Wm. A	Pvt. Evac. Hosp. 1 M. D.	1233	9	28	D
Jansen, Clarence J	Pvt. 1 cl. A. R. C. Hosp. 2, M. D.	34	12	14	B
VanLaanen, John V	Pvt. Cent. Laboratory, M. D.	608	25	19	D
Amundson, Esther	Nurse B. H. 35 A. N. C.	1233	25	18	C
Anderson, Nora E	Nurse B. H. 68 A. N. C.	1233	30	11	A
Kimball, Florence	Nurse B. H. 22 A. N. C.	34	8	3	C
McCahill, Louis	Cpl. 425 Mtr. Tk. Co. 412 M. T. C.	34	5	4	A
Ward, John H	Pvt. 1 cl. 452 Mt. Tk. Co. M. T. C.	608	38	31	B
Anderson, Adolph R	Pvt. Ord. Dept.	(1)
Broderick, Arthur L	Pvt. 1 cl. Ord. Dept.	34	14	16	B

[1] Civilian cemetery, Saumur, Maine-et-Loire, France.

Deceased soldiers from Minnesota buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
NONDIVISIONAL ORGANIZATIONS—con.
Crocker, Wilbert W	Pvt. 1 Prov. Ord. Regt	608	18	13	C
Witkouski, John	Pvt. 1 cl. 1 Cav. Trn. Tp	608	32	35	B
Duggan, Arthur J	Sgt. 1 cl. 2 Cp. Gas Sch. C. W. S.	1233	8	9	B
Ludolph, Martin H	Cpl. Co. A, F. A. Sch. Det	608	32	20	C
Morey, Harvey W	Pvt. J. A. R. D. Cp. Cody F. A.	608	32	4	A
Henry, Abraham	Pvt. Co. D, 49 Inf	608	18	10	D
Friauf, Geo. J	Pvt. Co. B, 4 A. A. M. G. Bn.	1233	16	16	B
Wollum, Edw. L	Pvt. Co. A, 4 A. A. M. G. Bn.	1233	20	9	B
Anderson, Alfred J	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 3 Pion. Inf	608	21	14	C
Ascher, Herman Theodore.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 3 Pion. Inf	1232	7	27	H
Curtin, John J	Pvt. Co. H, 3 Pion. Inf	1232	19	40	C
Fallon, Bernard	Pvt. Co. K, 3 Pion. Inf	34	28	2	B
Fraser, Monta	Pvt. Co. B, 3 Pion. Inf	1232	25	13	H
Gelen, Frederick S	Pvt. Co. F, 3 Pion. Inf	1232	12	23	H
Gravell, Louis J	Pvt. Co. L, 3 Pion. Inf	1232	33	10	H
Hansen, Wm	do	1233	36	7	A
Hood, Arthur M	do	1232	23	2	H
Kaniewski, Stanley Edw.	Sgt. Co. G, 3 Pion. Inf	1232	10	31	F
Kratzke, Edw. C	Pvt. Co. G, 3 Pion. Inf	1233	8	17	C
Looft, Walter W	Pvt. Co. M, 3 Pion. Inf	1232	18	28	F
McKean, Roy	do	1233	5	17	B
Schneiderman, Henry	Pvt. Co. K, 3 Pion. Inf	1233	10	13	A
Schulz, Alfred Herman	Pvt. Co. B, 3 Pion. Inf	1232	5	22	F
Woytcke, Robt. M	Cpl. Co. C, 3 Pion. Inf	1232	27	2	H
Zeches, Edw. Jacob	do	1232	24	13	H
Moline, Oscar M	Pvt. Co. D, 53 Pion. Inf	34	32	1	A
Ahneman, Geo. Frank	Pvt. Co. E, 54 Pion. Inf	1233	4	18	A
Albers, Walter J	Pvt. Co. K, 54 Pion. Inf	1232	16	37	H
Beck, Chas. P	Pvt. Co. E, 54 Pion. Inf	1232	20	14	F
Cromen, John	do	1232	39	33	A
Engebretson, Ole E	Pvt. Co. D, 54 Pion. Inf	1233	13	17	D
Engen, Jergen	Pvt. Co. K, 54 Pion. Inf	1232	15	22	D
Herbman, Emil	Pvt. Co. E, 54 Pion. Inf	1232	8	20	F
Jensen, Elmer L	Pvt. Co. L, 54 Pion. Inf	1232	14	43	D
Johansson, Carl Geo	Pvt. Sup. Co., 54 Pion. Inf	1232	14	18	H
Johnson, John A	Pvt. Co. M, 54 Pion. Inf	1764	13	11	B
Lindgren, August V	Pvt. Co. E, 54 Pion. Inf	1233	33	11	A
Lindquist, Rudolph M	Pvt. Co. H, 54 Pion. Inf	1232	10	7	B
Marsh, Wm. H	Pvt. Co. F, 54 Pion. Inf	34	16	8	A
Martinson, Ole	Cpl. Co. D, 54 Pion. Inf	1233	26	18	A
Mathiason, Frank Arthur.	Pvt. Co. C, 54 Pion. Inf	1233	6	17	D
Myhre, Peter	Pvt. Co. D, 54 Pion. Inf	1233	17	19	C
Olsen, Wm. E	Pvt. Hq. Co., 54 Pion. Inf	1232	18	34	H
Reger, Alfred Clement	Pvt. Co. E, 54 Pion. Inf	1232	14	21	F
Thomsen, Otto	do	1232	18	15	F
Torborg, Nicholaus	Pvt. Co. D, 54 Pion. Inf	1232	16	20	F
Woodford, Louis Oscar	Pvt. Co. M, 54 Pion. Inf	1232	16	21	F
Ydstie, Hjalmar Lennard.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 54 Pion. Inf	1232	5	34	D
Cass, Harold Hill	Pvt. Co. M, 55 Pion. Inf	1233	33	17	D
Dahl, Thos	Pvt. Co. D, 55 Pion. Inf	608	11	17	C
Matthews, Wm	Pvt. Co. E, 803 Pion. Inf	1233	15	25	C
Cox, Sam	Pvt. Co. B, 815 Pion. Inf	1232	5	4	B
Dusek, Frank	Pvt. Q. M. Corps	608	15	27	D
Zalesky, Chas. G	Sgt. 325 Bak. Co., Q. M. C	608	14	28	A
Curry, Claude H	Pvt. 25 Co. Cp. McArthur S. R. D.	608	9	29	D
Maggs, Walter L	Pvt. 14 Co. Cp. Gordon S. R. D.	608	21	29	D
Prestegard, Jos	Pvt. 27 Co. Cp. McArthur S. R. D.	608	36	25	C
Smith, Harold J	Pvt. 11 Co. S. A. R. D	608	36	40	D
Steen, Philip A	Pvt. 18 Cas. Co. Cp. Cody J. R. D.	108–E	2	5	D
Stewart, Wm. E	Pvt. 11 Co. Cp. McArthur S. R. D.	608	9	20	D
Pehrson, Arthur B	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 409 Tel. Bn	34	7	3	B
West, Blanchard	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 412 Tel. Bn	34	22	5	B
McCoy, Wm. T	Cpl. Co. C, 13 Engrs	1232	33	37	H
Austad, Cunder G	Pvt. Co. D, 20 Engrs	107–E	7	2	A
Berkey, Edwin R	Pvt. Hq. Co, 20 Engrs	107–E	17	3	A
Brown, Frank	Wag, Co. D, 4 Bn. 20 Engrs	608	34	7	A
Buskrud, Hjalmar	Pvt. 1 cl., 49 Co., 20 Engrs	1764	19	8	B
Cochrane, Frank W	Pvt. Co. D, 21 Engrs	1233	31	17	A
O'Leary, Thos. C	Pvt. Co. C, 33 Engrs	608	30	5	D
Nylen, Samuel J	Pvt. 1 cl., Co. E, 34 Engrs	608	12	23	B
Erickson, Jos. G	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 41 Engrs	34	2	1	A
Golly, Freely E	Pvt. Co. G, 54 Engrs	34	1	8	A
Hainlin, Alfred C	Sgt. Co. A, 57 Engrs	636	8	29	B
Forbes, Guy R	1 lt. Co. C, 508 Engrs	1233	14	1	D
Fuller, Harry H	Wag. 464 Engr. Pontoon Tn	34	6	3	A
Thompson, Delbert A	2 lt. L. R. & R. Div. Engrs	1232	35	39	B
Brain, Geo. D	Sgt. 7 Co. Off. Tn. Sch	608	34	30	A
Hays, Earl E	Pvt. Co. D, 11 U. S. M. C	608	26	35	A
Goudy, Francis Boyd	Pvt. Co. E, 13 U. S. M. C	608	18	20	C
Halverson, John	W. T. U. S. Navy	608	11	10	C
Peterson, Alfred H	Sm. 1 cl. U. S. Navy	34	18	16	A
Shaffe, Wm. Dean	Fm. 2 cl. U. S. Navy	608	7	21	D
Spiering, Clemens E	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 327 Bn. T. C.	1232	5	30	G
Nygreen, Peter	Cpl. 34 Co. Tr. Cps	608	27	12	C
Weekly, Frank	Pvt. 803 Co. Tr. Cps	608	30	22	D

PROHIBITION

Mr. CLANCY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. GARNER. Under the agreement with the gentleman from Connecticut, I am compelled to ask the gentleman on what subject he desires to speak?

Mr. CLANCY. I made a trip to the Detroit River recently, and I want to speak on the prohibition situation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CLANCY. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen, the press of the country has generally heralded that there is now an unusual drive of the prohibition forces on the Detroit River and contiguous waters. The Detroit Yachting Association has protested against the danger of innocent persons being killed or wounded by indiscriminate shooting on the river and adjoining lakes. Their officers point out that their yachts have been stopped and searched by prohibition agents and their children and wives frightened by the officers.

The swarming, snooping, sneaking agents have terrorized the thousands of people who use our waters; they have made boating and fishing a menace.

TOURIST BUSINESS BEING KILLED

Detroit has always made a great deal of money out of hundreds of thousands of tourists who came each spring, summer, and fall to beautiful Detroit, but now automobilists as well as boating and fishing enthusiasts are staying away for fear of their lives. It would be hard to estimate the damage to Detroit through the loss of this tourist business, but it runs into large figures. We have the Detroit Tourist and Convention Bureau, which spends a large amount of money to bring tourists to Detroit and I am expecting a vigorous complaint to the Treasury Department from this bureau.

We have had all sorts of scandals developing from the prohibition agents who are our unwelcome guests. They are guilty of murderous outrages, grafting, hijacking, and other crimes in large proportion to their total number. Twenty-three of them were arrested recently for grafting on a scale that ran into millions per year and some were sent to jail.

Ernest W. Camp, an honest and conscientious official who was until recently Chief of the United States Customs Bureau, made the startling admission to the Canadian Government at Ottawa that 90 per cent of the prohibition border patrol were rotten. This was the most terrible indictment ever made against an American group of officials in American history, and it came while the high American officials from Washington were begging the high Canadian officials in the Dominion capital to assist in stopping the flow of liquors from Canada to the United States. After the admission that the border patrol was so largely incompetent and guilty of worse than incompetency the Canadians refused to consider the American representations as binding on them. Shortly afterward Mr. Camp resigned his portfolio and went into private life.

The American Automobile Association, a thoroughly reputable body including within its membership and speaking for some 23,000,000 owners of motor cars in the United States, has protested against the reckless searching of automobiles.

DEFEATED IN FIRST BATTLE

The first battle of the Detroit River, beginning about a couple of years ago, resulted in a miserable failure. The net result of that prohibition campaign was the killing of a letter carrier named Neidermeier, 65 years of age, who was entirely innocent of carrying any liquor. He was shot in the back as he sat in his duck skiff and died in terrible agony in a few days.

For that offense one Jack Benway, a prohibition agent, was sent to the penitentiary, after he had appealed his case to all of the superior courts, including the United States Supreme Court. A little girl, Mildred Lee, 11 years old, had her head torn off her body in the Detroit River by a speeding prohibition boat and her father, James Lee, was also killed.

The children of the Fisher boys—and the Fisher boys in the automobile world are second only to Henry Ford, and incidentally I might say the Fishers contributed $125,000 to Herbert Hoover's campaign—were fired on by prohibition agents when riding in their speedboat on the river.

JACQUES REVEALS BAD CONDITIONS

A former prohibition agent named Louis Jacques has come to Washington from Detroit to-day. He was a superior officer of Jonah Cox, who shot the boy bootlegger in Detroit a few days ago. Jacques resigned over Cox's promiscuous shooting and has come here to protest against conditions in the Detroit prohibition squad. He said that within three weeks this agent Cox who killed Eugsta had fired in two affairs recklessly.

On one occasion about June 1, Cox shot at a young lad named Mitchell who was riding in a boat. His riot gun jammed, and he said later, "Gee, if that gun had not jammed I would have blown that fellow's head off. I had to use my .45." The watchman at the Detroit-Toledo and Ironton Bridge complained, I am informed, of the promiscuous shooting at that time.

On June 10, at Zug Island, this agent fired at a boat. He did not see any liquor in the boat, which was speeding. A superior officer, this man Jacques, said to him, "Stop that shooting, you may hit some innocent person."

They were in the vicinity of a bridge, and automobiles loaded with people were passing over the bridge. Cox replied, "I would not stop shooting if I were in charge," and he then asked Jacques his name. Cox had made various reports and complaints to his superior officers on other prohibition agents in the service.

Jacques had filed a report to his superior officers before Cox killed this boy, to the effect that Cox was reckless and indiscriminate in the use of firearms.

WHITEWASHING BENWAY

With regard to whitewashing reckless prohibition agents, the most notorious case that we had was that of the old letter carrier Neidermeier who was hunting ducks. He had been for many years in the Postal Service, and was entirely innocent of wrong doing, having no liquor. He was shot at about 20 or 30 feet in the back through the kidneys with a bullet from a high-powered rifle.

A man named Pratt was the partner of this man Benway; and I was told that Pratt said when questioned by his superiors that "Benway was too quick with his gun," but evidently that did not suit the superior officers, because when the case came to trial both Pratt and Benway went on the stand and testified that each fired and that neither knew who had killed the man. However, the jury was discriminating enough to let Pratt go and convict Benway. The Government defended Benway and sent a first-class Department of Justice attorney from Washington to aid the local officials. The Anti-Saloon League gave Benway all possible assistance. The conviction of Benway broke the strong-arm campaign in Detroit waters.

OFFICIALS HAVE TOUGH JOB

Mr. Speaker, I believe that the Treasury Department officials were reluctant to stage this second sensational drive in Detroit, but the pressure has been so great on them that they had to organize it.

I have talked with Governor Lowman, in charge, and he convinced me that he is a good official and does not desire to resort to strong-arm tactics. I do not want to condemn Doctor Doran. I think he is a pretty fair man, but he said to his men in Detroit who are waging this campaign that he is going to cut their heads off if they do not get results. Colonel Hanlon, who led the drive three years ago, told his men to be rough and to shoot.

But the leaders of the present drive use indirect methods. They say, "Don't let anything get by," and hint that shooting first and investigating later is what is wanted.

PUTTING PRESSURE ON FORCE

Some of these border-patrol men are in the Customs Service and have been for years; they are not fools; and they know that Doctor Doran can not cut their heads off, because they are under civil service. They resent very bitterly the pressure from Doctor Doran to be "rough." Jacques refers particularly to the tapping of telephone wires. I am informed Government agents tapped the telephone wires of the collector of customs in Detroit. Jacques charges that they are tapping the wires of prohibition agents in the service. I believe this is not only an un-American practice but an illegal one. I believe the Supreme Court has said the aggrieved citizen can sue the telephone company which allows it for damages.

Jacques says the inspectors are forced to spy on each other. He says that they are forbidden to associate with each other off duty; that they are constantly watched and accused of crookedness; and they are forbidden to even speak to anyone suspected of being a bootlegger.

Furthermore, he charges that they are repeatedly told that they "must not let a boat get by them" on penalty of being fired. All this, he says, keys up the men to a point where they will shoot on a minute's notice; and they are worried constantly and harassed so much that a neurotic would go completely "hay wire." Jacques points out that the strain is terrific and that many of the men interpret their orders that they must do hair-trigger shooting to hold their jobs.

This campaign in the Detroit River is going to have a vital effect on prohibition, undoubtedly. We have there the greatest fleet of pleasure craft probably in the world. There are many canoes there and they are constantly in danger. These prohibition boats will speed at night without lights. I have been told one canoe was run down and there is danger of killing boys and girls in canoes.

CANADA OFFENDED

Now, just a word about our relations with Canada. The armed prohibition boats have often gone into Canadian waters and have thus broken our ancient treaty with Canada. The agents work up much feeling in Canada against the United States and injure the American cause all along the line. Canada is the best customer at present of the United States, and these agents aid the propaganda in Canada against buying American products.

It will be impossible for all time to build the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence canal to the Atlantic if these prohibition forces continue to antagonize Canada.

ALL CITIZENS SHOULD HELP

I am very glad to get the testimony of men like Louis Jacques, who did not get into the border patrol through political influence and who passed a legitimate civil-service examination. He is a native Detroiter and son of Sergt. Henry Jacques, retired, who was a highly respected officer of the Detroit Police Department for many years. His son was raised in the high traditions of his father's profession. The high-handed tactics of the border patrol were simply too much for him, and he rebelled at the indiscriminate shooting and the consequent menace to innocent persons using the Detroit River and contiguous waters as their rightful heritage. Much of the valuable information which I have used in past years relative to the prohibition force has come from men in that service who were disgusted with the system in which they were enslaved.

I certainly commend all public-spirited citizens, in and out of the prohibition squads, all public officials, and all newspapers who are aiding this crusade to stop the reign of terror on the Detroit River. I condemn most emphatically all gunmen and hijackers that are the spawn of the eighteenth amendment. Police officers in Detroit have declared to me that every gunman in Detroit got his start from the eighteenth amendment, generally first running liquor and then being hardened to the indiscriminate use of firearms.

I am not familiar with the official record of Mr. Jacques, but I am informed that he was a conscientious agent, that he never trifled with rum runners or liquor agents, that he was regarded as a trustworthy officer and was put on the hot spots—that is, the strategic points of entry for liquor, such as Ecorse, Wyandotte, Zugg Island, oil docks, and so forth.

He is now doing a service to good men in the border patrol who do not want to be forced into indiscriminate shooting and unlawful acts by overzealous superiors. I know other men like him in high positions of the Treasury Department and prohibition units who are absolutely fed up with strong-armed tactics.

AMERICAN CEMETERIES, CHAPELS, AND MEMORIALS—WASHINGTON IN THE WORLD WAR

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I speak on a subject that is very close to the hearts of the mothers and widows of our hero dead who sleep in the American military cemeteries in Europe. What I have to say is of the deepest concern to those patriotic women, who gave so much for their country, and we, as Members of Congress, owe it to them to give them the information which I wish to present this afternoon.

Now, as you know, we recently passed a law which will enable the mothers and unmarried widows of our hero dead who have not previously visited the graves of their sons and husbands in Europe to do so at the expense of the United States Government. Under this law these visits will be made at such times between May 1, 1930, and October 31, 1933, as may be designated by the Secretary of War. Wide publicity is being given to this law, both through the daily press and the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and many of these relatives are now beginning to plan in what year they wish to go.

What I wish to say now is for the benefit of these relatives, in order that they may plan their visits for such times as will bring to them the greatest consolation and satisfaction possible.

In planning the years of their visits many of these women do not know, perhaps, that our Government, in addition to the work of beautification already carried out at these cemeteries, is now erecting in each of them a memorial chapel to be dedicated to those who gave their lives during the World War.

GRATEFUL NATION ERECTS IMPOSING MEMORIALS

I may say that these memorials, which are being erected by the American Battle Monuments Commission, of which Gen. John J. Pershing is chairman, were designed by some of the most prominent architects in the United States and have been approved by our National Commission of Fine Arts. These chapels will be monumental in nature, beautiful, restful, and imposing. They will be sanctuaries where these relatives may go for shelter, meditation, and prayer. They will be national memorials, befitting the purpose for which a grateful Nation erects them—such memorials as will be a source of consolation to the bereaved parents and widows. On the walls of the chapels will be inscriptions to the men who gave their lives. In addition, they will bear individual inscriptions giving the name, rank, organization, date of death, and State or Territory of the men who still sleep in unknown graves.

If the relatives of these hero dead knew that such memorials were being erected to their loved ones and knew when they would be completed, I feel sure that many of them would wish to make their plans so as to visit the cemeteries after the chapels are completed, when they can see for themselves the finished tribute of our Nation to their heroic sons and husbands.

I feel most strongly, therefore, that we, as Members of Congress, owe it to these relatives, whenever we give out publicity of any kind concerning these pilgrimages to Europe, to include information about these chapels and to give the probable date of the completion of each in order that these relatives may know in what year a particular chapel will be completed, and may plan their visits accordingly in case they so desire. Otherwise, many of these mothers and widows may be formulating their plans without knowing that these chapels are being built, and may be crystallizing their hopes on visiting the cemeteries earlier than they would wish to go if they knew such chapels were being erected.

CHAPELS NOT COMPLETED

I wish, therefore, to give here the probable dates of completion of the various chapels and to urge that wide publicity be given to this subject in order that every mother and widow will feel that we have fulfilled our duty to her in this respect by giving to her this information which she may wish to have when making her plans.

In the interest of these mothers and widows I have secured this information from the Battle Monuments Commission in Paris:

It is expected that the chapel in the Meuse-Argonne American Cemetery, near Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, France, will be completed by May 30, 1932; that in the St. Mihiel American Cemetery, near Thiaucourt, France, by May 30, 1932; that in the Oise-Aisne American Cemetery, near Fere-en-Tardenois, France, by May 30, 1931; that in the Aisne-Marne American Cemetery, near Belleau, France, by the spring or summer of 1931; that in the Somme American Cemetery, near Bony, France, by May 30, 1931; that in the Flanders Field American Cemetery, near Waereghem, Belgium, by May 30, 1930; that in the Suresnes American Cemetery, near Paris, France, by May 30, 1931; and that in the Brookwood American Cemetery, near Brookwood, England, by May 30, 1930. Each of these chapels is now in process of construction.

I have introduced an amendment to the gold star mothers law extending the time of their visits to October, 1934, in order to give these mothers and widows an opportunity to see all cemeteries, chapels, and monuments when fully completed. Thus will they carry to their homes in America and cherish through life the unsurpassed beauty and simple grandeur of these temples of the dead.

Mr. KORELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman permit an interruption there?

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. For a brief statement.

Mr. KORELL. I know the great interest that the gentleman from Washington has in the subject about which he is speaking. The House and the Nation are in his debt for the great amount of time that he has given to the task of seeing that the cemeteries in which the Nation's heroes, who made the supreme sacrifice during the World War, are buried are made as attractive and as expressive of the country's gratitude and reverence as it is possible for them to be made. His untiring devotion to this work is greatly appreciated by all the living comrades of those who nobly gave their lives as a part of the price of victory in the late struggle for freedom, justice, and democracy. I also know of his great personal interest in the legislation passed by the last Congress to enable the mothers and widows of the deceased soldiers, sailors, and marines of the American forces now interred in the cemeteries of Europe to make a pilgrimage to the graves of their loved ones. I am wondering, however, if the gentleman's attention has been called to the fact that we had an expeditionary force in Siberia and that a considerable number of American soldiers are also buried there. Public Law No. 952, passed by the Seventieth Congress, which authorizes the Secretary of War to arrange for the pilgrimages to the graves of loved ones does not include pilgrimages to the graves of those deceased veterans who are buried in Siberia or in places in France, Belgium, or England other than the American cemeteries. I would like to inquire of the gentleman if anything has been done by his committee to correct this apparent oversight?

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. I am not a member of the committee that framed the legislation, but of the committee that provides the appropriations for carrying all of these laws into effect.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Yes; I gladly yield to my friend from Nebraska.

Mr. SIMMONS. I introduced a bill early in the session to take care of the mothers not included in the bill referred to. That will make it possible for all mothers of service men to share in the benefits of the law. The law will then include all mothers of soldiers who died at sea or who were buried overseas.

CEMETERIES OF UNSURPASSED BEAUTY

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. For the benefit of the mothers and fathers, widows, and other relatives of our heroes who sleep in American cemeteries in Europe, I should like to give some additional information concerning these cemeteries and to tell something of what our Government is doing to beautify and hallow the ground where our brave boys sleep, and to keep forever alive the memory of their heroic service.

Soon after the war our Government established 8 national cemeteries in Europe—1 in England, not far from London; 1 in Belgium; and 6 in France. I venture to say that the world does not contain cemeteries more beautiful, more restful, more thoughtfully cared for than these. Flowers, trees, and shrubbery, laid out by the skillful and sympathetic hands of trained landscape gardeners and nurtured with tender care, lend a quiet beauty to these final resting places of our hero dead. The American flag, symbol of the glorious traditions which inspired these men in life to offer themselves in their country's cause, now floats in silent tribute over their graves. At each cemetery is an American caretaker, a veteran of the war, one who knows through what these men went, whose heart is in his work. In addition to his other duties, he extends a welcome to those who come to the cemetery seeking information, and aids them in locating individual graves or obtaining other desired information.

The wooden grave markers originally erected in these cemeteries have now been replaced by white marble headstones; a cross for those of Christian faith, a shield of David for those of Jewish faith. On these headstones are engraved the name, rank, organization, and date of death of the hero, as well as the State from which he came. These headstones are more than 3 feet high and stand as individual and imperishable monuments to those who gave their lives. Here and there is the grave of one who remains unknown, his headstone bearing the inscription:

Here rests in honored glory
An American soldier
Known but to God

These cemeteries are under the jurisdiction of the Quartermaster General of the Army, who has developed them, with the advice and cooperation of our National Commission of Fine Arts, into their present beautiful condition. An office of the Quartermaster General, known as the American Graves Registration Service, is in direct charge of these cemeteries and gives to them its constant care and supervision. For those who plan to visit Europe, I may say that the headquarters of this service are located in Paris, at 20 rue Molitor; and any information concerning the cemeteries or graves can be obtained either from them or from the Quartermaster General, Washington, D. C.

The American Battle Monuments Commission, of whose plans I shall speak in more detail a little later on, is now erecting in each of these cemeteries a memorial chapel, to be dedicated to those who gave their lives during the war. These chapels, which were designed after most careful study by some of the most prominent architects in the United States and approved by our National Commission of Fine Arts, will be beautiful, imposing, entirely harmonious with their surroundings, such edifices as befit the purpose for which a grateful Nation erects them.

MEUSE-ARGONNE CEMETERY LARGEST

The locations of the various cemeteries, together with other information of general interest concerning them, is as follows:

The largest of our overseas cemeteries is known as the Meuse-Argonne American Cemetery. It contains 14,134 graves and is located near the town of Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, France. The soldiers who rest here came from almost every division in the American Expeditionary Forces, most of them having given their lives in the Meuse-Argonne operation, one of the decisive battles of the war. Bodies were brought here from the area immediately west of the Argonne Forest, from the general vicinity of the Vosges Mountains, from occupied Germany, and from Archangel, Russia.

The cemetery is about 23 miles northwest of Verdun, which can be easily reached by train from Paris. Good hotel accommodations are available there and automobiles for a visit to the cemetery can be readily obtained. A hostess house which is maintained at the cemetery can provide rooms and meals for a limited number of visitors during the summer months.

The chapel now being erected here is an adaptation of the Romanesque style of architecture, and consists not only of the chapel proper—which forms the central part of the edifice—but also of two flanking arcades; the entire building being over 240 feet in length. This memorial will rise from a beautiful terraced site and stand at the end of a long, wide avenue that runs through the cemetery.

It is probable that the construction of this memorial chapel, which has already begun, will be completed by May 30, 1932.

ST. MIHIEL CEMETERY

The St. Mihiel American Cemetery, located near the town of Thiaucourt, France, is in the area of the St. Mihiel operation of the American Army. Here lie 4,143 soldiers, the majority of whom were members of the American divisions attacking in the great offensive action of our First Army, which resulted in the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient. Others buried here were among those who died while serving in sectors in the vicinity, or who were removed to this region in 1922 from training areas to the southwest.

The cemetery is almost equidistant by road, about 20 miles, from Nancy, Verdun, and Metz. There is good train service to each place, and at each of them fairly good hotel accommodations are available and automobiles may be hired. In the near future a main railroad line will pass through Thiaucourt. No suitable hotel accommodations are now available there.

CHAPEL GREEK DORIC STYLE

The memorial chapel now being erected in this cemetery is of modified Greek Doric style, and suggests something of the feeling of American colonial architecture. The central portion of the memorial will consist of what is known among architects as a peristyle, circular in form and open to the sky, surrounded by 16 columns. This peristyle, which is about 48 feet in diameter, will be flanked on one side by the chapel proper, and on the other side by an architectural feature of corresponding external design.

This memorial chapel, on which construction work has recently started, will probably be completed by May 30, 1932.

FIVE THOUSAND NINE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-TWO SLEEP IN OISE-AISNE CEMETERY

The Oise-Aisne American Cemetery, located near Fere-en-Tardenois, France, contains 5,962 graves. The majority of the battle dead who sleep here are from the divisions that fought in the vicinity of the Ourcq River and in the territory from there to the north as far as the Oise River. In 1922, American soldiers then buried in France in the general area west of the line Tours-Romorantin-Paris-Le Havre were removed to this cemetery.

It is about 18 miles by road from Chateau-Thierry or from Soissons to the cemetery, and slightly more from Reims. Good train service is available to each of these places, where hotel accommodations can be obtained and automobiles hired.

The memorial chapel now being erected in this cemetery is a modern adaptation of the French Romanesque style of architecture. The central portion of the memorial will be a semicircular arcade, at one end of which will be the chapel proper and at the other end an architectural feature of similar external appearance; the entire edifice being over 100 feet wide.

It is probable that the work of erecting this memorial chapel will be completed by May 30, 1931.

AISNE-MARNE NEAR BELLEAU WOOD

The Aisne-Marne American Cemetery, containing 2,212 graves, lies near Belleau, France, at the foot of the hill upon which stands Belleau Wood. The majority of those who are buried here are from units that fought in the immediate vicinity and along the Marne River. A number of bodies were concentrated in this place in 1922 from the general vicinity of Lyon and Clermont in central France.

The cemetery is 6 miles northwest of Chateau-Thierry, which is on the main railroad running east from Paris. Fair hotel accommodations are available at Chateau-Thierry and automobiles may be hired there.

ROMANESQUE CHAPEL

The memorial chapel now being erected in this cemetery is of the transitional French Romanesque style of architecture. In external appearance it will give the impression of a massive tower. With its retaining walls and terrace the entire edifice will be some 110 feet in height and will stand on the slope of the hill that rises toward Belleau Wood.

It is hoped that this chapel will be completed during the spring or summer of 1931. It is not possible at this time, however, to say definitely when the work will be completed and for this reason it is believed that those who plan to visit this cemetery and wish to see the chapel and other architectural improvements completed should plan to make their visits in 1932 instead of in 1931.

SOMME AMERICAN CEMETERY AND MASSIVE SHAFT

The Somme American Cemetery, located near the town of Bony, France, is the resting place of 1,830 soldiers. Members of the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth Divisions who fell in the vicinity, as well as those of the First Division who gave their lives in the operations near Cantigny, and of the Thirty-third and Eightieth Divisions who fell in the operations while serving with the British, are buried here. In addition, all other American soldiers who died on or behind the British front in France and who were not removed to the United States in 1922 now sleep here.

The site is about 11 miles northeast of St. Quentin, which can be reached by train from Paris. Hotel accommodations are available and motor transportation may be hired there.

The chapel now being erected in this cemetery is an adaptation of the Romanesque style of chapel architecture. In general form it will be like a massive shaft, with a low, somewhat pyramidal covering, being nearly 50 feet in height and 26 feet in length and in breadth.

This chapel will probably be completed by May 30, 1931.

NINETY-FIRST DIVISION MEN SLEEP IN FLANDERS FIELD

The Flanders Field American Cemetery is located near Waereghem, Belgium, about halfway between Brussels and Ypres, and contains 367 graves. It is on ground captured by the Ninety-first Division. The soldiers buried here are mainly those of the Thirty-seventh and Ninety-first Divisions who died in this part of Flanders, and of the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth Divisions, who fell near Ypres.

The cemetery is about 19 miles from Ghent, 27 miles from Lille, and 46 miles from Brussels. These places are easily reached by railroad, and have good hotel accommodations. Automobiles may be hired at them.

As the graves in this cemetery are arranged on the four sides of a square, leaving an open space in the center, the chapel now being erected here will be placed in the center of the cemetery. An added beauty will be given to its setting by encircling it with a shallow sunken garden. The chapel, which will be octagonal in shape, will be about 36 feet high and 20 feet in diameter.

It is hoped that this chapel will be completed by May 30, 1930.

SURESNES NEAR WALLS OF PARIS

The Suresnes American Cemetery lies on the slope of Mont Valerien, about 3 miles west of the walls of Paris. It overlooks the capital of France, and contains 1,507 graves.

The town of Suresnes can easily be reached from Paris by train, street car, or automobile. The cemetery is about 200 yards from the railroad station.

The chapel now being erected in this cemetery will give, in its general exterior appearance, the feeling of American colonial architecture. Entrance to the building will be by the way of a colonnaded porch, and this porch will be approached from two sides by short flights of stairs. The chapel, including the approach stairs, will be about 42 feet high and about the same in length and breadth.

It is hoped this chapel will be completed by May 30, 1931.

BROOKWOOD HAS BEAUTIFUL ENGLISH SETTING

The Brookwood American Cemetery, located about 28 miles southwest of London, contains 437 graves. It forms part of a very large and beautiful British cemetery, which was established many years ago. The American section adjoins one used for British war burials.

The American bodies buried in this cemetery were concentrated after the armistice from various places throughout England, Scotland, and Ireland, and consist of those members of the American Expeditionary Forces who lost their lives in Great Britain or its surrounding waters during the war.

It is a pleasant drive by automobile from London to Brookwood through an interesting part of England, and a trip to the cemetery in this way can be comfortably made in half a day. Brookwood can also be reached from London on the London & South Western Railway. The American cemetery is about 400 yards southwest of the railroad station.

The chapel in this cemetery is an adaptation of the Greek Doric order of architecture. The edifice is about 34 feet square, with small projecting wings on each side and a portico in front, the columns of the portico being 15 feet high and 2¼ feet in diameter at the base. The chapel is surrounded by a semicircular path and hedge.

This chapel will be completed during the present year.

MEMORIALS IN EUROPE

A few years ago Congress created a commission, known as the American Battle Monuments Commission, for the purpose of erecting memorials in Europe to commemorate the service of the American forces there during the World War. One of my duties, as well as one of my pleasures, as a member of the Appropriations Committee of the House has been to pass upon the plans formulated by that commission and to give my support in providing funds for the work.

I recently spent an hour with General Pershing, the chairman of the commission, in going over these plans; and as they are of great interest to all who served during the World War, as well as to their relatives and friends, I shall summarize briefly what they are.

As stated before, this commission is erecting in each of the cemeteries a beautiful memorial chapel. It also plans to construct masonry walls at the cemeteries where these are needed and to add other desirable architectural features in the cemeteries. These architectural improvements, which are a part of the commission's work of commemoration, are in addition to the work of beautification which has already been carried out by the Quartermaster General of the Army.

The chapels, which will be nondenominational in character, will be dedicated to those who gave their lives during the war and will stand not only as enduring monuments to their achievements and sacrifices but will furnish a sheltered place where relatives and other visitors may go for meditation and prayer. In these chapels will be inscribed the names of men who lost their lives but whose bodies have not been identified. This inscription will include the name, rank, organization, and date of death of the hero, as well as the name of the State from which he came.

In addition to these memorial chapels in the cemeteries, the commission plans to erect 16 monuments at places outside of the cemeteries.

The list of architects selected by the commission to design these monuments, as well as the chapels, was prepared with the assistance of the National Commission of Fine Arts. The list was compiled with great care, and comprises a number of the most prominent architects or firms in the United States, as well as some younger architects. The designs for most of the monuments have already been prepared and approved by the American Battle Monuments Commission and the National Commission of Fine Arts, and the construction of a number of them has already begun. These memorials will, like the chapels, be of great beauty, dignity, and impressiveness—monuments worthy of the ideals of our Nation.

MASSIVE COLUMN COMMEMORATES OUR GREATEST BATTLE

The most important of the memorials in the commission's project is the one to commemorate the Meuse-Argonne operation, the greatest battle in American history. This monument, one of the main features of which is a massive column 160 feet in height, is to be placed in the old town of Montfaucon, France. Montfaucon was located on one of the dominating hills of the region and was captured by the American Army during its offensive which started on September 26, 1918. The town was completely destroyed, and the ruins are now being preserved by the French Government as a relic of the war.

BEAUTIFUL COLONNADE AT ST. MIHIEL

The next most important monument in the commission's project is one to commemorate the operation of the American First Army, which resulted in the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient. This monument will also commemorate the operation of the American Second Army in this region during November, 1918. This memorial, which will be over 70 feet high and include a circular colonnade 40 feet in diameter, is to be located on Montsec, an isolated hill about 150 yards high. This hill was within the German lines during most of the war, and is a familiar landmark to all who served in the St. Mihiel region. The view from the top of the hill is very impressive. The commission's plans include the construction of a road up the hill and the placing of a memorial on its crest.

CHATEAU-THIERRY ON HILL 204

Of almost equal importance to the St. Mihiel memorial is one to be erected near Chateau-Thierry, France, to commemorate all activities of American troops in the Aisne-Marne region of France. The site is on Hill 204, west of Chateau-Thierry and just above the small village of Courteau. This monument proper will be 150 feet in length, and counting its retaining walls will be over 400 feet in length. From it an extensive and beautiful view can be obtained of Chateau-Thierry and the Marne Valley. To make the monument readily accessible a branch road about one-half mile long is being built, connecting it with the main highway between Paris and Chateau-Thierry.

OTHER BATTLE MEMORIALS

In addition to these three large memorials on the battle fields a number of others will be erected which will be more modest in character, conforming to the lesser relative importance of the operations which they are to commemorate.

One of these, on Blanc Mont Ridge, in the Champagne region of France, will recall the service of the Second, Thirty-sixth, Forty-second, and Ninety-third Divisions in that region while serving with the French.

Near Bony a monument will preserve the memory of the services of the American troops that fought in France with the British Army. The site for this memorial is exactly over the canal tunnel north of St. Quentin, between Bony and Bellicourt, near the main road which runs north and south in that region.

A monument at Cantigny will commemorate the capture of that town by the First Division in the first independent divisional operation of Americans during the World War.

In the public square at Audenarde, Belgium, a monument will be erected to the Thirty-seventh and Ninety-first Divisions for their services in Belgium.

On the road between Ypres and Mount Kemmel will be another memorial to recall the services of the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth Divisions with the British in that vicinty.

The Services of Supply, numbering more than half a million men, contributed very materially to the final victory, and a memorial fountain to commemorate their splendid work will be erected at Tours, France, in which city the headquarters of the Services of Supply were located during the war.

MONUMENTS AT ROME AND BREST

Another of the monuments is to be placed in Rome, Italy, to commemorate jointly the services of the American Army and Navy in Italy and surrounding waters during the World War and the cooperation between Italy and the United States.

A memorial at Brest, France, will commemorate the services of the Navy in convoying troops and supplies to Europe. The site selected is a splendid one on the ancient fortifications overlooking the harbor, which is so familiar to the many Americans who received their first and last impression of France at this port.

Another large memorial to commemorate the services of the American Navy will be erected in England.

A smaller memorial to commemorate the services of the American Navy will be erected at Gibraltar.

Another small naval memorial will be erected at Ponta Delgada in the Azores.

Small bronze tablets will be placed on the buildings which were used, respectively, as the general headquarters of the American Expeditionary Forces at Chaumont and the headquarters of the American First Army at Souilly.

Definite dates for the completion of these monuments can not be stated at this time, but it is expected that practically all of them will have been completed by the spring of 1933 and some of them by the spring of 1931.

LATER VISITS MORE SATISFACTORY

As Americans traveling in Europe will derive greater satisfaction and pleasure from their visits if they can see the memorial chapels and monuments in their completed state—the visible symbols in foreign lands of the gratitude of our Nation for the heroic achievements and sacrifices of its sons—it is believed that those who plan to take only one trip to Europe would find themselves more than repaid if they postpone their visits until 1933 or at least until 1931 or 1932.

STATE OF WASHINGTON IN THE WORLD WAR

My State has always been highly patriotic and had a prominent part in the World War. From such information as I possess I relate this very incomplete story, that it may be recorded for future reference.

In orders dated July 18, 1917, the Secretary of War designated the sites for the National Army and National Guard cantonments, the Army divisions that would occupy these cantonments, and the geographical sources from which the troops composing the divisions would be drawn. National Army men from the State of Washington were to be sent to Camp Lewis, American Lake, Wash., where the Ninety-first Division was formed. The National Guard of the State of Washington was to be sent to Camp Fremont, Palo Alto, Calif., where the Forty-first Division was to be organized. However, on August 22, 1917, the place of mobilization of the Forty-first Division was changed from Camp Fremont to Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C.

NATIONAL GUARD FIRST CALLED

The first military units from the State of Washington in the service after the declaration of war were National Guard organizations, the Second Infantry, Washington National Guard, having been called into the Federal service by the President of the United States in March, 1917, "to afford a more perfect protection against possible interference with postal, commercial, and military channels and instrumentalities of the United States in the State of Washington, Regular troops not being available for the faithful execution of the laws of the Union in this regard." Other units of the Washington National Guard called into the Federal service on July 25, 1917, were the First Squadron Cavalry, First Battalion Signal Corps, and the companies of Coast Artillery Corps. The First Battalion Field Artillery entered the Federal service August 5, 1917.

REORGANIZATION

The designations of Washington National Guard units were changed on reorganization as follows: The Second Regiment, Washington National Guard, became the One hundred and sixty-first Regiment, Infantry, September 19, 1917. The First Squadron, Cavalry, was broken up and the personnel used to form new units; machine-gun troop became Company B, One hundred and forty-seventh Machine Gun Battalion; Troop A became Company A, One hundred and sixteenth Train Headquarters and Military Police; Troop B was broken up, the personnel forming a part of headquarters detachment, Company A and Company B, One hundred and sixteenth Train Headquarters and Military Police; Troop C became headquarters troop, Forty-first Division; Troop D was broken up and the personnel formed part of headquarters detachment, Company A and Company B, One hundred and sixteenth Train Headquarters and Military Police; medical detachment was transferred to the medical detachment of the One hundred and sixteenth Train Headquarters and Military Police and medical detachment, One hundred and sixty-third Infantry. Batteries A, B, and C, First Battalion, Field Artillery, Washington National Guard, became Batteries D, E, and F, One hundred and forty-sixth Field Artillery, respectively. The First Battalion Signal Corps, Washington National Guard, was reorganized, headquarters and supply section, Companies A, B, and C, and medical detachment becoming headquarters and supply section, Companies A, B, and C, and medical detachment, One hundred and sixteenth Field Signal Battalion, respectively. Field Hospital No. 1, Washington National Guard, became Field Hospital No. 163. The companies of Coast Artillery, Washington National Guard, were reorganized, forming various companies of the coast defenses of Puget Sound. Many men, however, were transferred to other Coast Artillery organizations. Among the transfers to other Coast Artillery units, 734 enlisted men were transferred from the various units of the State Coast Artillery to the Sixty-third Regiment Coast Artillery Corps, 216 to the Sixty-fifth Regiment Coast Artillery Corps, and 71 to the Sixty-ninth Regiment, Coast Artillery Corps. The units of Washington Coast Artillery were redesignated on reorganization as follows:

Washington Coast Artillery, National Guard designation	Designation on reorganization
Noncommissioned staff	Noncommissioned staff, Fort Worden, Wash.
First Band	Thirtieth Band, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Company	Seventeenth Company, Coast Defenses of Puget Sound.
Second Company	Eighteenth Company, Coast Defenses of Puget Sound.
Third Company	Nineteenth Company, Coast Defenses of Puget Sound.
Fourth Company	Twentieth Company, Coast Defenses of Puget Sound.
Fifth Company	Twenty-first Company, Coast Defenses of Puget Sound.
Sixth Company	Twenty-second Company, Coast Defenses of Puget Sound.
Seventh Company	Twenty-third Company, Coast Defenses of Puget Sound.
Eighth Company	Twenty-fourth Company, Coast Defenses of Puget Sound.
Ninth Company	Twenty-fifth Company, Coast Defenses of Puget Sound.
Tenth Company	Twenty-sixth Company, Coast Defenses of Puget Sound.
Eleventh Company	Twenty-seventh Company, Coast Defenses of Puget Sound.
Twelfth Company	Twenty-eighth Company, Coast Defenses of Puget Sound.

NINETY-FIRST DIVISION

General orders of the War Department provided that men procured from Washington under the selective service law should be assigned to the Ninety-first Division. Under the first call the gross quota for the State of Washington was 12,768 men. Credit, however, was given for men in the service under voluntary enlistment in the National Guard or Regular Army, and of these there were 5,472 from the State, leaving a net quota under the first call of 7,296. The first contingent under this call was sent to Camp Lewis September 5–10, 1917, and by November 2, 1917, the entire first quota had been furnished. Later contingents were sent to Camp Lewis until the total number of inducted men from Washington procured under the selective service law exceeded 30,000.

On arrival at Camp Lewis, drafted men from Washington were assigned to various organizations, many of them to units of the Ninety-first Division, which served overseas, arriving in France in July, 1918. The Ninety-first Division was in combat service from September 12 to November 11, 1918.

BATTLE PARTICIPATION

Units which were composed in part of men from the State of Washington are entitled to credit for battle participation as follows:

One hundred and forty-sixth Field Artillery: Chateau Thierry sector (Champagne), July 9–14, 1918; Champagne-Marne defensive, July 15–18, 1918; Aisne-Marne offensive, July 18–August 6, 1918; Vesle sector (Campaigne), August 7–12, 1918; St. Mihiel offensive, September 12–16, 1918; Meuse Argonne offensive, September 26–November 11, 1918.

Field Hospital No. 163: Defensive sector (Lorraine), June 13–August 2, 1918; Aisne-Marne offensive, August 4–6, 1918; defensive sector (Champagne), August 7–17, 1918; Oise-Aisne offensive, August 18–20, 1918; St. Mihiel offensive, September 12–16, 1918; Meuse-Argonne offensive, September 26–November 11, 1918.

Ambulance Company No. 163: Aisne-Marne offensive, July 20–August 6, 1918; defensive sector (Champagne), August 7–17, 1918; Oise-Aisne offensive, August 18–20, 1918; St. Mihiel offensive, September 12–16, 1918; Meuse-Argonne offensive, September 26–November 11, 1918.

GENERAL OFFICERS

General officers who served in the Military Establishment during the World War included Brig. Gen. Benjamin Alvord, born in Washington; Brig. Gen. Edwin B. Babbitt, Brig. Gen. John L. Hayden, and Maj. Gen. Henry C. Hodges, jr., graduates of the United States Military Academy, appointed from Washington, and Brig. Gen. Laurin L. Lawson, former member of Washington National Guard, commissioned an officer in the United States Army from Washington.

COMMANDING OFFICERS, NATIONAL GUARD

The following were commanding officers of National Guard units of the State when called into Federal service: Second Infantry, Washington National Guard, Col. William M. Inglis; First Separate Squadron Cavalry, Washington National Guard, Maj. Hart W. Palmer; First Battalion Field Artillery, Washington National Guard, Maj. Paul H. Weyrauch (discharged with rank of colonel and is now brigadier general in the Reserve Corps); First Battalion Signal Corps, Washington National Guard, Maj. Jesse A. Jackson.

CASUALTIES

The battle casualties among men, who on entry into the military service gave Washington State as their place of residence, were as follows: Battle deaths, 696; wounds, not mortal, 1,971; total casualties, 2,667. (Members of the Navy or Marine Corps not included.)

TOTAL IN SERVICE

The total number of individuals in the military service from the State of Washington was 51,510, consisting of 3,095 officers, 71 Army field clerks, 417 nurses, 16 cadets, and 47,911 enlisted men. (Members of the Navy or Marine Corps not included.)

THE NAVY

The State of Washington was represented by—

Number in the service:
Male	11,703
Female (reserves)	144
Nurses (female)	40
Total	11,887
Casualties:
Male—
Killed in action	9
Lost at sea	3
Accidents	17
Disease	77
Suicide	2
Total	108
Female: Nurses (disease)	1

There were 205 officers of the United States Navy and 581 officers of the United States Naval Reserve force whose World War service was accredited to the State of Washington.

MARINE CORPS

Total number of officers and men from State of Washington in the Marine Corps during the World War	2,596
Number of officers and men who lost their lives in action	61
Number of officers and men who died of disease	18
Number of officers and men who died of other causes	3
Total number of deaths	82

CITATIONS

Time does not permit me to relate here and now the imposing record of promotions and citations earned by our boys in the Army, Navy, and Marine service. However, in this fragmentary record of honorable service rendered by State of Washington men and women, I want to call the roll and record this information touching our honored dead who sleep beyond the seas.

KEY TO PERMANENT AMERICAN CEMETERIES IN EUROPE

FRANCE

No. 1232—Meuse-Argonne American Cemetery, Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, Meuse.

No. 1764—Aisne-Marne American Cemetery, Belleau, Aisne.

No. 34—Suresnes American Cemetery, Suresnes, Seine (near Paris).

No. 636—Somme American Cemetery, Bony, Aisne.

No. 608—Oise-Aisne American Cemetery, Seringes-et-Nesles, Aisne.

No. 1233—St. Mihiel American Cemetery, Thiaucourt, Meurthe-et-Moselle.

BELGIUM

No. 1252—Flanders Field American Cemetery, Waereghem, Belgium.

ENGLAND

No. 107-E—Brookwood American Cemetery, Brookwood (near London), England.

Deceased soldiers from Washington buried in cemeteries in Europe

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
FIRST DIVISION
Anderson, Albert E	Cpl. Co. D, 16 Inf	608	10	36	A
Lawrence, Thaddeus S	Cpl. Co. A, 16 Inf	1232	10	28	A
Roberts, Walter E	Cpl. Co. E, 16 Inf	1232	29	44	A
Axelson, Herman	Pvt. Co. K, 18 Inf	608	4	33	D
Dale, Helge	Pvt. Co. G, 18 Inf	636	10	18	C
Hansen, Wilder C	Pvt. Co. F, 18 Inf	1232	35	39	G
Hendricks, Henry J	Pvt. Co. G, 18 Inf	608	8	36	B
Horsey, Paul C	Cpl. Co. G, 18 Inf	1232	35	9	E
Hughes, Russel	Pvt. Co. H, 18 Inf	608	25	36	B
Lindskog, Elmer F	do	1232	20	42	G
Overaas, Johannes	Pvt. Co. D, 18 Inf	1232	25	6	E
Stumpf, Rudolph M	Pvt. Co. F, 18 Inf	608	4	36	B
Chambers, Wm. E	Pvt. Co. C, 26 Inf	1232	9	46	C
Ciranny, Louis	Pvt. 1 cl. M. D., 26 Inf	1232	19	3	C
Doan, Chas	Pvt. Co. D, 26 Inf	636	3	12	C
Doan, Eben	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 26 Inf	608	12	13	D
Grinstein, Max	Pvt. Co. I, 26 Inf	608	2	36	B
Hilderbrand, Clement W.	do	608	27	17	D
Hreczuch, John	Pvt. Co. L, 26 Inf	1764	53	7	B
Matejack, Edmund	Pvt. Co. B, 26 Inf	1232	18	38	A
McWilliams, John	Pvt. Co. C, 26 Inf	1232	39	19	C
Meystre, Emile F	Pvt. Co. L, 26 Inf	1764	45	6	B
Pfaff, Geo. W	do	608	23	36	B
Runyon, Dillard C	Pvt. Co. I, 26 Inf	608	18	36	A
Shonsey, Thos. B	Pvt. Co. M, 26 Inf	608	10	4	D
Snowden, Stanley	Pvt. Hq. Co., 26 Inf	608	1	36	A
Wharton, Wm. H	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 26 Inf	608	32	33	D
Beltman, Nick	Pvt. Co. L, 28 Inf	636	14	32	A
Blum, John	do	1232	38	7	G
Brict, Stanley F	Pvt. Co. A, 28 Inf	608	34	14	D
Busse, Jos. N	Pvt. Co. L, 28 Inf	608	4	6	D
Carlos, Jas. A	Pvt. Co. A, 28 Inf	608	37	14	D
Dilley, Walter W	do	1232	1	20	H
Enright, Stephen A	Cpl. Co. C, 28 Inf	1232	17	25	H
Hamilton, Welker E	Pvt. Co. A, 28 Inf	1232	20	35	A
Mullin, Elisha	do	608	20	29	C
Willimott, Dudley V	Pvt. Co. M, 28 Inf	1232	24	26	H
Gelden, Chas. S	Pvt. Co. A, 1 M. G. Bn	636	9	21	C
Leach, Alfred W	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. D, 6 F. A	1232	22	28	C
Koon, Carter R	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 1 Engrs	608	29	15	D
SECOND DIVISION
Anderson, Willard C	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 9 Inf	1232	20	40	E
Ashby, John E	do	608	9	36	D
Barrett, Russell	Pvt. Co. E, 9 Inf	1232	19	39	G
Bigas, Ignatius	do	1233	34	25	D
Bolli, John	Pvt. Co. K, 9 Inf	1232	17	38	A
Carlson, Elmer H	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 9 Inf	608	21	8	C
Clements, Allen H	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G, 9 Inf	1764	6	13	A
Folmsbee, Paul W	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 9 Inf	1764	7	7	A
Hilliker, Wm	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 9 Inf	1233	20	3	D
Jamieson, Jerome J	Pvt. Co. H, 9 Inf	1764	20	4	B
Martin, Orion F	Pvt. Co. M, 9 Inf	1232	40	9	F
Miller, Delmar A	do	1233	6	13	D
Miller, Ray H	Pvt. Co. I, 9 Inf	1232	5	15	E
Motespappa, Tony	Pvt. Co. M, 9 Inf	608	11	4	D
Nelson, Arnold V	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H, 9 Inf	1764	32	7	A
Olson, Oscar	Cpl. Co. H, 9 Inf	1232	13	12	E
Pappas, Peter	Pvt. Co. K, 9 Inf	1232	18	21	H
Perry, Geo. T	do	608	10	37	D

Deceased soldiers from Washington buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
SECOND DIVISION—con.
Peterson, Andrew	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 9 Inf	1232	36	18	D
Pietrowsky, Jos	Pvt. Co. L, 9 Inf	608	4	30	D
Prather, Wm. E	Cpl. Co. L, 9 Inf	1232	23	40	E
Roppert, Theodore	Pvt. Co. I, 9 Inf	1232	15	16	A
Schmeling, Herman C	Pvt. Co. K, 9 Inf	608	24	22	B
Willard, Richard C	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 9 Inf	608	38	32	A
Abrams, Walter W	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 23 Inf	608	4	35	B
Armstrong, Wells	Pvt. Co. M, 23 Inf	1764	69	1	A
Beebe, Leon A	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 23 Inf	1232	25	38	H
Bennett, Raymond A	Pvt. Co. M, 23 Inf	34	31	14	B
Blythe, Roderick	do	1764	70	1	A
Dringham, Ira W	Pvt. Co. G, 23 Inf	608	13	9	C
Crown, Jas	do	608	23	10	C
Bollins, Geo. L	Pvt. Co. M, 23 Inf	1232	21	2	H
Balbe, Frank	do	1232	3	8	F
Dodge, Jess Ellis	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 23 Inf	608	15	21	B
Gudopp, Walter R	Pvt. M. G. Co. 23 Inf	608	18	32	D
Hansen, Henry W	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 23 Inf	1232	30	22	E
Hart, Dan N	Cpl. Co. M, 23 Inf	1232	14	45	B
Heskett, Paul R	Pvt. Co. B, 23 Inf	1233	24	3	D
Hoke, Everett	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 23 Inf	1764	37	8	A
Neutens, John B	Pvt. Co. M, 23 Inf	1233	24	29	A
Nottingham, Seymour	Pvt. Co. K, 23 Inf	1764	53	3	A
Reynolds, Ward A	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 23 Inf	1232	20	10	H
Ryan, Logan L	Cpl. Co. C, 23 Inf	1232	15	28	E
Torklep, John A	Pvt. Co. K, 23 Inf	1764	36	4	A
Allen, Jas. Nelson	Pvt. 20 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1764	65	5	A
Auten, Lawrence Leslie	Pvt. 55 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	19	43	B
Beach, Jos. Mansfield	Pvt. 45 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1764	43	5	B
Bull, Albert Noren	Pvt. 20 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	13	31	G
MacGregor, Lewis A	Pvt. 47 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1764	66	3	A
Pond, Philip Marston	Cpl. 67 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1233	24	14	A
Stinson, Daniel Chase	Pvt. 17 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1764	76	6	B
Van Dyke, Thos. John	Pvt. 66 Co., 5 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1232	27	19	E
Bisbee, Earl Brunson	Sgt. 76 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1233	20	5	D
Lindblad, Edw. Jas	Pvt. 79 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	1233	23	4	C
Mead, Archie Leroy	Pvt. 76 Co., 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	608	30	23	C
Miles, Ellis Merle	Sgt. 84 Co. 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	608	25	15	D
Short, Elmer Spencer	Pvt. 84 Co. 6 Regt., U. S. M. C.	34	34	11	B
Bulleri, Giuseppa J	Pvt. Co. A, 4 M. G. Bn	1764	3	1	A
Kencke, Earl A	Cpl. Co. C, 5 M. G. Bn	1232	7	8	F
Deishl, Edw. Jos	Pvt. 23 Co. 6 M. G. Bn., U. S. M. C.	1232	30	14	F
Lannom, Altie	do	1232	11	11	F
Newborg, Geo. Leofred	Pvt. 15 Co. 6 M. G. Bn., U. S. M. C.	1232	18	13	H
Royce, Eugene C	Pvt. Bty. D, 15 F. A	1232	17	28	H
Rueff, Ernest J	Pvt. Co. D, 2 Amm. Tn	1233	21	9	C
THIRD DIVISION
Eller, Earl W	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H, 38 Inf	1232	37	19	H
Faulkner, Earl M	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 7 M. G. Bn	1764	73	6	A
Munro, Donald	Pvt. Co. A, 7 M. G. Bn	1764	38	6	A
Scott, Bert T	Cpl. Bty. A, 10 F. A	1232	27	25	A
Herrera, Demetrio	Pvt. Co. B, 6 Engrs	1232	19	38	G
Parenty, Alfred	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 6 Engrs	608	20	19	A
Smith, Thos. S	Pvt. M. D., 6 Engrs	1232	6	9	F
Teiseth, Jacob B	do	1232	2	43	A
Bloyd, Harry B	Sgt. Co. C, 5 F. S. Bn	1764	8	6	A
Williams, Henry	Pvt. M. D., 5 F. S. Bn	1232	5	2	D
Lang, Anton C	Wag. M. D., F. H. 26	1232	33	13	D
FOURTH DIVISION
Hodge, Wm. G	2 Lt. Co. M., 39 Inf	1232	16	2	B
Baltus, Walter	Pvt. Co. D, 39 Inf	1232	10	30	D
Jurewivz, Jos	Pvt. Hq. Co., 39 Inf	608	8	18	B
Lyford, Arthur W	do	608	18	1	C
Marvin, Elbert	Pvt. Co. H, 39 Inf	1233	29	9	B
Mason, Alf	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 39 Inf	1232	6	32	H
Reano, Jos	Pvt. Co. M, 39 Inf	608	12	16	B
Lewis, Lee C	Capt. Hq. Co., 47 Inf	608	4	14	A
Allen, Thos	Pvt. 1 cl. M. G. Co., 47 Inf	1232	15	33	A
Kalkwarf, Geo. P	Pvt. Co. L, 47 Inf	608	16	8	B
Nelson, John A	Cpl. Co. G, 47 Inf	1232	29	31	C
Papavasil, Jim	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G, 47 Inf	1764	29	12	B
Anderson, Eddie O	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G, 58 Inf	1764	55	3	B
Hauan, Bendik	Pvt. Co. C, 58 Inf	608	25	6	C
Pietrogiacomo, Daniel	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 58 Inf	608	23	1	C
Rongey, Herschel	Pvt. Co. G, 58 Inf	608	37	4	B
Skomesvik, Jacob R	Pvt. Co. I, 58 Inf	608	25	22	B
Arnold, Burton B	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 59 Inf	1232	5	7	F
Chapin, Park S	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 59 Inf	1232	6	45	C
Edson, Al	Sgt. Co. F, 59 Inf	1232	11	5	H
Presalowic, Anton J	Pvt. Co. C, 59 Inf	1232	16	26	E
Remedes, Jas. B	Pvt. Co. G, 59 Inf	1764	80	2	A
Remmerden, John H	Cpl. Co. C, 59 Inf	1232	29	4	H
Morris, Abraham L	Sgt. Co. E, 4 Engrs	608	1	14	D
FIFTH DIVISION
Nolan, Chas. M	Sgt. Co. I, 11 Inf	1232	33	3	E
Taylor, Henry A	Pvt. M. G. Co. 60 Inf	1232	33	38	C
Wilson, Richard M	1 lt. Co. C, 7 Engrs	34	5	5	C
Leidl, Louis	2 lt. Co. D, 7 Engrs	1232	32	13	G

Deceased soldiers from Washington buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
TWENTY-SIXTH DIVISION
Johnson, Henry R	Pvt. Co. C, 101 Inf	1232	19	35	F
McCown, Geo. R	Pvt. Co. E, 101 Inf	1232	37	27	F
Kressler, Lee L	Pvt. Co. H, 102 Inf	608	28	12	A
Metcalfe, Jack	do	608	26	6	A
Cavelero, Charley M	Pvt. Co. D, 103 Inf	1233	3	15	D
Hemphill, Clarence J	1 lt. Hq. Co. 101 F. A	1232	11	40	C
Becker, Henry	Pvt. Bty. C, 103 F. A	1232	13	29	G
TWENTY-EIGHTH DIVISION
Bradburn, Thos. E	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 109 Inf	1232	38	10	D
Chesser, Lewis E	Pvt. Co. G, 109 Inf	1232	1	26	F
Duckworth, Hally O	Pvt. Co. D, 109 Inf	1232	13	32	E
Johnstone, Frank	Pvt. Co. B, 109 Inf	1232	33	22	C
Mabry, Frank T	Pvt. Co. L, 109 Inf	608	9	16	A
Martin, Fred	Pvt. Co. M, 109 Inf	1232	3	25	D
Mason, Robt. P	Pvt. Co. H, 109 Inf	1233	14	19	B
Monson, Fredk. H	Pvt. Co. L, 109 Inf	1232	6	10	A
Morrow, Wm	Pvt. Co. A, 109 Inf	1232	32	38	A
Mullin, Thos	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H, 109 Inf	1232	8	16	C
Shea, Frank W	Pvt. Co. D, 109 Inf	1232	38	23	D
Shields, Arthur N	Pvt. Co. H, 109 Inf	1232	3	39	F
Simpson, Guy L	do	1232	29	8	C
Bardosas, Nicholas	Pvt. Co. H, 110 Inf	1232	4	35	A
Beglen, Jas	Pvt. Co. B, 110 Inf	1232	21	5	C
Carlson, Per E. S	Pvt. Co. K, 110 Inf	1232	27	11	C
Chounos, Geo	Pvt. Co. H, 110 Inf	1232	13	18	E
Cross, Franklin S	Pvt. Co. D, 110 Inf	1232	19	28	B
Gust, Geo	Pvt. Co. C, 110 Inf	1232	35	32	C
Wells, Henry S	Pvt. Co. I, 110 Inf	1232	25	2	C
Winchell, Frank T	Pvt. Co. G, 110 Inf	1233	11	24	A
Angelini, Giovanni	Pvt. Co. L, 111 Inf	1232	4	2	B
Beck, Harry G	Cpl. Co. M, 111 Inf	1232	8	40	B
Bassetti, Mariano	Pvt. Co. F, 112 Inf	1232	22	1	B
Hansen, Einer T	Pvt. Co. D, 112 Inf	1232	37	35	G
Kehrer, John	Pvt. Co. K, 112 Inf	1232	16	14	C
Matson, Henry	do	1232	9	27	B
Nelson, Anton H	do	1232	26	44	C
Huschke, Bernhard H	Wag. Co. E, 103 Engrs	608	33	6	B
Nelson, Walter Arnold	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 103 Sup. Tn	608	30	10	D
THIRTY-SECOND DIVISION
Loiacono, Frank	Pvt. Co. I, 125 Inf	1232	12	21	D
Nielsen, Niels C	Pvt. Co. B, 125 Inf	608	35	36	D
Tira, Fiorenzo	do	608	16	8	A
Black, Chas. M	Cpl. Co. L, 126 Inf	608	15	1	D
Enochs, Paul S	Pvt. Co. M, 126 Inf	1764	38	3	B
Erickson, Olaf F	Pvt. Co. A, 126 Inf	1232	25	11	E
Freese, Frank W	Pvt. Co. L, 126 Inf	1232	40	20	F
Kelly, Dan	Pvt. Co. F, 126 Inf	608	11	2	D
Kristoferson, Alfred	Sgt. Co. A, 126 Inf	1232	19	13	H
Mercer, Bruce A	Pvt. Co. F, 126 Inf	1232	13	26	C
Orr, Russell A	Pvt. Co. G, 126 Inf	608	26	37	D
Runyon, Jos. W	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G, 126 Inf	608	28	6	D
Schmitz, Philip	Pvt. Co. G, 126 Inf	1232	32	15	E
Blomberg, Henry S	1 lt. Co. D, 127 Inf	1232	33	38	A
Mackay, Wm. R	1 lt. Co. M, 127 Inf	1232	39	30	G
Bruhn, Arent A	Pvt. Co. D, 127 Inf	1232	25	43	H
Cescato, Vitterio	Pvt. Co. F, 127 Inf	1232	26	33	A
Deeringhoff, Ferdinand E.	Cpl. Co. A, 127 Inf	1232	31	33	B
Dresser, Frank A	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 127 Inf	1232	2	28	G
Halverson, John A	Pvt. Co. F, 128 Inf	1232	2	40	H
Harem, Andrew	Pvt. Co. A, 127 Inf	1232	1	5	D
Hunsinger, Wm. A	do	1232	13	10	A
Keel, Edw. H	do	608	38	29	A
Mascadri, Angelo	Pvt. Co. L, 127 Inf	1232	40	5	G
Moore, John	Pvt. Co. E, 127 Inf	1232	28	45	B
Wolff, Edw. J	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 127 Inf	34	35	10	B
Harrison, Frank	Pvt. Co. C, 128 Inf	608	34	29	A
Sorensen, John	Pvt. Co. F, 128 Inf	1232	32	44	D
Turley, Clarence L	Cpl. Co. I, 128 Inf	608	30	36	D
Warner, John E	Pvt. Co. B, 119 M. G. Bn	608	5	16	D
THIRTY-FIFTH DIVISION
Doyle, Delta W	Cpl. Co. F, 139 Inf	1232	13	46	C
FORTY-FIRST DIVISION
Baker, Harvey C	Pvt. Co. F, 161 Inf	1233	12	1	B
Brundage, Cleo E	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 161 Inf	1233	33	16	A
Cunningham, Edw. C	Musn. Hq. Co. 161 Inf	608	34	12	A
Oleman, Herbert	Pvt. Co. K, 161 Inf	608	17	20	C
Owens, Russell R	Pvt. Co. B, 161 Inf	1233	14	2	A
Owens, Walter H	Pvt. Co. E, 161 Inf	1233	24	3	A
Webster, Homer E	Pvt. Co. M, 161 Inf	608	13	38	B
Albert, Clarence M	Pvt. Co. K, 162 Inf	1233	15	27	A
Borgford, Gudstein	Pvt. Co. B, 162 Inf	608	18	17	C
Hasle, John	Pvt. Co. K, 162 Inf	636	2	32	B
Johnson, Ted M	Pvt. Co. D, 162 Inf	1233	16	22	C
Altman, Edw. L	Pvt. M. D. 147 M. G. Bn	608	14	18	C
Utz, Chas. A	Pvt. Co. C, 147 M. G. Bn	1233	17	26	A
Lee, Walter C	1 lt. 2 Bn. 146 F. A	1232	10	22	F
Broikovich, Ivan	Pvt. Bty. E, 146 F. A	1232	16	44	D
Starr, Frank J	Pvt. M. D. 146 F. A	1232	17	16	B
Stough, Arthur	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. F, 146 F. A	1232	2	14	F
Howell, Fred	Pvt. Bty. B, 147 F. A	1232	30	35	C
Kruger, Henry J	Pvt. 1 Tn. Bty. 147 F. A	34	22	15	A
Jerson, John A	Sdlr. Co. B, 116 Mil. Pol	608	5	22	A
FORTY-SECOND DIVISION
Gorfredson, Harry	Pvt. M. G. Co. 165 Inf	608	22	1	B
Ward, Claud M	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 165 Inf	1232	14	41	D
Harvey, Lloyd A	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H, 167 Inf	608	2	7	B
Ash, Clark W	Pvt. Co. F, 168 Inf	1764	4	8	A

Deceased soldiers from Washington buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
SEVENTY-SEVENTH DIVISION
Backman, Bror S	Pvt. Co. K, 305 Inf	1232	34	6	A
Beck, Amos	do	1232	30	3	A
Halvorson, Oscar	Pvt. Co. I, 305 Inf	1232	25	4	H
Hand, Walter C	do	34	21	5	A
Kane, Jas	Pvt. Co. G, 305 Inf	1232	36	15	C
Lauritsen, Jas	Pvt. Co. I, 305 Inf	1232	35	37	F
Miller, Grover L	Pvt. Co. M, 305 Inf	1232	13	26	F
Morris, Wm	do	1232	23	3	C
Raison, Arthur	do	1232	15	1	E
Sangston, Jos. J	Pvt. Co. C, 305 Inf	1232	20	42	D
Silversten, Ingvald J	Pvt. Co. M, 305 Inf	1232	7	17	G
Swank, Clarence E	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 305 Inf	1232	18	20	C
Winehart, Earl I	Pvt. Co. E, 305 Inf	1232	18	26	F
Brudwick, Christian J	Pvt. Co. B, 306 Inf	1232	1	16	B
Clare, Thos. J	do	1232	31	40	B
Edwinson, Carl E	Pvt. Co. D, 306 Inf	1232	25	29	G
Gerhauser, Carl F	Pvt. Co. M, 306 Inf	1232	23	42	F
Pulmer, Tony	Pvt. Co. B, 306 Inf	1232	21	23	F
Felt, Roy J	Pvt. Co. M, 307 Inf	1232	29	17	C
Flynn, Leo	do	1232	36	36	H
Redburg, Jos	Pvt. Co. G, 307 Inf	1233	17	10	D
Pattison, Ramson S	2 lt. 308 Inf	1232	24	21	A
Brenner, Louis	Pvt. Co. D, 308 Inf	1232	19	19	H
Gardiner, Elmer L	Pvt. Co. M, 308 Inf	1232	35	27	D
Hanson, Victor E	Pvt. Co. H, 308 Inf	1232	2	1	A
Henley, Clifford	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 308 Inf	1232	14	32	G
Kelly, Kennedy K	Pvt. Co. A, 308 Inf	1232	30	8	B
Korussos, Stillainos	Pvt. Co. L, 308 Inf	1233	21	18	A
Lilledale, Carl H	do	1232	35	29	H
Masse, Martin F	Pvt. Co. G, 308 Inf	1233	26	20	D
McKinney, Geo. H	Pvt. Co. D, 308 Inf	1232	4	6	F
Setwick, John	Pvt. Co. F, 308 Inf	1232	27	10	F
SEVENTY-NINTH DIVISION
Shannon, Charley E	Pvt. Co. B, 313 Inf	1232	1	3	B
Branson, Nelson L	Pvt. M. G. Co., 314 Inf	1232	37	18	H
EIGHTY-FIRST DIVISION
Carson, Ben C	Mech. MG Co., 322 Inf	1233	16	3	D
Gish, Aaron K	Pvt. MG Co., 322 Inf	1232	34	26	D
Glidden, Roy D	Pvt. Co. H, 322 Inf	1233	2	13	B
EIGHTY-SECOND DIVISION
Taylor, Frank H	2 lt., 325 Inf	1232	31	25	F
EIGHTY-THIRD DIVISION
Armstrong, Almiron	Pvt. Bty E, 324 F. A	1233	4	15	D
EIGHTY-FOURTH DIVISION
Anderson, Harold H	Pvt. Co. H, 335 Inf	34	6	4	A
NINETIETH DIVISION
Catlin, Melvin C	Pvt. Co. I, 357 Inf	1232	18	17	A
NINETY-FIRST DIVISION
Lewis, Wilfred	Capt. QMC Hq	608	13	28	D
Moser, Chas. J	Hq. Det. 181 Inf. Brig	1232	5	30	C
Betterton, Cherrill R	1 lt. Co. E, 361 Inf	1232	7	45	B
Anderson, Benj. N	Pvt. Co. D, 361 Inf	1232	9	20	D
Barr, Wm. F	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 361 Inf	1232	23	39	C
Bauers, Frank E	Cpl. Co. M, 361 Inf	1232	29	30	G
Beach, Walter T	Pvt. Co. M, 361 Inf	1232	25	12	G
Bendiksen, Bendik	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 361 Inf	1232	12	43	C
Berndt, Julius	Cpl. Co. I, 361 Inf	1232	38	19	D
Brending, Christof C. J	Pvt. Co. E, 361 Inf	1232	9	18	G
Bubbins, Walter S	Cpl. Co. I, 361 Inf	1232	12	25	A
Cariello, John G	Pvt. 1 cl. M. D. 361 Inf	1232	22	27	C
Carlone, Michael	Pvt. Co. F, 361 Inf	1232	31	27	B
Carlson, Carl M	Mech. Co. I, 361 Inf	1232	28	21	H
Clark, Don W	Sgt. Co. E, 361 Inf	1232	5	17	B
Davis, Samuel A., jr	Sgt. Co. F, 361 Inf	1252	18	4	C
Dumas, Wilfred E	Pvt. M. G. Co. 361 Inf	1232	29	17	B
Enman, Guy C	Cpl. Co. E, 361 Inf	1232	11	10	C
Furzer, Reginald	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 361 Inf	1232	6	34	D
Gaedecke, Edw. A	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 361 Inf	1232	6	44	D
Grono, Harry A	Sup. Sgt., Co. K, 361 Inf	1232	29	28	C
Hamlin, Glezen F	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G, 361 Inf	1232	27	18	E
Harlow, Arthur E	Pvt. Co. L, 361 Inf	1232	6	25	D
Hess, Wm	Pvt. Co. C, 361 Inf	1232	18	4	D
Hill, Arthur	Pvt. Co. D, 361 Inf	1232	4	21	D
Huckaba, Chas	Sgt. Co. I, 361 Inf	1232	5	5	D
Jacobsen, John A	Pvt. Co. L, 361 Inf	1232	20	11	A
Johnson, Clarence C	Cpl. Co. L, 361 Inf	1232	23	35	E
Johnson, Henry J	Pvt. Co. L, 361 Inf	1232	33	14	E
Johnson, Odin J	Pvt. Co. I, 361 Inf	1232	18	30	E
Johnson, Ole N	Pvt. Co. D, 361 Inf	1232	24	13	E
Johnson, Sam	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Co. 361 Inf	1232	37	26	H
Karpinski, Stanley	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 361 Inf	636	3	6	A
Lancaster, Herschel C	Sgt. Co. B, 361 Inf	1232	36	14	A
Larsen, Ferdinand M	Cpl. Co. G, 361 Inf	1232	11	34	E
Larson, Budd C	Pvt. 1 cl. M. G. Co. 361 Inf	1232	15	42	B
Larson, Carl A	Cpl. Co. I, 361 Inf	1232	17	24	D
Larson, Daniel	Mech. Co. B, 361 Inf	1232	22	25	D
Lindeborg, David M	Cpl. Co. C, 361 Inf	1232	26	46	D
Ludke, Paul F	Pvt. Co. C, 361 Inf	1232	30	4	B
Mack, Geo	Pvt. Co. H, 361 Inf	1232	39	38	A
Martin, Geo. L	Cpl. Co. F, 361 Inf	1232	6	46	F
Mastromonaco, Michele	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H, 361 Inf	1252	3	3	B
Mazzone, Domenik	Pvt. Co. C, 361 Inf	1232	3	38	H
McCarthy, Geo. F	Sgt. Co. I, 361 Inf	1232	4	20	E
Mead, Leland C	Pvt. M. D., 361 Inf	1232	3	2	C
Meyers, Vernard J	Pvt. M. G. Co., 361 Inf	1252	6	3	D
Miller, Harry J	Pvt. Co. M, 361 Inf	1232	8	37	D

Deceased soldiers from Washington buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
NINETY-FIRST DIVISION—continued
Nelson, Carl A	Pvt. Co. L, 361 Inf	1232	19	32	H
O'Connor, Clement	Cook Co. L, 361 Inf	1252	10	1	A
Oliver, Mathew L	Pvt. Co. M, 361 Inf	1232	37	37	H
Palmgren, Swan L	Pvt. Co. H, 361 Inf	1232	19	14	A
Paris, Apostolos P	Pvt. Hq. Co., 361 Inf	1232	37	34	A
Patten, Chas. W	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H, 361 Inf	1232	40	32	C
Perrine, Fred V. L	Pvt. Co. D, 361 Inf	1232	2	12	B
Peterson, Gustaf W	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Co., 361 Inf	1232	37	5	A
Rathbun, Guy S	Sgt. Co. K, 361 Inf	1232	16	35	F
Rees, John	Sgt. Co. M, 361 Inf	1232	23	18	G
Requa, Harry E	Pvt. Co. M, 361 Inf	1252	5	4	C
Ringhand, Herman	do	1232	2	32	B
Ronning, Sigurd	Pvt. Co. L, 361 Inf	1232	20	30	B
Root, Daniel W	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 361 Inf	1232	13	35	A
Safer, Frank	Pvt. Co. F, 361 Inf	608	14	21	B
Satterberg, Victor E	Pvt. Co. L, 361 Inf	1232	35	5	E
Schneider, John A	Cpl. Co. I, 361 Inf	1232	2	37	A
Seemans, Harry	Pvt. Co. I, 361 Inf	1232	5	40	G
Shelse, Tom	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 361 Inf	1232	11	34	A
Simonsen, Simon	Pvt. Co. D, 361 Inf	1232	11	12	H
Smith, Verne M	Cpl. Co. L, 361 Inf	1232	31	10	E
Smyth, Thos	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 361 Inf	1232	35	42	B
Sullivan, Elmer M	Pvt. Co. F, 361 Inf	608	2	19	D
Therkildsen, Niels	Pvt. M. G. Co., 361 Inf	1232	21	22	E
Twerdale, Barney J	Pvt. Hq. Co., 361 Inf	1232	35	44	D
Verrell, Cecil L	Cpl. Co. M, 361 Inf	1232	29	33	F
Waltersdorf, Max A	Pvt. Co. M, 361 Inf	1232	28	38	G
Williams, Thos. O	Cpl. Co. D, 361 Inf	1232	7	23	A
Zanoni, John	Pvt. M. G. Co., 361 Inf	1232	2	38	B
Worsham, Elijah W	Capt. 362 Inf	1232	25	39	C
McCleverty, Adelbert D.	2 lt. Co. G, 362 Inf	1232	19	18	E
Beritich, Dominick	Pvt. Co. B, 362 Inf	1232	2	3	E
Cameron, Thos	Mech. Co. C, 362 Inf	1232	15	14	F
Fiorito, Crescenzo	Pvt. Co. C, 362 Inf	1232	26	4	C
Gentry, Clarence W	Pvt. Co. M, 362 Inf	1232	22	30	E
Hughes, Thos	Pvt. Co. A, 362 Inf	1232	28	18	B
Hutsinpiller, Chester E	Pvt. Co. C, 362 Inf	1232	8	28	G
Johnson, Jos. E	Cpl. Co. B, 362 Inf	1232	30	17	E
Martin, Louis A	Pvt. Co. G, 362 Inf	1232	23	34	F
Voltonn, John	Pvt. Co. E, 362 Inf	1232	29	35	A
Wik, Andrew	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 362 Inf	1232	10	2	G
Carlson, Thos	Pvt. Co. L, 363 Inf	1232	12	35	H
Condon, Edw. J	Pvt. Hq. Co., 363 Inf	1252	2	1	A
Dalrymple, John	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 363 Inf	1232	24	33	H
Diver, Alva E	Pvt. Co. M, 363 Inf	1252	21	4	A
Stubbs, Edward	Pvt. Co. G, 363 Inf	1232	38	26	G
Wattelet, Leonard A	Capt. Co. A, 364 Inf	1252	22	2	A
Noble, Elmer J	1 lt. Co. D, 364 Inf	1232	33	17	H
Christen, Henry A	Pvt. M. D., 364 Inf	1233	36	12	A
King, Benj. H	Pvt. Co. D, 364 Inf	1232	30	17	C
Martin, Voyle B	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 364 Inf	1232	14	37	E
Noyer, John E	Pvt. Co. G, 364 Inf	1232	35	35	F
Olson, Oscar	Pvt. Co. F, 364 Inf	1232	13	38	G
Watson, Arthur E	Pvt. Co. I, 364 Inf	608	27	38	D
Wheeler, Logan	Cpl. Co. D, 364 Inf	1232	27	43	G
Young, Harold H	Pvt. Co. B, 364 Inf	1232	2	23	D
Newland, Chas. J	1 lt. Co. C, 347 M. G. Bn	1232	16	19	E
Austin, Samuel F	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 347 M. G. Bn.	608	16	38	D
Bracken, Robt	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 347 M. G. Bn.	1232	9	40	E
Kennedy, Richard	Cpl. Co. A, 347 M. G. Bn	1232	4	5	E
Lentz, Peter	Pvt. Co. C, 347 M. G. Bn	1252	23	4	C
Olsen, Edwin E	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 347 M. G. Bn.	1232	16	25	H
Patton, Darrell V	Pvt. Co. C, 347 M. G. Bn	1232	10	1	F
Richardson, Chas. T	Sgt. Co. C, 347 M. G. Bn	1232	36	10	E
Sonville, Ernest A	Pvt. Co. B, 347 M. G. Bn	1252	19	2	A
Sunde, Jacob	do	1233	34	20	A
Thompson, Geo. C	do	1232	38	16	C
Vogel, Lewis	do	1232	34	27	C
Roberts, Byron B	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 348 M. G. Bn.	1232	33	31	H
Bloom, Bengt M	Pvt. Co. A, 316 Engrs	1232	30	9	E
Chimienti, Michele	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 316 Engrs	1252	8	1	D
Dye, Ronald E	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 316 Engrs	132	30	5	E
Olds, Roscoe C	Cpl. Co. C, 316 Engrs	1232	36	15	F
Saylor, Herbert M	Pvt. Co. A, 316 Engrs	1232	27	11	G
Parker, Paul E	Sgt. 1 cl. Co. B, 316 F. S. Bn.	608	27	10	D
Roder, Wm. A	Pvt. 362 Amb. Co. 316 Sn. Tn.	1252	9	4	B
NONDIVISIONAL ORGANIZATIONS
Dunbar, Walter C	Sgt. Hq. 1 Army	1233	16	18	C
Stavvopolos, Vlases	Pvt. 1 cl. Tp. B, Hq. 1 Army	1233	26	17	B
Turner, Henry E	1 lt. 20 Aero Sq	1232	28	16	G
Kinney, Clair A	1 lt. 49 Aero Sq	1232	37	20	E
Hinkamp, Ted. H	Pvt. 140 Aero Sq	107-E	5	9	D
Hagstrom, Erick	Cook 163 Aero Sq	1233	24	7	A
Long, Jas. A	Pvt. 166 Aero Sq	1232	27	44	C
Grill, Wm. F	Cpl. 658 Aero Sq	34	31	7	B
Taylor, Albert B	Pvt. 875 Aero Sq	1232	32	40	C
Saunders, Herbert	Rgl. Sgt. Maj. Hq. Det. Base Sec. 1 A. S. C.	608	34	14	C
Potter, Jess I	Pvt. Hq. Co. 62 C. A. C	34	30	14	A
Anderson, Chris	Mess Sgt. Bty. F, 65 C. A. C.	1233	34	16	D
Carlson, Arthur J	Cpl. Bty. F, 65 C. A. C	34	35	11	A
Uddenberg, Herman	Wag. Bty. F, 65 C. A. C	1233	30	8	B
Allen, Jas. F	Pvt. B. H. 10 M. D	636	5	22	A
Wright, Fred S	Pvt. 536 Mt. Tk. Co. M. S. Tn.	608	30	32	A
Watts, Cecil F	Pvt. B. H. 29, M. D	107-E	14	3	B

Deceased soldiers from Washington buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
NONDIVISIONAL ORGANIZATIONS—con.
Kantner, Wm. C	1 lt. B. H. 50, M. D	1233	14	1	C
Parker, Samuel	Pvt. B. H. 50, M. D	1233	35	25	A
Nesser, Edw. J	Pvt. B. H. 54, M. D	1233	14	21	A
Breen, John J	Pvt. Evac. Hosp. 1, M. D	1233	32	27	C
Hyde, Colin C	Pvt. Co. B, M. T. C	34	32	12	B
Abrams, Arthur T	Pvt. Co. A, 308 M. T. C	1233	18	3	A
Bragdon, Harold B	Cpl. Overhaul Pk., M. T. C.	34	22	9	B
Duckett, Lloyd O	Pvt. 1 cl. No. 312 Unit, M. T.	34	10	22	A
Wheeler, Leon H	1 lt. Ord. Dept	(1)
Bromley, Dewey V	Pvt. Tp. I, 15 Cav	608	18	33	B
Lawson, Chas., jr	Pvt. Co. A, 1 Gas Regt	608	15	33	B
Mely, Arthur C	Pvt. Co. F, 1 Gas Regt	1232	18	9	D
Gough, Arthur W	Capt. Co. B, 317 F. S. Bn. S. C.	1232	28	28	A
Wiley, Benedict T	Sgt. 1 cl. 35 Sig. Co. S. C	34	38	7	B
Erickson, Peter	Pvt. Co. D, 18 Engrs	34	20	3	A
Ward, Homer Wilber	1 lt. 20 Engrs	34	5	23	A
Durward, Allan J	Pvt. Co. E, 20 Engrs	608	8	18	C
Klockars, John	Pvt. 33 Co. 20 Engrs	34	16	6	A
Nelson, Albert W	Pvt. Co. F, 20 Engrs	608	10	38	B
Queen, Jas. R	Pvt. 28 Co. 20 Engrs	1764	14	11	B
Solberg, Edwin M	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 20 Engrs	1232	25	39	D
Warren, Robt. F	Pvt. Co. D, 20 Engrs	107-E	4	4	A
Swanson, Nels G	Pvt. 1 cl. 11 Co. 20 Engrs	1232	13	35	C
Weagant, Frank Gilbert	Pvt. Tk. Co. 8, 23 Engrs	34	37	5	B
Blee, Robt. C	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Det., 31 Engrs.	34	12	4	C
Dorre, Manuel	Sdlr. Co. A, 32 Engrs	34	16	11	A
Melville, Isaac L	Pvt. Co. E, 57 Engrs	608	36	21	C
Leonard, John W	Cpl. 447 Engrs	1232	25	5	H
Cofield, Fred	Elec. 3 cl. U. S. N	608	7	26	C
Osterberg, Holgar August.	App. Sm. U. S. N	608	8	21	D
English, Math L	Capt. Co. C, 344 Bn. T. C	1232	26	7	A
Kildow, John S	Pvt. Cas. Co. B, Tk. Cps	107-E	1	1	C

[1] To be interred.

Mr. HUDSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. HUDSON. Mr. Speaker, ladies, and gentlemen of the House, as has just been said by my colleague from Michigan [Mr. CLANCY], the press of the country has been filled very thoroughly of late with the activities on the international border both of rum runners and of those designated by this Government to protect the border from contraband. There is a very serious condition before the country. It seems to me we need to deal with this matter in the most careful and most calm manner.

It is not a new thing that liquor should make an insurrection or should attempt to precipitate a civil war. The pages of history of our Nation reveal the fact that the forces of the Government were called out early to quell a similar rebellion instigated by liquor. When we attempt to deal with a great traffic at whose base is appetite and greed we have a very serious problem confronting us.

But I stand here in the well of the House and plead that this House shall give to the Government's enforcement officers the same moral support as is seemingly given, according to the remarks of a few, to the rum runners and liquor traffickers in this so-called contraband. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CLANCY], who addressed the House a moment ago, not on the floor of the House but through the press of the country, made a statement to the effect that he was going back to Detroit to find out about the incident of the shooting of an innocent youth by a customs patrolman. Yet when he got to Detroit he found that that innocent youth, who he said was going down the river to catch pickerel at 1.30 o'clock in the morning, was one of a group that had just left a boat laden with 35 cases of liquor that had been abandoned at the approach of the Government guard, and was then slipping down the river to find out whether he could not recapture the abandoned boat laden with liquor. He was not an innocent youth, as depicted in the newspapers. The report went all over the country that "a poor, innocent youth" had been shot. He was a rum runner.

Mr. SIMMONS. They are all supposed to be innocent when first apprehended, are they not?

Mr. HUDSON. That seems to be so. Now I want to read to you from an editorial from the Detroit Free Press of June 11, under the heading "Mr. CLANCY's Tirade." I read:

MR. CLANCY'S TIRADE

The statements made by Representative ROBERT H. CLANCY, in commenting on the plans of the Treasury Department for fighting the rum runners along the Detroit River, sound unpleasantly like a studied effort to stir up prejudice against, and opposition to, the Federal Prohibition, Customs, and Coast Guard authorities, who are combining in an effort to perform a duty placed upon them by the Constitution of the United States. We do not see how any milder interpretation can be placed upon such rabid assertions as these: "From time immemorial soldiery imposed on a civilian population has been tyrannical, and a portion of the soldiery are always venal, drunken, brutal, or lawless. * * * The people of Detroit must be alert to save their river and lakes for themselves during this incursion of the soldiery."

The prohibition laws as they stand are unfortunately framed. The sooner they can be modified in an orderly way the better. But for the present they are on the books, and it is the business of the Government to enforce them. Even covert suggestion that the Government is perpetrating an abuse in so doing is so reprehensible an action that we will not try to characterize it.

Unquestionably there have been abuses in connection with the endeavors of the Washington Government to enforce provisions of the Volstead Act, some of them exceedingly bad abuses, amounting to murder, and the failure of justice in dealing with the perpetrators is a public reproach. But these abuses have arisen in part because of the attitude of men in responsible positions who speak and think as Mr. CLANCY speaks and presumably thinks. On their side of the fence, these men are just as bad as the Bishop Cannons are on the other.

I plead with you this morning that this House, the highest legislative body in the world, should stand for order and stand with the President of the United States for bringing about law observance, and not for anything else. [Applause.]

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. HUDSON. Not now. I think the gentleman has already had his time on this question. I will yield later.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I wanted to ask the gentleman a very brief question.

Mr. HUDSON. You have had your time.

What I want to bring out this morning is the fact that the Government and the people of this Nation are facing a definite crisis in this matter of lawlessness and crime. Shall it be the part of we men in Congress by our spoken word to encourage the further spread of lawlessness by denouncing our Government officers?

I regret some of the unfortunate tragedies that always have occurred and always will occur in the detection and prevention of crime. I deeply regret that there has always been men placed in charge of enforcement of law during a crisis who perhaps lose their head, and tragedies occur; but I do insist that in most of the cases which have been so recently widely discussed that when the facts are investigated carefully and in the light of sanity, there have been mitigating circumstances which have caused the officers to go their limit.

I repeat, Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, that there is a propaganda abroad which only leads to further violence and crime. I hold in my hand a letter signed by Robert J. Caldwell, with a New York City address, that is printed on a copy press paper sent to me through the mail, which seems to be a copy of a letter sent to the Secretary of the Treasury, and evidently is put out by some organization for propaganda purposes. At the left-hand corner of this copy, underscored and in different type, evidently afterwards placed thereon, are the words, "Governmental murder." I will insert the entire letter.

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 12, 1929.

GOVERNMENTAL MURDER

Honorable SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: I desire to register my righteous indignation and holy wrath at this free-for-all legalized murder on the part of the Government of innocent people under the guise of enforcement of the prohibition act, which apparently does not prohibit murder on the part of the Government.

I protest against this un-American practice as unfair, for Americans will never stand for anything that is unfair. If it is within the law for prohibition officers to shoot up innocent citizens, then damn the law! The least that can be allowed under such circumstances is that the innocent have a chance with the bully who carries a Government badge. They should be permitted to stand up and shoot it out—certainly the innocent should have an equal chance with the guilty.

In the West they have a term that fittingly describes such procedure as is now going on, namely, "a tin-horn sport." Is the Government "a tin-horn sport"?

In former days, when we had an outlaw class in the West, the good citizens of the West formed a vigilantes committee to shoot up the unruly and made their inquiries afterwards. This is what is going to happen under the present circumstances if it continues, and is bad business for the Government to be engaged in.

I am a considerable taxpayer under this Government, and I have a right to know how my money is being used by those whose salaries I help to pay. This wholly contemptible procedure goes farther to promote lawlessness in this country than any other single thing that I know of. We have got to come to an understanding on this situation and quickly. The American people are not putty men to stand for any such gross misuse of power as we have in this sort of outlawry under the patronage and support of the Government.

I am a lifelong Republican, but I don't stand for this sort of thing under my party or any other party, and neither do the people at large. If the Republican Party wants to wreck itself, it is certainly traveling the high road to disaster in countenancing these high-handed proceedings. Murder is murder, whether by the Government or anyone else, and the people of this country are not going to stand idly by and see the United States Balkanized.

Faithfully yours,

ROBERT J. CALDWELL.

I will also put into the RECORD a news statement carried in the daily press of Thursday, June 13, headed "Lakes Rum Runners Unite to Fight U. S." With the further headline, "Giant Combine Perfected at Ecorse Meeting to Combat Government Agencies."

LAKES RUM RUNNERS UNITE TO FIGHT U. S.—GIANT COMBINE PERFECTED AT ECORSE MEETING TO COMBAT GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

Formation of a giant combine of Great Lakes rum runners, to challenge the antismuggling agencies of the Federal Government, from Buffalo to Mackinaw, was completed yesterday in Ecorse at a secret meeting of big operators from all important points of entry on the border, it was learned last night.

The rum chiefs worked out plans for a shuttle system, whereby the traffic will be diverted to Lake Erie or Lake Huron whenever the coast guard border patrol and other dry units are concentrated on the Detroit River.

Headquarters have been established at strategic points along the border, and these points will be held in readiness to go into operation whenever the waterways fronting them are comparatively free from Federal interference.

DEVISE INTELLIGENCE SYSTEM

The operators have devised an extraordinarily widespread and apparently efficient intelligence system whereby the leaders of the giant combine are always aware of what stretches of the border are under the heaviest guard and at what point danger from interruption is, for the moment, relatively remote.

An indication that plans for the combine and the new shuttle system of smuggling have been under consideration for some time is furnished by a survey of Ecorse, Trenton, and Wyandotte boat wells along the river. Speed boats, the favorite smuggling craft a few months ago, are being offered for sale at prices below any that obtained until the recent concentration of Coast Guard patrol craft on the river.

To replace the outmoded speed boats, which would be of little use to combat the heavy seas on Lakes Erie and Huron, runners are refitting tugs, ranging in length from 60 to 80 feet. These craft are being almost completely rebuilt.

INSTALL LARGER MOTORS

Larger motors are being installed on them, to give them greater speed. Their deck houses are being taken off so that there will be as little of the boat as possible to project up into the glare of the searchlights carried by the Coast Guard boats. The steering wheels are being placed in a cockpit so the helmsman's head appears only a few inches above the level of the deck.

The rebuilt tugs, their builders believe, are sufficiently heavy to withstand the pounding of any seas that may be kicked up on the Lakes and will have sufficient speed to get across on schedule.

Down-river rum runners admitted yesterday that liquor smuggling on the Detroit River has been practically at a standstill for the last two or three days. Yesterday and the day before, they said, two border patrol boats have been stationed in the Ecorse Channel, which swings closely in to the American shore.

These boats, they declared, have stopped every boat of every kind, whether fishing or rum-carrying craft. The result was that if any liquor seeped across the border it was only in negligible quantities. At the same time, the runners said, smuggling has been going on as before on the upper reaches of Lake St. Clair and across the St. Clair River.

There were rumors current down river, however, that guards were being placed in larger details on the upper river, in which case the leakage there is likely to be dammed. Down-river smugglers maintained that Buffalo runners were cruising back and forth across the border at their end with almost no let or hindrance.

While few runners were willing to declare flatly that the Federal Government can not stop smuggling along the border if sufficient forces are unleashed, they generally insisted that there will always be enough loopholes or leaks to make smuggling a profitable, though risky, performance.

In any case, the leaders in the new rum merger apparently feel they will be able to clean up goodly profits before the Government has reached the point where it can, or will, place an armed guard, shoulder to shoulder along the entire length of the international boundary line.

In view of these two quotations, can anyone say that we must not measure our words in order that we do not further incite a condition of lawlessness? When one reads of this armed force, who stop at no consideration for life, who, when necessity for gain seems to demand will line their own confederates up against a wall and shoot them down as cattle, as they did in the Chicago massacre, are we to ask our representatives to stand with folded arms and bid the rum runner and thug to smite them on the one cheek and then turn the other for a second slap?

Mr. Speaker, I am not pleading for indiscriminate shooting; I am pleading that the men employed by this Government to enforce its laws may have a square deal and not be hung until judgment can be arrived at sanely and cooly.

Ladies and gentlemen of this House, what are we trying to protect? Homes, families, children, business, yes, Government itself—or the illicit, illegal liquor traffic. Can any man in all the history of the liquor traffic show me anything that has come out of it that is worth protecting? Can any man or any woman in all the history of this Nation show me where this traffic that is to-day defying the Government of the United States has ever brought to pass anything that has been worth while to the Government? Always it has been called an outlaw, and always has it been recognized as something that we would not advertise in our own communities and yet we come here, true only a few, but as the press carries it it would seem as though this entire Congress took the same position, and cry for defense of violators and denounce our officers. I have in my hand here an editorial from the New York World, in which it is said, "Most of the Members of Congress are drinking women and men." I resent this. I say that most of the Members of the Congress, the women and the men, are law-abiding, decent, citizens of this country [applause] and I resent the attacks that are made in the well of this House that produce and will produce a more serious condition than we have to-day before the country.

I understand that there are some men who stand here and make these pronouncements for political reasons. They think they must go back to a constituency that is wet and be known as the mouthpiece of the wet interests on the floor of the House. I pity such a person if there be one and if they have that kind of district. The men who vote for me are the ones who punch the time clock in the factories, but I serve you notice that I have said before these same workingmen in all the great factory cities of my district and in the city of Detroit—and I have as many votes in the metropolitan district of Detroit in my district as has the gentleman who has just preceded me—I have said to them that if they send me to Congress I shall stand for law and order and for the things that mean the upholding of the Government.

You do not have to appeal to such things. I appeal to the better instincts of every man and every woman in this crisis hour of this Nation of ours that we stand by the President and stand by his plea for law enforcement and law observance. [Applause.]

THE GOLDEN RULE IN AMERICAN-FILIPINO RELATIONS

Mr. OSIAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting a speech delivered this day before the Southern Tariff Association.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from the Philippines asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The speech follows:

Mr. OSIAS. I am appreciative of the invitation extended to me to address the agricultural commissioners representing the Southern States and others at this meeting held under the auspices of the Southern Tariff Association. I am sensible that this association is one of the 12 organizations responsible for a recent circular widely distributed containing the following reference to the Philippines:

"The bill [tariff] also denies to the agricultural producers of the United States any measure of protection against products imported from the Philippine Islands. This denial was made in the face of the legal right to impose such duties, although the principle is admitted and declared in the bill. The continued granting of such privileges to residents of the Philippine Islands at the expense of our agriculture constitutes one of the important obstacles to our agriculture becoming normal and regaining its rightful share of the national income.

* * * * * * *

"We also ask that title 3, section 301, of the bill be so changed as to make dutiable agricultural products of the Philippines imported into this country with the understanding that the revenues thus derived shall be segregated and turned into the treasury of the Philippine Government."

I therefore doubly appreciate your invitation because it is prompted by a generous spirit. I wish at the outset to say that the people of the Philippines, including the Americans, are against the present movement calculated to impose duties on our products or place limitations upon Philippine exports coming to the United States at least while the American flag waves over those isles.

I accepted the invitation with alacrity, because I saw in it a challenge and an opportunity. I have always enjoyed being close to my friends as well as my adversaries. I take it that I am now face to face with friends and adversaries at this meeting. It shall be my endeavor to demonstrate that there is absolutely no valid reason why the Philippines should find adversaries in a group representing the Southern Tariff Association, and that there is every reason why you and all true Americans should be stanch friends of the Philippine people.

The excerpt from the circular above referred to consists of two paragraphs. The first paragraph consists of three sentences; the second of one sentence. The first and third sentences are based upon a wrong assumption. They are predicated upon the premise that the agricultural producers of the Philippines are the natural enemies of the agricultural producers of the United States. This I do not admit. I contend that the producers and the consumers of both countries are not enemies but allies.

Wherein, I ask you, is the conflict? I suppose the answer that readily comes to you now is that there is danger because of two of our products, principally sugar and coconut. Let us reason together as friends.

America is essentially a temperate country. The Philippines is a tropical country. Our products rather than being competitive and inimical are essentially supplementary and complementary. We want your products; you need ours. Must there be a conflict? Is that the course dictated by reason and statesmanship?

Let me be more concrete. A great deal has been said and written of late regarding the supposed menace of Philippine sugar to the beet and cane sugar industry in the United States. I hope to convince you that even here there is no antagonism. The people of the United States each year consume in the neighborhood of 5,297,050 long tons. These figures represent the consumption in this country for 1927. Louisiana furnished 0.74 per cent of the total; United States beet sugar was 14.74 per cent of the total; various other sugars of continental United States made up 0.02 per cent of the total. Cuba furnished 54.99 per cent and other foreign countries 0.11 per cent. The Philippine Islands furnished only 8.20 per cent.

Now, I ask what sources do you need to fear? Surely not the Philippine Islands, where your own flag is sovereign to-day, which furnishes but an insignificant fraction of what you need—and remember that 76 per cent of the capital investment in the Philippine industry is controlled by Americans and Filipinos. Even supposing that the Philippines will increase her production, she will not be able to furnish but a minor part of what you consume, and any increase that may in the future be registered will hardly satisfy the normal yearly increase in sugar consumption in the United States.

One more point I wish to bring out. The market for Philippine sugar in the United States is the Atlantic seaboard mainly. Continental beet and cane sugar is marketed chiefly in the South, in the Middle West, and in the West. I tell you we are allies, not enemies. All the propaganda of the last few months depicting the alleged menace of Philippine sugar is but a smoke screen calculated to mislead the American people as to the real source of danger.

Let me pass to another point. We in the Philippine Islands grow coconuts. You do not. You in the South grow cotton. We do not. I think there is need of a considerable stretch of the imagination to perceive the existence of a dangerous economic conflict between the Southern States and the Philippines. We in the Philippines to-day are about the greatest purchasers of your cotton products. Cotton manufactures occupy the first place among our principal imports from the United States. In 1927 we imported cotton products in the amount of over $12,000,000. You furnished these products. Every man, woman, or child in the Philippines is spending over $1 each year for your cotton products. The potential purchasing power will grow each year. We take what you produce in abundance. We send you what we produce but which you do not grow. Is not this the essence of modern trade and commerce? Has it come to such a pass that trade and commerce should be instruments of trouble and not of harmony among peoples under the same flag?

But I seem to sense that some are thinking of the conflict between cottonseed oil and coconut oil. Here, some of you say, is a real conflict of economic interests. The total amount of coconut oil and oil in copra available in the islands a year is about 230,000 tons. The consumption of these oils in the United States annually is about 270,000 tons. The coconut oil is used chiefly for the making of soap. The kinds of oil used are becoming more specialized. Because of the importation of coconut oil to this country a great deal more of the cottonseed oil you produce has been utilized for edible trades, thereby enabling you to command better prices and reap greater profits. Cottonseed oil is a by-product. You have now an overproduction of cotton. To increase cottonseed-oil production is to endanger your major interest. I should add that we are among your best customers for your meat products and your dairy products, consisting of butter, cheese, and milk. It is clearly to the interests of Americans to enhance, not to cripple, the purchasing power of the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands.

So much for the wrong premise that there is conflict between the agricultural producers of the United States and the people of the Philippines. Let me turn your attention to the second sentence, which says: "This denial was made in the face of the legal right to impose such duties * * *." In the tariff hearings some have pressed this contention. I admit that the United States has the legal right to impose duties. If I did not admit this, I would not be here and in Congress voicing the opposition of the Philippine people. If you did not have the legal right, there would be no need of protesting.

But let me ask the conscience of America: Admitting as I do that you have the legal right to impose duties on Philippine products, do you have the moral right? It is unthinkable that there should be any American, conscious of his country's past and proud of the history of his people's love of fairness, claiming that America has the moral right to impose duties upon Philippine products coming to this country when we are absolutely powerless to legislate on matters affecting tariff relations between America and the Philippines. Under the present status of the Philippines, only the American Congress has this legal right. You have known this fact. You have the legal right to impose the most exorbitant duties upon Philippine exports to this country. We are without power to levy duties of any kind upon American products sent to the Philippines. As long as the American flag waves over the Philippine Islands, American agricultural and industrial products will go to my country duty free and without limit. I ask you, in the name of right and fairness and justice, does America have the moral right to impose duties upon Philippine products or place limitations upon our exports to this country?

Let us now take up the second paragraph I quoted from your circular. In view of what I have said, is there still one among you who, jealous of America's honor, will invoke the legal right and the power and the strength of America to levy duty upon the products of a defenseless people who, by the fortunes of war, came under the protection of your Stars and Stripes? Of course, there is a plausible qualification in the statement which gives some semblance of fairness. I refer to this phrase: "* * * with the understanding that the revenues thus derived shall be segregated and turned over into the Treasury of the Philippine Government." That seems fair. It is not right. It is violative of a principle. You are also proposing to convert us into objects of charity. This is indefensible. If you have the right to send your products to my country duty free and without limit, that right ought to carry with it the corresponding obligation in full measure to reciprocate. Such is my understanding of American justice from my study of America's history and American institutions. I trust that your action and the action of Congress will not disillusion me and the millions of my people across the sea.

I wish I had more time, but I do not wish unduly to prolong this discussion. The record of the hearings of the Ways and Means Committee is replete with facts, figures, and statements which may well serve as the basis of judgment with respect to the economic relations that should exist between the United States and the Philippines. I will just add some bits of information. The principal imports of the Philippines from the United States are: Cotton manufactures, iron and steel and manufactures of same, gasoline, kerosene, and lubricating oil, automobiles and parts of same, wheat flour, meat and dairy products, paper and manufactures of same, silk and manufactures of same, and rubber goods. Our principal exports to the United States are: Centrifugal sugar, coconut oil, copra, hemp, cigars, lumber, and hats. The mere enumeration of these articles of imports and exports should be convincing proof of what I contended at the outset, namely, that we have products that you need and you have products that we want, and that the products of this temperate country and those of that distant tropical country are not inimical but essentially supplementary and complementary.

Another information. The Philippines is not now and will never be a 1-crop country. Philippine agriculture is well diversified. To prove this let me present a few figures. In 1927 the area planted to rice was 4,465,000 acres; corn, 3,387,000 acres; coconuts, 1,236,000 acres; manila hemp, 1,058,000 acres; sugar cane, 586,000 acres. Unlike other sugar-producing islands the Philippines is by no means a single-crop country, because, compared with the area planted to sugar cane, about eight times as much land is used for the cultivation of rice, about three times as much is used for corn, twice as much for coconuts or hemp.

Before I close permit me to invite your attention to two outstanding facts: First, the future of American trade is of greatest promise with the peoples of the Pacific; second, the success of the development of American trade and commerce in the Far East is dependent chiefly upon the friendship and good will of the people more than upon any other factor. I think every fair-minded man will admit the truth of these facts. I consider it unnecessary to speak at length clarifying points which are so self-evident. I sometimes wonder whether Americans in general are fully awake to their opportunities in the Orient. Do all of you know that in 1913 America's import and export trade in Asia and Australasia amounted to $485,000,000 and that in 1927, or only 14 years afterwards, it reached the great sum of $2,744,000,000? Have you ever stopped to realize that a great deal of this is due to the understanding and friendship existing among the peoples there by virtue of the policy of altruism which America announced at the inception of her occupation of the Philippines?

It is claimed that the Philippine people have been greatly benefited by American rule. I am among the first to admit it, and there is no disposition on the part of my people to begrudge credit where credit is due. Yet I trust it will not be deemed unseemly on my part to remind you that America has likewise been greatly benefited by her contact with us not only because of the great benefits that have accrued to you in terms of dollars but in terms of good will and friendship.

That you may the better realize America's opportunity in the Orient, permit me to quote the following words of Capt. Robert Dollar, president of the Dollar Steamship Lines:

"* * * If, somewhere in the United States, a new city were to spring suddenly into existence—a city of, let us say, 500,000 inhabitants, in which the houses were without water supply, electricity, or telephones; where there were no pavements, sewers, typewriters, or street cars; where horses and donkeys were the fastest means of traveling; and where seventeenth, sixteenth, and even tenth century methods still prevailed—what would happen? Millions of dollars would be spent to rush branch railway lines to that city. Motor highways would be laid down to connect it with the rest of the country. Even before these plans could be completed an army of salesmen would flood that city, on foot if need be, and from every State in the Union, and would almost smother it.

"Magnify this imaginary market a thousand times, move it from America to Asia, and you have a brief but fairly accurate picture of the possibilities which exist in the Orient for the development of foreign trade."

Nothing will hasten the realization of this dream for America than the continuation of a policy of justice and fairness with us. What America does in the Philippines is interpreted throughout the Far East as a manifestation of America's true spirit. So thoroughly do I believe in this that I simply fail to understand how even now propagandists of special interests are already shaking the confidence of millions of potential customers in our part of the globe by announcements that the farmers of this country "have just begun the battle against competition from the Philippines." The mere presentation of measures discriminatory to America's wards has not helped business. It has caused incalculable harm.

Furthermore, it has once again demonstrated to the Philippine people that the present status of their country is unsatisfactory and anomalous. Many are beginning to wonder whether the protestations with respect to the promotion of our liberty and our prosperity are not after all based upon a foundation of quicksand. Yet we have in the past proven true and loyal to America because of our unshakable faith in her glorious traditions and in her sacred promise. When the world was undergoing a catastrophic upheaval and America was drawn into the World War circumstances compelled you to withdraw practically all your forces from Philippine shores. Conscious that you were then fighting for a great principle of national and international life, convinced that you were fighting for the rights and liberties of small nations, we in those trying days of the Great War clung to you with filial affection. We recalled the promises of your Executives that America came to our country not to exploit but to liberate us. We remembered the policy toward the Philippines ofttimes reiterated in the platforms of the political parties of this country. We kept in mind America's sacred promise to grant us our independence bearing the sanction both of the legislative and executive branches of this great Government. We never lost sight of the principles of the great Magna Charta of American liberties. Will you now permit in these days of peace that any step shall be taken that shall be interpreted as a complete reversal of your avowed policy? As the official spokesman of my people I can not believe that America will take steps not conducive to the life, liberty, and happiness of the people inhabiting those beautiful isles of the Pacific poetically known as the Pearl of the Orient Seas.

From various quarters, in the course of this tariff discussion, we notice the cry of menace to your industries from Cuba and the Philippines. Time and again have I heard and read my beloved dependent country placed in the same category with the independent countries for economic purposes. In all candor I say this is unfair, illogical, unjustifiable. Place us first on an independent basis politically before you treat the Philippines as an independent country economically.

My plea is for the observance of the Golden Rule in American-Filipino relations. We in the Philippines wish to see you Christian people in the West ever happy, prosperous, and free. Do you wish us Christian people in the East any less? I prefer not to believe it. Then, you can not be the enemies but the friends of the people of the Philippines. Economically and politically, citizens of America, as ye would that others do unto you, I pray, do ye unto the Filipinos likewise.

PROHIBITION

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen, I have asked for these few minutes because the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HUDSON] made a statement which I believe ought not to go unanswered. I do not believe there is any Member of the House, wet or dry, who is not seeking to do all he can for law enforcement. The criticism we are making is that the enforcement of this particular law seemingly requires a disregard of law. That is the situation. We ought to be able to discuss this very important question and get away from personalities and the make-up of any Member's district. No one can say who knows my record that at any time I have refused to vote for appropriations for the enforcement of the law and in fact I have always asked for more appropriations. But the question that confronts us to-day is not the wet or dry issue. It is a question of what we are going to do with a law that seemingly requires utter disregard of law to enforce it. Here is the widow Wirkkula and what does she say? I am reading from a news item in to-day's Washington Daily News. She says—

> It just does not seem right, because the poor boy who shot at us and killed Henry really is not to blame; he is the law. My husband and the brother with whom I live voted dry at the last election.

That tells the story. "He is the law."

Now, gentlemen, if four or five men get together and conspire to fix prices on any commodity in restraint of trade and they are discovered and then attempt to run away you would not justify shooting at them and killing them. The law which prohibits the fixing of prices is a malum prohibitum, a statutory offense, just as the transportation or sale of liquor is only a statutory offense. It does not involve moral turpitude. It is not a repulsive crime; it is a statutory offense.

If a man were violating the banking law and seeks to run away, a mere misdemeanor, or under the agricultural law he was caught bringing in seeds and plants that he ought not to bring in you would not shoot him dead.

So, gentlemen, be sensible about this thing. As I said the other day, it is going to lead us into serious trouble, because I fear that somewhere, at some time, in some place, the people will resent these indiscriminate and unjustifiable killings and we will have serious trouble.

That is the question, and that is what we want to have investigated—whether or not it requires men to be armed with shotguns and machine guns, and whether it requires an armed force to enforce this particular law. I do not believe you can refer to any law on the statute books that requires such kind of enforcement. I can not think of one. The narcotic law has a solid public opinion back of it, and we have no trouble about it. All the people are back of it. There is seemingly a great demand for liquor in the country, otherwise there would not be any market for it. So, gentlemen, do not put all the blame on the rum runner. True, he is violating the law; but unless there was a ready-cash market, unless there was an enormous demand for liquor we would not have the thousands of rum runners. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HUDSON] criticizes the New York World. I am sure the New York World requires no defense. I will say, though, that it is rendering a great public service in the fight that it is waging against prohibition in showing up the absurdities of the law and the impossibility of its enforcement. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, let me suggest that we have had five or six oratorical displays here from gentlemen on the other side and none on this, and I suggest that we take the rest of the day to get recruited. [Laughter.]

MASSACHUSETTS SOLDIERS BURIED IN AMERICAN CEMETERIES IN EUROPE

Mr. McCORMACK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by printing a list of the deceased soldiers from Massachusetts in the permanent American cemeteries in Europe.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following:

KEY TO NAMES OF PERMANENT CEMETERIES IN EUROPE

FRANCE

No. 1232—Meuse-Argonne American Cemetery, Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, Meuse.

No. 1764—Aisne-Marne American Cemetery, Belleau, Aisne.

No. 34—Suresnes American Cemetery, Suresnes, Seine.

No. 636—Somme American Cemetery, Bony, Aisne.

No. 608—Oise-Aisne American Cemetery, Seringes-et-Nesles, Aisne.

No. 1235—St. Mihiel American Cemetery, Thiaucourt, Meurthe-et-Moselle.

BELGIUM

No. 1252—Flanders Field American Cemetery, Waereghem, Belgium.

ENGLAND

No. 107–E—Brockwood American Cemetery, near London, England.

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
FIRST DIVISION, 16 INFANTRY
Beck, Henry A.	Pvt. Co. D.	1764	23	11	B
Greenwood, Wm. F.	Cpl., Co. D.	1764	9	13	B
Kelley, John C.	Pvt. Co. E.	1232	32	17	B
Kelley, Michael F.	Pvt. Co. I.	608	28	25	A
Lafoie, Leo J.	Cpl. Co. D.	1232	27	36	C
O'Donnell, Fredk. W.	Cpl. Co. G.	608	28	2	D
Sunderland, Samuel	Pvt. Co. H.	1232	1	25	E
FIRST DIVISION, 18 INFANTRY
Shepard, Geo. S.	1 lt. Co. C.	636	10	11	C
Meehan, Geo. R.	2 lt. Co. E.	1232	34	44	B
Ash, Jos.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D.	636	8	11	C
Crane, Edward B.	Mech. Co. M.	1233	24	19	B
Cranna, John P.	Cpl. Co. F.	34	24	17	B
Erickson, Gustaf.	Pvt. Co. E.	636	4	7	D
Jalbert, Jules.	Pvt. Co. B.	1232	21	15	D
Lange, Adelard.	Pvt. Co. K.	1232	12	10	F
Martin, Wm. F.	Pvt. 1 cl. M. D.	1232	17	42	G
Mercuri, Angelo.	Mech. Co. K.	34	33	12	B
Nichiporuk, Stefan.	Pvt. Co. G.	1233	1	5	A
Ryeholm, Gunnar F.	Pvt. Co. D.	1232	26	10	B
Smith, Jos. W.	Pvt. Co. C.	1232	30	28	A
Smith, Percy A.	Pvt. Co. K.	34	13	10	B
FIRST DIVISION, 26 INFANTRY
Amory, Thos. D.	1 lt. Co. I.	1232	34	18	E
Sheridan, Phillip B.	2 lt. Co. L.	1232	33	35	B
Bodah, Wm.	Pvt. Co. B.	608	1	4	D
Briggs, Ralph S.	Pvt. Co. F.	1232	25	13	F
Chaput, Philip A.	Cpl. Co. E.	1233	10	24	B
Dougan, Francis E.	Pvt. M. G. Co.	1232	22	19	A
Fuller, Andrew A.	Pvt. M. G. Co.	1232	12	14	B
Gagnon, Armand A.	Cpl. Co. A.	1232	7	6	D
Gavin, John.	Pvt. 1 cl., M. G. Co.	1232	39	1	B

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
FIRST DIVISION, 26 INFANTRY—continued
Gittemore, Frank	Pvt. Co. A	1232	22	14	E
Kane, Daniel	Pvt. Co. F	1233	33	24	A
Kwiatkowski, Marcel	Pvt. Co. L	1232	7	25	C
Kyrus, Mathew F	Cpl. Co. E	1232	19	12	A
Menicheos, Geo. K	Pvt. Co. H	1232	35	9	A
Olstein, Edward	Pvt. 1 cl., Co. A	1232	22	37	C
O'Neill, Jas	Pvt. Co. E	1232	21	25	A
Rzeznik, Frank	Pvt. 1 cl., Co. B	608	32	5	D
Walsh, Jas. L	Pvt. Co. H	1232	30	20	H
FIRST DIVISION 28 INFANTRY
Haydock, Geo. G	1 lt. Co. L	636	15	14	C
Buchanan, Max C	2 lt. Co. D	636	10	12	C
Crawford, John Douglas	2 lt. Co. H	636	16	19	C
Dolan, Edward M	Sgt. M. G. Co	608	14	17	D
Green, Clarence E	Pvt. 1 cl. M. D	1232	13	6	C
Karpik, Adam	Pvt. Co. H	1232	10	43	F
Kennedy, Martin P	do	636	4	10	C
Malino, Dominick	Pvt. Co. A	1232	12	29	A
Mathews, Leon R	Pvt. M. D	636	8	21	C
McKeon, Jas. J	Pvt. Co. A	1232	35	25	F
Tobey, Herbert A	Sgt. Co. F	636	1	11	C
Trombley, Jos. A	Sgt. M. G. Co	1232	13	19	C
Walshe, Michael	Pvt. Co. D	1232	12	1	H
Windahl, Bert B	Pvt. Co. I	608	27	23	C
Woytovich, Romey	Pvt. Co. D	1232	6	23	A
FIRST DIVISION, FIRST MACHINE GUN BATTALION
Smith, Jas. H	Pvt. Co. B	1232	1	23	H
FIRST DIVISION, SECOND MACHINE GUN BATTALION
Achenbach, Max	Pvt. Co. A	1232	6	17	E
Brunt, John J	Pvt. Co. B	1232	40	35	C
Desrochers, Rodolphe	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C	1232	12	30	B
Hallisey, John I	Sgt. Co. A	1232	20	45	C
Papanastasion, Stawtis	Pvt. Co. B	1232	40	24	D
Potz, Robt	Pvt. Co. A	1232	6	44	B
Conolly, Micheal	Pvt. Co. A, 3 M. G. Bn	1232	35	17	C
O'Neill, Cornelius	Pvt. Co. C, 3 M. G. Bn	1232	1	39	A
Heal, Howard W	Maj. M. D., 6 F. A	34	32	4	B
Warsoski, John F	Pvt. Bty. C, 6 F. A	608	5	37	D
Burham, Arthur Ralph	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Co., 7 F. A	1232	14	10	E
Cartland, Wm. H	Sgt. Bty. B, 7 F. A	636	10	20	C
Davidson, Harold	Wag. Sup. Co., 7 F. A	608	3	32	A
Guartha, Chas. J	Cpl. Bty. E, 7 F. A	636	4	17	D
Jasset, Ernest L	Pvt. Bty. B, 7 F. A	636	9	19	C
Louden, John J	Pvt. Bty. D, 7 F. A	636	13	16	C
Quill, John	Pvt. Bty. F, 7 F. A	1233	33	23	A
Dwight, Lawrence	2 lt. 1 Trn. Mtr. Bty	34	2	9	B
Batchelder, Raymond H	Pvt. Co. F, 1 Engrs	1233	20	24	B
Cormier, Clifford	Cpl. Co. E, 1 Engrs	1233	21	18	B
Bel Bove, Antonio	Pvt. Co. C, 1 Engrs	1242	16	33	A
Dollard, Wm. B	Pvt. 1 cl. M. D., 1 Engrs	608	8	1	D
Hornby, Wm H	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 1 Engrs	636	11	22	D
Perkins, Byron R	Pvt. Hq. Co., 1 Engrs	608	26	1	D
Petitpas, Edward C	Cpl. Co. E, 1 Engrs	1232	6	27	H
Kittredge, Wm. F	Pvt. Co. F, 1 Amm. Tn	1232	34	26	B
Nolan, Lawrence R	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 1 Amm. Tn	1233	2	11	B
SECOND DIVISION, 9 INFANTRY
Smith, Willard	Capt. Co. I	1233	15	22	B
Neal, Ralph T	2 lt. Co. L	1232	8	30	E
Phelps, Harold H	2 lt. Co. C	1232	9	45	B
Adams, Carl C	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D	608	6	32	D
Bishop, Wilfred D	Pvt. Co. B	1232	37	42	D
Breen, Timothy F	Pvt. Co. E	1764	78	13	A
Buono, Tony	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E	1232	35	24	B
Chartier, David	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F	608	1	32	D
Clough, Harmon	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C	608	20	36	D
Cormier, Peter	Pvt. Co. I	608	34	8	C
Crowley, Thos. H	Pvt. Co. K	1232	32	24	G
Dansky, Alekex	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E	1764	68	3	B
Dillendiks, Parfen	Pvt. Co. G	608	12	37	D
Donabedian, Kirker S	Pvt. Co. H	608	1	23	B
Flynn, Geo. M	Pvt. M. G. Co	1764	63	6	B
Foss, Saxton C	Pvt. Co. F	1764	18	13	A
Frost, Frank H	Pvt. Co. B	1764	7	10	B
Gavin, Patrick J	Cpl. Co. C	1233	29	29	C
Gormley, John R	Pvt. M. G. Co	608	3	3	D
Kefalas, Paul D	Pvt. Co. E	1232	39	22	G
Labrache, Leo W	Pvt. Co. L	1232	39	4	F
Lacolla, Stephen	Pvt. Co. C	608	6	36	D
McGaffigan, Daniel L	Pvt. Co. L	1233	27	13	B
McKenney, Chas. O	Cpl. Co. C	608	18	3	D
McVey, Geo. L	Pvt. Co. M	1233	15	29	C
O'Hearn, Edward T	do	1232	18	27	H
Parmenter, Leslie B	Cpl. Co. F	1232	1	17	D
Peel, Robt	Pvt. Co. F	1764	78	8	A
Reaneran, Oliver J	Pvt. Co. M	1232	18	23	A
Steele, Francis C	Sgt. Co. H	608	29	34	C
Ursolao, Giro	Pvt. Co. G	1764	71	8	B
Wall, Wm. T	Cpl. Hq. Co	1764	50	1	B
Wenzlow, Kostante	Sgt. Co. A	1232	27	32	D

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
SECOND DIVISION, 9 INFANTRY—con.
Wile, Lawson A	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H	1232	29	3	D
Wyman, Arthur C	Pvt. Co. C	608	8	9	C
SECOND DIVISION, 23 INFANTRY
Brown, Fred N	1 lt. Co. H	1232	15	24	E
Aggelakos, Constantinos.	Cpl. Co. K	1232	14	17	H
Alekno, Frank	Pvt. Co. B	1232	6	42	E
Amieten, Stanley	Pvt. Hq. Co	1232	4	34	E
Armstrong, Arthur S	Pvt. Co. L	1232	10	24	E
Arsenault, Manual	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I	1764	111	9	B
Backer, Aleksander	do	1764	90	7	A
Bradford, Thos	Sgt. Co. H	1232	20	27	D
Breton, Jos. J	Pvt. Co. L	1764	8	2	A
Bruder, Emil	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D	34	5	15	B
Budzak, Stephen A	Pvt. Co. D	1764	72	9	A
Bullock, John	Pvt. Co. A	1232	22	5	D
Cabana, Merton	Pvt. Co. I	1764	37	1	B
Ceamato, Antonio	do	1764	72	11	A
Chartier, Louis W	Pvt. Co. L	1764	17	1	A
Clamore, Wilfred	Pvt. Co. K	1764	45	7	A
Cooper, Daniel F	Pvt. Co. E	1764	87	10	A
Costello, Edmund N	Pvt. Co. I	1764	57	2	A
Demodica, Domenica	Pvt. Co. M	1764	15	12	A
Divesto, Matto	Pvt. Co. E	1232	16	14	D
Donivan, Timothy J	Wag. Hq. Co	1764	2	4	B
Ferrier, Alexander	Mech. Co. D	1232	33	33	G
Fielding, Lawrence W	Pvt. Co. H	1232	28	9	H
Filippello, Dominik	Pvt. Co. M	1764	64	4	A
Gilberti, Amedeo	Pvt. Co. K	1764	7	3	A
Girouard, Jos	Pvt. Co. D	1232	28	38	H
Grayson, Jas. W	Pvt. Co. M	1764	34	11	A
Greenlaw, Walter L	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H	1232	8	24	E
Healey, Richard	Pvt. Co. L	1764	44	10	B
Holloway, Bernard C	Pvt. Co. E	608	10	5	D
Iannetta, Euginio	Pvt. Co. G	608	28	32	D
Johnson, Frank R	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C	1232	37	26	A
Johnston, Albert L	Mech. Co. H	603	7	17	B
King, Jas. A	Pvt. Co. M	1764	21	7	B
Koch, Brune	Pvt. Co. K	1764	58	6	A
Korecz, Peter H	Pvt. M. D	1764	65	3	B
LaJeunesse, Eugene A	Pvt. Co. H	1764	10	3	A
Lawson, John F	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L	1764	72	13	A
Lindquist, Carl	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Co	1233	11	3	D
Lozzi, Antonio	Pvt. Co. M	34	8	11	B
Lucchesi, Mario	do	1764	60	7	A
Luke, Stanley H	Bglr. Co. G	1232	12	34	G
Lynch, Andrew	Pvt. Co. M	34	15	11	B
Majolis, Jos	Pvt. Co. H	608	15	41	D
Manning, Jas. P	Pvt. Co. L	608	3	22	C
Mansfield, Gordon W	Cpl. Co. I	1764	90	3	A
McNamara, Ernest R	Pvt. Co. L	1232	39	36	F
Nee, Michael J	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G	608	19	37	B
Novello, Lorenzo	Pvt. Co. H	608	14	13	D
O'Brien, Martin R	Pvt. Co. M	1764	41	9	A
Paradine, Patrick	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A	1764	19	2	A
Patti, Domenico	do	1764	8	3	A
Rochin, Jek	Pvt. Co. M	1764	73	1	A
Rogers, Thos. J	Pvt. Co. I	1232	33	38	F
Russell, Ernest	Pvt. Co. M	1764	56	12	A
Russell, Thos. L	Pvt. Co. E	1764	6	2	A
Russo, Jos	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L	1764	49	4	A
Scimone, Laborio	Pvt. Co. F	608	7	34	A
Stoddard, Jos. M	Pvt. Co. K	1764	29	9	A
Taylor, Jos. W	Pvt. Co. H	608	30	35	D
Tenbroeck, Edward A	Sgt. Co. K	1764	17	6	B
Turcotte, Geo. L	Pvt. Co. L	1764	39	11	A
Valcourt, Lee P	Pvt. Co. K	1764	79	6	A
Beillette, Jos. A	Pvt. Co. M	1764	27	9	A
Verdowkas, Geo	Pvt. Co. C	1764	81	12	A
Viola, Jas	Pvt. Co. G	1233	5	6	A
Walendziak, Walter	Pvt. Co. H	1232	28	24	G
Zona, Orcalo	Pvt. Co. M	34	30	9	B
Zuna, Sebastian	do	1232	34	11	B
FIFTH REGIMENT, U. S. MARINE CORPS
Wass, Lester S	Capt. 15 Co	608	12	16	D
Ashley, Thos. W	2 lt. 67 Co	1764	63	6	A
Vose, Howard Lewis	2 lt. 55 Co	1764	17	13	A
Wahlstrom, Fredk	2 lt. Hq. Co	1232	32	38	B
Bock, Fred Eugene	Pvt. 51 Co	1764	76	7	A
Bradbury, Eben, jr	Pvt. 55 Co	1764	84	7	A
Cannon, Rollin Mariner.	Pvt. 18 Co	1764	45	9	B
Cooke, Ralph	Pvt. 16 Co	34	31	15	B
Fasano, Jos	Pvt. 43 Co	1764	51	3	A
Ferranti, Ernest Jos	Pvt. 51 Co	1764	38	5	A
Fraser, Gilbert Duncan	Pvt. 13 Co	1764	58	10	A
Johnson, Paul T	do	1232	13	39	E
Joy, John Jos	Pvt. 51 Co	1232	20	44	C
Kimball, Richard	Pvt. 16 Co	1764	27	2	B
Morgan, Jas. D	Pvt. 51 Co	528	35	15	C
Morse, Clyde Webber	Col. Hq. Co	1232	15	35	H
Paine, Herbert Adams	Sgt. Hq. Co	1232	2	28	D
Rourke, Arthur Jos	Pvt. 8 Co	1232	2	38	D
Stinson, Daniel C	Pvt. 17 Co	1764	45	2	A
Toomey, Robt. J	Pvt. 49 Co	1764	9	2	B
Wilson, Herman C	Gy. Sgt. 49 Co	1764	22	7	A

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
SIXTH REGIMENT, U. S. MARINE CORPS
Burr, Carleton	2 lt. 74 Co	1764	76	2	A
Bassani, John A	Cpl. 74 Co	1764	11	4	B
Brough, Frank C	Pvt. 82 Co	1764	17	8	A
Greenspan, Harry	Pvt. 79 Co	1233	31	2	D
Love, John D	Sgt. 79 Co	1232	11	22	H
MacDonald, Hugh Alex	Sgt. 97 Co	608	34	22	C
Noonan, Wm. John	Pvt. 75 Co	1232	38	41	H
Parker, Donald M	Cpl. 80 Co	1233	20	2	B
Sullivan, Daniel A	Pvt. 82 Co	1764	45	6	A
Taylor, Geo. Russell	Pvt. 96 Co	1764	5	2	B
Veno, Geo. Jas. R	Pvt. 95 Co	1764	52	2	B
Warren, Samuel	Pvt. 76 Co	1233	2	14	B
Woodman, Dexter E	Pvt. 96 Co	1232	35	25	E
McBeth, Chas	Pvt. Co. B, 4 N. G. Bn	1233	1	29	D
Bartley, Jas. J	Cpl. Co. A, 5 M. G. Bn	1232	30	32	B
Harkins, John E	Pvt. Co. D, 5 M. G. Bn	1232	40	43	A
Manning, Frank W	do	1764	31	9	A
Minahan, Chas. W	do	608	2	15	A
Regan, Jos. H	Pvt. Co. C, 5 M. G. Bn	1764	15	2	A
Tidd, Jos. H	Pvt. Co. A, 5 M. G. Bn	1232	17	6	F
Cole, Edward Ball	Maj. Hq. Co., 6 M. G. Bn	1764	37	3	B
Donahue, Daniel Edw	Sgt. 61 Co., 6 M. G. Bn	1764	67	7	B
Dompier, Francis W	Pvt. Bty F, 12 F. A	1764	6	7	A
Dube, Wm	Pvt. Bty D, 12 F. A	1764	18	12	A
Hubble, Fredk	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty C, 12 F. A	608	29	8	D
Bitgood, Chas. E	Pvt. Bty. B, 15 F. A	1232	22	41	E
Cummiskey, Henry T	Pvt. Bty. E, 15 F. A	1764	68	4	B
Barbarino, John	Pvt. Co. D, 2 Engrs	1764	49	9	A
Keefe, Harold S	Pvt. 1 Amb. Co. 2 San. Tn	1232	35	44	A
THIRD DIVISION
Ball, Robt E	1st lt. Co. B, 4 Inf	1764	49	4	B
Boccella, Nicholas	Pvt. Co. F, 4 Inf	1232	2	32	C
Bukoski, Frank	Sgt. Co. H, 4 Inf	608	31	36	A
Carroll, Edward J	Pvt. Co. A, 4 Inf	1232	7	17	A
Lynch, Geo. L	Pvt. Co. M, 4 Inf	1232	16	45	B
McDonough, John E	Cpl. Co. B, 4 Inf	1232	7	3	A
Kellogg, Branton H	Capt. Co. H, 7 Inf	1232	3	37	C
Baranowski, Stanley	Pvt. Co. L, 7 Inf	608	25	16	A
MacElligott, Geo. Henry.	1 lt. M. G. Co. 30 Inf	608	28	8	A
Archer, John	Pvt. Co. L, 30 Inf	1232	30	39	G
Beninato, Salvatore	Pvt. Co. K, 30 Inf	1232	17	23	E
Briggs, Chas. F	Pvt. Co. G, 30 Inf	1232	58	1	B
Finn, Thos. J	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 30 Inf	1232	29	32	A
Hagan, Peter A	Pvt. Co. M, 30 Inf	1232	33	5	E
Matton, Jos	Pvt. Co. K, 30 Inf	1764	63	5	A
Poliski, John	Pvt. Co. G, 30 Inf	1232	8	6	D
Pottie, Arthur C	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 30 Inf	608	24	1	B
Reilly, John L	Pvt. Co. K, 30 Inf	1764	69	7	A
Santos, Gil	Cpl. Co. C, 30 Inf	608	37	10	B
Vautrin, Levi J	Pvt. Co. K, 30 Inf	1233	19	14	A
Young, Henry A	Pvt. Co. A, 30 Inf	608	32	8	A
Young, Richmond	1 lt. Co. K, 38 Inf	1232	12	16	A
Crean, Jeremiah F	Cpl. Co. A, 38 Inf	608	26	2	A
Emmel, Gustav	Mech. Co. K, 38 Inf	1232	12	18	E
Greene, Geo. F	Cpl. Co. H, 38 Inf	1232	18	15	C
Kehoe, Ernest G	Mech. Hq. Co. 38 Inf	1764	65	10	B
Korjeki, Frank	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G, 38 Inf	608	34	13	B
Sakl, Jan	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 38 Inf	608	24	25	A
Secor, Lionel L	Pvt. 1 cl. M. D. 38 Inf	1232	30	45	A
Taylor, Thos. H	Pvt. Co. K, 38 Inf	1232	6	2	H
Weinstein, Geo	Pvt. Co. C, 38 Inf	608	22	26	A
Weis, John F	Cpl. Co. E, 38 Inf	1232	9	10	A
Yanchuk, Audrey	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 38 Inf	608	1	14	B
Healy, Harold A	2 lt. Co. D, 8 M. G. Bn	1232	32	41	A
Holmes, Geo. W	Sgt. Co. D, 8 M. G. Bn	1233	11	8	B
McGillen, Geo. F	2 lt. Co. A, 9 M. G. Bn	608	31	9	B
Dixon, Wm	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 9 M. G. Bn	1232	36	15	D
Duffy, Wm. P	Pvt. Co. C, 9 M. G. Bn	1764	67	11	B
Gibeault, Arthur	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 9 M. G. Bn	608	27	25	B
Hebert, Jos. A. A	Cpl. Co. D, 9 M. G. Bn	34	16	11	B
Desmond, Walter P	1 lt. M. D. 18 F. A	1232	7	44	D
Cook, Edward Everitt	Pvt. Bty. E, 76 F. A	608	32	21	A
Dugan, John Francis	Cpl. Hq. Co. 76 F. A	1233	31	11	A
Goodwin, Victor F	Pvt. Bty. D, 76 F. A	1232	26	20	B
Phee, Jordan E	Cpl. Bty. D, 76 F. A	608	12	20	A
Staudinger, Edgar L	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. D, 76 F. A	1232	35	35	F
Cucco, Michelo	Pvt. 3 Trn. Mtr. Bty	608	37	26	A
Aliem, Ralph H	Cpl. Co. B, 6 Engrs	1232	32	17	G
Barnie, Jas. M	Pvt. Co. A, 6 Engrs	1232	20	34	E
Bourget, Geo. A	do	1232	31	19	B
Cooper, Hubert P	do	608	36	23	A
Coyne, Jos. H	Pvt. Co. F, 6 Engrs	636	2	13	C
Curtis, Harry L	Cpl. Co. B, 6 Engrs	636	11	17	A
Danphinais, Harry	Pvt. Co. A, 6 Engrs	1764	49	7	B
Faulkner, Edward M	Pvt. Co. C, 6 Engrs	1233	17	19	B
Fournier, Jos. T	do	608	30	20	A
Hanlon, Francis S	Pvt. 1 cl. M. D.. 6 Engrs	608	16	3	B
Monteith, Wm. A. R	Pvt. Co. A, 6 Engrs	608	32	24	A
Fyrah, Clarence F	Pvt. Co. D, 6 Engrs	636	4	19	D
Wood, Albert T	Sgt. 1 cl. Co. M, 6 Engrs	1232	40	34	G
Lewis, Morse	Sgt. Co. E, 3 Sup. Tn	1232	8	2	H
Riley, Wm. A	Pvt. Co. G, 3 Amm Tn	1232	40	20	G
FOURTH DIVISION
Brown, Jos. C	Cpl. Co. E, 39 Inf	608	10	6	C
Conty, Jas	Pv . Co. C, 39 Inf	1232	25	24	H
Federuk, Philip	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 39 Inf	1232	8	31	E
Garnett, Walter E	Sgt. Co. I, 39 Inf	608	32	1	B
Goddard, Ralph J	Bglr. Co. M, 39 Inf	1232	1	15	E
Hogan, Chas. R	Pvt. M, G. Co. 39 Inf	1232	21	32	H

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
FOURTH DIVISION—con.
Magrane, Francis J	Cpl. Co. L, 39 Inf	1232	21	41	H
Morrison, Jas. M	Pvt. Co. F, 39 Inf	34	8	16	B
Murray, Jos. H	Cpl. Co. L, 39 Inf	608	13	1	C
O'Connell, Philip J	Pvt. 1 cl. MD 39 Inf	608	30	13	B
Patete, Alesandro	Pvt. Co. I, 39 Inf	1764	15	7	A
Priezjeff, Zosema	Cpl. Co. F, 39 Inf	608	2	7	C
Russo, John	Pvt. Co. I, 39 Inf	1232	35	15	F
Shannon, Geo. M	Cpl. Co. H, 39 Inf	608	32	23	C
Whelan, Thos. L	Sgt. Co. C, 39 Inf	1764	45	4	B
Williams, Wm	Pvt. Co. I, 39 Inf	1232	13	13	F
Tetley, Egbert F	2 lt. Co. C, 47 Inf	608	15	28	C
Burdett, Ralph M	Pvt. Co. C, 47 Inf	1232	31	29	D
Cooper, Louis	Pvt. Co. D, 47 Inf	1232	9	34	H
Fairbrother, Jesse	Pvt. 1 cl. MD 47 Inf	608	20	2	C
Holland, John Francis	Cpl. Co. B, 47 Inf	608	14	10	B
LaPlante, Wm. G	Cpl. Co. G, 47 Inf	1232	19	4	A
Millsted, Arthur	Pvt. Co. K, 47 Inf	34	20	4	A
Morandi, Karl A	Pvt. Co. C, 47 Inf	608	23	6	D
Rizos, Wm	Cpl. Co. A, 47 Inf	608	14	6	A
Teixeira, Antonia P	Pvt. Co. C, 47 Inf	1232	9	25	E
Weeks, Albert S	Cpl. Hq. Co. 47 Inf	608	21	14	B
Welton, Edmund J	Sgt. Co. C, 47 Inf	608	15	7	B
Wood, Wm. W	Sup. Sgt. Co. K, 47 Inf	1764	17	11	A
Atwood, Fredk. M	2 lt. Sup. Co. 58 Inf	608	11	24	D
Anderuszkewvicz, Antoni.	Pvt. Co. L, 58 Inf	1232	8	20	A
Andrych, Stanislau	Pvt. Co. D, 58 Inf	603	27	4	C
Bichniewicz, Brunon	Pvt. Co. B, 58 Inf	1232	29	17	F
Borovik, Fedor	Pvt. Co. L, 58 Inf	1232	11	25	A
Capobianco, Raphaelo	Pvt. Co. E, 58 Inf	1232	13	6	F
Conaogirgis, Nicholas	Pvt. Co. L, 58 Inf	1232	14	23	D
Coppola, Ralph	Pvt. Co. D, 58 Inf	1764	78	7	A
Cummiskey, Jas. F	Cpl. Co. H, 58 Inf	1233	8	10	C
Draper, John	Pvt. Co. A, 58 Inf	1232	2	29	A
Felix, Ralph L	Pvt. Co. C, 58 Inf	1232	20	44	B
Felter, Adam	Pvt. Co. D, 58 Inf	1764	78	6	A
Fine, Abraham	do	608	16	17	A
Fortin, Jos. P	Pvt. Co. I, 58 Inf	1232	28	31	D
Fountain, Paul F	Pvt. Co. C, 58 Inf	1232	30	40	F
McCaksby, Lawrence F	Pvt. Co. B, 58 Inf	1232	40	34	E
Pasolini, Leopeldo	Pvt. Co. F, 58 Inf	1232	7	7	F
Wasgatt, Harold C	1 lt. M. G. Co. 59 Inf	1764	13	2	A
Berry, Clarence L	Pvt. Co. I, 59 Inf	1764	18	3	A
Christian, Steve E	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 59 Inf	1764	74	9	A
Cunningham, Thos. A	Pvt. Co. D, 59 Inf	1764	2	9	B
Devaney, Henry J	Pvt. Co. L, 59 Inf	1232	4	11	H
Dusswicz, John	Pvt. Co. F, 59 Inf	1232	35	14	H
Garinagian, Shahin	Pvt. Co. M, 59 Inf	1232	19	13	D
Geoffrion, Dona	Pvt. Co. E, 59 Inf	1232	34	41	D
Gokey, Arthur	do	1232	35	35	A
Harlow, Carleton T	Pvt. M. G. Co. 59 Inf	608	19	34	D
Harlow, Jas. Robt	Pvt. Co. F, 59 Inf	1232	21	7	F
Howes, Ralph G	Pvt. Co. C, 59 Inf	1233	11	18	C
Hurley, Vincent P	Pvt. Co. E, 59 Inf	608	4	11	D
Kehoe, Michael	do	1232	16	29	F
MacDonald, Wm. C	Pvt. Co. H, 59 Inf	1232	25	7	F
Marchi, Cesare A	do	1764	28	4	A
Menengas, Manvel S	Pvt. Co. L, 59 Inf	1764	6	9	B
Nickerson, Josiah D	do	1764	12	11	A
Palamountain, Paul B	do	1232	1	21	E
Silvia, John	Pvt. Co. E, 59 Inf	1232	3	38	C
Swift, Stanley G	Pvt. Co. D, 59 Inf	1232	23	24	E
Theodore, Christos	Pvt. Co. C, 59 Inf	1232	8	25	E
Tiberii, John	Pvt. Co. M, 59 Inf	1232	34	27	E
Wispalis, Jos	Pvt. Co. B, 59 Inf	1232	39	30	E
Gleason, Carl B	Pvt. MD, 11 M. G. Bn	1232	31	17	G
Murphy, Harry E	Pvt. Co. B, 11 M. G. Bn	1232	21	33	E
Williams, Ralph E	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 11 M. G. Bn	1764	23	13	B
Fretz, Earl R	1 lt. Co. B, 12 M. G. Bn	1764	16	10	B
Gallagher, Wm. O	Pvt. Co. C, 12 M. G. Bn	1232	14	31	D
Brouen, Axel G	Pvt. Bty. D, 13 F. A	1232	6	6	A
Furtado, Henry P	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. C, 13 F. A	608	4	24	D
Healy, Jas. F	Sgt. Bty. B, 16 F. A	1232	20	14	C
Morris, Jas	Mech. Bty. F, 16 F. A	608	1	6	C
McCartin, John P	Pvt. Co. D, 4 Engrs	1233	19	26	C
Oppenheim, Aaron J	Sgt. Co. G, 4 Amm. Tn	1233	24	24	A
FIFTH DIVISION
Burns, Chas. H	1 lt. Co. I, 6 Inf	1232	39	43	C
Alves, Andrew P	Cpl. Co. M, 6 Inf	1233	25	16	D
Driscoll, Wm. E	Sgt. M. G. Co., 6 Inf	1232	26	22	B
Morris, Fredk	Pvt. M. G. Co., 6 Inf	1232	28	26	D
Phillips, Arthur	Pvt. Co. E, 6 Inf	1232	21	27	F
Shanse, Jos. J	Cpl. M. G. Co., 6 Inf	1232	35	21	F
Tolkun, John	Pvt. 1 cl. Co., I, 6 Inf	1232	30	41	A
Blanchette, Adolph	Pvt. 1 cl. Sup. Co., 11 Inf	1233	25	36	D
Destefano, Luigi	Pvt. Co., A, 11 Inf	1232	4	46	B
Dose, Fredk. Chas	Capt. Hq. Co., 60 Inf	608	21	7	A
Martell, Judson Gordon	1 lt. Co. E, 60 Inf	1232	25	24	A
Amerena, Wm	Pvt. Co. G, 60 Inf	1232	22	31	G
Binette, Wildred L	Pvt. Co. H, 60 Inf	1232	7	7	A
Bronski, Daniel	Pvt. Co. D, 60 Inf	1233	13	27	C
D'Onofrio, Allesandro	Pvt. Co. E, 60 Inf	1233	31	7	B
Dunn, Patrick J	do	1232	2	5	D
Gallant, Henry	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 60 Inf	1232	10	6	A
Gleason, Martin M	Pvt. Co. C, 60 Inf	1232	38	24	E
Harrington, Bernard	Pvt. 1 cl. Co., I, 60 Inf	1232	3	24	A
Kussmaul, Fredk. A	Pvt. Co. D, 60 Inf	1232	10	5	C
MacPherson, Leslie	Cpl. Hq. Co. 60 Inf	1232	30	41	G
Maroney, Edward F	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 60 Inf	1233	23	6	A
McCaffrey, Thos	Pvt. Co. A, 60 Inf	1233	7	29	C
McCulloch, Archie, jr	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 60 Inf	1232	15	16	H
Moreau, Wm	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 60 Inf	1232	8	43	F

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
FIFTH DIVISION—con.
Raymond, Carlton E.	Pvt. Sup. Co., 60 Inf.	1233	6	25	D
Sarzen, Cornelius	Pvt. Co. E, 60 Inf.	1232	7	14	A
Stone, Byron E.	Pvt. Co. I, 60 Inf.	1232	23	16	F
Wheeler, Warren F.	Pvt. Co. G, 60 Inf.	1232	22	5	F
Coupe, Norman	Pvt. Co. E, 61 Inf.	1232	21	30	E
Dean, John W.	Pvt. Co. H, 61 Inf.	1232	23	15	B
McCauley, Thos. G.	Cpl. Co. M, 61 Inf.	1232	2	19	B
Michele, Guiseppe	Pvt. Co. K, 61 Inf.	1232	35	21	B
Reveney, John W.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 61 Inf.	1232	34	34	G
Rosa, Louis J.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 61 Inf.	1232	10	17	G
Rose, Louis	Sgt. Co. K, 61 Inf.	1232	24	22	G
Smith, Oscar	Wag. Co. E, 61 Inf.	1232	31	14	B
Vallerinni, Jas. L.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G, 61 Inf.	1232	2	6	E
Joyce, Patrick W.	Pvt. Co. A, 13 M. G. Bn.	1233	32	22	B
Frostholm, Jens H.	2 lt. Co. A, 14 M. G. Bn.	1232	7	22	E
Birtz, Louis	Pvt. Bty. A, 15 F. A.	1232	11	18	H
Prokono, Frank	Sadr. Sup. Co., 19 F. A.	1233	30	23	B
Laventure, Louis H.	Pvt. 1 cl. Fld. Hosp. 30.	1233	28	26	D
SIXTH DIVISION
Murphy, Harold S.	Cpl. Co. C, 52 Inf.	1232	18	16	F
Lamont, John	Pvt. Bty. A, 3 F. A.	1232	8	6	B
Byrne, John E.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 11 F. A.	1232	11	4	B
Ward, Albert V.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. E, 11 F. A.	1232	34	10	H
Hayes, John E.	Pvt. Sup. Co., 78 F. A.	1232	15	14	D
Anderson, Ralph	Pvt. 1 cl. Ord. Det., 6 Am. Tn.	1232	13	12	D
Max, Charlie	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 6 Am. Tn.	1232	20	10	C
SEVENTH DIVISION
Thornton, John J.	Cpl. Co. D, 34 Inf.	1233	24	4	B
Castagnoli, Battista	Pvt. M. G. Co., 55 Inf.	1233	7	8	C
O'Keefe, Garrett I.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 79 F. A.	1233	28	23	B
Scoggell, Harry H.	Pvt. Bty. E, 8 F. A.	1233	29	22	C
TWENTY-SIXTH DIVISION, 101 INFANTRY
Hayes, Robt.	Capt. 3d Bn.	1232	29	7	B
Kittredge, Paul E.	Capt. Co. F.	1232	14	44	A
Bascom, Edgar D.	2 lt. Co. B.	1232	15	40	B
Flenniken, John	2 lt. Co. M.	608	31	17	B
Abbott, Leon E.	Pvt. Hq. Co.	1764	70	13	A
Abrahams, Thos.	Pvt. Co. A.	1233	18	7	B
Attarian, Harry	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I.	1233	23	19	C
Bangs, Louis S.	Cpl. Co. B.	608	20	3	A
Benner, Wm. B.	Pvt. Co. L.	1764	66	9	B
Bowes, Jas. A.	Pvt. Co. A.	1232	1	33	C
Bradley, Harold V.	Pvt. Co. H.	1232	2	6	C
Bruce, Jas. F.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K.	1232	15	4	B
Bruce, Walter	Pvt. Co. M.	1233	4	9	C
Bryson, Raymond G.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C.	1232	37	33	E
Buck, David R.	Pvt. Hq. Co.	1764	75	6	A
Burns, Arthur W.	Pvt. Co. H.	1233	16	13	B
Burns, John Jos.	Cpl. Co. A.	1232	32	25	E
Burns, Lawrence J.	Pvt. Co. I.	608	29	21	D
Canary, Wm. E.	Cpl. Co. E.	1233	6	25	D
Carey, Fred'k J.	Pvt. Co. D.	1232	32	40	G
Carley, Edward E.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C.	1232	21	42	F
Carraher, Ernest J.	Stbl. Sgt. Hq. Co.	1232	29	15	H
Cavanagh, Chas. H.	Wag. Sup. Co.	608	32	11	B
Chalifoux, Philip	Pvt. Co. M.	1764	74	1	A
Christie, David B.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G.	1764	16	12	A
Clabby, John L.	Sgt. Co. F.	1233	9	15	D
Coffey, Francis W.	Pvt. Co. E.	1232	19	20	E
Collette, Raymond J.	Pvt. Co. F.	1232	6	4	H
Connolly, Jas.	Pvt. Co. K.	1232	31	10	D
Crowley, John J.	Cpl. Hq. Co.	608	37	21	B
Curran, Patrick	Pvt. Hq. Co.	1764	55	7	B
Daly, Wm. J.	Cpl. Hq. Co.	1764	3	1	B
Dame, Henry W.	Pvt. Co. I.	1232	33	19	F
David, George	Pvt. Co. H.	1233	36	4	A
DeRusha, Henry W.	Pvt. 1 cl. M. G. Co.	1764	33	4	A
Devlin, Edward F.	Cpl. Co. F.	1232	9	7	B
Douglas, Ralph W.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K.	1233	34	13	D
Downing, Albert H.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H.	1764	11	5	B
Drisko, Ralph R.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A.	1232	36	37	C
Dunbar, Jos.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H.	1233	29	5	B
Durkee, Sidney H.	Pvt. Co. D.	1233	7	23	B
Emmons, Fredk. D.	Pvt. Co. A.	1233	16	14	D
Fay, Jas. A.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A.	1232	18	31	B
Fitzgerald, Martin R.	Cook Hq. Co.	1232	31	44	C
Fitz-Henry, Lewis F.	1st sgt. Co. C.	34	12	19	A
Foley, Walter J.	Pvt. Co. I.	1232	33	33	A
Foster, Lawrence W.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L.	1232	40	22	D
Furlong, Francis L.	Cpl. Co. H.	1233	21	15	D
Gavain, Thos. M.	Pvt. Co. I.	1232	33	27	F
Glass, John F., jr.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D.	1232	8	11	G
Grady, John J.	Sgt. Co. L.	1232	15	12	D
Grant, Alexander B.	Pvt. Co. E.	1232	22	40	E
Greenleaf, Wm. H.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B.	1232	2	3	B
Hagen, Lawrence M. G.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L.	1233	33	2	A
Hanrahan, Daniel J.	Cpl. Co. A.	1232	28	11	E
Harris, Wm. L.	Cpl. Co. E.	1233	5	15	D
Heneghan, Patrick J.	Sgt. Co. D.	608	7	32	B
Higby, Ivan V.	Cpl. Co. A.	1232	24	5	G
Johnson, Wilfred B.	Sgt. Co. I.	1764	39	4	B
Karem, Thos.	Pvt. Co. C.	1233	29	14	D
Kelly, Wm. C.	Cpl. M. G. Co.	1232	15	36	F
Kennedy, Jas.	Pvt. Co. I.	1232	1	15	H
Kennedy, Thos. F.	Pvt. Hq. Co.	34	10	12	A
Knudsen, Sverre	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L.	1764	30	6	A
Koreb, Martin G.	Pvt. Co. A.	1232	20	36	A

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
TWENTY-SIXTH DIVISION, 101 INFANTRY—con.
Kramer, Harry	Pvt. Co. H.	1233	6	20	B
Kurth, Wm.	Pvt. Co. B.	1233	18	24	D
Lancaster, Guy L.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I.	1232	9	28	E
Lanctot, Napoleon J.	Pvt. Co. M.	1233	2	17	C
Leahy, Thos. A.	Pvt. Co. E.	1764	15	10	B
Lindsay, John F.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I.	1233	5	1	D
Little, Arthur H.	Pvt. Co. A.	1232	9	34	A
Lowery, Winthrop S.	Pvt. Co. L.	1232	28	38	B
Lyons, Frank	Pvt. Co. M.	1764	50	5	A
Lyons, Herbert A.	Pvt. M. G. Co.	1232	12	35	G
MacDonald, John R.	Mech. Co. L.	1233	18	19	C
MacKenzie, Kenneth A.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G.	1232	20	27	A
MacLean, Roderick A. J.	Pvt. Co. C.	1233	1	27	D
Mahoney, Jas. F.	Sgt. Co. E.	1233	29	26	D
Manning, John J.	Cpl. Co. C.	1233	8	8	C
Marien, Henry C.	Sgt. Co. M.	1232	40	32	H
Mayne, John	Pvt. 1 cl. M. D.	608	15	19	A
McBride, John J.	Cpl. Co. A.	1232	39	32	H
McCarthy, Dennis D.	Cpl. Co. E.	1232	15	18	F
McDonald, John H.	Pvt. Co. E.	1233	20	26	D
McGarr, Wm.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G.	1232	20	35	E
McGrath, Jas. J.	Cpl. Co. L.	1233	25	4	B
McGuirl, Bernard J.	Cpl. Hq. Co.	1232	12	14	A
McIntosh, Allan	Pvt. 1 cl. M. D.	1232	18	39	F
McIver, Gavin R.	Cpl. Co. A.	608	9	19	A
McKenna, Jas. M.	do.	1764	12	4	A
McKeon, Geo. H.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A.	1233	14	8	D
Mealy, Geo. H.	Sgt. Co. K.	1764	58	4	A
Meehan, John R.	Sgt. Hq. Co.	1764	52	13	B
Morey, Ralph E.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E.	1232	11	20	F
Mullaney, Thos. J.	Pvt. Co. C.	1232	21	21	F
Murphy, John W.	do.	1233	5	13	B
Murray, Robt. A., jr.	Pvt. Co. K.	1233	3	1	D
Myers, Chas. S.	do.	1764	21	4	A
Nelson, Edward A.	Pvt. Hq. Co.	1233	24	12	C
Nickerson, Simeon L.	Sgt. Co. D.	608	10	19	A
Noonan, Arthur J.	Pvt. Co. H.	1232	17	46	C
O'Donoghue, Michael F.	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Co.	1232	23	27	A
O'Keefe, Wm. S.	Pvt. M. D.	1233	17	13	C
Paglia, Vinzenzo	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L.	1232	13	27	A
Parnell, Bert J.	Pvt. Co. A.	1233	21	21	C
Piggott, Garrett	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E.	1764	52	8	B
Piso, Rocco	Pvt. Co. A.	1232	21	11	F
Ray, Matthew R.	Cpl. Co. D.	1232	10	33	E
Richardson, George L.	Pvt. 1 cl. M. G. Co.	1232	25	27	E
Riley, Chas. R.	Cpl. Co. E.	1233	7	15	C
Rotch, Lester J.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I.	1232	7	45	C
Rutledge, Stephen F.	Pvt. M. G. Co.	1232	15	41	A
Ryan, Thos. A.	Cpl. Co. D.	608	11	19	A
Salner, Morris	Pvt. Co. M.	1233	7	23	C
Sampson, Harry	Cpl. Co. E.	1232	28	8	D
Shea, Francis A.	Pvt. Co. A.	1233	13	19	A
Smith, Albert C.	do.	608	17	19	A
Smith, Henry F.	Pvt. Co. B.	1764	12	1	B
Solari, Arthur J.	Pvt. Co. D.	1232	7	37	D
Sullivan, Chas. J.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G.	1764	30	12	A
Sweeney, John	Pvt. Co. F.	1233	32	23	C
Sweeney, Matthew J.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E.	1764	63	10	B
Sykes, Edgar W.	Cpl. Hq. Co.	1232	2	38	C
Thomson, Albert	Pvt. Co. I.	1764	66	5	A
Tierney, Jas. J.	Cpl. Co. C.	1233	32	4	B
Tryder, Wm. J.	Sgt. Co. H.	1232	21	19	E
Tully, Daniel F.	Cpl. Co. F.	1232	29	38	G
Warren, John M.	Pvt. Hq. Co.	34	17	1	B
Wheaton, Homer J.	Cpl. Co. G.	608	34	12	B
Wilson, Clifford H.	Pvt. Co. F.	608	38	21	B
Yelle, Adrian L.	Pvt. Hq. Co.	1233	14	13	C
Yeomans, Fredk. J.	Pvt. Co. L.	1232	4	25	H
TWENTY-SIXTH DIVISION
Oliva, Felix M.	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Tp.	1233	27	24	C
Linton, Fred'k M.	1 lt. Hq. Co., 51 Inf. Brig.	1233	14	9	D
Corbett, Wm. B.	2 lt. Co. L, 102 Inf.	1232	29	36	B
Carey, Jas. O.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 102 Inf.	1233	14	23	B
Depatie, Romeo	Pvt. Co. I, 102 Inf.	1764	46	5	B
Flibbert, Henry	Pvt. Co. K, 102 Inf.	1232	1	4	G
Gallant, Jos.	Pvt. Co. L, 102 Inf.	1764	23	3	A
Gierman, Arthur	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 102 Inf.	1232	2	16	D
Joyce, Warren H.	do.	1232	23	24	D
Martin, Roy B.	Pvt. 1 cl. M. G. Co., 102 Inf.	1233	19	24	C
McKeon, Geo. J.	Pvt. Co. M, 102 Inf.	1764	64	6	A
Meuse, Thos. E.	Pvt. Co. F, 102 Inf.	34	40	5	B
Mitchell, Lester	Pvt. Co. L, 102 Inf.	1233	18	18	C
Parquette, Jector	Pvt. Co. F, 102 Inf.	608	23	21	A
Allen, Wm. H.	Pvt. Co. H, 103 Inf.	1232	13	42	D
Cappello, Angelo	Pvt. Co. G, 103 Inf.	608	4	8	D
Bvowczek, Francisek	Pvt. Co. G, 102 Inf.	1233	28	28	C
Connor, Eugene M.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 103 Inf.	1233	9	4	B
Dalrymple, Thos. F.	Cpl. Co. A, 103 Inf.	1232	22	10	C
Danforth, Geo. C.	Pvt. Co. D, 103 Inf.	1764	40	8	A
Johnson, Wm. H.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 103 Inf.	1764	14	2	B
Hunt, Hugh I.	Pvt. Hq. Co. 103 Inf.	608	14	4	D
McGovern, Philip W.	Pvt. Co. B, 103 Inf.	1764	80	8	A
Morrison, Daniel	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 103 Inf.	1764	76	10	A
O'Callaghan, Thos. J. A.	Cpl. Co. B, 103 Inf.	1764	5	12	A
Smart, Peter H.	Pvt. Co. K, 103 Inf.	1232	35	25	A
Tyler, Harry V.	Pvt. Co. C, 103 Inf.	1764	8	12	A
Vaudreiul, Arthur P.	Pvt. Co. L, 103 Inf.	608	33	5	D
Walsh, Edward	Cpl. Co. K, 103 Inf.	608	20	27	D

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
TWENTY-SIXTH DIVISION, 104 INFANTRY
Phillips, Edward H	Capt. Co. E	(1)
Welles, Halleck, jr	Capt. Co. F	34	29	4	B
Blanchard, Hugh C	1 lt. Co. L	1764	52	2	A
Madison, Burdette Rockleff	1 lt. M.G. Co	34	29	6	B
Brigham, Wm. N., jr	2 lt. Co. D	608	17	12	A
Ewing, John A	2 lt. Co. I	1233	23	9	C
Akroyd, Hebert F	Pvt. Co. G	1233	32	24	C
Albeski, Felix	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G	1764	46	11	A
Alsen, Carl H	Pvt. Hq. Co	1233	2	12	C
Anderson, Alfred F	Musn. 3cl. Hq. Co	1233	24	26	D
Andrews, Floyd H	Cpl. Co. A	1232	36	29	H
Armitage, Wilfred T	Pvt. Co. F	608	2	1	B
Baribault, Leon A	Cpl. Co. B	1233	1	26	D
Beaulieu, Paul	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B	34	23	8	B
Bedard, Gilbert	Pvt. Co. D	1233	17	26	D
Belliveau, Alfred J	Pvt. Co. E	1232	39	8	F
Bellows, Chas. A	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G	608	8	1	A
Bennett, Herbert W	Bglr. Co. L	1232	36	34	G
Billings, Henry W	Pvt. Co. A	1232	40	27	C
Croteau, Louis M	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D	1233	9	9	C
Cummings, Timothy B	Pvt. Co. A	1233	4	19	C
Dalton, Leonard L	Pvt. Co. L	1233	12	12	C
De Roy, Narcisse A	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L	1764	48	1	A
Donegan, John P	Pvt. Co. A	1232	27	24	A
Doucette, Howard F	Pvt. Co. E	1764	66	2	A
Doucette, Jas. E	Pvt. Sup. Co	608	4	37	B
Duquette, Edward	Pvt. Co. A	1764	8	1	A
Ehlert, Henry	Cook Hq. Co	608	19	32	A
Emery, Victor A	Cpl. Co. E	1232	21	44	D
Fagan, Wilfred J	Cpl. Co. D	1232	3	34	H
Finem, Jos. L	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D	608	14	19	A
Fitzgerald, Howard P	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L	1233	15	26	C
Forget, Wm. J	Cpl. Co. H	1232	36	40	H
Francis, Benj. T	Cpl. Co. L	1764	70	2	A
Fraser, Edward J	Cpl. Co. K	1232	22	5	B
Fuller, Chas. L	Pvt. Co. M	1764	44	11	A
Gagas, Jas. S	Pvt. Co. G	1233	4	13	D
Gardner, Leroy W	Cpl. Co. C	1764	16	9	A
Garrant, Henry J	Pvt. M. D.	1232	20	36	B
Germain, Edward	Cpl. Co. F	1764	49	3	A
Gerrior, Arnold B	Pvt. M. G. Co	1232	9	42	C
Gerrior, Elroy F	do	1232	10	31	D
Gilbert Raymond C	Cpl. Co. A	1232	26	36	B
Gokey, Harvey R	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D	1232	7	34	H
Goldman, Abraham	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E	1232	39	16	C
Graham, Chester A	Cpl. Co. M	1764	59	2	A
Green, Arthur W	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L	1764	58	1	A
Gresik, Jozef	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G	1232	25	11	C
Guerrin, Earl M	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L	1233	14	12	C
Guthrie, Wm. J. B	Pvt. Co. L	1233	20	25	C
Hamilton, Geo	Cpl. Co. B	1764	32	13	A
Harnscorth, Fredk. B	Pvt. 1 cl. M. G. Co	1232	9	14	F
Henderson, John T	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A	608	21	19	A
Blanchette, Oscar	Pvt. Co. G	1233	10	28	D
Bogan, Chas. J	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A	1232	38	24	F
Boisvert, Albert J	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I	1232	28	37	F
Boyle, Chas. E	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Co	1233	8	20	B
Brisebois, Jos. A. I. (Woods, Rene-alias).	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E	1764	30	2	A
Brockbank, John C	Cpl. Co. A	1232	39	40	H
Buchanan, Matthew L	Cpl. Co. I	1233	10	12	C
Buckley, Daniel J	Pvt. Co. E	34	20	15	B
Burgess, Leon F	Bglr. Co. D	1764	56	4	A
Burrill, Geo. F	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L	1764	11	5	A
Carter, Eugene S	Pvt. Co. C	1764	32	1	A
Champagne, Alfred G	Pvt. Co. G	608	25	27	B
Cinanni, Antonio	do	1233	32	12	C
Clark, Donald S	Cpl. Co. I	1232	15	2	A
Comeau, Wilbur	Pvt. Co. F	1233	13	12	C
Cosma, Chas. D	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G	1233	35	24	C
Coombs, Carl L	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A	1232	39	30	H
Howard, Fernald G	Cook Co. I	1764	4	4	A
Hoyt, Russell E	Cpl. Co. E	1233	36	24	C
Johnson, Oscar Albert	Pvt. Co. H	1233	27	8	C
Jusbadone, Andrew	Pvt. Co. C	1764	23	1	A
Kehoe, Hugh L	Pvt. MG Co	1232	7	19	F
Kingdon, Geo. M	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K	1232	37	36	A
Knutson, Charlie B	Pvt. Hq. Co	1233	26	27	C
Kocienski, John W	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I	1764	87	1	A
Lachance, Jos	Pvt. Co. D	1233	25	16	C
Lacross, Wm. E	Pvt. 1 cl. MG Co	1764	55	5	A
Lake, Robt. W	Pvt. Co. F	1232	37	41	E
Lambert, John	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D	1764	3	4	A
Lavelie, Arthur G	Pvt. Co. H	1233	29	7	D
Laviolette, Henry J	Pvt. Co. K	608	21	4	A
Leach, Henry W	Pvt. Co. L	1233	33	12	C
Lebgrace, Angelo	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I	1764	16	4	A
Longdin, Arthur E	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E	1764	86	10	A
Lord, Ralph J	Pvt. Co. K	1764	75	3	A
Marino, Chas	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L	1764	41	8	A
Martin, Harold W	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D	608	27	27	B
Martini, Aigelo	Pvt. Co. F	1764	15	10	A
Maxted, Henry G	Cpl. Co. E	1233	28	9	C
McEnelly, Thos. F	Pvt. Co. K	1233	36	16	D
McLaughlin, Andrew P	Cpl. Co. A	1232	17	4	B
Miller, Carl	do	1232	10	44	C
Mills, Paul D	Pvt. Hq. Co	608	21	22	A
Moffa, Giuseppe	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B	1764	25	3	A
Munroe, George	Pvt. Co. K	608	23	4	A
Nedeau, Herman L	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K	1232	20	27	E
Norsigian, Geo. H	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H	1233	26	9	C
O'Keefe, John J	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A	1232	29	37	F
Oliver, Jas. A., jr	Pvt. Co. E	1764	26	11	B

[1] To be interred.

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
TWENTY-SIXTH DIVISION, 104 INFANTRY—contd.
Ouimette, Albert	Pvt. Co. D	608	24	24	B
Paleologos, Gregery	Pvt. Co. H	1233	9	13	C
Palermo, Tony	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K	1232	27	39	F
Paradee, Walter N	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F	1764	53	13	F
Pelarz, Jacob	Musn. Co. F	608	36	1	A
Peterson, Philip J	Pvt. Co. L	1764	53	1	A
Peterson, Wm. A	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A	1764	12	3	B
Petrizia, Erasne	Pvt. Co. L	608	27	12	A
Prevost, Harold F	Pvt. Co. E	608	25	14	A
Prisco, Wm	Pvt. Co. G	1232	10	29	E
Pueschel, Wm. C	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D	1232	8	42	C
Reed, Samuel Victor	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L	1764	58	7	A
Robbie, John	1st sgt. Co. L	1232	18	6	F
Rousseau, Albert J	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D	1232	24	42	D
Roy, Chas	Pvt. Co. K	1233	25	23	C
Scott, Earl D	Cpl. Co. L	1764	62	5	A
Sewell, Loren W	Pvt. Co. I	1233	1	12	C
Silva, Peter	Pvt. Co. G	1233	27	9	C
Skinner, Fred F	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H	1232	19	22	D
Smith, Wm. J	Pvt. 1 cl Co. I	1232	4	8	C
Stewart, Guy	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G	1233	9	18	B
Stimpson, Geo. C	Pvt. Hq. Co	1233	11	28	D
Stowell, Earle B	Cpl. Co. C	1232	27	42	A
Sullivan, Jeremiah F	Cpl. Co. D	608	34	1	A
Sullivan, Leo E	Pvt. Co. F	1232	1	42	C
Timmons, Basil A	Pvt. Co. E	1233	22	15	C
Tomasko, Tony	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I	1232	7	10	E
Torosian, Aron	Pvt. Co. E	1764	25	6	B
Urquhart, Douglas	Sgt. Co. D	(1)
Upton, Thos. A	Cpl. Co. B	1764	22	1	A
Walker, Chauncey D	Cpl. Co. G	1764	23	1	B
Walsh, Thos	Pvt. Co. H	1764	60	8	A
Williams, Frank E	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E	1233	30	3	C
Wozniak, John	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G	1232	32	24	B
Young, Reginald	Pvt. Co. H	34	7	6	B
Cupples, Lorne L	2 lt. Co. C, 101 M. G. Bn	1232	19	6	B
Wellington, Andrew S	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 101 M. G. Bn	608	3	6	B
Lincoln, Clark R	1 lt. Hq. Co., 102 M. G. Bn	1764	64	8	A
Allen, Julius P	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 102 M. G. Bn	1764	35	9	A
Anderson, Wm. E	Pvt. Co. A, 102 M. G. Bn	1233	10	29	C
Chamberlin, Raymond	do	1233	16	29	B
Ditmars, Harry F	Cpl. Co. B, 102 M. G. Bn	1233	23	25	B
Gordon, Alvin W	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 102 M. G. Bn	1233	8	16	C
Gould, Prescott W	Sgt. Co. C, 102 M. G. Bn	1233	15	8	B
Halden, Edwin W	Cpl. Co. B, 102 M. G. Bn	1764	64	5	A
Heath, Jackson V	Cpl. Co. A, 102 M. G. Bn	1233	29	10	B
Lane, Milton E	do	1233	10	19	C
Lundgren, Osborne R	Pvt. Co. C, 102 M. G. Bn	1232	7	4	H
McKay, Wm. J	Pvt. Co. A, 102 M. G. Bn	608	29	11	B
Mieusset, Claude E	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 102 M. G. Bn	1232	3	38	B
Millican, Leonard L	Sgt. Co. B, 102 M. G. Bn	1232	36	37	A
Nesbitt, Geo. T	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 102 M. G. Bn	1232	13	21	F
Proctor, John C. A	Cpl. Co. C, 102 M. G. Bn	1232	4	25	C
Sutermeister, Everett C	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 102 M. G. Bn	1233	1	2	F
Tolman, Jas. W	Cook Co. D, 102 M. G. Bn	1232	13	39	F
Whitelaw, Robt	Sgt. Co. A, 102 M. G. Bn	1233	15	21	A
TWENTY-SIXTH DIVISION, 101 FIELD ARTILLERY
Reynolds, Chas. P	Capt. Hq. Co	1233	11	9	B
Baker, Arthur E	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. F	1764	29	3	B
Bonyea, Fred	Wag. Sup. Co	1233	5	9	C
Broughton, Henry W., jr	Cpl. Hq. Co	1233	1	25	A
Chivers, Frank H	Sgt. Bty. B	1764	1	2	B
Cunningham, Philip	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. A	1764	69	4	A
Durden, Leonard H	Sgt. Bty. E	608	37	28	D
Ellis, Chas. R	Pvt. Bty. A	608	13	20	B
Hammond, Chas. F., jr	Pvt. Bty. C	608	30	30	B
Hauptner, Chas. F	Pvt. Bty. B	608	35	27	C
Hooper, Edward A	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. A	608	23	25	B
Joly, Freddy	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. D	1232	10	10	H
Keyes, Wm. J	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. C	1232	7	35	D
Knowlton, Raymond F	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. E	1232	3	37	G
Lawrence, Davis O	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. A	1233	8	12	C
Leighton, John H	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. C	1233	18	13	D
MacPhetres, Hadley M	Sgt. Bty. E	1232	6	37	G
Maks, Edmond P	Pvt. San. Det	1764	72	3	A
Murphy, John T	Pvt. Bty. D	1764	67	3	A
Peabody, Ellery, jr	Sgt. Bty. A	1232	7	26	A
Rigby, Herbert E	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. A	1233	16	12	C
Sawyer, Enos C	do	1233	7	12	C
Schofield, Wm. E	Pvt. Bty. F	1232	40	37	G
Smeliedge, Chas. L	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. C	1764	26	10	B
Spallas, Nicholas	Cpl. Bty. C	1764	29	9	B
Tanner, Geo. H	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. C	608	4	12	B
Wardell, Earle	Cpl. Bty. F	1764	40	4	A
Williams, Laurence B	Cpl. Bty. A	1764	12	5	A
TWENTY-SIXTH DIVISION, 102 FIELD ARTILLERY
Basinsky, Alvin R	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. B	1232	37	3	H
Benoit, Geo. L	Pvt. Bty. E	34	17	10	A
Bombardier, Louis	Pvt. Bty. B	1232	11	40	H
Brosnihan, John F	do	1232	20	32	B
Craw, Albert J	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. D	608	35	3	A
Dahill, Stephen B	do	608	37	28	B
Demers, Alfred J	Pvt. Bty. E	1764	57	10	A
Dennett, Mahlon W	Cpl. Bty. F	1764	42	5	B
Dyer, Arthur G	Pvt. Co. C	1232	14	22	E
English, Robt	Pvt. Bty. A	1233	6	16	B
French, Chas. F	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. E	1233	26	1	D
Frostholm, Neils H	do	608	15	3	B

[1] Grave 6, Chateau Pereuse Cemetery, Jeuarre, France.

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
TWENTY-SIXTH DIVISION 102 FIELD ARTILLERY—continued
Gaudette, Jos. F.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. E	1233	13	23	C
Higginson, Geo.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. D	1232	4	3	D
Hirst, Edward	Cpl. Bty. D	608	19	19	A
Kelley, Jas. J.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. D	1764	75	5	A
Kelly, Cornelius F.	Sgt. Bty. B	1232	30	43	D
LaBonty, Nestor J.	Pvt. Bty. D	608	29	3	A
Lawless, Paul H.	Cpl. Bty. B	1232	7	37	H
Lowry, Geo. N.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. B	1232	12	41	E
Mathison, August	Cpl. Bty. C	608	35	12	A
Moore, Michael F.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. E	1233	29	11	B
Moore, Thos. N.	Sgt. Bty. D	1232	34	4	B
Palma, Frank	Pvt. Bty. E	1233	27	1	B
Rand, Walter A.	do	608	17	3	B
Rice, Melvin F.	Pvt. Bty. A	1233	10	23	C
Richardson, Fredk. W.	Mech. Bty. D	1232	18	35	A
Sandy, Gilbert Y.	Pvt. Bty. B	1232	10	37	H
Shannon, Thos. F.	Cpl. Bty. B	1233	29	6	A
Silk, Gerald R. T.	Cpl. Bty. F	1764	72	6	A
Smith, Franklin O.	Pvt. Bty. B	1232	2	20	E
Streeter, Chas. M.	do	1233	11	1	B
Whittles, John	do	1232	28	20	F
Wright, Winthrop A.	Pvt. Bty. F, 102 F. A	1233	31	11	B
Ayer, Lawrence S.	2 lt. Bty. C, 103 F. A	1233	26	24	B
Bacon, Chas.	Pvt. Bty. C, 103 F. A	1232	29	10	F
Mann, Henry M.	Pvt. San. Det., 102 F. A	1233	25	4	A
ONE HUNDRED AND FIRST ENGINEERS
Estey, Harold W.	Major	636	10	29	A
Boisvert, Bernard L.	Cook Hq. Co	1232	12	22	C
Day, Frederic D.	Sgt. Co. A	1233	11	12	B
Eaton, Clarence S.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A	1233	30	13	C
Fogg, Cecil W.	Cpl. Co. E	1764	17	3	B
Forbush, Robt. L.	Mstr. Engr. Hq. Co	608	32	19	D
Gaillac, Emile B.	Pvt. Co. C	1232	36	20	E
Johnson, Enfred A.	Pvt. Co. D	1233	8	16	B
Lees, Jas. E.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C	1764	57	3	B
McKenney, Rex L.	Pvt. Co C	1232	25	46	B
Murray, Russell S.	Pvt. Hq. Co	1233	1	14	D
Shaw, Walter E.	Cpl. Co. D	1764	54	5	A
Soper, Otis E.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C	1764	64	8	B
Wilbur, Seamon O.	Pvt. Co. C	1764	53	5	B
Kopp, Geo. F.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 101 F. S. Bn.	1764	48	11	A
Monahan, Wm. F.	Cpl. Co. B, 101 F. S. Bn	1232	18	32	C
Horton, John K.	Pvt. 1 cl. M. D. 101 Sup. Tn.	608	22	5	D
Baker, Carleton G.	Cpl. Co. A, 101 Am. Tn	608	30	35	B
Miller, Geo. H.	Wag. Co. A, 101 Am. Tn	1233	15	19	D
Randall, Warren A.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 101 Am. Tn.	1233	16	19	D
Farnum, Paul J.	Pvt. 101 Amb. Co., 101 San. Tn.	608	23	32	A
Greene, Wm. G.	do	1764	66	4	A
O'Leary, Frank J.	Sgt. 1 cl. M. D. 101 San. Tn.	1232	38	40	C
Rooney, Owen	Wag. 103 Amb. Co., 101 San. Tn.	1232	35	41	H
TWENTY-SEVENTH DIVISION
Corsen, Arthur C.	Cpl. Co H, 107 Inf.	107–E	2	1	B
Fuller, Benj. W.	2 Lt. Co. L, 108 Inf.	636	3	24	B
Moore, Ralph J.	Pvt. Bty. B, 105 F. A	1232	14	45	D
McLeod, Geo. R.	Pvt. Co. E, 102 Engrs	636	7	3	A
TWENTY-EIGHTH DIVISION
Austin, Francis Reed	1 lt. Hq. Co. 109 Inf.	1233	8	28	C
Whitney, Holyoke	2 lt. Co. H, 109 Inf.	1233	28	29	C
Bellini, Guglielmo	Pvt. Co. I, 109 Inf.	1232	4	7	B
Connelly, Eugene F.	Pvt. Co. A, 109 Inf.	1232	17	24	F
Doyle, Richard J.	Pvt. Co. M, 109 Inf.	1232	9	34	E
Fant, Oscar W.	do	608	24	10	A
Nicholas, Michael	Pvt. Co. G, 109 Inf.	1764	4	7	B
Jackson, Leonard	2 lt. Co. M, 110 Inf.	1764	33	4	B
Kerr, Henry Francis	Pvt. Hq. Co. 110 Inf.	1232	21	19	H
Fiske, Chas. H.	2 lt. 111 Inf.	34	1	10	B
Baker, Isadore W.	Pvt. Co. F, 111 Inf.	1232	17	7	E
Buckley, Wm. J.	Pvt. M. G. Co. 111 Inf.	1232	9	46	A
Chandler, Lester G.	Pvt. Co. H, 111 Inf.	1232	40	25	A
Donvito, Jos.	Pvt. Co. F, 111 Inf.	1232	3	23	B
Gavello, Giovanni	do	1232	39	24	D
Hurwitz, Max	Pvt. Co. M, 111 Inf.	1232	5	6	F
Larin, Geo. E.	Pvt. Co. K, 111 Inf.	1232	40	42	B
Mullaney, John J.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 111 Inf.	1232	36	31	F
Roundy, John A.	Pvt. Co. H, 111 Inf.	1232	34	3	A
Fournier, Louis	Pvt. Co. G, 112 Inf.	1233	22	9	C
Torrey, Kenneth W.	Pvt. Co. A, 108 M. G. Bn.	1232	11	6	D
Blanchard, Jean B.	Pvt. Co. A, 109 M. G. Bn.	1233	23	13	A
Fitzgibbon, Thos. J.	Pvt. Bty. F, 107 F. A	608	11	13	B
Maffa, Frank J.	do	608	17	7	C
TWENTY-NINTH DIVISION
Nagle, David J.	Pvt. Bty. B, 111 F. A	608	23	23	C
Collen, Oscar B.	Pvt. Bty. A, 112 F. A	608	14	27	B
THIRTIETH DIVISION
Germain, Henry	Pvt. Co. C, 115 M. G. Bn.	636	8	8	D
English, Thos. J.	Pvt. Bty. A, 113 F. A	1233	24	11	C
THIRTY-SECOND DIVISION
Wilber, Chas. R.	2 lt. Co. B, 126 Inf.	1232	35	37	B
Hastings, Walcott B.	1 lt. Co. I, 127 Inf.	1232	34	45	C
Hyland, Harold W.	2 lt. Co. F, 127 Inf.	608	16	25	D

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
THIRTY-SECOND DIVISION—continued
Gielarowski, Jos.	Pvt. 1 cl. M. G. Co., 127 Inf.	608	9	21	A
Vegnopoulos, Constantine.	Pvt. Co. E, 127 Inf.	1232	7	3	F
Chittick, Geo. R.	Pvt. Co. I, 128 Inf.	1232	27	6	H
Framba, Lebore	Pvt. Co. A, 128 Inf.	1232	32	42	B
Hawes, Wales T.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 128 Inf.	1232	29	5	B
Bradley, Thos. J.	Pvt. Co. B, 120 M. G. Bn.	1232	27	42	H
MacDonald, Andrew J.	Pvt. Bty. F, 119 F. A	1232	24	39	B
McCarthy, Jos. Danl.	Pvt. Bty. C, 119 F. A	1232	11	32	G
Sheehan, John R.	do	1232	35	33	F
Toole, Chas. Morton	1 lt. 107 F. S. Bn	1232	11	20	E
THIRTY-THIRD DIVISION
Edes, David O. N.	2 lt. Co. E, 131 Inf.	636	15	15	C
Westman, Robt. C.	2 lt. Co. F, 131 Inf.	636	11	14	C
Whitney, Francis W.	2 lt. Co. C, 131 Inf.	1233	35	20	D
Lawton, Hobart A.	2 lt. Bty. F, 124 F. A	1232	27	13	E
THIRTY-FIFTH DIVISION
Pickett, Minard E.	Cook Co. I, 138 Inf.	1232	21	16	F
THIRTY-SIXTH DIVISION
Akabas, Maurice W.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 143 Inf.	1232	4	18	A
THIRTY-SEVENTH DIVISION
Miskiel, Frank	Pvt. Co. D, 147 Inf.	1233	6	24	C
Pippi, Pietro	Pvt. Co. G, 148 Inf.	608	36	25	C
FORTY-FIRST DIVISION
Mickiewicz, Kosty	Pvt. M. D., 161 Inf.	608	34	35	B
Kallianiotes, Wm. A.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 147 F. A	1232	14	39	C
FORTY-SECOND DIVISION
Ames, Oliver, jr.	2 lt. Co. A, 165 Inf.	608	7	3	A
Broderick, Wm. J.	Pvt. Co. B, 165 Inf.	1232	40	41	A
Cronin, Patrick J.	Pvt. Co. C, 165 Inf.	1764	37	12	A
Elzear, Jos. A.	Pvt. Co. F, 165 Inf.	1232	32	10	A
Hunt, Homer A.	Pvt. Co. E, 165 Inf.	1232	22	31	F
McCarthy, John T.	Pvt. Co. H, 165 Inf.	608	8	9	B
O'Brien, Matthew A.	Pvt. Co. I, 165 Inf.	608	15	5	B
Palumbo, Tony	Pvt. Co. C, 165 Inf.	1232	36	41	A
Procter, Arthur H.	Pvt. Hq. Co. 165 Inf.	608	2	28	B
Ramsey, Roger R.	Pvt. Co. K, 165 Inf.	608	7	4	A
Romanuk, Michael	Pvt. Co. D, 165 Inf.	608	6	10	A
Salamone, Alfonzo	do	608	11	1	B
Silvia, Miram A.	Pvt. Co. K, 165 Inf.	608	8	6	A
Stokey, Tom	Pvt. Co. I, 165 Inf.	1232	21	15	G
Curtis, Benj. L.	1 lt. Co. F, 167 Inf.	608	15	3	A
Warren, Arthur B.	2 lt. Co. H, 167 Inf.	1232	3	30	H
Wood, Alton P.	2 lt. Co. F, 167 Inf.	1232	33	25	D
Donohue, Dennis F.	Pvt. Co. C, 167 Inf.	1764	19	6	B
Dreier, Chas. A.	Cpl. Co. H, 167 Inf.	1232	25	30	C
Houle, Albert S. J.	Pvt. Co. M, 167 Inf.	1232	10	17	B
McNeil, Bernard L.	Pvt. Co. F, 167 Inf.	1233	3	20	B
Nelson, Geo. M.	do	1233	28	19	B
Rose, Jos. G.	Pvt. Co. B, 167 Inf.	1233	8	3	B
Rutstein, Benj.	Pvt. Co. K, 167 Inf.	1232	14	43	H
Viola, Bendetto	Pvt. Co. M, 167 Inf.	1233	29	14	B
Gallagher, Jas. G.	Pvt. Co. A, 168 Inf.	1232	32	44	B
Kelly, Wm. P.	do	1232	15	31	F
Lawler, John R.	Pvt. Co. D, 168 Inf.	1232	32	29	E
Sullivan, Patrick J.	Pvt. Co. F, 168 Inf.	1233	27	11	A
Strong, Glasford S.	Pvt. Bty. D, 151 F. A	1232	13	22	D
SEVENTY-SIXTH DIVISION
Henry, David E.	1 lt. Hq. Co. 301 Inf.	608	2	5	C
Finn, Wm. J.	Cpl. Co. H, 301 Inf.	1233	9	26	A
Albro, Arthur Raymond.	Cpl. Co. A, 302 Inf.	34	5	6	A
Murray, Samuel I.	Pvt. Co. E, 302 Inf.	34	14	13	A
Pescini, Vincenzo	Pvt. Co. B, 302 Inf.	34	10	6	A
Wyman, Horace	1 lt. 303 F. A	34	30	4	B
Brown, Walter E.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty B, 303 F. A	1764	1	9	B
Plant, Arthur L.	Pvt. Co. E, 301 Engrs	1233	16	7	C
Holmes, Ralph	Pvt. Co. C, 301 F. S. Bn.	107–E	5	1	B
Gerko, Andrew V.	Cpl. Co. B, 301 Sup. Tn.	636	9	27	B
Wall, Edward R.	Pvt. Co. E, 301 Sup. Tn.	636	4	5	A
SEVENTY-SEVENTH DIVISION
Desmarais, Samuel	Pvt. Co. F, 305 Inf.	1232	27	36	B
Donahue, Wm. J.	Pvt. Co. H, 305 Inf.	1232	2	30	B
Galinauskas, Constantine.	Pvt. 1 cl. San Det. 305 Inf.	1232	31	15	H
Giuggio, Pietro	Pvt. Co. C, 305 Inf.	34	22	13	B
Margen, Ray	Cpl. Co. L, 305 Inf.	1232	19	28	C
Moore, Harold A.	Pvt. Co. A, 305 Inf.	608	11	27	C
Spaitch, Jos. N.	Pvt. Co. F, 305 Inf.	1232	13	5	C
West, Earle T.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 305 Inf.	1232	2	42	F
Barbieri, Andrea	Pvt. Co. A, 306 Inf.	1232	31	32	E
Cloutier, Desire	Pvt. Co. G, 306 Inf.	608	15	5	C
Cooley, Edwin P.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G, 306 Inf.	1764	32	4	B
Coupe, Clarence R.	Pvt. Co. G, 306 Inf.	608	17	5	C
Fudo, Nicodemo	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G, 306 Inf.	1764	28	13	B
Guertin, Herve	Pvt. Co. L, 306 Inf.	1232	15	23	B
Hogan, Patrick J.	Pvt. M. G. Co. 306 Inf.	1232	24	1	D

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
SEVENTY-SEVENTH DIVISION—continued
Maynard, Albert C. F.	Pvt. Co. B, 306 Inf.	1232	30	21	A
Newell, John E.	Pvt. Co. D, 306 Inf.	608	28	27	C
O'Connor, Daniel	Pvt. Co. K, 306 Inf.	1232	33	31	F
Tremblay, Jos. August	Pvt. Co. A, 306 Inf.	1232	36	9	C
Walsh, Jas. F.	Pvt. Co. I, 306 Inf.	1233	3	8	A
Yates, Francis J.	Cpl. M. G. Co. 306 Inf.	1232	2	20	C
Ziedlis, Geo.	Pvt. Co. C, 306 Inf.	608	28	26	A
Bernardo, Jos.	Pvt. Co. D, 307 Inf.	34	19	16	B
Brown, Peter P.	Pvt. Co. M, 307 Inf.	1764	50	13	B
Carlson, Nathaniel J.	Pvt. Co. A, 307 Inf.	1232	30	21	E
Dupuis, Reno	do	1232	36	2	E
Hartnett, Wm. F.	Cpl. Co. D, 307 Inf.	1232	11	24	C
Otto, Wm.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 307 Inf.	1232	38	42	E
Sand, Julius	Pvt. Co. D, 307 Inf.	1232	21	5	H
Ungvarsky, Wm.	Pvt. Co. F, 307 Inf.	34	7	8	B
Vandenbogaerde, Jos.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 307 Inf.	1232	1	6	C
Welch, Peter L.	Pvt. Co. I, 307 Inf.	608	2	2	C
Zukosky, Paul	Pvt. Co. B, 307 Inf.	608	4	34	D
Angier, Albert E.	1 lt. Co. M, 308 Inf.	1233	9	28	C
Belegon, Geo. S.	Pvt. Co. M, 308 Inf.	608	5	7	D
Carabine, Thos. F.	Pvt. Co. C, 308 Inf.	1232	34	34	H
Carnebucci, Catino	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 308 Inf.	1232	5	12	B
Connolly, Patrick J.	Pvt. Co. D, 308 Inf.	1233	33	9	A
Demopolos, Gust P.	Pvt. Co. G, 308 Inf.	608	15	14	B
Earle, Harold G.	Pvt. Co. I, 308 Inf.	34	13	16	B
Fortune, Jas. W.	Pvt. M. G. Co., 308 Inf.	1232	14	30	H
Higgins, Jas. M.	do	1232	26	21	D
Keane, Patrick	Pvt. Co. G, 308 Inf.	608	19	27	C
LaScola, Giovanni	do	608	27	38	C
McTague, Wm. J.	Pvt. Co. I, 308 Inf.	608	13	14	B
Meringolo, Carmine	do	608	14	5	C
Mitchell, Edwin J.	do	608	14	42	C
Mulrain, Carl	Pvt. Co. D, 308 Inf.	608	18	17	A
Torvisio, Vincent	Pvt. Co. I, 308 Inf.	608	9	24	C
Lincoln, Fred C.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. D, 304 F. A.	608	33	12	D
Quimby, Howard L.	Pvt. Bty. A, 304 F. A.	608	1	27	C
Brule, Norbet J.	Pvt. Bty. D, 305 Inf.	1232	9	42	B
Fisher, Wallace	Pvt. Hq. Co., 305 F. A.	608	7	39	A
Posner, Harry J.	Pvt. Bty. B, 305 F. A.	34	22	5	C
Belain, Geo. L.	Pvt. Bty. B, 306 F. A.	1233	16	9	B
DeFelice, Nicola	Pvt. Bty. C, 306 F. A.	608	23	4	C
Welch, Jas. A.	Pvt. Bty. F, 306 F. A.	1232	33	24	G
Maccagno, Antonio	Pvt. Co. A, 302 Engrs.	1764	16	12	B
Parmenter, Wallace A.	Pvt. Co. B, 302 Engrs.	608	9	9	D
Kearns, Elroy S.	Pvt. Co. C, 302 F. S. Bn.	1233	25	12	A
LaForge, Augustus A.	Pvt. Co. C, 302 F. S. Bn.	1232	27	27	G
SEVENTY-EIGHTH DIVISION
Aubin, Frank	Pvt. Co. G, 310 Inf.	1232	6	18	E
Holmes, Samuel W.	Col. sgt. Hq. Co. 307 F. A.	608	17	38	A
SEVENTY-NINTH DIVISION
Wosilesky, Daniel	Pvt. Co. G, 313 Inf.	1232	11	29	A
Leva, Anthony J.	Pvt. Co. I, 314 Inf.	1232	27	24	D
McAleer, Dearborn Jos.	Pvt. Co. M, 314 Inf.	1232	21	14	F
Neglio, Jos.	Pvt. Co. C, 314 Inf.	1232	14	29	A
O'Connell, Michael F.	Pvt. Co. G, 314 Inf.	1232	30	27	E
O'Hare, Austin E.	do	1232	30	3	D
Pelkey, Emery J.	Pvt. Co. K, 314 Inf.	1232	8	35	H
Petitpas, Jos. Alfred	Pvt. Co. E, 314 Inf.	1232	1	25	C
Pickering, Frank E.	Pvt. Co. G, 314 Inf.	1232	29	25	E
Pusepski, Peter	Pvt. Co. B, 314 Inf.	1232	19	21	F
Stavris, Christos H.	Pvt. Co. G, 314 Inf.	1232	28	13	D
Fuerst, Harry E.	Pvt. 1 cl. San. Det. 316 Inf.	1232	3	22	C
Lyford, Thornton	Pvt. Co. E, 316 Inf.	1232	8	3	D
DeGroot, Wm.	Pvt. Co. C, 311 M. G. Bn.	1232	10	41	B
Torpey, Vincent J.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty C, 311 F. A.	1233	13	8	C
Alkins, Harry A.	Pvt. 1 cl. 314 Amb. Co. 304 San. Tn.	1233	23	5	D
EIGHTIETH DIVISION
Morin, Arthur	Pvt. Co. G, 318 Inf.	1233	1	10	A
Ashe, Anthony D.	Pvt. Hq. Co. 319 Inf.	1233	17	4	A
Damien, Henry	Pvt. Co. D, 319 Inf.	1232	38	33	B
O'Brien, Wm. J.	Pvt. Co. F, 319 Inf.	1232	9	8	A
Pedoni, Michael	Pvt. Co. G, 319 Inf.	1232	31	6	C
Romano, Louis	Pvt. Co. F, 319 Inf.	1232	8	23	D
Wolart, Jacob	Pvt. Co. E, 319 Inf.	1232	39	3	B
Finn, John J.	Pvt. Co. C, 320 Inf.	1232	1	26	H
Nolin, Ovila	Pvt. Co. M, 320 Inf.	1232	39	23	B
EIGHTY-FIRST DIVISION
Prusak, Wladyslaw	Pvt. Co. I, 321 Inf.	1233	30	24	D
Harris, Paul H.	Pvt. M. G. Co. 321 Inf.	1233	18	25	A
EIGHTY-SECOND DIVISION
Allain, Fred'k	Pvt. Co. M, 325 Inf.	1232	7	6	E
Bastille, Henry	Pvt. Co. B, 325 Inf.	1232	6	26	C
Bereznitski, Benj.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 325 Inf.	1232	2	29	D
Boldish, Alec M.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 325 Inf.	1232	13	2	B
Callahan, Edward L.	Cpl. Co. L, 325 Inf.	1332	7	31	D
Ciampa, Pasquale	Cpl. Co. F, 325 Inf.	1232	8	7	E
Cinelli, Luigi	Pvt. Co. D, 325 Inf.	1232	2	11	C
Coulombe, Edward A.	Cpl. Co. L, 325 Inf.	34	11	21	A
Cournoyer, Alphonse	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 325 Inf.	1232	28	37	A
Crowley, Chas. E.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 325 Inf.	1232	32	12	C
Foy, John L.	Pvt. Co. M, 325 Inf.	1232	3	12	E
Gagne, Fred'k C.	Pvt. Co. K, 325 Inf.	1232	19	46	A
Hamel, Ernest	Pvt. Co. E, 325 Inf.	1232	4	16	D
Higgins, John J.	Cpl. Co. M, 325 Inf.	608	33	32	B
Kennedy, Lawrence F.	Cpl. Co. C, 325 Inf.	1232	3	26	B

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
EIGHTY-SECOND DIVISION—continued
Leger, Urbain	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 325 Inf.	1232	22	29	A
Lowe, Chas. S.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 325 Inf.	1232	7	3	H
Marc-Aurele, Noel	Pvt. Co. L, 325 Inf.	1233	27	7	B
Mathieu, Albert J.	Cpl. Co. I, 325 Inf.	1232	40	13	A
Musante, Augustus	Cpl. Co. L, 325 Inf.	1232	34	24	A
O'Donohue, Patrick V.	Pvt. Co. M, 325 Inf.	1232	7	1	D
Pelletier, Florein	Pvt. Co. L, 325 Inf.	1232	29	14	C
Percival, Alban	Pvt. Co. A, 325 Inf.	1232	36	29	C
Regan, Robt. F.	Pvt. Co. K, 325 Inf.	1232	12	33	C
Romez, Jacob S.	Pvt. Co. L, 325 Inf.	1232	17	25	C
Sandquist, Olaf G.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. I, 325 Inf.	1232	30	14	C
Savage, Wm.	Pvt. Co. D, 325 Inf.	1232	8	42	H
Tracey, Geo. E.	Pvt. Co. F, 325 Inf.	1232	1	15	A
Bean, Herbert S.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 326 Inf.	1232	6	19	G
Caya, Alfred S.	Sgt. Co. C, 326 Inf.	1232	36	13	C
Drummond, Alexandre A.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 326 Inf.	1233	28	1	D
Duford, Chas. F.	Sgt. Co. M, 326 Inf.	1232	40	27	E
Fogel, Albert N.	Pvt. Co. E, 326 Inf.	1233	2	11	C
Gasbarri, Giovanni	do	1232	29	12	C
Hellman, Chas. F.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G, 326 Inf.	1232	7	12	A
LaVallee, Albert A.	Sgt. Co. M, 326 Inf.	1232	12	22	H
Martin, Jas. S.	Pvt. Co. L, 326 Inf.	1232	4	31	H
Moore, John R.	Sgt. Co. C, 326 Inf.	1232	25	19	B
Musto, Angelo B.	Pvt. Co. L, 326 Inf.	1232	28	3	A
O'Callaghan, Cornelius	Sgt. Co. G, 326 Inf.	1232	6	12	C
Pagliuca, Frank	Pvt. Co. M, 326 Inf.	1232	18	30	G
Pairadee, Walter W.	Pvt. Co. D, 326 Inf.	1233	12	23	B
Patrell, Erwin E.	Pvt. Co. C, 326 Inf.	1232	12	8	A
Prairie, Geo. E.	Mech. Co. B, 326 Inf.	1232	18	36	G
Soper, Chas. D.	Pvt. Co. K, 326 Inf.	1232	36	11	B
Valsam, Peter	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. G, 326 Inf.	1232	4	1	E
Welch, Earl B.	Sgt. Co. B, 326 Inf.	1232	7	18	B
Woronik, Ludwik	Pvt. Co. D, 326 Inf.	1233	6	24	A
Beausoleil, Albert J.	Cpl. Co. L, 327 Inf.	1233	22	6	B
Boisvert, Stanislas	do	1232	40	1	D
Cournoyer, Albert	Cpl. Co. E, 327 Inf.	1233	35	6	D
DeBastiani, Ernest	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. H, 327 Inf.	1232	19	3	A
Dumas, Jos.	Cpl. Co. I, 327 Inf.	1232	8	30	A
Dwyer, Jos. G.	Cpl. Co. M, 327 Inf.	1232	30	47	F
Featherstone, Chas. D.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 327 Inf.	1232	1	32	A
Gately, Jas. J.	Cpl. Co. K, 327 Inf.	1233	6	9	D
Goulart, Walter	Pvt. M. G. Co. 327 Inf.	1232	19	32	E
Hobkien, Ross T.	Cpl. Co. E, 327 Inf.	1233	21	26	B
Lillicrap, Geo. E.	Cpl. Co. D, 327 Inf.	1232	21	21	B
Manor, Domino	Pvt. Co. B, 327 Inf.	1232	11	10	A
May, Walter L.	Pvt. Co. F, 327 Inf.	1232	33	2	A
McCabe, Thos. F.	Cpl. Hq. Co. 327 Inf.	1232	33	4	E
Russell, Michael	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 327 Inf.	1232	1	3	A
Tracy, Arthur F.	Sgt. Co. K, 327 Inf.	1232	35	22	C
Vedin, Gunnar N.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 327 Inf.	1232	24	19	B
Veieira, Antone	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. A, 327 Inf.	1232	11	3	E
Baker, Harry	Pvt. Co. G, 328 Inf.	1232	3	35	F
Bourgault, Paul	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 328 Inf.	1232	9	4	E
Cousins, Jacob	Cpl. Co. C, 328 Inf.	1232	20	33	E
Deitalia, Jos.	Pvt. Co. K, 328 Inf.	1232	13	33	G
Dumont, Alphonse	Pvt. Hq. Co., 328 Inf.	1232	36	36	G
Gutowski, Watson	do	1232	22	24	D
Hegarty, John L.	Cpl. M. G. Co., 328 Inf.	1233	2	29	B
Howard, Everett F.	Pvt. Co. G, 328 Inf.	1232	40	29	A
Kelleher, Fred E.	Sgt. Co. E, 328 Inf.	1232	31	35	F
Kujavi, Tony	Pvt. Co. I, 328 Inf.	1233	35	19	B
Kuperstein, David	Pvt. Co. M, 328 Inf.	1232	35	35	G
Lebeau, Evano J.	Pvt. San. Det., 328 Inf.	1232	27	16	B
Mooney, John	Cpl. Co. K, 328 Inf.	1232	33	16	G
Rachman, Mark J.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. E, 328 Inf.	1232	34	35	H
Sambatoro, Jos. G.	Pvt. Co. L, 328 Inf.	1233	28	29	B
Sands, Maurice C.	Pvt. Co. B, 328 Inf.	1232	31	13	E
Souza, Antone	Cpl. Co. L, 328 Inf.	1233	16	9	D
Starr, Samuel J.	Pvt. Co. I, 328 Inf.	1232	18	26	C
Sylvia, Francis D.	Pvt. Co. H, 328 Inf.	1232	37	16	D
Toole, Albert S.	Sgt. Co. L, 328 Inf.	1233	24	4	C
Vail, Jeffrey	Cpl. Co. F, 328 Inf.	1232	29	28	H
Wareing, Fred	Pvt. Co. G, 328 Inf.	1232	18	31	A
Moreau, Chas. K.	Pvt. Co. B, 320 M. G. Bn.	1232	19	45	C
Benoit, Ernest J.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 321 M. G. Bn.	1232	15	10	G
Collins, Wm. J.	Sgt. Maj. Hq. Co., 321 M. G. Bn.	1233	3	11	B
Peabody, Lawrence C.	Pvt. Co. C, 321 M. G. Bn.	1232	12	37	H
Scheffer, Herman H.	do	1764	32	10	B
Poisson, Arthur	Sgt. Bty. B, 319 F. A.	1232	6	17	B
Reen, John J.	Wag Sup. Co., 320 F. A.	1232	17	23	H
Beck, Jas. H.	Pvt. Co. F, 307 Am. Tn.	1233	8	7	B
Wisner, Clarence E.	Sgt. Ord. Det., 307 Am. Tn.	1764	21	10	B
Hickey, Jas. J.	Cook, 328 Fld. Hosp. 307 San. Tn.	1233	22	19	B
EIGHTY-FOURTH DIVISION
Barnum, Frank J.	Pvt. Co. B, 334 Inf.	608	13	34	B
EIGHTY-FIFTH DIVISION
Triantafilakos, Stavros G.	Pvt. Co. I, 338 Inf.	1233	5	21	C
Frontero, Domenico	Pvt. Bty. F, 329 F. A.	1233	9	8	B
EIGHTY-SEVENTH DIVISION
Pigott, Richard L.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. L, 347 Inf.	608	29	15	A
Prower, John P.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. M, 347 Inf.	608	14	22	D
Sullivan, Jeremiah J.	Pvt. Co. G, 347 Inf.	1233	10	17	A

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
EIGHTY-SEVENTH DIVISION—Continued
Chappell, Raymond E.	Pvt. Co. H, 348 Inf.	34	12	7	A
Chick, Jos. F.	Musn. Hq. Co. 348 Inf.	34	7	22	A
Freeman, Richard W.	Pvt. Co. G, 348 Inf.	34	12	8	A
O'Toole, Jeremiah J.	do.	34	36	10	A
Farrell, John J.	Pvt. Co. A, 312 Engrs.	34	3	5	A
Thivierge, John.	do.	34	30	7	A
Walker, Geo. D.	Pvt. Co. B, 312 Engrs.	34	12	2	A
EIGHTY-NINTH DIVISION
Garvey, Wm. H.	Pvt. Co. M, 356 Inf.	1232	21	21	G
Conway, Wm. E.	Pvt. Co. E, 314 Engrs.	1232	13	12	B
NINETIETH DIVISION
Damm, Wm. A.	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. Co. 359 Inf.	1233	25	9	C
Davis, Jay S.	Pvt. 1 cl. Mil. Pol. Co.	1232	2	15	H
NINETY-FIRST DIVISION
Archer, Walter S.	Pvt. Co. C, 316 Engrs.	1232	33	15	F
NINETY-SECOND DIVISION
Burton, Texas B.	Pvt. Co. C, 367 Inf.	1232	26	33	C
DeWillis, Chas. E. J.	Pvt. Co. D, 367 Inf.	1232	23	29	D
Oliver, Hubert V. J.	Pvt. Co. C, 367 Inf.	1232	23	24	H
NINETY-THIRD DIVISION
Mason, Clifford B.	Pvt. Co. L, 372 Inf.	1232	35	19	F
Meekins, Clifford K.	Bglr. Co. L, 372 Inf.	1232	26	14	F
Turner, Wm. E.	Sgt. Co. L, 372 Inf.	1232	29	14	H
Wilson, Albert.	Pvt. Co. L, 372 Inf.	1232	3	36	G
Washington, Wm. H. C.	do.	1232	17	33	E
Wright, Harrison A.	Cpl. Co. M, 372 Inf.	1232	35	30	F
NONDIVISIONAL ORGANIZATIONS
Frye, Dean B.	Wag. Co. B, Hq. Bn. GHQ.	608	31	34	B
Thayer, Sanford A.	Sgt. Finance Bureau.	34	26	14	B
Brown, Stafford L.	1 lt. Air Serv.	34	23	4	B
Bliss, Carlton M.	2 lt. Air Serv.	107–E	5	3	C
Bullard, Edward L.	do.	1233	19	15	C
Cross, Robt. P.	1 lt. Air Serv.	608	18	28	A
Kissel, Gustav H.	1 lt.	(1)
Mortimer, Richard, jr.	2 lt. Air Serv.	34	8	7	B
Nathan, Thos. Cushman.	1 lt.	(1)
Kingsland, Edwin R.	2 lt. 8 Aero Sq.	1232	4	25	E
Squires, Geo.	1 lt. SRC.	(2)
Stiles, Robt. H.	1 lt. 13 Aero Sq.	1233	34	24	B
Beane, Jas. D.	1 lt. 22 Aero Sq.	1232	39	45	B
Clapp, Howard R.	do.	1232	12	27	D
Gardiner, Edward H.	2 lt. 50 Aero Sq.	1233	4	28	C
Div, Roger S., jr.	Cadet.	(3)
Merrick, Hyde B.	Sgt. 1 cl. 34 Aero Sq.	608	34	9	C
Bruce, Alexander B.	1 lt. 94 Aero Sq.	608	14	7	C
Coolidge, Hamilton.	Capt. 94 Aero Sq.	(2)
Blodgett, Richard A.	1 lt. 95 Aero Sq.	1233	8	19	B
Williams, Bertram.	1 lt. 96 Aero Sq.	1233	12	27	C
Hopkins, Stephen T.	2 lt. 96 Aero Sq.	1233	2	27	C
Noonan, Thos. E.	Chfr. 1 cl. 96 Aero Sq.	1233	8	26	C
Hobbs, Warren T.	1 lt. 103 Aero Sq.	(2)
Putnam, David E.	1 lt. 139 Aero Sq.	(2)
Pishon, Sturgis.	1 lt. 341 Aero Sq.	34	23	4	C
Hartman, Fredk. S.	2 lt. 354 Aero Sq.	1233	18	19	B
Ross, Harrison F.	Chfr. 829 Aero Sq.	608	4	18	A
Leach, Ernest H.	Cadet 2 Avi. Instr. Center.	1233	19	19	A
Stewart, Gordon.	Pvt. 2 Avi. Instr. Center.	608	8	27	B
Herrick, Wm. F.	1 lt. Hq. Det. 3 Av. Ins. Cen.	1233	24	27	A
Stearns, Wm. S.	1 lt. 7 Av. Inst. Cen.	1764	11	8	B
Morse, Eugene D.	2 lt. 7 Av. Inst. Cen.	1764	33	6	B
Coty, Louis.	Pvt. 1 Constr. Co.	107–E	2	7	C
Buck, Paul T.	Sgt. 8 Co. 2 M. M. Regt. AS.	1232	4	27	H
Beaton, Harold.	Pvt. 19 Co. 3 M. M. Regt. AS.	34	33	8	B
Watt, Wm.	Pvt. 1 cl. 14 Co. 3 M. M. Regt. AS.	34	26	16	B
Messer, Raymond B.	1 lt. 20 Co. 4 M. M. Regt. AS.	1233	32	6	D
Pfaffmann, John S.	2 lt. Avia. Sec. A. S.	34	10	1	B
Vickers, Albert H.	2 lt. Trn. Det. A. S.	34	10	5	C
Martins, Frank L.	Sgt. 1 Army A. S. C.	1232	32	39	A
Kirk, Jos. P.	Pvt. Bty. E, 42 Art. Regt. C. A. C.	1233	25	14	A
Lund, Hans W.	Pvt. Bty. F, 44 Art. Regt. C. A. C.	1232	35	14	E
McCabe, Thos. J.	Pvt. Bty. C, 44 Regt. C. A. C.	1233	4	28	D
Solomos, Chas. P.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. B, 48 Regt. C. A. C.	1233	1	2	A
McKenney, Karl C.	Capt. Bty. E, 49 Regt. C. A. C.	608	20	31	D
Dobry, Michael J.	Sgt. Hq. Co., 51 Regt. C. A. C.	1233	16	28	C
Solomon, Benj.	Pvt. Bty. B, 52 Regt. C. A. C.	1233	29	14	A

[1] British military cemetery, Pont-du-Hem, Nord, France.
[2] Ayr Cemetery, Ayr, Scotland.
[3] Doune Cemetery, Girvan, Scotland.
[4] Le Crotoy, Somme, France, Fr. Cmnl. Cemetery.
[7] Chevieros, Ardennes, France.
[8] Lafayette Escadrille Memorial.

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
NONDIVISIONAL ORGANIZATIONS—continued
McDonough, Thos.	Pvt. Bty. F, 53 Regt. C. A. C.	1232	29	27	G
McNiff, Hugh.	Pvt. Bty. E, 53 Regt. C. A. C.	1232	24	25	F
Peters, Wm. F.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. A, 54 Regt. C. A. C.	1233	4	17	B
Cerrone, Euplio.	Pvt. Bty. F, 55 Regt. C, A. C.	1232	35	37	H
Ferson, Edw. John.	do.	608	1	39	D
Fortier, Raymond J.	Pvt. Bty. C, 55 Regt. C. A. C.	1232	27	5	D
Guerard, Henry A.	Sgt. Bty. A, 55 Regt. C. A. C.	34	27	8	A
Lynch, Daniel M.	Pvt. Bty. F, 55 Regt. C. A. C.	1764	21	8	B
McGurin, Alfred J.	Cook, Sup. Co., 55 Regt. C. A. C.	1232	29	11	C
Trembley, Paul J.	Pvt. Bty. D, 55 Regt. C. A. C.	1764	29	6	B
Gouger, Patrick A.	Pvt. Bty. C, 57 Regt. C. A. C.	1232	23	34	C
Loughman, Jos. P.	Sgt. Maj. J. G. Sup. Co., 57 Regt. C. A. C.	1233	22	1	A
Costello, Jas. F.	Pvt. Bty. C, 65 Regt. C. A. C.	1233	9	27	A
Horton, Edward.	Pvt. Sup. Co., 66 Regt. C. A. C.	34	13	11	A
Flynn, Wm. J.	Pvt. Bty. B, 68 Regt. C. A. C.	34	36	3	A
McCart, Jos. W.	Pvt. M. D., 71 Regt. C. A. C.	608	36	22	D
Newton, Arlo W.	Pvt. Bty. A, 71 Regt. C. A. C.	608	31	30	B
Smith, Jeff M.	Pvt. 1 cl. Sup. Co., 71 Regt. C. A. C.	608	27	30	B
Tucker, John R.	Pvt. 1 cl. M. D., 71 Regt. C. A. C.	608	3	30	B
Flynn, Edward J.	Pvt. Sup. Co., 88 Regt. C. A. C.	34	35	10	A
Coleman, Walter W.	Sgt. 1 cl. Ord. Det., 2 Art. Pk.	1764	22	11	B
Gavigan, Albert H.	Wag. Trk. Co. D, 2 Cps. Art. Pk.	1233	10	27	D
Judge, Thos.	Pvt. 1 cl. Trk. Co. B, 2 Cp. Art. Pk.	1232	15	39	D
Rogers, Chas.	Wag. Co. E, 2 Cp. Art. Pk.	1232	20	3	D
Bowden, Jas. A.	Cpl. Bty. D, 6 A. A. Bn. C. A. C.	107–E	8	6	D
Alvord, Clark.	Pvt. 1 cl. Sec. 604 U. S. Amb. Serv.	1233	27	9	B
Fiske, Abram G.	Pvt. 1 cl. Hq. U. S. Air Serv.	34	6	21	A
Hill, Stanley.	Pvt. 1 cl. 640 Sec. U. S. Air Serv.	(1)
Winsor, Philip.	Pvt. 1 cl. U. S. Air Serv. 627 Sec.	1232	25	26	E
McMath, Thos. J.	Sgt. Base Hosp. No. 7.	608	33	33	D
Blake, Harold R.	Pvt. Base Hosp. No. 44.	1233	9	18	C
Parrott, Claude J.	do.	1233	13	1	C
Manns, Geo. Wiley.	Capt. Base Hosp. No. 79.	608	7	22	A
Davis, Bernard L.	Pvt. Base Hosp. No. 97.	1233	13	23	A
Marron, Jas. F.	Pvt. Base Hosp. No. 101.	608	14	22	A
Woodburn, Fredk. J.	Pvt. Camp Hosp. No. 9.	1233	25	6	D
Martin, John E.	Pvt. 1 cl. Evac. Hosp. No. 8.	1232	24	28	H
Anderson, Chas. W.	Pvt. Vet. Hosp. No. 8.	1764	21	2	A
Roth, Wm. L.	Pvt. Inter. Med. Sup. Dep. 2.	608	8	17	C
Howe, Geo. P.	1 lt. Med. Rev. Cp.	1252	1	4	C
Bailey, Margaret S.	Nurse, Army Nurse Cps. Base Hosp. No. 58.	1233	23	8	B
Fletcher, Lucy M.	Nurse, Base Hosp. No. 6.	34	13	5	C
Malloch, Grace Lee.	Nurse, ANC B. H. No. 55.	(10)
O'Connor, Gertrude.	Nurse ANC B. H. No. 7.	608	16	23	A
Larbrou, John.	Pvt. 1 cl. 238 Mil. Pol. Co.	34	4	2	A
Glennon, Jas. J.	Pvt. 271 Mil. Pol. Co.	1233	34	16	A
Christensen, Christen S.	Pvt. 1 cl. 273 Mil. Pol. Co.	1233	36	25	C
Dineen, Michael J.	Pvt. 1 cl. 295 Mil. Pol. Co.	1233	31	7	A
Cooley, Raymond W.	Pvt. 474 Co. Mtr. Tr. Cps.	1233	8	21	B
Bain, Chas. F.	Sgt. 301 Co. Mtr. Tr. Cps.	1233	34	19	C
Nichols, Chas. J., jr.	Pvt. 488 Mtr. Tk. Co. MTC.	608	5	11	C
Crosby, Alfred D.	Pvt. Det. 11, Gen. Rep. Shop.	1233	27	17	D
Hayden, Edward B.	1 lt. 1 Army Ord. Dept.	34	12	9	B
Tallant, John F.	Pvt. 28 Prov. Ord. Dep. Co.	608	36	13	C
Turcotte, Henry P.	Pvt. 2 Co. Hby. Mob. O. R. S.	1233	7	1	D
Brown, Harry Alfred.	Pvt. 1 cl. 1462 Cas. Co.	608	26	38	A
Chase, Chas. W.	Pvt. 380 Cas. Co.	608	7	3	C
Doherty, Edward.	Sgt. Co. D, 2 Cav.	1233	28	15	D
Rose, John A.	Sgt. 1 cl. San. Cps. C. W. S.	107–E	4	4	D
Rideout, Percy A.	1 lt. Co. D, 1 Gas Regt.	1232	31	30	G
Ferguson, Frank M. B.	Pvt. Co. A, 1 Gas Regt.	1232	4	33	H
Slamon, Jas. T.	Pvt. Co. B, 1 Gas Regt.	1232	31	9	B
Verder, Walter M.	Pvt. 1 cl. Base Sig. Sch.	608	4	24	A
Plummer, Chas. W.	2 lt. 101 F. A.	608	29	17	A
Wilcox, Frank A.	Colonel, Infantry.	608	20	2	D
Pinkham, Harold L.	2 lt. Inf. att. 6 U. S. M. C.	1764	47	9	A
Spencer, Geo. F.	Sgt. Co. I, 3 Pion. Inf.	1232	32	28	E
Doherty, Wm. R.	Cpl. Sup. Co. 4 Pion. Inf.	608	15	31	B
Howes, Wm. A.	Stbl. Sgt. Sup. Co. 4 Pion. Inf.	608	32	22	C
Miller, Max.	Pvt. Co. G, 53 Pion. Inf.	1232	21	42	D
Bastian, Fred F.	Sgt. Co. I, 57 Pion. Inf.	608	11	20	D
Johnson, Everett.	Pvt. Co. M, 805 Pion. Inf.	1233	1	8	B
Post, Benj. J. C.	Pvt. Co. D, 807 Pion. Inf.	34	28	6	C

[9] La Veuve, Marne, France.
[10] French civilian cemetery, Ecrouves, M-et-M, France.

Deceased soldiers from Massachusetts buried in cemeteries in Europe—Continued

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
NONDIVISIONAL ORGANIZATIONS—con.
Taylor, Isaac W	Pvt. Co. E, 807 Pion. Inf.	608	22	22	D
O'Connell, Wm. J	Pvt. Off. Chf. Q. M.	608	20	28	A
Smith, Wm. E	Pvt. Sec. B, Dep. 1, Adv. Animal.	608	2	17	B
Sencabaugh, Benj. F	Pvt. 316 Fld. Rem. Sq.	1233	6	26	A
Shewalter, Jas	Pvt. Co. C, 329 Lab. Bn.	1232	40	45	A
McLaughlin, Adrian C	Cpl. 424 Mtr. Tk. Co.	1233	1	15	A
Farnham, Frank N	Pvt. 304 Sup. Co. Q. M. C.	608	10	39	D
St. John, John E	Pvt. Cp. Rochambeau Q. M. C. Det.	608	22	9	C
Higgins, Edward W	Pvt. 1 cl. 2 Cps. Sch. Q. M. C.	1233	12	8	D
Kaufman, Isadore	Cook 414 Mtr. T. M. Co. Q. M. C.	34	36	4	B
Ginsberg, Benj. J	2 lt. Bty. F, FW. Art. Repl.	1233	18	1	A
Bourassa, Arthur J	Sgt. 1 Shop Det. Art.	1233	27	14	A
Cooper, Franklin T	Pvt. 2 Co. Cp. Devens Repl.	608	5	38	A
Cutting, Frank	Pvt. Cp. Hancock S. R. D. Repl.	608	22	13	C
Fortin, Jerimie	Pvt. 2 Co. Cp. Hancock S. R. D.	608	18	29	B
Howard, Thos	Sgt. 4 Unit, Cp. Standish S. R. D.	608	29	17	C
Landry, Leo	Pvt. Cp. Devens S. R. D. Hq. Bn.	34	10	18	A
Melanson, Albert E	Pvt. 6 Prov. Co. Cp. Hancock S. R. D.	608	5	10	D
Glencross, Jas. C	Sgt. Co. B, 317 Bn.	1232	15	27	B
Proulx, Theophile J	Pvt. 1 cl. 13 Co. 1 M. M. Regt.	608	7	31	B
Serrurier, Louis	Sgt. 1 cl. Pigeon Co. No. 1, S. C.	1232	28	40	B
Crocker, Alvah, jr	2 lt. Engrs.	608	28	21	C
Leary, Edward J	Pvt. Co. F, 14 Engrs.	1232	19	25	D
McKenney, Everett N	Pvt. Co. A, 14 Engrs.	636	7	11	A
Parker, Jas. A	Sgt. Co. F, 14 Engrs.	636	5	32	B
Gravelle, Jas. N	Pvt. Co. B, 25 Engrs.	608	19	22	D
Thompson, Francis	Sgt. Co. B, 45 Engrs.	608	9	31	A
Shuster, Henry S	Sup. Sgt. Co. E, 57 Engrs.	608	21	38	A
Irwin, Howard W	Capt. Co. H, 118 Engrs.	608	15	28	E
Ware, Ernest Alonzo	Capt. Co. B, 506 Engrs.	34	17	8	A
Kammer, Geo. W	Pvt. Co. C, 519 Engrs.	34	15	6	A
Kelley, Richard G	Pvt. Co. B, 550 Engrs.	608	4	26	C
Cook, Norman Small	Lt. j. g., U. S. N. R. F.	608	8	26	A
Algar, Philip	Ensign, U. S. N. R. F.	608	22	37	D
Gaskill, David M	Com. Std., U. S. N. R. F.	608	11	39	D
Ligth, Antonio Luis	B. M. 2 cl., U. S. N. R. F.	608	8	26	C
O'Gorman, Mathew Edw.	Yeoman 1 cl., U. S. N. R. F.	636	10	3	D
Willis, Jas. Henry, jr	Ms. Att. 3 cl., U. S. Navy	608	35	30	D
Woodworth, Horace Campbell.	Elec. 3 cl., U. S. Navy.	608	12	10	C
Jerard, Albert B	Sgt. Hq. Co., 301 Bn. T. C.	636	11	26	A
Root, Geo. W	Sgt. Co. A, 303 Bn. T. C.	107–E	7	3	C
Durkin, Wm. R	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 59 Regt. Tr. Cps.	608	13	8	C
Zarnowski, Waclaw	Pvt. 476 Mtr. Tk. Co., 419 Mtr. Sup. Tn.	1233	23	11	B

A CONGRESSMAN'S SERVICE TO HIS CONSTITUENTS

Mr. LANKFORD of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. LANKFORD of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, as we approach another recess of Congress our minds should turn to the management of our official affairs during vacation and to making our people a report of our labors here.

At this time I wish to remind the people of my district again that my office in Washington remains open throughout the year for the transaction of business, regardless of the recesses and adjournments of Congress. This office is run for the personal benefit of every individual in the eleventh congressional district of Georgia who has any business with the Government or who in any way needs or desires my services. In other words, I would like to emphasize the fact that as their Congressman I earnestly desire to help them and be of assistance to them in every way possible. I want to be called upon and used whenever and as often as my people desire.

There are hundreds of departmental matters in addition to legislation which a Congressman can handle and does manage gladly. The World War has more than doubled the office work of Congressmen since I was first elected, and this work will increase for the next several years. In all matters either for or against the veterans of the World War or the Spanish-American War I am the attorney and agent of the veteran, never opposing him, but always striving to help him. I regret the United States does not pay a pension to Confederate veterans of the Civil War. I favor not only a pension for them but a fair, general old-age pension. Our Government will in time give proper recognition to our Confederate heroes.

Doubtless many people of my district will desire to avail themselves of the offer of the National Government to provide headstones for marking the graves of Confederate veterans. These stones will not be ready for distribution in the very near future, but I shall be glad to furnish application blanks to those interested, and upon their return to me handle the same with the War Department.

The longer I stay in Congress the more I am determined, so far as possible, to keep the people of my district advised of just what is taking place in Congress. I believe every Member should take decided stands on every important issue, should vote on all matters, and should make speeches and place written statements in the RECORD, letting the world know his convictions on the issues that arise here.

The House membership being nearly five times as large as that of the Senate, each Member of the House must content himself with about one-fifth of the time used by Senators in debate. I find, though, that a Member can get reasonable opportunity to discuss on the floor the matters in which he is most interested. The very best Members make speeches on the floor; also carefully prepare written arguments and briefs and file them, by unanimous consent, for printing in the RECORD just like lawyers do when handling an important case before a judge or the higher courts. All who have studied the proposition know that the very best arguments in Congress, in the courts, and elsewhere are those that are carefully prepared and reduced to writing. The good Member of Congress, like the able lawyer, does both. He makes a speech when he thinks that is best, and prepares a written statement when he believes that is best under the circumstances.

The honest Member of Congress not only makes known his position to the Congress but perpetuates his ideas so that all future generations may know just how he felt about various matters that arose during his term of office. If his argument is good, it may be the cause of proper legislation in future years. He may lose temporarily, but later the fruits of his labor may become the heritage of all men. What a man says on the floor of Congress at best is heard by only a few people and would soon be forgotten if not recorded. What becomes part of the permanent RECORD will last as long as our Government and if our Government should fail will still be read by countless millions as long as the ages roll. No man with the welfare of his people at heart will permit thousands upon thousands of pages of RECORD to be filled with fallacious statements by the enemies of his folks without himself using every known legitimate method of recording his objections to and protest against this vicious propaganda and thus perpetuate for all time his honest views and reasonings in behalf of the people he represents.

It is the duty of each Member to have printed and mailed to their constituents such speeches and remarks as may be necessary to keep their folks fully advised as to their work in Congress. Our people are entitled to reports from time to time in order that they may know whether we are doing their work efficiently and honestly. Contrary to what many people believe, Members of Congress pay for the printing of the speeches they mail out to their constituents. Those of us with average districts who each year send out several speeches spend each for this purpose a thousand or more dollars per year.

I am so thoroughly convinced of these things and that a Member should stay in Washington on the job that I have never missed but one record vote, except in case of sickness which absolutely prevented my attendance upon the sessions of the House. I missed one record vote deliberately. I was handling a matter at a department which meant life or death, and while I knew about the vote and the matter involved, I was determined to stay at the department and do my best there rather than cast a vote where it would not at all change the result.

I know many Members of the House and many of the State legislatures who miss more record votes in a day than I have missed in over 10 years, when they have no excuse other than a show, a baseball game, or a game of golf. Many of these men are able and honorable, but I just could not be at all satisfied if the House was in session with me away, either at a game, on account of business, or any other cause, except, of course, providential hindrance. Since my people intrusted me with the sacred duty of representing them here I have never been away from Washington while the House of Representatives was in session.

Thus it is that I have been in actual attendance upon the Congress all the while and have always taken sides by debate or otherwise. No business of mine nor any other personal excuse, except providential, has ever kept me from attendance upon a session of the House for even a few minutes, or kept me from the fullest and most complete discharge of my duties as a Member of Congress. One of the happy thoughts concerning my service here is that my record for attendance is so nearly perfect as not to be subject to any honest criticism by friend or foe, and that this is not a matter of hearsay but a matter of actual written permanent record.

I am not boasting. I feel no one should brag about doing his plain duty. I am simply making a report to my people, just as any other man should make a report of his labor and services to his employer. I have always endeavored to represent first, last, and all the time the people of my district. Since most of my people are farmers and all my people are dependent upon the farmers for support and success, I find myself considering the farmer as my main constituent. I came back to Washington a month before the first day of the special session so that I could keep in touch with the committees which were whipping into shape the bills to be introduced as soon as Congress convened.

The Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry listened to me at length, and I thank the chairman and his committee for the courteous hearing accorded me and for the many inquiries made by the members during the course of my remarks. I also made a short statement before the House committee, as that committee had heard me at length during the Seventieth Congress and the hearings of the past Congress were adopted as a part of the recent hearing. I have had both these statements on farm relief placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and hope to have them and the several speeches made by me during this session printed in pamphlet form and mailed to all the voters in my district. I shall do this because I believe it is right and because I want my people to have a chance to see whether or not I am doing their work as they would have it done.

I have some very definite ideas on the subject of farm relief. I did not get the bill passed which I believe would be best for the farmers. There was passed, though, a much better bill than the ones passed by the last Congress and the prior Congresses. Many of the things which several of us opposed in the other bills were left out of the present bill. The measure which passed the House has been made much better in the Senate and the bill which went to the President and was signed by him is, in my mind, the best farm bill that ever became law.

I have heretofore discussed most fully the major bills of this special session and will not now enter upon an argument of the tariff and the so-called "farm relief" bill. There are so many things that should be done for the farmer and the common people. They do not get a square deal as to freight rates, tariff, taxation, marketing, or any other matter. As I have repeatedly said, unnecessary middlemen should be eliminated, and the Government can and should help the farmer to name the price of what he sells, like other folks, and give him the same freight rates and tariff and export debenture protection as is enjoyed by others.

Some say the great burden of the common people—local taxation—can not be remedied by Federal legislation. It can be solved fairly by a constitutional amendment providing, in effect, that no tax of any nature can be collected out of home or farm property except from the value of the property after deducting all recorded liens. If a farmer owns a farm worth $5,000 and owes a mortgage against it for $4,000, he ought to pay taxes on one thousand and not five thousand dollars. This privilege is enjoyed by the banks and corporations, why not by the farmers? I have introduced a resolution to provide for this amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Congress can help the farmers if it ever decides to do so. We should quit playing politics and endeavoring to put each other in a hole and get the farmers of the Nation out of their present awful condition. Those here who are playing politics are only putting themselves in bad and injuring the farmer and the people of the whole Nation.

ADDRESS OF SECRETARY OF WAR JAMES W. GOOD

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting the address of Hon. James W. Good, Secretary of War, at the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Republican Party, delivered at Ripon, Wis., on the afternoon of June 8, 1929.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, under consent given me to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the address of Hon. James W. Good, Secretary of War, at the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Republican Party, delivered at Ripon, Wis., on the afternoon of June 8, 1929.

The address is as follows:

FOUNDING OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY

When I accepted the invitation for this occasion, I did not know that I was doing something that entitled me to recognition as a tremendously courageous individual, but I know it now. Within a few days after it was announced that I would appear on this platform and occasion, I received letters from at least half a score of other thoroughly documented birthplaces of the Republican Party, all telling me, in terms that ranged from mild amusement to positive acerbity, that I was giving my countenance to a dreadful historical error.

My friends at Jackson, Mich., were positively amazed that anybody should indulge in so egregious a blunder. A newspaper from western New York recorded the indignation of the little town of Friendship, where, as all intelligent people were supposed to know, the Republican Party first saw the light of day and received its christening. From Bloomington, Ill., came a caller who, more in sorrow than in anger, assured me that I was the victim of misplaced confidence, while my friends from Pennsylvania, with a tone of lofty superiority, gave me to understand that Ripon could not filch that crown from the serene, if slightly smoke-grimed brow of Pittsburgh. "Why," declared one ardent Pittsburgher who has a particularly good speech on the subject, "you are proposing to steal from me my one most effective classical allusion, that in which, with perfect certainty that it will always draw a big hand anywhere in Allegheny County, I point out that even as Minerva sprang full-panoplied from the brow of Jove, so the Republican Party as a national force sprang from the Pittsburgh Republican conference of February 22, 1856." I ventured that maybe he could shape up a new and most serviceable classical reference on the basis of the Greek legend that Homer, dead, was claimed by seven cities. He brightened for a moment, but then shook his head. "No," he protested, "I'm not skillful enough to work out a parallel between a poet as dead as Homer and a political party so vigorously alive that it carried 40 States in the last election."

Since accepting your invitation I have been moved to some special examination of the claims advanced by various communities and movements in connection with the beginnings of the Republican Party. There are plenty of places which insist that the honor belongs to them. Numerous gatherings, conferences, and more or less formal conventions were held in whose behalf claims are put forth, but the fact seems to be that the great movement which brought the Republican Party into existence was truly a popular one. It was not a program which leadership handed down to the masses of the people. Rather, whoever reads the history of the years 1854, 1855, and 1856 must be impressed with the popular character of that movement. It came up, literally, out of the ground, everywhere, in response to a country-wide demand from the people, and it became a movement which the masses handed down to leaders in public thought and political action.

All the way from New England and New York, out to Illinois, Missouri, and Kansas, in Wisconsin, Michigan, and Pennsylvania, and in other States, earnest men held small and great gatherings, which at the time must have seemed to bear little relation to one another, and less of common purpose. Yet, looking back over the records they left, we find convincing evidence that they did represent a singleness of purpose, a unity of motive, which no individual leadership could have inspired, but which only could have come out of the moral conscousness of a great people genuinely aroused.

Some men who afterwards attained national leadership, participated in these earliest manifestations of popular acclaim. Some of those realized that the Nation confronted a real crisis and that a new weapon must be forged wherewith to fight the battle for national unity. But these men had not yet become national leaders; many, indeed, who had already reached positions of importance in the world of politics, feared and distrusted the new movement, lest it break down old alignments and leave them without followers.

The people, beginning to realize the gravity of conditions which the country faced and the menace which those conditions involved, were resolved to brush aside the pettiness of partisanship, the selfishness of place holders, the selfseeking ambitions of men, who, having their feet already on one ladder, feared that in leaping to another they might lose their places. The people, aroused and terribly in earnest, had no sympathy for such mean motives. Their ambition was not to gain something, but to save everything. So it is characteristic of the time and the state of public opinion that such a gathering should have been brought together as that which, here in Ripon, on February 28, 1854, has come to be historic and to command the reverence that is attested by this splendid gathering in its honor.

The men who with high resolve came to the Congregational Church at Ripon on February 28, and who 20 days later, on March 20, came to this little white schoolhouse in Ripon, represented all parties, all factions, all strata of their community. They did not realize that they were making history; they would have been overcome with stage fright if they could remotely have imagined this gathering, three-quarters of a century later, to pay tribute to their work. They came together, conscious of no further purpose than to do, on behalf of one frontier neighborhood, the simple but obvious duty of good citizenship.

In an effort to set at rest the claims as to the birthplace of the Republican Party, the Republican National Committee, in 1924, issued the publication: The Republican Party—A Brief History, from which I quote:

"One of the first meetings was held in the Congregational Church at Ripon, February 28, 1854. A resolution was adopted pledging those present to sever their allegiance from old political parties in case the Kansas-Nebraska bill passed, and organize a new one to be known as the Republican Party. The bill passed the Senate and a second meeting was called at Ripon by Maj. Alvan Earle Covay, this time in the schoolhouse. This was the first systematic work performed to bring about a fusion of the antislavery parties in the North into one organization."

This rivalry for the distinction of a great party's nativity presents some aspects that are worth examining. We shall hear a good many claims advanced in this diamond jubilee year of Republicanism to the honor of starting the party in the world. But let us bear in mind that while the party has more than an ample supply of birthplaces, no nationally known man has ever been accorded the distinction of being its founder. Fremont, who became its first candidate, added no meaning to it. He was from the ranks of those volunteers who arose to meet the challenge of the hour for a party that would express the human needs of a people passing through a crisis. Quite inevitably, when we think of the beginnings of the old Federalist Party, we think of Hamilton as its founder. Likewise, Jefferson is credited with the genius that established the earlier Republican Party; and rugged old Andy Jackson with the sturdy leadership which transformed it into the Democratic Party of the middle and modern epochs.

While we can trace our party's ancestry through the Whig and Free Soil Parties, the abolition agitation, and a number of lesser political movements, nowhere do we find a great nationally known figure as the founder of the Republican Party. Truly that party sprang from the people.

Here at Ripon, a man peculiarly typical of the times and the movement had issued the call which brought together a goodly number of the citizens of this community on February 28, 1854. He was Alvan Earle Bovay. In a time when many similar gatherings inspired with the same broad purposes were being held throughout the country, Father Bovay fixed his claim to future distinction, not as the chairman of a caucus, but rather because his seems to have been the inspiration which not only called that first meeting but also suggested the name of the new party. It was a tremendously important contribution, and for the purpose of this place, this day, this occasion we may safely dismiss the claims of some equally enthusiastic localities and accord the credit to him as the founder and to Ripon as the birthplace of the Republican Party.

Bovay, a young lawyer of Whig antecedents, had, at the time of this meeting, been a citizen of Wisconsin four years, coming to the State from New York two years after Wisconsin's admission to statehood. His early association in New York with Horace Greeley, the great orthodox Whig editor of the New York Tribune, together with his natural leanings to reform movements having for their purpose the advancement of the cause of workingmen, peculiarly fitted him for the local leadership he assumed in bringing together the men who here held the first public meeting of the new party.

If there was to be a new party, there must be a name for it. The name must be, in a measure, descriptive; it must suggest principles and objects; it must be comprehensive of what the founders hoped for the Republic under its new leadership; it must be attractive, for, as eager reformers have repeatedly learned, it requires a good many people to make an effective political party. The name "Republican" precisely fitted all the conditions. It was instinct with the genius of American institutions. It had come from eminently respectable lineage. It was exactly descriptive of the sort of organization that was wanted. In short, it was a good name, and from the day it was adopted here in Ripon down to this hour when we return for a ceremony of consecration, it has maintained, without fear and without reproach, the honor of a good name.

Let us consider for a moment the events which called our party into being, molded its declaration of principles, and turned over to it the helm of national affairs. For many years prior to 1854 the country was governed by an oligarchy of slaveholders. The common people had but little voice in shaping the policies of the Government. The great masses of the people were, by this aristocracy, denominated the "mudsills" of society. The repeal of the Missouri compromise opening up the entire territory of the Government to the institution of slavery, not only sounded the death knell of the Whig Party but was the bugle call summoning the common people to the christening of the new party.

It was a heterogeneous mass that 75 years ago stood at the cradle of the Republican Party. There were Whigs and Democrats, Free Soilers, Know-Nothings, and Abolitionists. From all that was good in these, it selected the best, both in principles and men.

The new party was obliged to take the added responsibility of leadership in a nation enjoying prosperous days. The message to Congress by President Pierce asserts that every part of the country was prosperous to a degree before unknown; that railroad systems were extending their lines in every direction; manufacturing was developing; the whirring of the spindle was to be heard in almost every village, hamlet, and town. Commerce was at high tide. There was a ready market for all and more than we could produce. Prices were remunerative. Excepting that of slaves, labor found ready employment and at a good wage. Our population was rapidly increasing. The National Treasury was full to overflowing. Yet in the face of this overwhelming prosperity, with that peculiar responsibility with which prosperity burdens continuous leadership, the organizers of the Republican Party demanded that the spirit of the Declaration of Independence and our Constitution, wherein was guaranteed equal rights to all and special privileges to none, should become a living reality. These new leaders took apart the sordid partnership, which cotton and commerce had builded, and translated human suffering and bondage into a human cause.

In our first declaration of principles, we invited the affiliation and cooperation of men of all parties, who believed in the principles of Washington and Jefferson, and asserted that the maintenance of the principles promulgated in the Declaration of Independence and embodied in the Federal Constitution, are essential to the preservation of our republican institutions and that the Federal Constitution, the rights of the States, and the union of the States, must be preserved.

In our platform of 1860, we reaffirmed our faith in the doctrine of equal rights for all and o" special privileges to none.

Again in 1868 our platform declared:

"We recognize the great principles laid down in the immortal Declaration of Independence as the true foundation of democratic government; and we hail with gladness every effort toward making these principles a living reality on every inch of American soil."

In 1876 we again wrote in our platform "that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that for the attainment of these ends governments had been instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. Until these truths are cheerfully obeyed, or, if needs be, vigorously enforced, the work of the Republican Party is unfinished." It is thus seen that the Republican Party was founded on the doctrine of equal rights to all, special privileges to none.

That party, in championing needed reforms, has often espoused other principles, but they always have been based on the doctrine of equal rights. That doctrine has been the mast from which have been flown minor banners; it has been the trunk from which has grown smaller branches, but in all the 75 years of the party's magnificent history that doctrine has been the touchstone of Republican legislation and Republican administration.

From the opening hour of the party, born so humbly here, the response had that mighty power that always accompanies popular conviction in a critical moment. In the election of 1856 the new party elected 15 Members of the United States Senate and 108 Members of the House of Representatives. When that Congress met a year later the Republican membership was strong enough to elect Nathaniel P. Banks as its Speaker, thus beginning a control of that body which lasted for an unbroken period of 20 years.

In the exciting years that followed the party gathered strength, and with vision and patriotism it mapped out a program which time and events proved to be of the highest wisdom and statesmanship.

The party won its first national victory in the memorable campaign of 1860. Fortunate for the future of the Republic, and of the world, was its choice in that great crisis, of such a leader as Abraham Lincoln. Endowed beyond all others with peculiar genius and ability he proved equal to the emergency and demonstrated the prowess to cope with the approaching storm. When he was inaugurated President there was laid upon his shoulders the greatest burden that mortal man was ever called upon to bear. At the end of four years of deadly strife it was settled for all time that the United States was a nation, one and indivisible, and not a mere federation of States. Human slavery had been abolished, and the nations of the earth received a new lesson in the cause of justice and human rights, a lesson which has been a powerful factor in the moral progress of the world. But of even greater benefit to mankind was the determination of that larger fact so eloquently expressed by the immortal Lincoln that "Government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

When the conflict ended we were challenged by the immediate need of binding up the Nation's wounds; of finding relief not only for those who had borne the burden of the conflict for the Union but likewise for those who had surrendered. The gage of battle had determined that we were still to be one people. If Lincoln had lived to serve out his second term, the delicate task of reconstruction would doubtless have been performed in less time than that required by his successor, and certainly with greater patience, justice, and statesmanship. Doubtless his great nature would have led us into a more sympathetic reali-nation of the problems of the South; into a wiser conception of the moral stewardship of the southern people created through the sudden emancipation of the slaves.

A policy never satisfactory to the southern people brought just reproach to our party in the South. However, the years that have seen the mellowing of the rancors of the war have seen a mighty progress—economic, industrial, and spiritual—in both the North and the South. Many of our differences have found reconciliation. Our interests have merged; the gratifying evidence came to us in the recent election that future political problems are to be less sectional. The growing appreciation by southern people of the national policies of the Republican Party lays upon us an added obligation to be worthy the new consideration that has been given to our party by southern voters.

This is an occasion to survey the events and evolutions that mark the milestones in the history of the Republican Party. Even the most facile genius in description must hesitate to attempt portrayal of the sweeping changes in political conditions, in modes of life and habits of thought that have overtaken the world in this brief span. There are men here to-day who have lived through it all, who have seen compressed into the space of seven decades the events of such a social, economic, scientific, and intellectual evolution as has not been paralleled in seven centuries from any other span of history. They have seen our country, our continent, advance from an outpost of civilization to become the very citadel of its present power—the repository of its hope for the future. They have witnessed the Republican Party standing at all times for those things which were sane, reasonable, practical, progressive. They have seen it stand for national faith and credit when there was temptation in some quarters to repudiate national obligations. So to-day we may take stock of our present-day affairs and consider by what policies and through what leadership has the country reached and maintained its present high state of prosperity, contentment, and well-being.

To recount correctly the great achievements of the Republican Party, or to point out the successive steps of our national advance and assign to the party its true place in that progress are alike impossible in the time allotted me to-day. Permit me, however, to enumerate briefly some of the great political principles for which the party steadfastly has stood, and to the adoption of which our national progress and advance is in no small degree responsible.

If the test of the party's capacity for leadership and government is measured by its accomplishments in the field of Government finance, in the exercise of the taxing and spending powers of Congress, then we must conclude that the Republican Party was fully and splendidly equipped to solve the momentous and complex problems that have demanded attention during a period of the most colossal growth and expansion any country ever experienced since the beginning of time. The close of the Civil War left the country with a national debt of $2,755,000,000. The party assumed the burden, not only of reconstruction, but of the prompt and orderly discharge of all its obligations and the maintenance of the national credit.

With virility and force the party has met the specious pleas that have been advanced by our adversaries to lower our standard of money. Successive Republican administrations have stood unflinchingly for the cause of sound money and for an unquestioned national credit. It established our monetary system on a firm and sound basis when it provided for the redemption of greenbacks in coin and courageously resumed specie payment.

It demanded that our obligations should be faithfully and promptly redeemed at par. It raised the value of our paper currency from 38 per cent to the par of gold; it restored upon a solid basis payment in coin of all national obligations, and gave us a currency absolutely good and equal in every part of our extended country; it lifted the credit of the Nation from the point where 6 per cent Government bonds sold at 86 to where 4 per cent bonds are eagerly sought at a premium.

Twenty years later it took an equally determined stand for the maintenance of the gold standard against a combined assault of powerful groups which sought to debase the country's currency through the free and unlimited coinage of silver. It created the national monetary commission, whose reports form the basis for our present banking and currency system.

It placed on the statute books of the Nation a national budget system that has stood the test of postwar reconstruction, and as Burke put the old Latin law: "It gave us a system of economy which is itself a great revenue."

During the 48 mighty years that ended in 1913, Government revenues exceeded expenditures by approximately $1,700,000,000, notwithstanding that during that period we executed the greatest engineering feat ever performed by any country—the construction of the Panama Canal, at a cost of $386,000,000. In 1913, when the administration of Government affairs was turned over to Democracy, our national debt had been reduced to $1,193,000,000. During all those years less than six hundred and forty millions of direct taxes were levied and collected, for our revenues came from the Republican system of indirect taxes which the ordinary citizen did not feel and which did not affect industry, except to stimulate production.

Eight years later, after the World War, when Warren Harding became President, the country, still technically at war, was staggering under the burden of heavy taxes, a national debt of approximately $24,000,000,000, and unliquidated outstanding war claims aggregating many millions more. By several successive acts of Congress, advocated by President Harding and President Coolidge, Congress lightened the burden of taxation by removing Federal taxes entirely from those who were least able to pay them and making enormous reductions for all classes of our people. Notwithstanding these tremendous reductions in taxation, a Republican administration during the past eight years has reduced our public debt by almost $7,000,000,000. Here is an incomparable record of efficiency and accomplishment for all time, for all parties, and for all peoples.

And what shall we say of its policy as related to industry? Have our legislative and administrative policies been constant and progressive or have they been changing and wavering policies, calculated only to catch votes? In the beginning the party proclaimed its faith in the policy of protection and from that day to this, a protective tariff policy has been our beacon light, guiding the Nation to an industrial supremacy that has been the wonder and admiration of the world. That policy, advanced for the interests of labor and capital alike, is responsible for the high standards of living enjoyed by our wage earners and for a fair return on capital invested in industrial pursuits.

For years the Democratic Party opposed the policy of protection, denouncing it first as unconstitutional, then as economically unsound, and finally as a robbery. Only in the last election did it admit that it had been wrong for more than half a century on the policy of protection, thereby admitting that on that issue the Republican Party had been everlastingly right. Even to-day, while professing advocacy of the policy of protection, the Democratic Party would deny the country the benefits of that policy by withholding the practical application of it.

In conformity with its early pioneer spirit, the new party gave to the pioneer and the settler a national homestead law, opening up the vast stretches of our western Federal domain for the homesteader and the farmer. When in later years we witnessed the passing of that great economic condition, the availability of free lands in the rain belt, it became necessary to embark on a program of reclamation of lands in arid and semiarid regions to meet the demands of our expanding population for homes in our national domain. Again in this great movement the Republican Party championed the cause of the pioneer and brought about the enactment of a law under which vast areas of public lands in our western country were made available. Those were quickly settled by sturdy citizens, who soon transformed that wilderness into a succession of happy homes, productive farms, and prosperous communities.

In its lifetime of service to a growing nation no economic accomplishment ranks higher than the establishment of rail communication. National activities were retarded by lack of adequate means of transportation. A great inland empire slumbered because no magic wand of communication stirred its drowsiness. Finally, in spite of powerful opposition, the Republican Party secured Federal aid for the building of the Pacific Railroad, by which our middle western empire was given an opportunity to develop its population and production, to cultivate its lands, and to build its homes and its cities.

The party, from its beginning championed the cause of agriculture. It stood not only for free lands, for reclamation, and for transportation, but also for regulation of freight and passenger rates, first through State and then Federal commerce commissions; for free postal delivery service; and for meat inspection. To-day it stands for an improvement of our inland waterways, in order to provide cheaper transportation of grain and bulk commodities, and for legislation providing for a sound and orderly system of marketing farm produce to the end that the American farmer may look to the future with confidence that his industry may gain a parity with that of industrial groups.

The Republican Party from the day of its birth has constantly stood for free labor and the right of labor to improve its condition and accumulate a competence. Practically all of the so-called social or welfare legislation protecting labor of women and children in industry was initiated, perfected, and enacted into law in Republican States and by Republican legislatures, and in a national way, such legislation has been sponsored and enacted by Republican Congresses.

In all its history, the party has remained true to the best American principles and American traditions. In all its eventful career it never has found it necessary or even expedient to abandon a national policy because it was unsound or un-American. To-day it may take just pride that its policies have been vindicated repeatedly by the verdict of the world's greatest jury—the American electorate.

Standing alone, these and hundreds of other outstanding measures and policies for which the party is responsible, are comparatively meaningless. Translated in terms of real progress, standards of living, and comforts of life, they make the most brilliant and thrilling history of the advance of any people. It is an incomparable record of achievement for all time and for all people. In that brief span our population of 28,000,000 increased to more than 120,000,000. Our national wealth grew from 7 billions to more than 420 billions of dollars, and our per capita wealth increased from $250 to more than $3,500. The value of the product of our factories and neighborhood industries increased from one and one-half billion to more than $60,000,000,000. The value of our exports increased twentyfold, while our exports of agricultural products increased from $160,000,000 to more than $2,000,000,000. Bank deposits increased fifteenfold and railway mileage increased from 30,000 to more than 250,000 miles. Wages of farm hands increased from $10 per month with board to $40 per month, while labor in our factories and building trades multiplied five times.

With these increases have come broader opportunities and increased comforts to every home in the land. Look for a moment at the life we live. Visit the home of the average citizen and compare his mode of living, the comforts, aye, even the luxuries he enjoys with the prevailing conditions in our country in 1856; yes, compare it with the mode of living of the average citizen of any European country, and in the quiet of your home, in the innermost consciousness of your own hearts, ask the simple question: "Has the party that has been in power during all but 15 years from 1860 to this present hour given the country a healthy, forward-looking, progressive administration of public affairs?" Your conclusion must inevitably be that it has kept the faith of its founders.

Nor have we been actuated alone by considerations of material growth and expansion. Our party has given constant thought and earnest endeavor to legislative action for moral and civic betterment. It recognized our Indians as wards of the Government. It enacted the law prohibiting white-slave traffic. It placed on our statute books the pure food and drugs act; legislation by which agricultural colleges were endowed by grants of land from the public domain; and legislation that gave to the womanhood of America the great privilege of citizenship—the right to vote. It produced legislation safeguarding childhood and home life. All this was done with a singleness of purpose so to advance human welfare that the comforts and joys of our American life might more and more become the common enjoyment of all. Legislation having for its object the amelioration of the conditions and environments surrounding those who work in factory and in mill; laws affecting hours of labor, minimum wage, child labor, occupational diseases, sanitary conditions, workmen's compensation, are of Republican origin and for a time were to be found only in States having Republican legislatures.

During the 75 years of its history it has maintained a strong, consistent American policy, standing steadfastly and consistently for those great principles of government that have assured the prosperity and contentment of our people. It never has varied in its adherence to the cause of sound money. It never has failed to advocate the policy of protection to the extent of providing tariff duties covering the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad. Its dealing with other peoples has been statesmanlike and constant. Its foreign policy has been fair, just, and sound. Our country has gained well-earned recognition in the great family of nations.

As a result of the war with Spain, for the first time we became a colonial power. Bidden to establish a colonial policy to accord with our political principles, there began almost immediately to take shape a type of control which has astonished the world and which has been the source of improvement in the colonial policies of other nations. We made of Cuba, for whose freedom we went to war, a neighboring Republic. Under the leadership of McKinley and Roosevelt we took a subject people and made citizens of them. In the Philippine Islands, whose inhabitants for 300 years had paid tribute to Spain, we established a representative autonomous government. Though wisely led by an American governor general, authority largely is vested in a legislature composed entirely of Filipinos. Into these islands we carried order, sanitation, good health, free public education, and a prosperity that makes the Philippine Islands an envied spot in Asia.

The Republican Party always has stood four-square for American labor and for the American home, advocating the enactment of welfare legislation to improve our standards of living and American home life. These same forces which from the beginning operated to make and keep the Republican Party truly representative of the best interests of all the people, operated to make and keep it a truly progressive party. With it progress has meant more than gratification of the personal ambition of any man or group of men within its membership. For it to be progressive was to give the broadest construction to the doctrine of equal rights for all and special privileges to none.

In the 68 years since the Republican Party first came into power all of the major policies of American foreign relations have been determined and shaped by Republican statesmen. The brilliant diplomacy of the American Civil War, the preservation of Mexico for the Mexicans, and the purchase of Alaska, were Republican measures carried out by William E. Seward.

The treaty of Washington which not only laid the basis for the Alabama claims arbitration, but laid also the basis for an Anglo-American understanding of vast moment at the end of the century, when the United States wished to build and operate the Panama Canal, was negotiated by a Republican Secretary of State, Hamilton Fish. It was James G. Blaine who inaugurated the movement for closer understanding with the Latin-American States of which the Pan American Union is the visible expression and of which the recent treaties of conciliation and arbitration between the Pan-American States are the most recent fruit. It was McKinley, Sherman, and Day, Republicans all, who brought the Nation through the dangerous shoals of 1898, and it was McKinley, Hay, Roosevelt, Taft, Root, and Knox who swung the ship of state over into a new and hitherto unchartered course in American foreign policy. The acquisition of Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the Philippines, and the construction of the Panama Canal were giant strides in American foreign relations.

It is not too much to say that after Theodore Roosevelt left the White House there remained for succeeding administrations but to apply and adapt foreign policies which had already been worked out in principle and tested. No new principle of policy was introduced in the World War, and it is to be observed that while the Wilson administration at first showed a disposition to reject some of the foreign policies which had been its legacy from the Taft administration, nevertheless before the eight years of Democratic administration were concluded its only foreign policies which had been approved by the country at large were those which at length had been borrowed from the administrations of McKinley, Roosevelt, and Taft.

Under the brilliant leadership of Charles Evans Hughes there was called the Washington conference of 1922, one of the most important events, not only in American history, but in the history of all modern international relations.

It became the duty of the Republicans to make peace with Germany and thus formally to conclude the American part in the World War, and to the Republican Party has been intrusted the tasks of leading the American people through the tangled web of war-debt settlements, and the momentous question of reparations. Nor is it proper to conclude this brief reference to the Republican Party and American foreign policy without mention of the fact that the Kellogg multilateral pact for the renunciation of war gathers up all that is best in the best traditions of the foreign policies of every nation and bids fair to inaugurate between states a new era of international comity and understanding.

The high rank in statesmanship of our Republican Presidents has won the plaudits of patriotic men and women adhering to other political creeds. The record of their brilliant achievements makes a most thrilling story of the great human advance in an age of marvelous development and accomplishment. The immortal Lincoln, great emancipator and savior of the Union. The intrepid Grant, great in war and great in peace, initiating reform of the civil service and maintaining the national credit. Hayes, formulating financial policies resulting in a marked revival of business and prosperity. The martyred Garfield, holding office for only a few months but winning the confidence and affection of all our people. His successor, Arthur, bringing to a completion the construction of three of the great transcontinental railway systems. Almost a quarter of a century of unbroken Republican rule under these men as Presidents witnessed a great advance in the prosperity of our country and the well-being of all our people.

In later years Harrison reduced the public debt, arranged numerous treaties of commercial reciprocity with other countries of the Americas and Europe, and brought about a restriction of immigration which kept from our shores the mentally and physically unfit. The beloved McKinley, whose administration elevated the United States to a great world power, established the Nation's finances on a sound-money basis and provided an adequate protective tariff. His strenuous successor, Theodore Roosevelt, who inaugurated the mammoth undertaking of building the Panama Canal and thus uniting the Pacific and the Atlantic Oceans, and who inaugurated a necessary regulation of trusts and monopolies. Taft, the present Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, gaining in the admiration and esteem of the people with every passing year, whose administration established the postal-savings bank, reformed the judicial system, and inaugurated the parcel post.

Then Harding, who established peace with Germany, successfully restored the Republic to a peace-time basis, formed the Bureau of the Bud..., restricted immigration to its actual needs, and called the world conference on the limitation of armaments. And Calvin Coolidge, whose wise and far-seeing economies in governmental administration so influenced the industrial life of the Nation that under his leadership the Republic continued to enjoy an era of unexampled prosperity.

The mere naming of these illustrious men, whose administrations brought honor, credit, and prosperity to the Nation, brings to mind numerous events and achievements rich with accomplishment.

With the most popular demonstration ever witnessed by our people we have just chosen a new President. Humanitarian, statesman, great engineer, his public accomplishments have marked him as peculiarly fitted and worthy to carry on the great work so well begun. With constant growth of the Nation have come greater problems. We must find solutions to important questions relative to agriculture, commerce, foreign relations, and development of natural resources; but at the same time we must insure equal rights to all and special privileges to none. Fitted by native ability and world training in humanitarian endeavor, President Hoover brings to the American hearthstone and fireside the highest ideal in our American life with the earnest hope that the good things of life may more and more become the common enjoyment of all.

In this presence and on this occasion I make no apologies for my Republicanism. I always have been a Republican, a believer in its principles, an advocate of its doctrines, and a supporter of its candidates. What I claim for myself is the exercise of an American right to choose my own political party, a right which I would not, if I could, deny to any citizen of the Republic. Political parties are human institutions and can not be perfect. Mistakes have been made in the past. They will be made in the future, and one of the highest privileges and duties of the citizen is to affiliate himself with a political party and help in a constructive way to make his party fully fit and numerically strong so as to permit it to perform its greatest service.

Whether we fully recognize it or not, the fact remains that the 2-party system in America has come to stay. It is the strength of democratic government. In no other practical way can an electorate in a republic become informed as to the merits of political issues or the fitness of candidates for political office. Nothing is more fallacious than the idea that a party exists for the benefit of the office-holder or the politician. To survive, a party will live only upon the worthiness of its principles. History is strewn with the wrecks of parties organized by ambitious men for their personal advancement, which demonstrates that no party in a democracy can long exist that is not responsive to the will of the people.

No democracy can achieve a great degree of constructive statesmanship without the service of a political party aiding the elector in the wise decisions the people alone must make. Throughout the ages the civilized people of the world have found political parties indispensable. A few years ago an independent political movement of some importance started in this Middle West, having for its purpose the securing of legislation for the farmer and the laboring man. That movement was heralded throughout the country as one independent of all political parties, but no sooner had it gotten under way than it organized a political party known as the Non-Partisan League, which practiced the most intense partisanship in its efforts to bring about the legislation urged by its founders.

I find myself in sympathy with patriotic lectures recently made by the Hon. John W. Davis, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1924, before the students of Princeton University, in which he makes a strong appeal for 2-party government. Manifestly the country is best governed when there exists two strong political parties divided solely on great political and moral issues, the one always a check and a balance on the other. It is the high duty of every citizen to perform his fullest mission in making his party responsive to the people's will.

It is a proud claim which Ripon asserts—this claim to be the birthplace of the Republican Party. It entitles you to an especial share of the glory which illumines one of the great epochs in the Nation's history. From the hour of that modest christening here at Ripon 75 years ago the name which you gave to the party has been emblazoned on the banners of every good cause, every sound program, every movement for the Nation's welfare and humanity's betterment. It has been borne aloft by the soldiers of freedom in the noblest wars that liberty has waged in both hemispheres. It has come to stand for wisdom in counsel, courage in execution, and justice in all the increasingly complex relations of the individual man to the society in which he lives.

To a noble, a patriotic, and a humane program you gave a name that almost instantly was accorded universal acceptance. You sent it forth to the Nation consecrated to a noble cause, armed and armored for a great strife. That strife was destined to justify the national boast that here had been founded in deed and in truth the home of the free.

Such was the name you gave us; such the cause to which you consecrated it. To-day we bring it back to you, unsullied and untarnished, with pride in the record of accomplishment for which it stands, asking no more than that here to-day it will be rededicated to many more generations of such service as it has in the past symbolized.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent if the House is in session to-morrow that I may have 15 minutes to address the House after the disposition of matters on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

PROHIBITION

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for six minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. GARNER. Under my agreement with the gentleman from Connecticut I am compelled to ask the gentleman on what subject?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. On the subject of why there is lawlessness.

There was no objection.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen, I want to read into the RECORD an editorial from the Sheboygan Press of June 13, 1929, entitled "Why There Is Lawlessness."

WHY THERE IS LAWLESSNESS

Are the law-abiding people of the United States to be placed in the same category with the gangsters of Chicago and other cities? Will the Government continue to pursue a policy of shooting innocent people, thereby placing itself in a class with the gangster?

These are questions that the Government must answer to the people of these United States sooner or later. We know that there are open violations of the liquor laws, that there is rum running on the border; but this does not justify the enforcement officer in taking human life unless absolutely certain of guilt, and linked with this, that his (the officer's) life is in danger.

The Chicago gangsters have been shooting one another for the last several years, ever since prohibition became the law of the land, and no one has seriously objected. We have recognized the fact that if these gangsters wanted to shoot one another in beer wars that was, perhaps, a good way to lessen this undesirable population. Then again, the greater number of them were foreigners who had indicated very little respect for our laws at any time. Even in the face of all this gangster warfare the protecting arm of the Commonwealth of Illinois and other States has been thrown about the murdered person.

Here is another picture, and this, too, has been created as a result of prohibition. Admittedly the country is infested with rum runners, bootleggers, and individuals of that stripe. Each year finds the situation more grave and tense, with the Government trying to outlaw liquor by prohibiting it. In this new picture you see a group of enforcement officers armed with sawed-off guns just like the gangsters use in their Chicago warfare, and these are used, not for self-preservation but for aggression, as has been demonstrated during the past 12 months.

Under an order from the Government, commands to halt and failure to respond, invite shooting at the tires of an automobile. Not all of these Federal officers are marksmen, and some of them are cowards who lose their heads and don't know whether they are firing at a tire or the top of an automobile. This was the case near International Falls, Minn., where an American citizen, journeying along the highway with his wife and two children, was assassinated by an agent of the Government. This cowardly official, Emmett J. White, said to be a marksman of ability, called upon the occupants of the car to stop, and the evidence of the wife was to the effect that the shooting commenced immediately. That car was riddled with bullets and not a single tire was hit.

You have here two pictures, one of gangster warfare with the officers of every Commonwealth ready to prosecute to the end that there shall be no killing and on the other hand, one of the innocent killing of men, women, and children, and the United States of America refusing to accord to them the rights that a gangster gets. Is this fair play? Is this American justice? Is this the protection the Constitution framers had in mind? Because this country has bank bandits and rum runners and other disreputable citizens, would the police of the country be warranted in shooting at every citizen they saw? How long would a police department last if it had a White, if it had a Smith, or if it had some others of the type that have shot and killed innocent people? How long would a policeman carry a star and be recognized by a fire and police board if he resorted to murder, when his department was created with the idea of outlawing murder?

Can you blame the people of Illinois for threatening the deputy who killed Mrs. De King? Could you blame the people of Minnesota if they were to resort to force as a result of the killing of Henry Virkula, of International Falls?

If we as a government sanction murder, if we deny protection to those who have a right to ask it under the Constitution, then this Government is deteriorating, law and order become a mere plaything, and the moral fiber of the Nation is broken. No typical American, no individual who loves his country and his flag, can stand idly by and allow a condition of this kind to exist without protest. From every pulpit in this country, from every rostrum, and from every city and hamlet there should go out a protest against such ruthless murder.

The United States is employing as enforcement officers a group of men many of whom have violated the laws themselves. They are gathered from every conceivable nook of this country. Some of them are discarded and discredited detectives. Others are politicians who have seldom worked or been even a partial success in their home community. They are given a gun and are told to do things that a self-respecting citizen would refuse to do. They get into the good graces of some new-made friend, or they employ minor girls to accompany them to road-houses and violate the law themselves in order to apprehend some other law violator. This is the type that is doing the shooting.

A system like this can not succeed; the Government can not afford to have an army of prohibition officers on its pay roll unless they are respecters of the law themselves.

We contend that every American citizen is entitled to protection. If Henry Virkula had been shot and killed on the border by a Canadian official, or if he had been in Mexico and was murdered under similar circumstances, this country would go to war in order to vindicate the cause of liberty and the ideal that an American citizen is entitled to protection, whether at home or abroad, as long as he is living within the law. What is the United States of America going to do in this particular case? Are we going to whitewash, to say that Mr. Virkula should have stopped immediately when he was ordered to, or are we going to hush this matter up? Yes; we would go to war, and rightfully so, in defense of any American citizen who was ruthlessly murdered by a foreign nation.

President Hoover has called a commission to study the whys and wherefores of crime. Here is one of them—the biggest outstanding point that we can raise. When homes are invaded, when American citizens are shot down in cold blood, then the Constitution is trampled under foot, and law and respect for law become a football, kicked at will. If we are going to have respect for law, then the Government itself must show respect for its citizens.

C. E. BROUGHTON, Editor.

Mr. LEATHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for two minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEATHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House, I have been a Member of this House for more than eight years. I never have addressed the House upon the subject of prohibition and I do not intend to do so now. I rise to make an observation or two for the benefit of those who seem to be so much concerned about law enforcement. As I understand it, a criminal charge has been lodged against the prohibition officer involved in the shooting of one Wirkkula on the Canadian border. I also understand that that case has not yet been tried. It seems to be that, as Members of this House, we could well afford to abide our time and let the orderly processes of the law take their course. [Applause.] After the trial of that case then it may be time to offer criticisms, but until that time no man who has had anything to do with the enforcement of law ought to presume to judge and pass upon the case.

I want to make one other observation, and in doing so I may be pardoned for a personal reference. I shall not address myself to the merits of prohibition one way or the other, but a few years ago, in the discharge of official duties committed to my hands by the people of my judicial district, it was my duty to prosecute more than 1,500 criminal cases, ranging all the way from murder to petit larceny. My records show that in 90 per cent of those cases the defendants and their friends denounced the law under which they were being prosecuted, and every time a peace officer dared to stand between their lawlessness and the peace and safety of the community, that officer was denounced in the most scathing terms by the defendants and their relatives, and, I am sorry to say, in many cases by the attorneys who defended them.

TARIFF HEARINGS

Mr. BEERS. Mr. Speaker, I present the following privileged report from the Committee on Printing, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate Concurrent Resolution 15

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 2 of the printing act, approved March 1, 1907, the Committee on Finance be, and is hereby, empowered to have printed 1,000 additional copies of the consolidated hearings held before the committee relative to "tariff act of 1929" during the current session.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

THE DEBENTURE PLAN

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the export debenture plan by inserting therein a statement by the secretary of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation, Mr. Steward.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. Speaker, in accordance with the consent just given, I extend my remarks by inserting the following statement on the debenture plan of farm relief, by Mr. C. B. Steward, secretary of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation:

The operation of a debenture plan will not accomplish the purpose claimed by the proponents, but may work a hardship on both the producer and consumer in the end.

In order for the debenture plan to be operative, the product must be exported. It would not be put in operation until the price decline would be below what the producer should receive. Oftentimes it would be caused by seasonal marketing or a bear influence on the market by gamblers and speculators. At such time it would not be known what caused the price decline. At such times there may not be an amount in excess of domestic requirements. To operate the debenture plan at such times would remove from the country products that may be needed later to supply the domestic requirements; and because of such removal before another crop could be produced—and the shortage naturally caused by such removal—the price may rise to a very high level at the end of the year at a time that a very small per cent of the product would be in the hands of the American producers, and would naturally cause a very high price to the consumers. And further, may cause the importation of the product over the tariff wall, which would be to the expense of the American farmer and the consuming public.

In the operation of the debenture plan what assurance would the American farmer have of getting the benefit of the debenture or the part to which he would be entitled? The broker that handles it would get his share; the exporter would evidently get his share; and the local grain dealer would evidently try to get a share. There would be a tendency on the part of the exporter and the debenture broker to bear the price in order to force the operation of the debenture plan so that they might profit by its operation. What would happen to the Nebraska farmer is best illustrated in the mechanical process of marketing wheat. When the harvest starts and the combines begin to move, wheat flows to the terminal market of Omaha by the trainload.

The exporter is not in the market at that time. The wheat must be bought and placed in storage, or must be retained by the cooperator and stored for future resale. Nobody knows, not even the operator in the terminal market, what the possible export demand will be. Hence, even though he may have the potential advantage of the 21-cent debenture on export wheat, the possible extent to which he will be able to use the debenture, and the possible demand on the part of the importer for the debenture is so uncertain that he dare not bid the farmer even a reasonable proportion of the amount indicated on a debenture certificate. So that 90 per cent of the farmers' grain moves in and is sold without any reference to the possibility of increased price through the securing of debenture certificates on exportable surplus; and then, later on during the winter season, the exporter comes to Omaha to buy ten or twenty million bushels of wheat. Inasmuch as there is an exportable surplus of two hundred or three hundred million bushels, the exporter is not going to bid the full extent of the possible debenture certificate which he may receive because he does not have to do so to get the wheat, but he may make a possible bid of 5 or 6 cents, depending upon whether or not his competitor in the export business is after the same wheat, which would hardly be probable. Neither would he dare bid the full 21-cent premium indicated by the debenture certificate, because he knows that the importer is not going to pay par for the debenture certificate. The price which he will receive for the debenture certificate as a negotiable instrument will depend entirely upon the possible demand by the importer.

Now, importers will not be anxious to secure debenture certificates unless there is a material advantage. It would be far less trouble for them to pay the cash, unless they can save considerable money in the purchase of debenture certificates below par. So this is another uncertain element which will not permit the producer to receive even a reasonably small part of the premium indicated in a debenture certificate; but in the meantime we assume that the importer has secured all of the debenture certificates that he needs in his business at a discount. There is no restriction as to the character of goods which he proposes to import, so he takes his debenture certificates, which he has purchased at a discount, and offers them at par to the Government in the payment of import duties on New Zealand beef or Australian wool; thus coming into competition with the Nebraska farmer who not only produces wheat, in the sale of which he receives only a small part of the price advance which the debenture certificate would indicate and that small advance he lost in competition with the importer of New Zealand beef, who was able to pay the duty on the basis of the face value of his debenture certificate which he bought at a discount and, in effect, receive a bounty as an importer to the extent of the difference between the discount at which he bought the debenture certificate and the amount of duty imposed upon the imported beef. It will be readily seen that such a system would leave the producer of agricultural products in Nebraska in a far worse condition than he is in to-day. The farmer would be the last to come in and may get a small part of it—but, in any event, the Government would lose the full amount of the debenture.

Many times we have price declines that seriously affect the market caused by various reasons when we do not have an exportable surplus. Under the operation of a Federal farm board with commodity stabilization corporations they could enter the market at such times as the price decline would affect the price to the point that they decided that the producer was not getting what he was entitled to (the same as they would to enforce the debenture plan), and remove from the market channels a sufficient amount of the product to influence the price raise (the same as would be the object of the debenture plan), but the product would be for distribution at such times as it would be needed for domestic requirement.

Should there be evidence at the end of the year of an exportable surplus, the board could make such disposition of the surplus as it deemed advisable, by carrying over a part or sell in export. Should there be a loss in so doing, it would not be likely that it would cost the Government as much to stand the loss out of the revolving fund as it would to operate the debenture plan. The American producer and the American consumer would be assured of a stabilized price for both the raw material and the finished product.

In the practical marketing of grain, exporters naturally desire to expand their operations and in the world markets they of course would like to increase the volume of business that they can do. Now, then, knowing that on every bushel of grain that he exports he would receive a debenture certificate which would possibly net him between 15 cents and 20 cents per bushel on every bushel that he exported, he would naturally use this advantage in making favorable offers of wheat to buyers on the foreign market. If the Argentine or Australian exporters wanted to sell wheat, he would have to meet this condition. You can plainly see how the American exporter would have the advantage of 15 cents or 20 cents which he expected to realize from his debenture certificate in underselling his competitor on the world market. The net result would be to lower the price on the world market due to this influence and if the American price is based upon the world price the final result would be a reduced price to the American producer.

There is nothing to compel the exporter to pass the advantage of the debenture back to the producer. The most natural thing in the world for him to do is to increase his volume of business by making a more attractive offer to the foreign buyer.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 7 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, June 18, 1929, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

34. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting report from the Chief of Engineers on preliminary examination and survey of Norfolk Harbor, Va., with a view to enlarging the channel in the Eastern Branch of the Elizabeth River (H. Doc. No. 37); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed.

35. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting an estimate of appropriation for the Federal farm board for $151,000,000, to be immediately available, for commencing operations under the provisions of the act entitled "The agricultural marketing act," approved June 15, 1929 (H. Doc. No. 38); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. McLEOD: A bill (H. R. 4015) to provide for the revocation and suspension of operators and chauffeurs' licenses and registration certificates; to require proof of ability to respond in damages for injuries caused by the operation of motor vehicles; to prescribe the form of and conditions in insurance policies covering the liability of motor-vehicle operators; to subject such policies to the approval of the commissioner of insurance; to constitute the director of traffic the agent of nonresident owners and operators of motor vehicles operated in the District of Columbia for the purpose of service of process; to provide for the report of accidents; to authorize the director of traffic to make rules for the administration of this statute; and to prescribe penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. WOOD: A bill (H. R. 4016) making an appropriation to carry out the provisions of the agricultural marketing act, approved June 15, 1929; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. CABLE: A bill (H. R. 4017) relative to the naturalization and citizenship of married women; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GASQUE: A bill (H. R. 4018) for the relief of dependents of officers of the Federal Government engaged in the enforcement of the national prohibition law; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4019) to amend section 501 of the act approved May 19, 1924, entitled "World War adjusted compensation act," providing for the payment of a certificate upon certain conditions; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAUGEN: A bill (H. R. 4020) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to investigate and report to Congress on the advisability and practicability of establishing a national park to be known as the Upper Mississippi National Park in the State of Iowa, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. LEAVITT: A bill (H. R. 4021) to accept the grant by the State of Montana of concurrent police jurisdiction over the rights of way of the Blackfeet Highway, and over the rights of way of its connections with the Glacier National Park road system on the Blackfeet Indian Reservation in the State of Montana; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. LETTS: A bill (H. R. 4022) to authorize the Chief of Ordnance of the War Department to submit bids for the furnishing of equipment, materials, and supplies, and the performance of work for agencies of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PALMISANO: A bill (H. R. 4023) to amend section 641 of the act approved May 19, 1924, entitled "World War veterans' relief," providing for the payment of a certificate upon certain conditions; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SCHNEIDER: A bill (H. R. 4024) for the hospitalization of persons discharged from the United States Navy or Marine Corps who have contracted tuberculosis in the line of duty while in the naval service; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4025) to prevent the use of stop watches or similar devices in the Postal Service and guaranteeing to postal employees their lawful rights; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. SUMMERS of Washington: A bill (H. R. 4026) to amend paragraph (c), section 2, of Public Law No. 952, Seventieth Congress; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SCHNEIDER: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 111) designating September 8 as national marine memorial day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FISH: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 112) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States for a referendum on war; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred, as follows:

By Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, relating to the repeal of the national-origins provision of the Federal immigration law; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred, as follows:

By Mr. BACHMANN: A bill (H. R. 4027) granting an increase of pension to Melissa L. Carroll; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4028) granting an increase of pension to Kate Davis; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BAIRD: A bill (H. R. 4029) granting a pension to Grace Hagan; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4030) granting an increase of pension to Rosella Facer; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BLACKBURN: A bill (H. R. 4031) granting a pension to Tony Flynn; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BOWMAN: A bill (H. R. 4032) granting a pension to Daniel M. Dice; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4033) granting a pension to Cyrus Harman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4034) granting a pension to Mary C. Pennington; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4035) granting a pension to Jane Mallow; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CAREW: A bill (H. R. 4036) granting a pension to Henry Meyers; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CHASE: A bill (H. R. 4037) granting a pension to John Jesse Cook; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CLARKE of New York: A bill (H. R. 4038) granting a pension to Julia Gleason; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 4039) for the relief of Charles F. Gray; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. EATON of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 4040) granting an increase of pension to Christian White; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HICKEY: A bill (H. R. 4041) granting a pension to Julia A. Collett; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4042) granting an increase of pension to Martha Jane Smurr; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JONES of Texas: A bill (H. R. 4043) granting a pension to Thomas M. Johnson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LOZIER: A bill (H. R. 4044) granting an increase of pension to Nannie J. Thompson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McFADDEN: A bill (H. R. 4045) granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Hopper; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4046) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Miller; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MILLIGAN: A bill (H. R. 4047) granting a pension to America B. Halcomb; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4048) granting a pension to Martha E. Noble; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4049) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Edwards; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FRANK M. RAMEY: A bill (H. R. 4050) donating trophy gun to F. D. Hubbel Relief Corps, No. 103, of Hillsboro, Ill.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SANDERS of New York: A bill (H. R. 4051) granting an increase of pension to Henrietta B. Sheffield; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SCHNEIDER: A bill (H. R. 4052) for the relief of Greiling Engineering Co., of Green Bay, Wis.; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4053) granting an increase of pension to Sarah Sanderson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4054) granting an increase of pension to Lena Campbell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4055) to authorize a cash award to William P. Flood for beneficial suggestions resulting in improvement in naval material; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. SHREVE: A bill (H. R. 4056) granting an increase of pension to Harriet Laddy; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WALKER: A bill (H. R. 4057) granting an increase of pension to Minerva Henderson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WELSH of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 4058) granting a pension to Mary A. Fowler; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WOOD: A bill (H. R. 4059) granting an increase of pension to Keturah H. Grismer; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

669. Petition of San Francisco Funeral Directors Association, opposing a tax on earned incomes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

670. By Mr. BOYLAN: Resolutions of Yorkville Chamber of Commerce, of New York City, recommending repeal of national-origins provision of immigration law of 1924; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

671. By Mr. KIESS: Petition from citizens of Lawrenceville, Pa., favoring the passage of general pension legislation; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

672. By Mr. TEMPLE: Petition of Washington Camp, No. 827, Patriotic Order Sons of America, Fredericktown, Pa., in support of the Robinson bill for a department of education; to the Committee on Education.

673. By Mr. SNOW: Petition signed by 93 citizens of Milo, Me., urging the Congress of the United States to take immediate steps at the special session to bring to a vote a Civil War pension bill increasing the amount of pension to Civil War veterans and their widows as follows: $72 per month for every Civil War survivor, $125 per month for every Civil War survivor requiring aid and attendance, $150 per month for veterans totally blind, and $50 per month for every Civil War widow; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

674. Also, memorial of William McKinley Camp, No. 17, of Bangor, Me., urging passage of House bill 2562 and Senate bill 476; to the Committee on Pensions.

675. Also, petition signed by 85 citizens of Blaine and Mars Hill, Me., urging the Congress of the United States to take immediate steps at the special session to bring to a vote a Civil War pension bill increasing the amount of pension to Civil War veterans and their widows as follows: $72 per month for every Civil War survivor, $125 per month for every Civil War survivor requiring aid and attendance, $150 per month for veterans totally blind, and $50 per month for every Civil War widow; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

SENATE

TUESDAY, June 18, 1929

(Legislative day of Monday, June 17, 1929)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen	Fletcher	La Follette	Simmons
Ashurst	Frazier	McKellar	Smith
Barkley	George	McNary	Smoot
Bingham	Gillett	Metcalf	Steck
Blease	Glass	Moses	Steiwer
Borah	Glenn	Norbeck	Swanson
Bratton	Goff	Norris	Thomas, Idaho
Brookhart	Goldsborough	Nye	Thomas, Okla.
Broussard	Greene	Oddie	Townsend
Burton	Harris	Overman	Trammell
Capper	Harrison	Patterson	Tydings
Caraway	Hatfield	Pine	Tyson
Connally	Hawes	Ransdell	Vandenberg
Copeland	Hayden	Reed	Walcott
Couzens	Hebert	Robinson, Ark.	Walsh, Mass.
Cutting	Heflin	Robinson, Ind.	Walsh, Mont.
Dale	Howell	Sackett	Warren
Deneen	Johnson	Schall	Waterman
Edge	Jones	Sheppard	Watson
Fess	Kean	Shortridge	Wheeler

Mr. FESS. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES] is unavoidably absent from the Senate. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. HEFLIN. I desire to announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] is necessarily absent on account of illness. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR FRANCIS E. WARREN

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, on Thursday, the 20th of this month, a distinguished and much beloved Member of this body will celebrate his eighty-fifth birthday, and I know that every Member—Democrat, Republican, and Farmer-Laborite—will rejoice and join me in wishing for the able senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] many, many happy returns of the day.

Senator WARREN has had a notable career. He was born in Massachusetts, and, when he was 18 years old, enlisted in the Union Army, and thereafter had a distinguished military service. He was given the congressional medal of honor for gallantry in action at Port Hudson. Shortly after the war he moved to Wyoming, and no man has ever taken a more active part in the affairs of any State than Senator WARREN has since that time taken in the affairs of Wyoming. From time to time he was a member of both houses of the Territorial and State legislatures, mayor of the city of Cheyenne; he was appointed Territorial Governor of Wyoming by President Arthur, and afterwards reappointed by President Harrison. When the State was admitted into the Union he became the first governor of the State by vote of the people. He was then elected to the United States Senate, on November 18, 1890, and with the exception of two years, when there was a deadlock in the legislature and no one was elected, Senator WARREN has been Senator from that State ever since.

This birthday of Senator WARREN brings to mind his long service. Senator WARREN has served in the Senate of the United States longer than any other man who was ever a Member of this body. On the 20th of this month he will have served 36 years 6 months 28 days, longer by more than a year than anyone else who has ever served.

Next to Senator WARREN in length of service was William B. Allison, of Iowa, who served 35 years and 5 months.

Only 11 Senators, all told, have ever served as long as 30 years. It will be interesting, I am sure, to know who these are:

FRANCIS E. WARREN, of Wyoming, 36 years 6 months 28 days.
William B. Allison, Iowa, 35 years 5 months.
Justin S. Morrill, Vermont, 31 years 9 months 24 days.
Henry Cabot Lodge, Massachusetts, 31 years 8 months 5 days.
John Sherman, Ohio, 31 years 7 months.
William P. Frye, Maine, 30 years 4 months 20 days.
John T. Morgan, Alabama, 30 years 3 months 7 days.
Shelby M. Cullom, Illinois, 30 years.
Eugene Hale, Maine, 30 years.
Francis M. Cockrell, Missouri, 30 years.
John P. Jones, Nevada, 30 years.

Mr. President, these 11 Senators of longest service in this body have written their names large upon their country's history. All 11 of them were wonderful men. Their names are household words throughout the country. They are familiarly known by all students of American history. Their long services show the esteem in which they were held by their fellow citizens in their several States.

Perhaps none of these, Mr. President, has accomplished more for his State and Nation than has Senator WARREN. From the day he arrived as a new Senator he has taken a most active and effective and conspicuous place in the affairs of the Senate.

His splendid physique, his strong physical constitution, his handsome appearance, have stood him in good stead. His honesty, his ability, and his patriotism are traits of character deeply admired by all his colleagues.

There perhaps never was a more indefatigable worker in the Senate than Senator WARREN has been and still is. When the Republicans returned to power in 1921 he became the chairman of the Appropriations Committee. When we recall that that committee has appropriated each year an average of something like $5,000,000,000, and that the chairman of that committee must know where that money goes, what it is used for, and every detail concerning it, it can be understood what a vast amount of work Senator WARREN has done in the last eight years. In other words, he has looked after the expenditure of something like $40,000,000,000 in eight years, and those years between his seventy-seventh and his eighty-fifth.

Not being a member of Senator WARREN'S own party and being an unswerving and fighting Democrat, and not believing in many of the things Senator WARREN believes in, it is easily understood that on the Appropriations Committee, of which I am also a member, we have had many differences, and vigorous differences. We have sometimes actively and vigorously opposed each other on the floor of the Senate also, but through it all, and in it all, I want to say, that Senator WARREN has had at all times my most profound admiration and respect and my warm appreciation of his many great qualities. I regard him as one of the great men of our country. I esteem him highly as a man, as an honorable, upright, and courageous man—a man who believes in the right and who is willing to fight for the right as he sees it. Figuratively, I take off my hat to him. I make my bow in admiration of him. I congratulate him on his clean and splendid life. I congratulate him on his wonderful work for his State and his country, and I wish for him many, many years of strength and health, to the end that he may continue to serve the people of the country in the future in the same splendid fashion that he has served it in the past. [Applause.]

(As Mr. WARREN rose to his feet, the Senate as a body rose and applauded him.)

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I am totally unprepared for this unexpected and generous tribute from my friend the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR]. If I have earned any portion of the commendation which he has so graciously expressed, it has been because of the kindness and cooperation of my colleagues on both sides of the Senate.

It is true, as the Senator stated, that differences over questions of policy and principle have arisen sometimes between the Senator and me, and between other Senators and me. I hope the latter feel as kindly toward me as does the Senator from Tennessee. Whatever differences I may have had with him on the floor of the Senate during the years of our service here, I have never for a moment failed to entertain the utmost respect and admiration for his great enterprise and industry and for his splendid qualities as a legislator and as a man.

I have to plead guilty, of course, to the accumulation of my years. In the rather prompt way in which I usually try to have business transacted I find that when I entered the Senate I stated correctly the date of my birth; I did not hide it, as, perhaps, some have done; I have never changed it in the records, and so I find that this is next to the last day of the eighty-fifth year of my life.

Mr. President, I can not properly express the gratitude which I feel for the generous sentiments toward me which have been expressed here this morning, but I wish to all the Members of the Senate the long life and happiness which have been my portion. [Loud applause on the floor, all Senators rising to their feet.]

Mr. METCALF. Mr. President, as a further mark of the respect and esteem which we all have for the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN], I ask that the editorial which I send to the desk, which refers to Mount Warren, which has been named after the Senator from Wyoming by the Geographic Board, may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MOUNT WARREN

The United States Geographic Board has approved the proposal of Governor Emerson, of Wyoming, to give the name Mount Warren to the loftiest peak in the Wind River Range, 13,725 feet high. This assures the senior Senator from that State a special distinction. Partisan he may be, but FRANCIS E. WARREN has been much more than a politician. In the development of Wyoming, of which he was the first governor, and which as United States Senator he has represented for nearly 40 years, his name stands high. When he went West from Massachusetts in 1868 he settled, after a brief stay in Des Moines, in Cheyenne, which was then a tent and shanty frontier village in the Territory of Dakota. Young WARREN kept a general store and later became a rancher and dealer in real estate. He grew up with Cheyenne, becoming its mayor. He erected many of its public buildings, organized utility companies, was recognized as its first citizen, and governed the Territory of Wyoming by President Arthur's appointment.

As governer after the Territory was admitted to statehood, Mr. WARREN served only two weeks, being promoted to the United States Senate in 1889. He has distinguished himself as chairman of Committees on Reclamation of Arid Lands, Appropriations, and Military Affairs. When Mr. Root was Secretary of War Senator WARREN actively supported him in his plans to reorganize the Army and create a General Staff. He himself had a brilliant Civil War record. Enlisting at 18 from Hinsdale, Mass., where he was born, he won the congressional medal of honor for gallantry at the siege of Port Hudson. Few Americans have led such useful lives. At 85 Senator WARREN is still an indefatigable worker. To Wyoming he has been so devoted that it seems fitting that its highest mountain should bear his name.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate resolutions unanimously adopted by the Sons of Confederate Veterans at their Thirty-fourth Annual Convention, Charlotte, N. C., June 4–7, 1929, thanking Congress for its "generous act and friendly gesture in passing an act and defraying the expenses of the great United States Marine Band" in attendance at the reunion; expressing appreciation to the leader and members of the Marine Band for their generous and unfailing desire to give pleasure at all times; and to the President of the United States for signing the act referred to and "making possible this great addition to our reunion," etc., which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted at a conference of southern commissioners of agriculture (and their authorized representatives) from 12 Southern States at Washington, D. C., favoring the limitation of the pending tariff revision (1) primarily to the products of agriculture and (2) to the products of other industries where there has been a substantial change in conditions involving the cost of production here and abroad since the present tariff law was passed in 1922, and which change has resulted in substantial competition from abroad, resulting in unemployment, and to other industries that are now without adequate protection, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas presented telegrams and papers in the nature of petitions from the Helena Cotton Exchange and Retail Merchants Association, the Twentieth Century Club, the Library Board, the Helena Chapter of United Daughters of the Confederacy, the Catholic Club, the Rotary Club, Richard L. Kitchens Post of the American Legion, and the Council of the City of Helena, all of Helena, Ark., praying for the passage of the bill (S. 267) to create a national memorial military park at Helena, Ark., which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH presented a resolution adopted by the Exchange Club of Prince Georges County, Md., indorsing the establishment of an airport for the District of Columbia in the Chillum district of Prince Georges County, which was referred to the joint commission on airports.

He also presented a communication in the nature of a petition from the Port Development Commission of Baltimore, Md., praying for the establishment of foreign-trade zones at ports of entry within the jurisdiction of the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a communication in the nature of a memorial from R. S. Hudson, president of O'Neill & Co., of Baltimore, Md., with accompanying newspaper clippings, remonstrating against the inclusion of an administrative provision relative to the substitution of American valuation for foreign bill cost, etc., in the pending tariff bill, which, with the accompanying clipping, was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. DENEEN presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Illinois, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

House Joint Resolution 52

Whereas a new tariff bill has been presented to the House of Representatives of the United States; and

Whereas its purpose is to extend the policy of protection to our farmers and industries; and

Whereas stress was laid this year upon the value of this tariff revision to our farmers; and

Whereas this policy of protection is not extended in the report of the House Ways and Means Committee, to the corn farmer and corn-products industry in so far as tapioca and sago substitutes are concerned: Therefore be it

Resolved by joint resolution of the House of Representatives and Senate of Illinois, That we urge the Congress of the United States to include protection against tapioca and sago as substitutes for corn and corn products in the pending tariff measure; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded immediately to the President of the United States; to the Hon. W. C. HAWLEY, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee; to the Hon. C. WILLIAM RAMSEYER, chairman of the subcommittee on agricultural products; and to Senators C. S. DENEEN and OTIS F. GLENN, and the Illinois delegation in the House of Representatives.

Adopted by the house May 22, 1929.

DAVID E. SHANAHAN,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
GEORGE C. BLAEUER,
Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Concurred in by the senate June 4, 1929.

FRED E. STERLING,
President of the Senate.
JAMES H. PADDOCK,
Secretary of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mr. GREENE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that to-day, June 18, 1929, that committee presented to the President of the United States the enrolled bill (S. 1453) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of certain bridges, and for other purposes.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BORAH:

A bill (S. 1556) granting a pension to Charles D. Chinn (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. DALE:

A bill (S. 1557) granting a pension to Francis Landry; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON:

A bill (S. 1558) granting an increase of pension to Lyman Martin; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CAPPER:

A bill (S. 1559) granting an increase of retired pay to Leland Wadsworth, major, United States Army, retired (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GEORGE:

A bill (S. 1560) to extend the time for filing suits under section 19 of the World War veterans' act, 1924, as amended; to the Committee on Finance.

A bill (S. 1561) providing for the issuance of a special postage stamp in connection with the national celebration to be held at Savannah, Ga., October 11, 1929, in commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

A bill (S. 1562) for the relief of Armstead Snow Motors (Inc.); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. NYE:

A bill (S. 1563) to establish and operate a Government radio broadcasting station; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. GOFF:

A bill (S. 1564) to prohibit the use of explosives for killing or taking fish in streams stocked by any agency of the United States; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana:

A bill (S. 1565) granting a pension to Eliza Jane Priest (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

CHANGES OF REFERENCE

Mr. GEORGE. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 644) to authorize an appropriation to reimburse the State of Georgia for expenditures in the repair and reconstruction of roads and bridges damaged or destroyed by flood, a bill introduced by myself and Senator HARRIS and through misadventure sent to that committee. I request that the bill be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GEORGE. I also make a similar request with respect to the bill (S. 542) to establish an assay office at Dahlonega, Lumpkin County, Ga., which through misadventure was referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining. On the suggestion of the chairman of that committee I ask that the Committee on Mines and Mining be discharged from its further consideration and that it be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads may be relieved from the further consideration of the bill (S. 104) authorizing appropriation of funds for construction of a highway from Red Lodge, Mont., to the boundary of the Yellowstone National Park near Cooke City, Mont., and that the bill be referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys. I have not had an opportunity to confer with the chairman of the committee in regard to it, but understand that this disposition is satisfactory to him.

Mr. MOSES. The chairman of the committee is absent, but as ranking member I can say to the Senator that the procedure asked by the Senator from Montana is the same as was followed with a similar bill in the last Congress.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered

AMENDMENTS TO THE TARIFF BILL

Mr. BROUSSARD and Mr. WHEELER each submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them, respectively, to House bill 2667, the tariff revision bill, which were referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

ARREST OF ATTACHÉS OF FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, I offer a Senate resolution requesting information, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. If it shall lead to any discussion I will withdraw it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Iowa has the floor. Does he yield for that purpose?

Mr. BROOKHART. Will the consideration of the resolution require any considerable time?

Mr. CARAWAY. No; it ought not to require two minutes.

Mr. BROOKHART. Very well; I yield.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

The resolution (S. Res. 94) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Whereas it is reported in the morning papers that a representative or some minor employee of the Turkish Legation was arrested yesterday in Alexandria, Va., while attempting to operate an automobile while too drunk to drive; and

Whereas the papers carried the statement that he claimed his diplomatic immunity and was discharged; and

Whereas it was alleged that the Turkish Government will demand an apology for the arrest of this drunken driver; and

Whereas there have been innumerable complaints of minor officials connected with the various legations here in Washington driving while intoxicated and otherwise disregarding traffic regulations, to the great annoyance and danger to the American citizens: Therefore be it

Resolved, That Major Pratt, chief of the Washington police, be, and he is hereby, requested to furnish to the Senate the names and nationality of all representatives of foreign countries attached to or employed by foreign legations who have been arrested or warned for operating automobiles in the District of Columbia while under the influence of liquor or for other traffic violations.

The preamble was agreed to.

LIMITATION OF ARMAMENTS

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I submit a short resolution. It consists of only four lines, and I ask that it may be read at the clerk's desk.

The resolution (S. Res. 95) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, requested to confer with the representatives of the governments of the world and to ascertain if it is possible to secure an agreement looking to a limitation of all armaments and standing military personnel on land, on sea, and in the air.

Mr. TYDINGS. I ask that the resolution lie on the table and not be sent to the Committee on Foreign Relations at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the resolution will lie on the table.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS—B. C. SMITH

On motion of Mr. CAPPER, it was Ordered, That the papers filed with the bill (S. 1045) granting a pension to B. C. Smith, Sixty-seventh Congress, first session, be withdrawn from the files of the Senate, no adverse report having been made thereon.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS

A message from the President of the United States by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, announced that to-day, June 18, 1929, the President approved and signed the following act and joint resolution:

S. 312. An act to provide for the fifteenth and subsequent decennial censuses and to provide for apportionment of Representatives in Congress; and

S. J. Res. 50. Joint resolution to provide for the observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 1453. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of certain bridges, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 4016. An act making an appropriation to carry out the provisions of the "agricultural marketing act," approved June 15, 1929.

SALARIES OF SENATE AND HOUSE EMPLOYEES

Mr. BROOKHART obtained the floor.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BROOKHART. I yield.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] has in charge a bill which he would like to have passed relating to the salaries of employees of the Senate and House of Representatives. I do not think it will take very long to consider that measure, and I was going to ask unanimous consent temporarily to lay aside the unfinished business for that purpose. Would the Senator from Iowa be willing to let the measure for which the Senator from Wyoming desires consideration be now taken up?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Iowa yield for that purpose?

Mr. BROOKHART. I yield.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, I should like to have the request deferred for a few moments. I do not wish to object to the request of the Senator from Washington, but I should like to have it deferred until an amendment which I have prepared and which is now being typed may be ready. It will be here in a few minutes; but at this moment I am constrained to object to the request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The request may be renewed later.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, will the Senator from Iowa yield to me for just a moment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BROOKHART. I yield.

Mr. JONES. I desire to state that I hope we may dispose of the unfinished business before the Senate shall recess or adjourn to-day, and I hope that every Senator will keep that in mind.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Iowa yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. BROOKHART. I yield.

Mr. WATSON. I have been asked by so many Senators personally over the telephone as to whether or not their presence would be required here any further to-day or to-morrow that I feel impelled to make a statement in public. I believe that we have business of importance to transact to-day and to-morrow, and I do hope and urge that all Senators remain here until the Senate shall have formally and finally taken a recess.

PRESENTATION OF GAVEL TO THE VICE PRESIDENT

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, wrapped up in the Mississippi flood-control program is the destiny of a large section of my State of North Dakota, which once prided itself on having one of the most beautiful lakes that section of the United States ever possessed. Thirty years ago Devils Lake, situated in the central portion of the State of North Dakota, was a lake of from 30 to 40 miles across. It was so great a lake that there was operated on it what was known as the steamer Minnie H, a steamboat of gigantic size for such a body of water. Year after year drainage and other causes have contributed to the lowering of that lake, until to-day it is only 3 or 4 miles across, and the steamship Minnie H no longer is in service there. We hope some day there will again be occasion for such a boat on Devils Lake, and that that may be brought about through the diversion of waters from the Missouri River, 100 miles away, to the lake.

I have said that the old Minnie H is no longer in use. Its rudder, however, has been removed and made into very sound gavels, and I have been asked to present one of the gavels to the Vice President of the United States with the compliments of old Capt. Edward Edson Heerman, of the Minnie H, a gentleman now 95 years of age but hale, and anxious that this presentation should be made in his name. I present the gavel to the Vice President and ask that the accompanying letter may be printed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MISSOURI RIVER DIVERSION ASSOCIATION OF THE STATE OF NORTH DAKOTA,
Devils Lake, N. Dak.

Hon. CHARLES CURTIS,
Vice President of the United States, Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIR: The gavel with which you are being presented comes from Capt. Edward Edson Heerman with his compliments and very best wishes. It was made from the rudder of his historic steamboat, the Minnie H, the largest and finest boat ever to ply the waters of North Dakota's inland sea. This boat, 103 feet in length, 34 feet in width, and with a capacity of 200 tons burden, was constructed on the shores of Devils Lake in 1883 from 13 carloads of material transported overland from the railroad terminal at Larimore, N. Dak. Its maiden trip was on July 4, 1883, to meet the first railroad train to the city of Devils Lake.

From the time of its launching until 1909 the Minnie H was in continual daily service conveying passengers, mail, and freight from the railroad to the Government post office at Fort Totten, and also serving the many communities and settlements along the 360 miles of shore line of that once beautiful body of water. By 1909 the waters had receded to a point where navigation with this boat was no longer possible. A distance of 4 miles intervened between the original dock and the nearest available place to anchor. At this point the boat was beached.

Captain Heerman was 95 years of age on April 14, 1929. Declining the expressed wish of his local friends to celebrate with him, he drove out to his farms to superintend the seeding operations. His mind is very active and he follows with keen interest the rapid changes in our social, economic, and political life. As an expression of his admiration for you and your leadership he presents to you this gavel with the hope that it may be of continuous service.

Sincerely yours, S. W. THOMPSON, President.

The gavel was sent to the desk of the Vice President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Vice President accepts the gavel with thanks, and expresses the hope that the Senator from North Dakota will extend the Vice President's gratitude to the donor.

APPORTIONMENT OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, the Senate is familiar with the fact that under the terms of the apportionment bill, which was signed by the President at 9.30 o'clock this morning, the automatic reapportionment occurs according to the method used in the last preceding apportionment. As repeatedly stated in the debate, this contemporaneously prescribes a specific method or formula concerning which there can be no disagreement or dispute whatever. In the last preceding apportionment the method used was the method of modern major fractions. In order officially to confirm that fact I have asked Dr. Joseph A. Hill, the expert assistant to the Director of the Census, to state the fact and the formula specifically in writing, so that there may be no possible doubt hereafter as to the precise identification carried by the bill. I ask that his letter may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
BUREAU OF THE CENSUS,
Washington, June 17, 1929.

Hon. A. H. VANDENBERG,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Answering your inquiry, the apportionment of Representatives in 1911, as based upon the census of 1910, was made by the method which has since come to be known as the "method of major fractions," and is the only method to which that designation has ever been correctly applied. In fact, the term did not come correctly into use until after 1911.

The process by which the method is applied is in detail as follows:

(1) The first step is to assign one Representative to each State, making 48 in all.

(2) The next step is to divide the population of each State by the following quantities in succession: 1½, 2½, 3½, etc.

(3) The quotients thereby obtained are then arranged in order of size, beginning with the largest and continuing the process until the total number of quotients plus 48 is one greater than the number of Representatives to be apportioned.

(4) The next step is to divide the population of the several States by a number midway between the last two quotients in the list.

(5) The last step is to assign to each State a number of Representatives equal to the whole number in the quotient, which was obtained for that State by the above division plus one more Representative in case the quotient contains a major fraction.

I might add that in actual practice, when the number of Representatives to be apportioned has been definitely fixed in advance, the above process may be considerably shortened or curtailed; but the result will be the same, and the population of the several States having been ascertained, there is only one apportionment or distribution of Representatives which can result from applying this method to a given number of Representatives.

Very truly yours, JOSEPH A. HILL,
Assistant to the Director.

FARM RELIEF AND TARIFF REVISION

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President, on yesterday a crowd of insurgents got together in the Senate, organized a new party, upset the policies of the President of the United States for a limited tariff revision, and declared for a general revision. Therefore I have a few words to say this morning; and I hope the chairman of the Finance Committee will remain.

I desire to refer to some of the things that were promised to the farmers in the Hawley bill, and some of the things they will get. I have asked the Fair Tariff League to compile all these matters for me. They have consulted the Department of Commerce and the Department of Agriculture, and I feel sure that their figures are quite accurate.

This table shows, for instance, that in 1928 we produced 903,000,000 bushels of wheat. They were worth to the farmer $600,000,000. The Fordney tariff would have given them $379,300,000, but in fact they got only $17,600,000 of benefit out of the tariff. The promise of the tariff in the old law was $379,300,000. The actual benefit on the few grades of extra hard spring wheat in some of the Northwestern States raised the price $17,600,000. The new Hawley bill promises the farmers $399,300,000, and they will get the same effect, $17,600,000, as under the other bill.

In other words, this tariff is not going to be effective at all under present arrangements in the United States. The farmers will not get the promise that is made to them by the provisions of this tariff bill.

In the case of corn they produced 2,840,000,000 bushels. The old tariff bill promised them $426,000,000 of benefit and gave them nothing. The new tariff bill promises them $710,000,000 of benefit and gives the corn farmer nothing. He will get no benefit from this bill.

Mr. NORBECK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. BROOKHART. I yield.

Mr. NORBECK. Does the Senator from Iowa know of any promise that has been made to the farmers that has been kept?

Mr. BROOKHART. Well, the Senator has asked me a hard question to answer. I shall have to think about that. Perhaps I can scare up one somewhere.

Mr. President, I have here a long list relating to oats, barley, rye, rice, flaxseed, potatoes, onions, lemons, figs, peanuts, walnuts, almonds, hay, tobacco (leaf), hogs, and eggs. Those are in one group. The old law promised the farmers a benefit of $2,449,000,000 and gave them a benefit of only $74,300,000 out of $2,449,000,000. The Hawley bill, as proposed, promises them $3,108,400,000 and will give them in actual benefit only $87,200,000. The old law promised them a tariff benefit of 36.2 per cent. It gave them, in fact, a tariff benefit of 1.1 per cent. The new law promises them a tariff benefit of 46 per cent but gives them in effect a benefit of 1.3 per cent.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. BROOKHART. I yield.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. At that point, will the Senator have the goodness to explain how he arrives at the conclusion just stated? That will illustrate the others.

Mr. BROOKHART. Yes. The conclusion was estimated by the Department of Commerce and the Agricultural Department for the Fair Tariff League by comparing the prices the farmers would get in the world market with the prices they actually got under the tariff protection in the United States.

They have divided this table into another group where there is a little more benefit. In fact, on butter the tariff in the old law promised the farmers $251,600,000 and gave them a benefit of about $105,000,000. The Hawley bill promises them $293,600,000 and they will in fact get the same benefit of $105,000,000.

On cattle the old law promised them $249,600,000 and in fact they got $45,000,000 out of $249,600,000. The Hawley bill promises them $332,800,000 and they will get the same—$45,000,000.

Here is one that is different—wool. The old tariff law promised them $52,000,000 and they got the full benefit of it. They got a $52,000,000 advance on wool. The new Hawley bill promises them $57,100,000 and they will get that full benefit.

Here is another one that figures out the same way, and that is sugar. The old law promised sugar $22,500,000 and it got $22,500,000. The new law promises sugar $30,700,000, and it will get $30,700,000.

I think perhaps I ought to read the statement of the Fair Tariff League upon the question of sugar, as I think it covers the matter quite fully. It says:

> In some respects this is the strangest of the tariffs. The total value of the domestic sugar crop entering into consumption, i. e., excepting beets used for seed, is $50,500,000, and of Louisiana cane $12,500,000, total $63,000,000. The sugar tariff costs consumers $248,000,000, or four times the total value of the domestic crop, and yet the farmer producers are not prosperous as a whole.

The rest of that statement I shall ask later to have inserted in the RECORD.

Mr. President, a method has been suggested as an amendment to the Hawley bill that will give the farmers largely the benefit of this tariff protection, and that is the debenture amendment suggested by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS]. I desire to amend that amendment in one particular, and it is this proposition which I especially desire to call to the attention of the Finance Committee. I desire to amend the provision with regard to the debenture so that it will be issued to the Federal Farm Board that we have just created under the law passed a few days ago, and I want the board directed to allot those debenture certificates to the various stabilizing corporations to use in the stabilization of the various products and in the liquidation of losses, if any occur. If that is done, it will at once remove the objections that have been urged against debentures, because they are paid to exporters or speculators.

I concede that the debenture as we have advocated it here before and proposed it in the Senate bill would first be paid to the exporters, and they are to some extent speculators in farm products. If it were applied right now it would benefit mainly people of that class, and would benefit but few farmers; but if the debenture is paid to the Federal Farm Board, and by it allotted to the stabilizing corporations, it will then be used for the benefit of the farmers, and the speculator will have no chance at a "rake off" or any reduction of its value to the farmers of the United States.

How will it work? For instance, on wheat there would be a debenture of 21 cents a bushel. That will be issued to the Federal Farm Board. The Federal Farm Board can at once allot it to the stabilizing corporation, which will raise the bid to the farmers by 21 cents a bushel; and it will not be afraid to do that, because it has the debenture to cover the 21 cents. Then the stabilizing corporation will have this further advantage as it proceeds: It will be able to hold this wheat and ask that price in the world market. It may not be necessary to sacrifice the debenture. They may recover it in the sale of the product in the world market. I especially believe that there need be no loss on wheat, because the United States and Canada together control more than 60 per cent of the exportable wheat of the whole world; and the two operating together, as the head of the Canadian wheat pool explained to the Agricultural Committee, will be able to get the price they ask, within reasonable limits, in the world market. The debenture applied in this way will, therefore, improve the world market, whereas with the debenture paid to the exporter he is till compelled to dump his wheat into the world market, and will do so to save himself, and will not be able to hold for an asking price in the world market.

Upon the question of cotton, it is more certain that the world market price can be controlled, because we have 65 per cent of the exportable cotton of the whole world in the United States, and, with that properly financed, there is no need for the loss of any debenture funds on cotton. If the matter works out in that way, the debenture could ultimately be abandoned and we could still continue our influence in the world market.

There is one other subject that I wish to mention, and that is the countervailing duties of the other countries.

I believe that about all of the other countries, except Great Britain, have imposed those duties already. Of course, Great Britain is the one that is important to us. The markets of Great Britain fix much more of our farm-produce market values than any and all other markets of the world; so the countervailing proposition is not so formidable when we consider it in that light. Again, it is not so formidable in the case of food products, because food products are a necessity, and it is very doubtful if such duties could be enforced as to food products. But, Mr. President, let us concede that they could be enforced. The argument is then made that even though we pay this debenture, France, for instance, will immediately put on a countervailing duty of the same amount, and we will lose the benefit of the debenture. But, Mr. President, if we are financed and in position to hold for our asking price, which ought to be the cost-of-production price always, and France puts on a countervailing duty, the only effect of that will be to increase the price to the people of France, and it will not reduce our price, because we will promptly add it to the cost of production. Therefore it is important that we have a system financed so that we can hold our products for this asking price, and meet all of these situations. Besides, a debenture issued to the Farm Board is not a technical bounty under foreign laws. I concede they could set up a tariff duty against it, but there is no more reason for this than there would be to enact such a duty against the equalization fee, for instance.

Mr. President, this tariff bill, as it stands now, without anything to protect the farmers in their surplus, and the farm bill as we have passed it, with only $500,000,000 to lend to cooperatives on good security, will not meet this situation.

If we provide for a debenture of this type, making it issuable to the Farm Board, it will at once perform all the functions which we expected the equalization fee to perform; it at once will perform all the functions which I expected the direct appropriation from the United States Treasury to perform, which I proposed in my own substitute bill.

This situation unites the best thought on the farm problem in all its consideration in the Congress of the United States. A debenture applied in this way carries with it the best thought of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] in his original McNary bill, which proposes to give the farmers the pre-war ratio of prices.

This carries the best thought of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS], which proposed with $1,200,000,000 to finance and hold farm products for the improvement of the world market. It carries the best purpose of the equalization fee, is simple and easy of administration, while the equalization fee is complex and difficult, and it comes from the right source, to wit, the burdens which the tariff imposes upon agriculture.

It carries with it the best thought of the President of the United States in his operation of the wheat corporation during and after the war, when, with a direct appropriation of a billion dollars, he did these things I now want to do and actually produced the effect, the equality, which the farmers are demanding at this time in the United States. He actually answered this promise of the tariff bill to give the farmers this large protection, such as I have pointed out here.

I want to say to the chairman of the Committee on Finance that you can not keep the pledge to the farmers of the United States to give them anything like equality with the sugar industry, or with any other of the protected industries, unless you do apply this debenture in some such way to be effective in controlling the world market.

I ask permission to have inserted in the RECORD, following my remarks, a certain table, also a statement of the Fair Tariff League, and certain other matter.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WHEAT

During nine months of 1927 wheat was higher in Winnipeg, Canada, than in Minneapolis. In the other three months it was from 7 cents to 11 cents higher in Minneapolis. In 1928 in five months it was higher in Winnipeg. In five months it was from 1 cent to 7 cents higher in Minneapolis and in two months 10 and 11 cents higher. The tariff was of no benefit whatever except on high protein, premium wheat, which constitutes only one-half of our hard-wheat production and is grown almost entirely in the three States—Montana, North Dakota, and Kansas. The average gain on this premium wheat was 9.8 cents per bushel, or $17,600,000.

CORN

Some folks think that if corn were on the free list much would be imported. In fact, under the "drawback" provisions corn is virtually free to our great corn-products companies for manufacture and reexport. On such corn the duty is less than one-seventh of 1 cent per bushel.

Notwithstanding this, in the six years, 1922–1927, no corn was thus imported except 1,550,406 bushels in 1925 and 336,012 bushels in 1927.

Instead of importing corn in quantities our corn-products companies used domestic corn in export in 1927 of $4,626,864 of glucose and corn sirup and 387,000 barrels of corn meal and 30,095,000 pounds of hominy and other corn preparations for table use. Argentina is our one competitor in our domestic market. She can not safely send across the equator our kind of feed corn, but only the hard, dry, dent corn to be cracked and fed to poultry. Of this poultry corn, from October, 1923, to February, 1928, four and one-half years, we received for domestic consumption an average of only 664,000 bushels along the Atlantic seaboard and 1,113,000 bushels on the Pacific coast. It is greatly to Argentina's advantage to compete with our corn in Europe with ocean freight charges added to our prices rather than compete in New York.

The corn tariff of 15 cents per bushel is ineffective and the proposed increase to 25 cents will please only the uninformed.

OATS

Oats, barley, and rye are on an export, world-price basis, with no help from the tariff that can be estimated in dollars.

RICE

Two-thirds of production is blue rice, a second quality that disintegrates in cooking; exported largely; not affected by tariff. Tariff is fully effective on about 630,000,000 pounds of fortuna or hard rice.

FLAXSEED

Duty two-thirds effective. The cake from imported flaxseed is reexported with a drawback of about one-fourth of the flaxseed duty.

POTATOES

Duty effective on three and one-half million bushels of seed potatoes and one-half effective on table stock grown in the Northeastern States, New England, New York, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey.

ONIONS

Duty effective on Bermuda and domestic Spanish. Of no effect on strong onions, which are 75 per cent of our crop.

LEMONS

Duty three-fourths effective.

FIGS

Some years ago we grew 10,000 tons on 10,000 acres. Now, because of disease, we grow 10,000 tons on 45,000 acres. The increase in tariff from $40 per ton to $100 charges consumers with the disease.

PEANUTS

Duty effective on only 125,000,000 bushels of the large size marketed shelled.

WALNUTS

Walnuts and almonds, duty effective.

HAY

Next to corn our most valuable crop. Our only competitor, Canada, must use all her hay for her dairy and feeder stock except as she sends relatively insignificant amounts into our northeastern border States, depressing their prices somewhat, but too little to be estimated as against our total production.

TOBACCO

We are the world's reservoir for tobacco. For our grades we set the price for the world, exporting a third or more of our crop, with no substantial effect from the tariff. We have, however, a special industry growing American Sumatra wrapper tobacco under cloth used as a shade. This is protected by duty of $2.10 per pound, with $2.50 proposed in the Hawley bill. This duty is fully effective on the best leaves of this tobacco as picked in Connecticut and a few counties in Georgia. Under the $2.10 tariff the price of the entire Connecticut Valley crop averages only $1 and the Georgia crop 55 cents, showing that the tariff is of very little effect on the greater portion of the crop, of which only about 60 per cent is used for wrappers.

The only considerable advantage from the tariff on tobacco is on the one-third of the shaded Sumatra used for wrappers, this tariff benefit running from the full amount, $2.10, down to a fraction of that sum.

About one-half of our Sumatra wrapper is imported from Sumatra and Java. The imports of 1928 weighed 5,879,000 pounds, valued at $12,500,000, paying a duty of $12,300,000, or 99 per cent. Growers of domestic filler and binder tobacco in Wisconsin, Ohio, and Connecticut object to the above duty as unnecessarily increasing the cost of cigars using their product. The Turkish cigarette tobacco is of special flavor, increasing the use of domestic product by admixture and in that sense highly advantageous to domestic growers of cigarette tobacco.

HOGS

We are the world's reservoir for pork and pork products, exporting about $200,000,000, with the world price determining domestic prices.

EGGS

No authorities consulted will place any direct money advantage on the tariff on eggs in the shell, of which we produce vast quantities with unlimited opportunity for increased production. The tariff is, however, fully effective on liquid, frozen, and powdered eggs and helpful to domestic producers, especially in the season of large breakage.

BUTTER

In butter we see the practical certainty that a well-protected farm product capable of favorable expansion will approach the export basis and lose its tariff benefits. The production of butter is steadily expanding, rising from 1,824,609,000 pounds in 1922 to 2,075,000,000 in 1928.

In 1924, with an 8-cent tariff, butter averaged only one-half cent higher in New York than in London; in 1926, 4.2 cents higher; in 1927, 7.4 cents higher; and in 1928, 6 cents higher; while in 1925 it was 1.1 cents higher in London. The above table uses 5 cents per pound as the value of the tariff. Improving conditions in Europe will raise prices there, and increased production here tends to lower prices. Also, each cent of increase in domestic butter prices adds 1,000,000 pounds to the consumption of oleomargarine, which is butter's serious competitor.

CATTLE

The embargo against Argentine cattle because of the hoof-and-mouth disease will continue indefinitely because of the difficulties of eradication there. This leaves only Canada and Mexico as competitors in our domestic market. Canada can export only to the United States, practically speaking. Whatever the tariff, we get her cattle mostly, and higher duties only lower her prices and accelerate the diversion of her grazing lands into wheat and the depression of world wheat prices. This hurts our wheat growers but helps our cattle raisers by depressing Canadian competition.

In any event our domestic market must provide for both Canada's product and our own, with no benefit in the tariff except to reduce Canadian production at the expense of our wheat growers, and to such relatively small consequence as to help cattle prices comparatively little. Costs of production are as high in Canada as here, wages as high. Winters there last seven months, with fires in homes for nine months. Canada's possibilities of expansion are limited.

Mexico's exporting conditions resemble Canada's. Her 3-year-old cattle are the size of our 8-month calves, are of inferior quality, and not strictly competitive. The present high prices are due to national prosperity, shortage of supplies, and other general conditions. It is bad policy to antagonize our best customer, Canada. The above estimate is three times the total value of cattle imported in 1928. It is probably excessive; an exceedingly capable authority says zero. An increase in the tariff would be of no effect.

WOOL

Duty fully effective, the price in Boston for domestic wool being 26 cents higher in 1928 than in London. The difference between this and the duty of 31 cents is accounted for by the superior quality of the London wools, which are skirted, with the removal of the coarser, cheaper parts of the fleece and some of the dirt, and by freight charges from London to Boston. This would give American producers $52,000,000, except that possibly 10 per cent of this is lost between the shearing pens and Boston by poor marketing methods.

SUGAR

In some respects this is the strangest of the tariffs. The total value of the domestic sugar crop entering into consumption, i. e., excepting beets used for seed, is $50,500,000, and of Louisiana cane $12,500,000; total, $63,000,000. The sugar tariff costs consumers $248,000,000, or four times the total value of the domestic crop, and yet the farmer producers are not prosperous as a whole. Domestic refiners collect the entire duty of about $45,000,000; but it is commonly estimated that they pass on to the growers only one-half of this amount, or $22,500,000, thereby making the cost of the tariff to consumers more than ten times the tariff benefit to farmers. Against this benefit of $22,500,000 farmers, as consumers, being one-fourth of our population, lose $60,000,000.

The principal difficulty with the sugar tariff is that it admits without duty the products of our island possessions, where sugar is produced at about the same cost as in Cuba, which sends one-half of our total requirements under the duty of 1.76 cents per pound for raw. With this discrimination between Cuba and the islands and the very low cost in the islands, the latter have virtually doubled their production since 1922 under the present tariff and have kept domestic production at about 1922 level. Cuban imports are steadily decreasing under this island competition. Witness the drop in Cuban duty paid from $148,000,000 about three years ago to $130,000,000 and last year to $112,000,000.

The Hawley duty would give domestic refiners $16,400,000 more, with about $8,200,000 of this going to the growers, and would increase cost to consumers about $100,000,000 and still leave Philippine imports, ever increasing, to cripple domestic producers more and more, to their possible ultimate elimination.

If a bounty were given continental growers of 1½ cents per pound, being paid to the refiner as the duty is, and with the proviso that two-thirds of this bounty, or 1 cent, should be passed on to the growers, then the price of beets would be $10 per ton, or about 30 per cent more than now, with the resulting great prosperity to the growers. The other third of the bounty would greatly benefit refiners.

In addition to this bounty, which only fairly equalizes production in the States with the islands, there should be a tariff of about 1¼ cents per pound, benefiting alike the States and the islands as against Cuba. This duty will equalize production cost, as estimated by the Tariff Commission not long ago. The McKinley tariff gave a bounty on sugar.

Agricultural products

Article	Unit of quantity	Production, 1928		Tariff rate		Value of protection
						Fordney law		Hawley bill
		Quantity (millions)	Value (million dollars)	Fordney law	Hawley bill	Nominal (million dollars)	Effective (million dollars)	Nominal (million dollars)	Effective (million dollars)
Group 1:
Wheat	Bushel	903.0	600.0	42 cents per bushel	42 cents per bushel	379.3	17.6	379.3	17.6
Corn	do	2,840.0	2,000.0	15 cents per bushel	25 cents per bushel	426.0	0	710.0	0
Oats	do	1,449.0	593.0	do	15 cents per bushel	217.4	0	217.4	0
Barley	do	356.0	197.0	20 cents per bushel	20 cents per bushel	71.2	0	71.2	0
Rye	do	41.0	36.0	15 cents per bushel	15 cents per bushel	6.2	0	6.2	0
Rice, rough	Bushel (45 pounds).	42.0	37.0	1 cent per pound (45 cents per bushel)	1¼ cents per pound (56¼ cents per bushel)	18.9	6.2	23.6	7.7
Flaxseed	Bushel	19.0	115.0	40 cents per bushel	63 cents per bushel	7.6	5.7	12.0	9.0
Potatoes	Bushel (60 pounds).	463.0	250.0	½ cent per pound (30 cents per bushel)	¾ cent per pound (45 cents per bushel)	138.9	3.5	208.4	5.3
Onions	Bushel (57 pounds).	19.0	22.6	1½ cents per pound (85½ cents per bushel)	2 cents per pound ($1.14 per bushel)	16.3	4.3	21.7	5.7
Lemons	Pound	525.0	22.7	2 cents per pound	2 cents per pound	10.5	7.9	10.5	7.9
Figs	do	20.0	2.0	do	5 cents per pound	.4	.4	1.0	1.0
Peanuts	do	1,230.0	56.0	4¼ cents per pound	4¼ cents per pound	52.3	5.3	52.3	5.3
Walnuts	do	50.0	10.5	4 cents per pound	5 cents per pound	2.0	2.0	2.5	2.5
Almonds	do	27.0	4.6	4¾ cents per pound	5½ cents per pound	1.3	1.3	1.5	1.5
Hay	Ton (2,000 pounds).	106.0	1,243.0	$4 per ton (2,240 pounds) ($3.58 per ton (2,000 pounds))	$4 per ton (2,000 pounds)	379.5	0	424.0	0
Tobacco, leaf	Pound	1,373.5	254.3	35 cents per pound	35 cents per pound	480.7	3.1	480.7	3.7
Hogs	do	13,494.0	1,209.0	1½-cent per pound	2 cents per pound	67.5	0	269.9	0
Eggs	Dozen	2,162.0	110.0	8 cents per dozen	10 cents per dozen	173.0	17.0	216.2	20.0
Total Group 1			6,762.7			2,449.0	74.3	3,108.4	87.2
Per cent of production						36.2	1.1	46.0	1.3
Group 2:
Butter (1927)	Pound	2,097.0	776.0	12 cents per pound	14 cents per pound	251.6	105.0	293.6	105.0
Cattle (including calves)	do	16,640.0	940.0	1½ cents per pound	2 cents per pound	249.6	45.0	332.8	45.0
Wool and mohair (including pulled wool)—
In the grease	do	365.5	142.7	31 cents per pound (clean)	34 cents per pound (clean)	52.0	52.0	57.1	57.1
Clean content	do	167.9
Sugar, raw, from—
Sugar beets	Ton	8.0	63.0	1.76 cents per pound (Cuban)	2.40 cents per pound (Cuban)	22.5	22.5	30.7	30.7
Sugar cane	do	1.2
Total Group 2			1,921.7			575.7	224.5	714.2	237.8
Per cent of production						30.0	11.7	37.2	12.4
Grand total Groups 1 and 2			8,684.4			3,024.7	298.8	3,822.6	325.0
Per cent of production						34.8	3.4	44.0	3.7

FAIR TARIFF LEAGUE,
40 Rector St., New York City, June 15, 1929.

AGRICULTURE AND THE TARIFF—MISCALCULATION AND MISERY

An analysis of six and three-fourth billion dollars' worth of representative farm products, or more than one-half of all farm products, shows that the present Fordney tariff would add nearly two and one-half billion dollars to farm prices of these products, or 36 per cent, if the tariff were effective as it is on most manufactured products upon which, for instance, the duties averaged 38.8 per cent on all dutiable manufactured products imported in 1928.

The actual worth to be estimated in cash of the protective duties on these farm products was, however, only slightly above $74,000,000, or 1⅛ per cent.

This is because so much of our farm products are exported that export or world prices determine domestic prices. It is impossible to sell large quantities for export at one scale of prices and other quantities for domestic consumption at other and higher prices.

Even if any one product capable of general and successful cultivation were effectively and highly protected, the growers of such products as wheat, corn, and tobacco would turn to the successfully protected product and soon bring its price down to the level of exported products.

Including cotton, now on the free list, and of great consequence in many farm States, the actual cash value of the tariff to two-thirds of our representative farm products is less than 1 per cent, as against a fictitious, counterfeit protection of over 30 per cent.

With the present tariff so liberal in fictitious rates, Congress is in special session, perspiring and jangling over the Hawley bill which would increase fictitious protection by another $659,000,000, with a real value of only $11,900,000, or three-tenths of 1 per cent.

It is because of the futility of this effort that many farm leaders urge a drastic change in our tariff practice by the use of the "debenture" or other means whereby the National Treasury would be drawn upon so far as necessary to make farm duties at least one-half effective—a process so at variance with present practices, and so uncertain of helpful effect in the judgment of many as to fail so far of congressional approval.

A very few farm products, notably sugar and wool, are grown in such small proportion to our needs that great quantities are imported. Consequently domestic prices are raised by the tariff to equal foreign prices plus ocean freights and the full amount of the duties.

Including sugar and wool which, in our more populous farm States are insignificant in respect to the acreage they use, and butter upon which the present tariff is about one-half effective, and cattle with duties of some value probably, our farmers have a total nominal tariff protection, including cotton, of over $3,000,000,000, or more than 30 per cent, on four-fifths of their products, with a cash value of slightly less than $300,000,000, or 3 per cent. Were every farm product included this percentage would not be increased.

Contrast this 3 per cent with the manufacturers' 38.8 per cent and we see the predicament of agriculture with its financial distress; a sad contrast to manufacturers and the Wall Street revelation of their profits and their mounting stock values indicative of their continuing prosperity.

Our farmers buy "Europe plus," at European prices plus freight plus the tariff. They sell "Europe minus," at Liverpool prices less heavy transportation charges.

STREET AND HIGHWAY SAFETY

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, the Highway Education Board, composed of representatives of three Government departments and representatives from the automobile and allied industries, with headquarters in Washington, D. C., and financed by the automobile and rubber industries, yearly conducts an essay and lesson contest on street and highway safety, open to elementary-school pupils and elementary-school teachers throughout the country.

In 1928, 600,000 school children entered the contest and submitted essays upon the subject of Why We Have and Practice Traffic Rules, and 100,000 elementary-school teachers submitted lesson plans on the subject Objective and Methods of Teaching Street and Highway Safety.

The winners of both contests were, I am proud to state, from Massachusetts. The essay contest was awarded to Brendan A. Finn, of Somerville, Mass., 11 years old and a pupil in the sixth grade of the Prescott Street Public School. The lesson contest was awarded to Miss Amy M. Striley, a public-school teacher of Beverly Farms, Mass.

I ask that both the prize essay and the prize lesson be inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the essays were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WHY WE HAVE AND PRACTICE TRAFFIC RULES

By Brendan A. Finn, Prescott School, Somerville, Mass.

We have and practice traffic rules to insure the protection of pedestrians and the safety of vehicles and their occupants on our highways.

With the coming of the motor vehicle a new problem was presented; a faster and more powerful means of transportation was introduced, which gave man the power to cover distances at a higher and more sustained rate of speed than he had heretofore enjoyed.

As the years went by the motor vehicle was improved and perfected, and more horsepower, higher rates of speed in pleasure cars, and greater load capacity in trucks were attained.

In addition to this development in a mechanical way there were instituted quantity production and plans for financing which placed the motor vehicle in a position where it was possible to be owned by the masses, and thus it has so entered into our everyday life that for a long time an automobile has been considered a necessity, both in our social and business life.

The motor vehicle appears on the highways each year in increasing numbers. Along with other forms of transportation, such as horse-drawn vehicles, street cars, railroads crossing thoroughfares, and, in conjunction with these, narrow and congested city streets, hazards are presented which demand that traffic be regulated and that the lives and rights of pedestrians on or crossing the highways be safeguarded. Therefore the State, city, and local governments have made rules to guide the motorist, pedestrian, and others for their mutual safety.

The pedestrian must practice these rules for his own safety; for, in fact, his very life may depend on knowing their meaning and obeying them. The motorist must also practice the rules of traffic, because in a great measure his life and the lives of others who are relying on his judgment are in danger. Property, either his own or that which may have been entrusted to his care, may be placed in a position of danger if he is careless. Then the lives and property of others who use the highway may be injured or damaged by the careless motorist who disregards the rules of traffic.

In fact, these rules must be practiced by all who use the highways, for they are made with the idea of moving traffic as quickly as possible in so far as is consistent with safety.

The pedestrian and motorist must adhere to a strict interpretation of these rules, because they have been put forth as demanded by the different situations on city and country roadways. Our cooperation and compliance with these rules, whether we be motorist or pedestrian, is necessary in order to make the highways safe for all.

OBJECTIVES AND METHODS OF EDUCATION IN STREET AND HIGHWAY SAFETY

Prize-winning lesson by Miss Amy M. Striley, Beverly Farms, Mass.

Our general objective was to make the children, our future citizens, realize the ever-increasing need of carefulness everywhere, and to train them to be actively cautious for their own protection and socially responsible for the safety of others. The result eventually will be safer and saner traffic conditions, with a consequent lessening of waste, expense, pain, unhappiness, and loss of life.

This program is intended for upper-grade work (grades 5–8). It is the outline of a year's work, actually accomplished. It is arranged with special objectives for each month as the program for that period is carried out. The work has taken the form of a junior safety council, organized and carried on by the children, whose fortnightly meetings are linked up with classroom instruction.

SEPTEMBER

Showing the need of an organized safety campaign in the school

A. Collection of statistics and accounts of accidents to children, and investigation of causes.

B. "Find-out" lessons—Why do we have traffic rules? Why and how do accidents happen? What can we do? What are our traffic rules?

C. Presentation of the junior safety council idea.

This was done under the auspices of the Massachusetts Junior Safety Council. A State representative, who came at our request, explained the organization requirements and the functioning of a junior safety council. A club could be formed independently if there were no State organization. The children were delighted and wanted to organize immediately.

D. Organization.

Each class met and chose by ballot three children, since there must be a group of "active members" to form the nucleus of the organization and to start functioning. Heeding the caution to select sensible, "live" people who would make the club a success, the children chose wisely. The active members, representing the several rooms, held a meeting, observing simple rules of meeting procedure. They chose a president, vice president, and secretary. Active-member pins were presented by the principal. The following plans were worked out.

1. A clean-up campaign for the playground and the organization of a playground patrol.

2. A bulletin board to be made by the manual training boys and hung in the upper hall for safety material.

3. The printing of fortnightly safety slogans to be hung over the front door where all children could see them as they passed out. "Walk home on the sidewalk," was the first one.

In the classrooms the safety pledge was placed on the board. All other children were to be associate members. They had to earn their way into the council by learning the safety pledge and by doing two real, witnessed acts of safety. These acts of safety were to be written neatly on paper and presented at a council meeting. Joining was voluntary, of course, and there was no urging. A few children were disdainful at first, but the enthusiasm, interest, and curiosity were contagious. Eventually we had 100 per cent membership.

To our officers we owe much, and from them we have learned many lessons in child logic, alertness, and command of situations. Our president was a very busy person, answering questions and unofficially judging qualifications for admission. His work, I believe, has been unusually fine.

Several boys who were artistic wanted to draw safety pictures and good printers wanted to make slogans, so we set aside one blackboard as a safety board. We had a regular epidemic of original slogans, poems, and even safety songs set to well-known tunes. Our pupils conducted morning exercises, which afforded them a chance to use their songs and slogans. Our bulletin board was promptly made, a board committee chosen, and contributions poured in. A crowd was always around the bulletin board.

OCTOBER

Functioning of the organization

In Massachusetts the twilight hour before supper, when the time changes from daylight saving to standard time, sees many accidents to children. We call this time "the danger hour."

Meeting I. We determine procedure.

A. Admission of 12 candidates, chosen by lot because there were so many ready with their safety pledge and acts of safety. The active members, sitting in judgment, were quite strict about admission. The safety pledge must be well learned. One mistake was allowed. The safety acts must be authentic and useful. Each candidate presented his credentials and they were discussed and voted upon. All 12 members were accepted, given associate member pins, and asked to contribute ideas.

It was decided to have each meeting based on the following general plan: A simple safety program relating to the theme of the month; reception of new members; discussion of safety ideas and recommendations for improvement.

This meant careful planning of meeting procedure. The secretary at each meeting selected a program committee for the next meeting.

B. New plans suggested at this meeting.

1. Proposal by several girls to write a play, The Danger Hour, to be presented at the second meeting.

2. Patrols for stairs and basement, assigned for 2-week periods.

3. Making of arm bands by sewing girls. Letters J. S. C. to be printed on bands by boys.

4. A patrol to care for little children at the kindergarten across the street during the morning and noon rush hours.

5. Decision to call before the council several children who were notoriously bad examples. This rather alarmed us at first, because it required much tact, but we were amazed at the way the children accomplished results without causing trouble.

Meeting II. Be careful after school.

A. The play "Danger Hour" was presented. A boy whose father is a policeman gave a talk on traffic rules and traffic dangers. Items from the Massachusetts Safety Council were read. Patrols were changed. The secretary gave his report. Original safety poems and songs were given.

B. Admission of 11 candidates. (One failed. Failures had to wait until there was a vacancy in the candidate list.)

C. Discussion and recommendations.

1. Crossing the street. A committee was appointed to draw up a set of simple rules for crossing the street, to be presented at the next meeting.

2. Organization of traffic patrol on street in front of building, this patrol to be instructed by the traffic policeman. The policeman now leaves the directing largely to the boys who are selected each month. The two new patrols are instructed for a week by the outgoing squad.

3. Proposal by girls to make traffic belts for traffic squad.

4. Request by principal for members of the council to give safety talks on "The Danger Hour" to the lower grades.

5. Motto adopted: "I will be my own policeman and make myself behave."

There was much talk in the classrooms on safety ideas.

Because the children were interested, we also were engaged in making black and white safety posters. Bulletin-board contributions, blackboard work, and other activities were going on. The children were busy and had many ideas.

NOVEMBER

Making us safe at school

Meeting I. Safety on the playground.

A. Admission of 12 new members.

B. Presentation of rules for crossing street and adoption of them.

C. Discussion.

1. Dangerous games and practices on the playground. Playground limits. Case of the little children.

2. Resolution: Each member agreed to be responsible for some smaller child for the next two weeks.

Meeting II. Safety inside the building.

A. Program.

B. Admission of 12 new members.

C. Discussion: Safety inside the school building.

1. Need of fire drills.

2. Walking up and down stairs.

3. Helping the little ones on the stairs.

D. Proposal to invite visitors to attend our next meeting.

E. Report of several children as to how they helped smaller ones.

F. Children already in the junior safety council want to receive recognition for further special acts of safety, hence an honor roll with name and description of acts. We gave gold stars for additional acts.

In the classroom the rules for crossing the street were copied with pen and ink. A printed copy was made to be hung in the hall. We were also making a map of the city with all the schools marked and a red star for every street accident to a child. Our aim: "We strive to keep our district free from red stars."

We were also working on the honor roll and finishing our safety posters.

DECEMBER

Safety in winter sports

This was visitors' month.

Meeting I. Where to slide.

A. A review of our best songs and poems, our play, and a report of radio broadcasts and statement made by the registrar about hitching sleds on behind automobiles.

B. Admission of 12 new members and reception of special acts for honor roll. The special acts were voted upon also.

C. Discussion. Where and how can we slide safely? There are no good hills here in our neighborhood except those on private estates which lead to road.

1. Organization of safety squad at foot of hill to warn automobile drivers and sliders.

2. Use of red lantern at night.

Meeting II. We show the superintendent of schools our work. (We had the superintendent as guest.)

A. The program was arranged to show what we had done during the fall.

B. Admission of 12 new members and reception of acts for honor roll.

C. Discussion.

1. Review of sliding "Don'ts" led by president.

2. How we can enjoy skating and be safe.

3. Report: What other near-by cities are doing for safety.

4. Report of weak step. Matter referred to janitor.

5. Report of ways in which smaller children can be helped.

In the classrooms the children were given a week to prepare a song, slogans, a play, a story, an exercise, or poster for a safety language demonstration. The song must be sung, the play acted, the poster explained, etc.

For publicity purposes the posters were exhibited in the stores down town.

A copy of our street-crossing rules was printed to hang in the library.

JANUARY

Enlarging our safety activities

Meeting I. We discipline careless members. (We invited a lower grade to join us in the meeting and to contribute to the program.)

A. Program. First-aid demonstrations.

B. Our guests entertain us.

C. Admission of 10 new members. Two failed to qualify.

D. Reception and vote upon special safety acts.

E. Discussion.

1. Placing upon probation three members who had been careless.

2. Suspending for one month three members concerned in a stone-throwing contest. We took their pins away. This proved a very effective punishment. Everyone in school knew about it. The boys later were readmitted.

3. Proposal to learn more about what other schools were doing in safety work.

4. Committee appointed to write safety items and an account of our safety work for our local newspaper.

Meeting II. What other schools are doing. (Grade II as guests.)

A. Report of committee as to what the schools of other cities are doing for safety.

B. Admission of 11 new members and reception of special safety acts.

FEBRUARY

We celebrate 100 per cent membership

Meeting I. We plan a health drive. (Grades III and IV as guests.)

A. Admission of 12 new members and reception of special safety acts.

B. Our guests present their safety ideas.

C. Discussion.

1. Proposal to recognize exceptional safety acts in some other way. "Knights of Safety" idea suggested. A "Knight" could have a "Shield" with his name on it hung in the hall.

2. Suggested that we make our original songs, plays, etc., into a safety-slogan book. A copy was presented to the superintendent of schools.

3. Proposal to make a health drive for better attendance because of fewer colds and sickness. "Healthy children have more fun." "Healthy children are more alert to danger."

During January we had had many absences.

Instead of a second meeting in February, the whole school was united in a safety-first assembly.

MARCH

Getting ready for spring

Meeting I. Conspicuous act of safety recognized.

A. A knight proclaimed.

B. Discussion.

1. Marble playing.

2. Proposal to rearrange the playground so that all the children could carry out their various games at the same time without confusion or interference.

Meeting II. We review and demonstrate some old rules. (Kindergarten as guests.)

A. Program.

1. Watching out on a rainy day.

2. A review of our street-crossing rules in pantomime.

B. Reception of special safety acts.

C. Discussion of playground rearrangement.

1. Plans brought in.

2. Proposal to move basket ball court.

3. Playground limits for lower grades changed.

4. First base to be moved over.

In the classroom, plans for changing over the playground had been placed on our safety blackboard.

We had also been busy preparing a safety vocabulary for use in April in writing compositions. Lists made by the children had been compared and checked so that we had a long list of words relating to safety and traffic. We reviewed the spelling of these words by spelling matches. Our favorite spelling match has been a spelling baseball game.

APRIL

Highway education board month

Meeting I. The automobile and I.

A. Program. Playlets.

1. When I cross the street.

2. When I slide.

3. When I ride my bicycle.

4. When I get on or off the street car, bus, or automobile.

B. Explanation of the requirements of the certificate of merit.

C. Special safety acts received.

D. Some playground "bullies" were taught a lesson.

E. Discussion.

1. Appointment of additional playground patrols to keep new boundary limits until the children understood.

Meeting II. What the newspapers and magazines are saying about safety. Listening in on the radio.

An intensive campaign had begun in Massachusetts to reduce injuries and deaths. The papers were full of interesting items and pictures.

A. A general contribution of short items by a majority of the members.

B. Account of radio safety broadcast.

C. Picture exhibit of various traffic squads or committees of other schools.

D. Special safety acts received.

E. Discussion.

1. Proposal to make some "mother's don'ts" to send to the newspapers.

2. Decision to send delegates to Massachusetts Junior Safety Council rally at the Boston Arena in May.

In the classrooms during this month, we were busily engaged in getting our compositions into shape and watching our steps, so as to earn the certificate of merit.

During the latter part of the month our local chamber of commerce offered a prize for the best composition in each school on safety. The compositions were shorter and of a different nature from our highway education board work.

Other activities and the bulletin board were being carried on also.

MAY

Social responsibility month

Meeting I. How I can help the other fellow to play safe. (Grade I as guests.)

A. Program. Simple demonstration.

1. Be safe at school.

2. Be safe on the street.

3. Be safe at home.

B. Reception of special safety acts.

C. Discussion in form of announcement.

1. Asking every first grader to "Stop, look, listen, and think" when on the streets for the next two weeks. All safety councilors will observe to see if the first graders obey these rules. All good first graders will be invited to second meeting. Safety slogan for the fortnight, "Stop, look, listen, and think when on the street."

Meeting II. Ways of helping safety. (Good members of Grade I as guests. The whole class was very much elated because they had all tried to earn an invitation.)

A. Program.

1. Playlet, "Mr. Careful Safety."

2. Reading of safety compositions.

B. Presentation of simple safety pledge for little people to sign and take home.

C. Discussion.

1. Some don'ts in swimming.

2. Heads up for baseball.

3. The traffic is getting heavier, so watch corners; cross within the white lines.

D. Presentation of special safety acts.

E. A knight proclaimed.

F. Announcement: We have fulfilled the conditions of the certificate of merit.

JUNE

We tell the public

Our big public meeting with a special program featuring the most worthy work of the year was held. Explanation of the work of the junior safety council was made. Invitations were issued by the children and a canvass made by them to insure acceptance of the invitations, and thus interest the people.

The mayor and superintendent of schools gave their support and were present. The members of the audience were presented with neat copies of the safety pledge and the rules for crossing the street.

This proved a fitting end for the work of the year and paved the way for a more successful program next year.

DISENFRANCHISEMENT IN THE SOUTH

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial appearing in the New York World of Saturday, June 15, 1929, and an article reprinted in the World from the Orlando (Fla.) Reporter-Star. The article, which is short, was written by John Temple Graves. Both the editorial and the article relate to the subject of Disenfranchisement in the South.

There being no objection, the editorial and article were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York World of June 15, 1929]

DISENFRANCHISEMENT IN THE SOUTH

In another column on this page we reprint an article, written by John Temple Graves 2d, which has appeared in a number of southern newspapers. The article is a comment on a recent editorial published in the World. This editorial pointed out that there are a number of southern Senators who voted recently to exclude aliens from the count for representation, in defiance of the first article of the Constitution, while they are at the same time willing to give their tacit approval to legislation in the South which deprives the negro of his constitutional right to vote under the terms of the fifteenth amendment. "Over both sections of the Constitution," the World said, "these Senators are willing to ride roughshod in their effort to preserve for a comparatively small number of white voters in the South representation in Congress out of all proportion to their number."

Mr. Graves's comment on this statement is frankly to admit that there is disenfranchisement in the South, but to suggest that the southern negro has actually "weighed more in strictly national politics than the southern white." In support of this theory he advances two arguments: First, that certain Northern States in which the negro votes have more voice in Democratic National Conventions than Southern States which nearly always vote Democratic; second, that the southern negro often has an important influence in Republican conventions, and that it is the Republican Party which is usually in command at Washington.

We reprint Mr. Graves's article because we find in it an interesting point of view. It is perhaps fair to suggest in passing that if the influence of the southern negro at Washington makes itself felt through the Republican Party rather than the Democratic Party, it is because the Democratic Party has so effectively closed its doors to him and so successfully driven him over to the Republican side.

DISENFRANCHISEMENT IN THE SOUTH

By John Temple Graves

(Reprinted from the Orlando (Fla.) Reporter-Star)

The New York World, in many respects the most able and interesting of American newspapers, inveighed last week against the southern

Senators who voted for the exclusion of aliens in the congressional reapportionment count, but were not willing to have disenfranchised southern negroes excluded also. The World charged that these Senators are willing to ride roughshod over the Constitution "in their effort to preserve for a comparatively small number of white voters in the South representation in Congress out of all proportion to their number."

That the abstract logic of the southern position in this respect has its flaw can not be disputed. But there is, at least, a plea in abatement. The World overlooks two circumstances which, when the machinery of American politics is considered, may have given the southern white man actually less of a voice in national politics and the southern negro actually more of a voice than their respective numerical strengths deserved.

The first circumstance is the system of apportioning delegates to National Democratic Conventions. Without regard to the wide variation in the proportion of Democrats in different States, each State is allowed twice the number of delegates that it has Representatives in Congress. This means that States like Pennsylvania, which never vote Democratic, have considerably more voice in Democratic conventions than Southern States which nearly always vote Democratic. It means, in effect, that the southern white man, whose ordinary political vehicle has been the Democratic Party, has not been proportionately represented in the most vital decisions of that party.

The second circumstance is the heretofore skeleton organization of the Republican Party in the South, an organization in many instances based on the votes of southern negroes. While the Republican Party has a fairer system of apportioning delegates to its national conventions than the Democratic Party has, the southern delegations in Republican conventions nevertheless have had in the past a representation out of proportion to Republican strength in the South. This means that the southern negro may sometimes exercise an actual determining influence in the national conventions of the Republican Party. And this party has been generally in office at Washington since the Civil War.

Since the political destinies of the Nation are determined fundamentally in the conventions of the two great parties the World should ask itself whether the two circumstances named above do not offset whatever disenfranchisement of the negro on general election day the South may be guilty of accomplishing. Or, to put it another way, whether the southern white man's superior representation in Congress is not balanced by the southern negro's superior voice in the choice of a President of the United States.

The theory is one thing; the condition another. Theoretically the South has no leg to stand on in its disregard of the fifteenth amendment. Under actual conditions, however, without regard to the social problem the negro represents, it is possible that the southern negro (or those who control him) has weighed more in strictly national politics than the southern white.

THE MEDITERRANEAN FRUIT FLY

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from the Arcadian, of Arcadia, Fla., entitled "Reimbursing Medfly Victims," and also a short article on the same subject entitled "Hardship on the Poor," printed in the Apopka (Fla.) Chief of June 13, 1929.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Arcadian]

REIMBURSING "MEDFLY" VICTIMS

A bill has been offered in Congress providing for an appropriation of $10,000,000 from the Federal Treasury to reimburse Florida fruit growers and farmers for the destruction of crops in the fight against the Mediterranean fly. Word comes down the line that Congress is liable to cut this amount in half and make the remaining five million payable contingent upon Florida appropriating an equal amount.

This would practically mean that those who are impoverished by having their crops destroyed will not be reimbursed, for the State is certainly not in condition to appropriate such a fund at this time and with additional counties and smaller sections being put under quarantine and stopped from agricultural production as new fly infestations are found.

It would seem that the condition brought about by the invasion of the fly is such as to warrant the Federal Government extending the relief sought without the attachment of any strings. The fight which is being waged in Florida at such great expense is in a way a defense of the food supply of the entire Nation. It is a national disaster. The Federal Government has already recognized this in its appropriation of a generous amount to carry on the campaign against the fruit fly.

Since the embargo against raising or selling products in the stricken sections is a part of the general compaign of extermination, which is being chiefly financed by the Federal Government, it seems no more than fair that the grower whose property is destroyed should be reimbursed from the same source. He is hard hit. If his immediate neighbors, in the person of his own State, are not able to give him relief, his more distant neighbors, the people of the Nation, should do so.

The matter is soon to be decided, it is understood, as Congress is hurrying along toward adjournment. It is hoped that those in charge will be able to convince Congress that the request for this appropriation is reasonable and right.

[From the Apopka Chief, June 13, 1929]

HARDSHIP ON THE POOR

Since the State plant board and the newspapers of the citrus section have had their innings, is it not proper to say a word in behalf of the small home owner who has spent the last 20 or 30 years of his life here trying to build up a home with a few surrounding comforts in which to spend his latter days, and who has had so many of these comforts summarily destroyed without any assurance of recompense whatever?

The loyalty of the Florida people can always be depended upon in fly eradication or in any other cooperative work necessary. They have rallied almost to a man, as they have been directed to do, in this particular case.

But why has it been necessary to impose such hardships on some of our poor and most worthy people; many of whom we know personally have had their gardens and small fruits, upon which they were depending for a living through the summer, destroyed and even the trees cut down in some instances? These men are not carpenters, boiler makers, or mechanics, capable of going North to find employment for the summer to sustain them until this thing is over and they must have help from some source.

Take the case of John Schalk, for instance. He had a wonderful crop of peaches, just beginning to ripen in the early part of May; a few baskets were gathered and sold readily around town and they were indeed as free from infestation of any kind as could be. The next day as he prepared to gather more fruit a truck appeared, driven by a stranger, whom he did not know, filled with a bunch of negroes who entered the place, picked and carried away the entire crop estimated at from one to two hundred bushels.

Why should this man not have been permitted to sell these peaches? They were ready for market and free from infection. No; he was not even permitted to can a few for his own home use.

A few days later I saw on sale in one of our stores some very nice peaches which were said to have been grown just out of town.

I insist that something should be done for these people. The newspapers have been reticent, while these other folks have been deprived of a living earned by the sweat of their own brow without even a hope or a promise of retribution.

Will Florida stand for this?

H. H. WITHERINGTON.

LAW OF NEUTRALITY AND ITS RELATION TO WORLD PEACE

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, my attention has been called to an article on the law of neutrality and its relation to world peace which appeared in a recent issue of the New York University Law Review.

The subject of the article is one of profound interest to those who are deeply concerned with the problem of maintenance of world peace. The author of the article, Clyde Eagleton, has made a searching study of the history of the law of neutrality and its relation to attempts in recent years, through the League of Nations and otherwise, to restrain war.

Our people can not have too much information on a subject that affects not only their own peace, security, and lives but the lives of their children and children's children. I ask, therefore, that this interesting and valuable article may be printed in the RECORD, in an abbreviated form and with the deletion of the footnotes giving the sources of information upon which the author drew.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NEUTRALITY AND THE CAPPER RESOLUTION

A development of the greatest significance and potentialities is occurring in international law to-day. That law has been criticized because it has no legislature to edict it, no sanctions to enforce it, and especially, in the mind of the public, because it has been unable to control war. For such criticisms it must be admitted that there is some justification; though it may be observed that in these days of democratic government, international law, as all other law, will be what the people wish it to be. Be that as it may, changes in the organization of international society are now producing unwonted changes in its law. The forces of modern interdependence have resulted in a regular, continuous, and cumulative conference system through the machinery of the League of Nations, whose operation brings forth new law in the form of multilateral legislative treaties, and in agreements reached without adherence to the old rule of unanimity.

In no field had the possiblity of change appeared slighter than with regard to the status of war and of its handmaid, neutrality. Yet so effective have been these new processes that there is lacking only the cooperation of the United States to eliminate the status and law of neutrality, and to set into operation an important measure of control over war itself. Doubtless, war like murder will never be completely eradicated; but it can be declared illegal, and it can be largely restrained. Toward this end the United States has, during the past year, taken an important step in the pact of Paris; and now a resolution has been introduced by Senator CAPPER which would make this treaty effective, put an end to neutrality, and set into motion the wheels of a machinery which lacks only the aid of the United States for its operation.

To the international lawyer, whose standard texts are more than half composed of the laws of war and neutrality, such a development can not fail to have interest. It illustrates the new methods of international legislation, the new vigor in its enforcement, and, above all, the method by which it is grappling with the greatest problem of civilization.

I

The law of neutrality, one of the best developed portions of international law, has had a long history, in the course of which it has been closely molded by its environment. In the days before the peace of Westphalia—which is commonly taken as the date of origin for the society of nations—when the idea of universal empire prevailed, it was natural that neutrality should be unknown. Romanos aut socios aut hostes—such were the only alternatives. Gustavus Adolphus is said to have remarked during the Thirty Years' War that the word neutrality had no meaning to him. The Consolato del Mare does not employ the term which, according to Fauchille, was first used by the writers Botero in 1598 and Neumayer de Ramsla in 1620.

Indeed, the first writers upon international law inclined rather to the theory of a justum bellum. Grotius does not conceive of neutrality in its modern significance; on the contrary "It is the duty of those who stand apart from a war to do nothing which may strengthen the side whose cause is unjust, or which may hinder the movements of him who is carrying on a just war; and, in a doubtful case, to act alike to both sides, in permitting transit, in supplying provisions to the respective forces, and in not assisting persons besieged." Forecasting the Capper resolution, and the whole doctrine underlying the League of Nations, Grotius left each state free to determine which of the belligerents has the just cause, and considered it the duty of each state to give at least passive support to that state.

When a society of nations appeared, recognizing to a number of States the right to independent coexistence, the present theory slowly evolved. At first a state felt free to help any other state in war. Gradually, however, the interest which the belligerents had in forestalling aid to his enemy and the interest which the neutral had in continuing his trade undisturbed combined to produce a new rule. It was evidenced at first in the form of treaties, in which a state engaged itself not to assist the enemies of the other signatory state in time of war. Such principles, at first stated in the form of contractual obligations, soon developed into rules of customary obligation, having force whether or not a treaty stipulation existed. Even then it was for a long time regarded as permissible to recruit soldiers, even in large groups, from a neutral population. Gradually rules were evolved which made it the duty of a neutral state to prevent its territory being used for recruiting or in any other manner as a base of operations for the benefit of one belligerent against another. It was the attitude of the United States during the Napoleonic wars which consolidated these rules. The proclamations of President Washington and the passage of the first neutrality law in 1794 may be said to have formulated into rules the modern idea of neutrality. At the same time it came to be recognized that the belligerent must respect the territorial sovereignty and freedom of action of the neutral. Upon these fundamental principles a detailed and intricate system of rules was built up, representing at least in the attempt a fair interplay between the rights of neutrals and the needs of belligerents, though in the stress of war it was usually the neutral who suffered. Neutrality thus became a legal status of impartiality, according equal rights to both belligerents and giving no consideration whatever to the just cause.

By the time of the World War neutrality was regarded as a permanent policy, a tradition. It was firmly based upon the idea of sovereignty, which left to each state full freedom of action. Since each state must concede this same freedom to other states, the right to make war was unrestrained, and the duty of a neutral was complete impartiality toward belligerents. It could have no function as a judge of its fellow sovereigns, each of whom was in his rights in going to war; there were no ethical standards by which it could say that the war was just or unjust, or that one belligerent was an aggressor or dealing unfairly with his opponent. In justification of this attitude it could be argued that the range of the war would be restricted by a careful impartiality; and that such impartiality enabled the neutral state to maintain a desirable friendship with both sides to the conflict, a friendship which might ultimately lead to mediation and peace. Indeed, to favor one side might well expose the neutral to attack or reprisals from the other side. A state which had no direct stake in the dispute should keep out. Furthermore, there was a chance for great profits for the neutral, who could sell to both belligerents at war-time prices.

Most important of all, however, in continuing the theory of neutrality, was the lack of any international organization which could make possible a different attitude. There was no authority or machinery for summoning a state before a tribunal to determine whether its cause was just. A state which took upon itself such a task acted alone, for there was no international understanding looking toward joint action against an offending state. As a matter of law, indeed, one could not call a state which went to war for any purpose whatever an offender, for internation law contained no limitation upon the right to make war. The most which that law attempted was a few regulations for the amelioration of the horrors of war. Consequently, if a State should take upon itself to sit in judgment upon a war maker, it might find itself attacked and without legal or even moral support for her attitude.

"The world lacked two elements necessary to make it possible to treat one of the belligerents as unjust. One was the lack of a sufficient sense of organized solidarity among nations and the other was the lack of an objective basis for determining which was the unjust belligerent."

It was evident that there must be changes in both the theory and the organization of the society of nations before the concept of neutrality could be modified.

The shock of the World War, partly through its own direct impress, partly by bringing to expression certain slow-moving tendencies of the past, produced an entirely different attitude. The system of neutrality had enthusiastic support and was well worked out in rules, but it proved wholly ineffective. It was the neutrals who suffered most in that war; their rights were diminished and those of belligerents were increased, and this by unilateral acts on the part of one or the other of the belligerents. The vast extension of economic needs in war put too great a strain upon respect for the law of neutrality; and when the United States entered the war we reversed our policy and embarrassed the neutrals by exactly the same actions of which we had complained so long as we were neutrals. An enormous amount of criticism resulted, finding frequent expression in the statement that international law in general is valueless. Neutrality, it seems apparent, is not a sufficient solution to the problem of modern warfare. And it may be observed at this point that there seems little opportunity for hope that the United States could remain neutral in general wars of the future. If we were forced to abandon a tradition of a century and a half to enter the last war, what hope can there be, with that precedent shattered, and cumulatively increasing relationships abroad, that we can maintain neutrality and impartiality in the next war?

This difficulty is found whether considered from the economic or from the political viewpoint. The economic gains of war are not now so apparent to neutrals. True, a few persons made enormous profits, but most people suffered. Neutral Holland was rationed by the Allies, as fully under their control as if she had been a conquered enemy. Business was disrupted, and the great structure of modern credit has not even yet been restored to normal. Belligerents are soon unable to pay in cash; and when a neutral loans large sums of money to one of the belligerents, that neutral's impartiality is apt to be undermined. In such a situation the United States is particularly susceptible, because of her great financial and economic power. In general, the gains to a neutral in a modern war can hardly offset the losses occasioned by the upsetting of the normal balances of trade. War must result in profit to a few and loss to the many.

The political viewpoint—which must be closely associated with the moral—doubtless was of as great force in inducing the United States to abandon her long tradition of neutrality as was the economic. Material losses due to violations of neutral rights were perhaps the precipitating causes of our entry; but the arguments which reached the ears of the people in general were to the effect that Teutonic success would mean the ruin of American ideals and indeed of civilization, and that the success of the Allies was essential if the advances of civilization were to be maintained. We have always had a dislike for militarism and for autocracy—could we afford to allow them to triumph? The conviction grew that there are principles for which one should fight, even though we were not directly involved. President Wilson, in his address to Congress calling for a declaration of war against Germany, said:

"Neutrality is no longer feasible or desirable where the peace of the world is involved and the freedom of its peoples, and the menace to that peace and freedom lies in the existence of autocratic governments backed by organized force, which is controlled wholly by their will, not by the will of their people. We have seen the last of neutrality in such circumstances."

Such a process of thought leads, it is clear, to the abandonment of impartiality and to the substitution therefor of the idea of collective sanctions against the belligerent which is adjudged to have the unjust cause. There can be no question that world opinion has traveled in this direction.

II

Actually the new theory has been interpreted into a far-reaching machinery for international action. The treaties which made up the peace settlement and founded the League of Nations and later the Permanent Court of International Justice, as well as a network of other treaties for particular purposes, not only represented the new spirit of solidarity but created a chartered society of nations, with obligations and instruments for joint action. Since the covenant of the League of Nations states can no longer be regarded as isolated nor war as permissible under any circumstances. Now, with obligations existing for joint action, a war is of concern to every state. The situation is expressed in clear and simple terms by David Hunter Miller:

"An agreement of states A and B to have friendly relations, even an alliance, touches no other state. If one break it, it is the concern of the other alone, just, indeed, as if the two went to war against each other in the absence of any agreement. But when 50 states agree, each with all the others, not to go to war, then a war between A and B is a direct concern of C and of the rest."

The original intention was that the League of Nations should employ forcible sanctions, in the intent that a bellum omnium in unum would automatically exist between all members of the league and a covenant-breaking nation. Such was surely the intent of President Wilson; and article 16 of the covenant was thus interpreted at first. The council of the league declared in 1920:

"The idea of neutrality of members of the League of Nations is not compatible with the other principle that all the members of the league will have to act in common to cause their covenants to be respected."

The covenant, it is apparent, left some loopholes for war; but when it is studied integratively, it will be found that there is but little opportunity left for war or for neutrality.

Nevertheless, recent interpretation of the covenant tends to cover the gaps which permit of such wars. Article 11 provides that any war or threat of war is a matter of concern to the league, which may take any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations. If, then, as recent interpretation suggests, article 11 is linked with article 16, which provides for sanctions, an all-inclusive authority against war is provided. It would thus permit the league to step in, even in case of the above-noted exceptions which permit of war; and no cases of licit or tolerated wars would remain. Thus, though the covenant apparently allows war in some cases, it may deny the right of war, and therefore of neutrality, whether before or after efforts have been made to settle disputes in accordance with the provisions of the covenant.

Clearly it would be very difficult for the league members to deprive a state under coercion of the means for carrying on war when the enormous resources of the United States, as a neutral, were at its disposal. And if it were claimed that neutrality were not in question because there was no war but only police measures, then the United States could reply that she had as great, or greater, rights to trade with a state at peace. Not only would the efforts of the league be made ineffective but its members who loyally supported the league by refusing to sell would suffer by losing their markets to the nonmember, such as the United States, who was willing to sell, and who was able to do so since she was not bound by the covenant. Consequently the league has never been able to make use of its sanctions; and her machinery has been rendered impotent so far as coercion is concerned through the abstinence of the United States and the possibility that she might claim her rights as a neutral in case of a war of execution by the league.

Nevertheless the theory has been continued and developed by the league, perhaps in anticipation of cooperation on the part of the United States. The Geneva protocol which, though not ratified, represented this theory, asserted that aggressive war is an international crime, strengthened the sanctions of the covenant, and agreed not to resort to war except to resist aggression. In the Locarno pacts the same engagements which were rejected by some states in the Geneva protocol were accepted as between a few states. In 1927 the assembly of the league passed its famous resolution declaring that wars of aggression are prohibited. Theoretically the league has gone as far as possible; but it is unable to put its theory into practical effect so long as the power of the United States is outside its system.

III

These developments have made the position of the United States very embarrassing. They are in opposition to the concept of neutrality which we still uphold; and we have as well rejected the theory of sanctions and joint action in use by the League of Nations. On the other hand, we have always been sincerely interested in the cause of peace; and it is embarrassing and unpleasant to be accused of blocking the efforts of the world in that direction. It must be recalled, however, that whatever our legal rights may be, and however strongly we may have maintained them in the past as legal rights, we are free to refrain from applying them in such a manner as to hinder the action of the league in behalf of peace. The league, while recognizing the duty to protect the rights of third states under existing international law, has expressed the hope that such a policy might be anticipated.

After various unofficial suggestions in the United States, enough popular interest was aroused to justify various congressional efforts in this direction; and a series of resolutions have been introduced in one or the other of the Houses. Before considering these, however, it is necessary to study briefly the Briand-Kellogg pact for the renunciation of war as an instrument of national policy and its extremely important effects upon our problem. However much opinions may vary as to the actual legal significance of this treaty, it lays down the principle of legal force as between its signatories that war is not to be used but for exceptional situations. Secretary Kellogg said that the purpose of the United States is to eliminate war as a factor in international relations. The boast of the American people is that it fills a gap in the covenant of the League of Nations, which does not declare war to be illegal. Morally, there can be no doubt that the United States is officially on record as opposed to the institution of war. How does this attitude affect our position as to neutrality and the rights of a neutral state?

The situation may be made more concrete by considering the proposal of Senator BORAH for a conference to restate the rules of maritime neutrality, upon the basis of the freedom of the seas which the United States has so long upheld. The following situation would result, should we continue to maintain our rights as a neutral. By the pact of Paris, we have taken a position against war except in self-defense—which, it should be noted, is a position against the aggressor state; but as neutrals we would claim the right to aid the aggressor state by supplying him with his belligerent needs. We could furnish arms to a state violating the Kellogg treaty, and even go to war against a state member of the League of Nations whose authorized blockade against an offending state interferes with our neutral rights. We assert that the aggressor is an outlaw, but reserve the right to aid him!

Such an illogical position could not be maintained; and it was demanded that the pact of Paris be followed with measures to make it effective. To this end, a number of resolutions have been put before Congress. On December 5, 1927, Representative BURTON introduced a resolution declaring it to be the policy of the United States "to prohibit the exportation of arms, munitions, or implements of war to any country which engages in aggressive warfare against any other country in violation of a treaty, convention, or other agreement to resort to peaceful means for the settlement of international controversies." Public opinion was not yet, apparently, ready for such a policy; and on January 25, 1928, Mr. BURTON reintroduced his resolution, and a week later modified it still further. The resolution in its later form—which was unanimously reported out of the House Committee on Foreign Relations—made it unlawful to export arms to the territory of either belligerent. The former resolution, it should be noted, would abandon neutrality, leaving it to the President to determine the aggressor state; the latter would extend the duties of neutrality by requiring the United States to prevent the sale of arms to either belligerent. The great difference between these two views will be considered in a moment.

Resolutions similar to the later Burton resolution were introduced by Representatives HAMILTON FISH and LAGUARDIA. In the Senate Senator CAPPER by resolution proposed the outlawry of war, acceptance as the aggressor of the state which begins hostilities without arbitration, and a policy of nonprotection to nationals who should give aid and comfort to the aggressor nation. The first part of his resolution having been accomplished by the Briand-Kellogg treaty, he reintroduced the remainder of his resolution on February 11, 1929, by which time public interest had been aroused to a point which justified newspapers in giving first place to it as news. Section 1 of this resolution reads:

"That whenever the President determines and by proclamation declares that any country has violated the multilateral treaty for the renunciation of war it shall be unlawful, unless otherwise provided by act of Congress or by proclamation of the President, to export to such country arms, munitions, implements of war, or other articles for use in war until the President shall by proclamation declare that such violation no longer continues."

Meanwhile the effect of the pact of Paris was shown also in a resolution introduced in the House by Representative KORELL, supported by a speech which pointed out the inconsistency between this pact and the theory of neutrality. On January 31, 1929, Representative PORTER proposed a resolution continuing the policy of the later Burton resolution, and it was announced in the papers of April 14 that Representative FISH would offer a joint resolution making it the policy of the United States to prohibit the shipment of arms to any nation which is engaged in war with another. It was noted in newspaper comment that Mr. FISH had been the sponsor in the lower House for the Capper resolution, but had decided that that resolution would have no chance in the lower House because of the difficulty of permitting the President to determine the aggressor. Finally an action of collateral interest was taken by Senator BORAH, who proposed an amendment to the cruiser bill calling for a restatement of the laws of maritime neutrality. In his accompanying speech he asserted that if this effort should fail we would build such a Navy as we might regard as necessary for the protection of our commerce.

This list of resolutions offers an impressive total of effort. Unfortunately, they represent two quite different theories, under one or the other of which each of them may be classified. The difference between them seems small; but the choice taken will determine whether the United States will join in with the process of international legislation which we have been discussing, or whether we shall continue to block the efforts of the remainder of the world in that direction. Taking the Capper and Porter resolutions as typical of the two viewpoints, this difference is found: The former abolishes neutrality, by requiring a choice between the just and the unjust cause, and makes its elimination effective by closing the gap which has hitherto rendered impotent the efforts of the League of Nations; the latter continues and expands the law of neutrality, by increasing the impartiality of the neutral, and requiring of him a closer prohibition against aid to either belligerent. It may be said that either represents a sincere effort for peace; and that neither commits the United States to any duties toward or active support of the League of Nations.

The Porter resolution is effective against war in general, not against one state, which, if discriminated against, might adopt a policy of hostility toward us. It is argued that if we sell at all we incur dislike; if we sell to both belligerents, the one able to secure delivery—as the Allies in the past war—accuses us of profiteering and taking advantage of a holy cause; while the one unable to secure delivery—as Germany—accuses us of favoritism. In this connection, it may be observed that the Teutonic allies requested of the United States during the past war exactly such conduct as is prescribed in the Porter resolution, to which we replied that such action would be unneutral, in that it would tend to offset the British Navy, maintained at great expense for just such a contingency. Such a policy was pursued by several states during that war, and the United States has employed it on other occasions, as toward Mexico or China. The Porter resolution is consistent with the historic position of the United States as regards neutrality, and it involves no use of sanctions in connection with the league, against which the United States has taken an unyielding attitude. It would relieve us of all responsibility for determining the right or wrong of a war. Finally, it is argued that to sell to one state and to deny sale to the other would gain the enmity of the latter state—an eventuality which need not seem discouraging in view of the previous argument that we earn the dislike of both when we sell to both.

The Capper resolution would tend to eliminate neutrality, and to adjust the policy of the United States to the theory upon which the rest of the world, through the League of Nations, is working. Since the decision as to the aggressor state is reserved to ourselves, we would in no way be bound to the action of the league. It may be argued that there is a possibility of the United States deciding upon one state as an aggressor, while the League of Nations might choose another, making confusion worse confounded. As to this, it may be observed that each member of the league reserves full liberty to determine for itself the aggressor state. Thus the position of the United States would be the same as that of any other state, whether member of the league or not. It is hardly conceivable that sanctions would be employed against an aggressor state without sufficient agreement among other states to justify the decision as to the aggressor. Certainly such cooperation would offer better opportunity for the prevention of wars than a policy of hands off.

The primary and invincible argument in favor of the Capper resolution is that it, rather than the Porter resolution, is consistent with the pact of Paris. If war is outlawed, how can neutrality be possible? The preamble of the pact asserts that the signatory which violates the pact should be denied its benefits. The Porter resolution would deny to both parties its benefits, regardless of the just cause; and while the refusal to sell to either party would probably work to the disadvantage of the aggressor, in view of the presumably superior ability of league states to insure delivery, it might easily cause embarrassment to the league, or to any state attempting to carry out the terms of the pact of Paris. As a practical matter, if we sell to neither state, the producing country must win. This situation was recognized by the United States, among others, at the Geneva Conference of 1925 concerning traffic in arms. The argument of Senator BORAH, that the small state would suffer under the Capper resolution, must be regarded as ineffective; for, on the contrary, the small state, if it has the just cause, will be given support, whereas it would otherwise have no chance whatever against the more powerful state.

The important issue involved in these resolutions is that of neutrality against cooperative employment of sanctions. The gradual evolution of international agreement leading to the elimination of neutrality we have traced to the point where only the passive assent of the United States is required. The passage of the Capper resolution would, without any obligations on our part toward the league, enable the machinery set up by the community of nations to start into operation. While in theory no sovereign state can be bound without its consent to a change in international law, it has long been evident that when the majority of States are agreed upon a rule that rule will prevail. It is believed that even so powerful a state as the United States, by the very force of conflicting circumstances from which all laws of necessity arise, will be unable long to resist the pressure of the community of nations—not a coercive or even threatening pressure, but merely the pressure of the needs of an interdependent community.

The Capper resolution would climax and complete this remarkable process of international legislation. It should be adopted. Even though the United States chooses still to ask, "Am I my brother's keeper?" she need not subject herself to further criticism for a position which blocks the advance of the rest of the world in agreement toward the enforcement of peace. Acceptance of this resolution would complete the most important international legislation yet known—legislation which not only results logically from the renunciation of war in the pact of Paris but which makes effective that renunciation and gives to the new law against war an effective sanction.

CLYDE EAGLETON.

WASHINGTON SQUARE COLLEGE, NEW YORK UNIVERSITY.

MISSISSIPPI FLOOD CONTROL

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a copy of a letter from the executive secretary of the American Engineering Council and also a statement of Mr. Riker on the Overland Seaway.

There being no objection, the letter and article were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMERICAN ENGINEERING COUNCIL,
Washington, D. C., May 31, 1929.

Hon. LYNN J. FRAZIER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR FRAZIER: Since the Mississippi flood of 1927 American Engineering Council, through an able committee, has carefully studied the entire situation. Reports of this committee were published in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 22. In the last report of the committee, dated May 20, 1929, there are these statements:

"(1) Your committee now reiterates that sufficient study of the engineering and economic phases of flood control on the Mississippi River has not been made to justify the Federal Government in adopting any plan therefore. * * *

"(2) Your committee believes that the intent of Congress and the best interests of the Nation were defeated by the constitution and action of the board created to adjust the differences of the Jadwin and Mississippi River Commission plans, * * *.

"(3) Your committee earnestly recommends the creation by the Federal Government of a board of review, composed of nonpartisan and competent civilian engineers, with authority to develop the best possible solution of the Mississippi flood-control problem."

The report from which the above quotations were taken was formally approved by the administrative board of American Engineering Council, in session in Washington, May 24, 1929.

Senate Resolution 69 has been carefully studied by the members of the executive committee of American Engineering Council, which committee has instructed me to advise you that it is in favor of the establishment of the Senate Mississippi engineering advisory board. This indorsement, however, does not commit the council to any particular plan. We have not indorsed any plan but have strongly urged a most comprehensive and thorough study, by an impartial and competent board, of all possible solutions of this great national engineering problem.

We believe a board constituted as proposed in Senate Resolution 69 would insure such a study, hence we hope the resolution will be favorably acted upon by the Senate during the special session of Congress.

Sincerely yours,

L. W. WALLACE,
Executive Secretary.

THE OVERLAND SEAWAY

GIGANTIC DREDGES MAKE PRACTICABLE THE RIKER OVERLAND SEAWAY WHICH ACTS AS A SPILLWAY FOR THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER

By Carroll Livingston Riker

These dredges make feasible the construction of the huge restraining embankments or levees for the Riker Overland Seaway, which with the proper restraining dams between them will afford overland deep-water navigation through the heart of the United States for the largest seagoing vessels.

The Riker Overland Seaway will make a docile infant of the Mississippi, controlling its floods, making its power available, affording perfect drainage, irrigation, and better climatic and health conditions throughout the valley.

The Riker Overland Seaway, without increasing its level, will swallow and pass any flood waters that have ever flowed down the Mississippi, and will safely handle twice that volume.

The Riker Overland Seaway starting from its terminal in the Gulf of Mexico (which will be the finest harbor in the world both as to depth and approach) will proceed in an almost straight line through the lowest portion of the alluvial valley of the Mississippi River to the junction of the Ohio with it at Cairo—almost the geographical center of the United States.

The Riker Overland Seaway will be 3 miles wide, confined on each side by an embankment or levee of great size and width, divided in two halves laterally by a third levee, making it so that each half can be used for the purpose of navigation while the other half can be used for agricultural purposes. Both halves can be utilized in case of necessity; one-half, however, will pass a 1927 flood at a velocity of less than 7 miles an hour.

In the Riker Overland Seaway there will be maintained at all times a minimum depth of at least 40 feet by means of dams at the necessary points, which will be provided with floodgates. There will be locks for small vessels and other locks having more than twice the length of those of the Panama Canal.

The Overland Seaway will tap the Mississippi River near Red River Landing and take any of its excess waters, as also where it crosses it above Vicksburg, recrosses it below Memphis, and at a point just below Cairo.

There will be no bridges, except for the lift bridges at the locks. However, there will be many crossings provided for railroad and vehicular traffic through subways underneath the Riker Overland Seaway.

The tops of the levees confining the waters of the Riker Overland Seaway will be available for railroad and motor traffic and in many places as dock frontage for loading and unloading all kinds of freight, while the Mississippi River will serve as a siding for the loading and unloading of vessels of all kinds navigating the Riker Overland Seaway.

By way of the Riker Overland Seaway the navigable distance from the Gulf of Mexico to most cities on the Mississippi River will be greatly shortened. As an example, the distance from the Gulf to Memphis and Vicksburg will be reduced one-half. There will be available as dock frontage for these cities the banks of the Mississippi River, when its waters are stabilized, and they will each be situated about 10 miles from the Riker Overland Seaway. Most other cities on the river will have like advantages and facilities.

The great strength of the levees, which the gigantic dredges make practicable, will make the Riker overland seaway the greatest man-made navigable deep waterway in the world, reducing by 50 per cent the water-route distance between the Gulf and Cairo, as compared with the present distance by the river, and largely supplant it for navigation.

A minimum depth of 40 feet over a channel width of a mile and a half can be maintained practically without effort or expense for the entire length of the Riker overland seaway, and when it is used as a spillway for the superfluous waters of the Mississippi and that river is canalized, a similar deep but much narrower channel can easily be maintained in the Mississippi River, while if flood waters are permitted to flow through it as now, all the money and all the appliances in the world could not maintain such a depth.

The Mississippi Valley, being almost the geographical center of the United States, is destined to become its primary center of agriculture, industry, and commerce. This will be largely accomplished by the perfect flood control effected by the Riker overland seaway, through the control and utilization of the Missouri and other tributaries of the Mississippi and by other benefits which the Riker Mississippi spillway project will effect.

As demands have compelled many of our great industries to undertake their production near areas of consumption, such production designed for export will eventually cause their centralization where the best facilities exist for exportation and for obtaining raw material and labor.

The area between the confluence of the Missouri and Ohio Rivers with the Mississippi is the center toward which the natural products of the Mississippi Valley gravitate and from which its manufactured products must largely radiate.

Some of its bulky agricultural and other basic products now seek to find water-borne transportation to foreign markets by the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence, unnavigable during the winter months; by rail to the harbors of our eastern seaports, whose congested facilities preclude the economical terminal handling of such products; or by the longer rail and water route through the Gulf of Mexico.

The Riker overland seaway practically makes the city of Cairo a seaport. It provides slack water for navigation, having a minimum depth of 40 feet over the locks, a width of 1½ miles, almost as straight as an arrow for 570 miles from the junction of the Ohio with the Mississippi River to the Gulf of Mexico, where it has the finest harbor entrance in the world, both as to depth and approach. It will permit the largest ocean vessels—except of the squatting type—to navigate it at full speed. This will bring Cairo within 48 hours of the Gulf of Mexico.

While the navigation features of the Riker overland seaway were dwelt upon in detail by the author in his original bill introduced in Congress in 1914, there was insufficient time when preparing the booklet of March 2, 1929, entitled "Control and Utilization of the Mississippi and the Drainage of its Valley," to properly prepare the Riker overland seaway for presentation. Therefore this supplement describing such navigation which is made practicable through the Riker overland seaway.

The author, with an experience of many years in the designing, construction, alteration, and handling of seagoing steamships, has never been an advocate of ordinary inland navigation for them, even such as the canalization of the Mississippi River will afford, and which its great width and depth will permit; but he is now thoroughly converted to the fact that the Riker overland seaway freighter up to a cargo capacity of 30,000 tons can advantageously navigate this almost straight and bridgeless overland seaway from the Gulf to Cairo.

With its water 40 feet deep over a width of 1½ miles, with locks of about 1,500 feet in length, which will enable such vessels to utilize them without customary danger in slowing down, and with a vessel designed for trans-Atlantic and overland seaway freight traffic, such inland navigation by seagoing vessels becomes unquestionably advantageous.

Such vessels can be built, manned, and insured with their cargo at less than 75 per cent of the costs of the present grain carriers.

This was proved before the Naval Committee of the Senate and their experts, before the Shipping Board and their experts, at the request of that committee. In support of this statement the author refers to the following letter from Senator Tillman, chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, ordering him to select a site upon which were to be built 50 freighters of such size just before the armistice of our Great War:

UNITED STATES SENATE, COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS,
Washington, D. C., March 20, 1918.

Messrs. R. G. PACKARD & SONS,
New York, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Carroll L. Riker has laid before our committee certain plans for a machine-built ship. * * * He has proposed the use of property located at Gowanus Bay for the construction of one, or many such vessels, and he has with him an enlargement of the Government surveys for that locality which I have had made for the use of such an investigation. * * * He goes to New York at the request of the committee, * * * and any aid you may render him will be appreciated by the committee.

Yours sincerely,

B. R. TILLMAN, Chairman.

To show that such harbor as proposed is no dream, reference is made to the letter of General Goethals on page 27 of the aforementioned booklet.

One of our great national problems to-day is that of unemployment, and construction of the Riker overland seaway will require hundreds of millions of dollars in raw and manufactured materials and employ a large amount of skilled and unskilled labor in every part of the country, while ramifications that flow from it will employ as many more.

If the overland seaway be substituted for the Riker Mississippi spillway, as heretofore described in that project, $500,000,000 would cover the additional cost of the larger levees and dams required, and that of the locks, the harbor, and the extra dredging required.

OPEN EXECUTIVE SESSIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the resolution (S. Res. 19) submitted by Mr. JONES, May 6, 1929, to amend paragraph 2 of Rule XXXVIII, relating to proceedings on nominations in executive session.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, the Committee on Rules has recommended the adoption of the resolution as originally introduced, with certain amendments. I would suggest that the amendments be agreed to, and that will put the original resolution in the condition which the committee recommends. Then there will be an amendment offered in the nature of a substitute, and we will have a square issue between the two propositions. I suggest that the amendments proposed by the committee be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCNARY in the chair). Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Washington?

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I object, until some explanation is made.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, if I may explain, the Senator from Washington introduced a resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Rules. His proposal was that all nominations should be considered in open executive session, unless the Senate, in open executive session, by a majority vote, decided that the consideration should proceed in closed executive session.

The committee reversed the process, and amended the resolution as presented by the Senator from Washington, by providing that the beginning of all proceedings on nominations should take place in closed executive session, and if then for any reason the Senate, by a majority vote, taken in closed executive session, should decide to continue the consideration of the nomination with open doors, it should be so considered.

Before the agreement is made on the proposal of the Senator from Washington, I would like to explain the reasons which actuated the committee in making the changes in the resolution as originally proposed by the Senator from Washington.

The committee, by a very great majority, believe it would be much better in every case to begin the consideration of nominations behind closed doors. The argument which actuated the committee was that if a nomination came in and proceedings were begun on it with the doors open, and a full report made of all the proceedings and discussions for printing irrevocably in the RECORD, some Senator who might think there were good reasons for considering the nomination with the doors closed would move that the doors be closed. Promptly another Senator, without question, would want to know why. The Senator making the motion might retort that he would give the information after the doors were closed, but the Senator who had raised the question would say, "No; tell me now," and the whole question would be up for discussion in open session prior to securing the closing of the doors.

Probably every Senator here can remember at least four cases of nominations in which confirmation was finally had but in which irreparable damage would have been done, and unnecessary anguish caused many innocent persons, if the debate, which we recall as having taken place behind closed doors, had been held in the open and recorded in full in the RECORD.

Inasmuch as under both proposals a majority of the Senate could control the matter, the committee, by a large majority, as I have said, deemed it wiser to begin proceedings with the doors closed, and then to open the doors if occasion should arise; and the committee has reported accordingly.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. May I ask the Senator a question, Mr. President?

Mr. MOSES. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Just a question, and I may withdraw any objection to the amendments proposed by the committee. As the rule now is, nominations are considered in secret, closed session of the Senate.

Mr. MOSES. Yes; unless——

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Unless—and by what vote?

Mr. MOSES. Two-thirds vote. That is, the ruling of the Chair has been uniformly to that effect, not always sustained.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. The committee suggests that, taking up the matter in closed session, by a majority vote it may be considered in open session?

Mr. MOSES. That is right.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, the purpose of proceedings in the Senate in closed executive session is easily understood. Within the experience of every Senator present there have been one or two instances in which charges have been made against persons nominated for Federal offices of such a nature that the mere publication of those charges would have reflected upon the character of the nominee, no matter what the result of the Senate's action was, and in the case of treaties full and frank discussion sometimes would result in misunderstandings which might prove of far-reaching importance in our foreign relations.

The last few years have witnessed a notable change. The tendency now is toward the fullest publicity practicable, having due regard for justice to nominees for public offices and for the feelings of other peoples who may be concerned in questions that arise with respect to treaties.

I think the time has come when the rule of the Senate should reverse the burden and impose it upon those who believe there is necessity for secret sessions. The force of this statement is illustrated by the fact that in almost every case where we consider a contested nomination behind closed doors some one disregards either the rule or the spirit of the rule and publishes the proceedings in full.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. While the statement made by the Senator is strictly within the truth, as everyone knows, is it not also true that within the last few years there have been a number of occasions, as referred to by the Senator, where certain items, certain disagreeable matters connected with family history, certain reflections on individuals with whom the nominees were concerned, have never appeared in the papers or any reference been made thereto; in other words, they have been kept secret?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; there have been some instances in which the rule regarding secrecy has been observed, and there have been other instances in which the rule has been disregarded.

Mr. BINGHAM. If the Senator will pardon me further——

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. BINGHAM. Is it not true that those are the very cases we are endeavoring to protect by requiring a motion to take the cases into the open out of secret session?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I do not know what the Senator from Connecticut is endeavoring to do. Before I had stated my position on this subject, he interrupted me with what appeared to be a hostile inquiry. So I leave the Senator from Connecticut to explain what he is trying to do, and I will proceed to explain now what I am trying to do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines further to yield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; I have not declined to yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. Will the Senator permit me to ask him one more question?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. Is the Senator now speaking in favor of his amendment?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I have not mentioned my amendment.

Mr. BINGHAM. There is an amendment on the table proposed by the Senator.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; and I am going to speak about it, but if the Senator will listen to me, he will know that I am simply explaining now the necessity for changing the rule with regard to secrecy in so-called executive sessions of the Senate.

The publication of the proceedings which take place behind closed doors in many instances represents a genuine demand by the public for knowledge as to what their public officers are doing. There are very few cases, in my opinion, in which the rule of secrecy should be invoked. As I said in the beginning, there have been two or three instances within my experience in which it would have been almost criminal to have published some of the charges made here, and some of the evidence that was designed to support those charges.

My proposition is that the time has come when the rule of the Senate should provide for open sessions, not only on nominations, as was suggested by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES], but also on treaties, as was suggested in the amendment which I myself have offered, and which principle I believe is embodied in other amendments.

My amendment was referred to by the Senator from Connecticut. Now, if I may be favored with his attention, I will attempt to explain why I think the rule reported by the Committee on Rules is still unsatisfactory.

My proposal is that all business of the Senate should be transacted in the open unless the Senate, by a majority vote, in closed session, shall determine that a particular nomination, treaty, or other matter shall be considered in closed executive session. As now presented, the amendment makes applicable, as is also done in the amendment proposed by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON], Rule XXXV. That rule provides:

> On a motion made and seconded to close the doors of the Senate, on the discussion of any business which may, in the opinion of a Senator, require secrecy, the Presiding Officer shall direct the galleries to be cleared; and during the discussion of such motion the doors shall remain closed.

Under my proposal, unless some Senator invokes Rule XXXV and states that, in his opinion, there is necessity for secrecy touching the subject matter under consideration, the Senate will proceed in open session to dispose of both nominations and treaties; but if the Senator makes that point and invokes Rule XXXV, then without further debate the Senate proceeds to close its doors and in closed executive session, as the amendment is now presented, hears his reason for asking a secret executive session, and if a majority of the Senators vote to proceed in closed session that action is taken; and if not, the Senate returns to open session.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield.

Mr. JONES. I think I would like to state that I have no pride of authorship in the resolution. What I want to see is something along the lines of the amendments proposed. The suggestion proposed by the Senator from Arkansas is entirely agreeable to me. The suggestion proposed by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] is entirely satisfactory to me also. The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] has proposed an amendment in the nature of a substitute providing in brief that nominations and treaties shall be considered in open executive session unless the committee reporting on any nomination or treaty shall recommend that such nomination or treaty be considered in closed executive session.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I will state to the Senator why I think the arrangement suggested in the amendment to which I am referring is better than that relating to a recommendation by the committee.

Mr. JONES. I just wanted to say that, so far as I am concerned, either of the three propositions is entirely agreeable to me. I thought I would make that statement.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. If a charge against a nominee is made to a Senator and the charge is of such a nature that the Senator does not believe it should be published until investigated, then that Senator, no matter whether a member of the committee or not, could lay it before the Senate in closed executive session and take the judgment of the Senate by majority vote as to whether there should be publicity concerning the matter referred to. In the case of a report by a committee the charge might be made following the committee report or it might be made to a Senator who is not a member of the committee and the committee be not informed respecting it; but that is the only reason that I see why a broader provision than that referred to by the Senator from Washington is desirable.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield.

Mr. MOSES. I understood the Senator from Arkansas to say a few moments ago, in outlining the procedure which would take place under his amendment, that upon the making of a motion to close the doors, that motion would be disposed of without debate. There is no such provision in the amendment that I can discern.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The amendment as now presented applies Rule XXXV.

Mr. MOSES. But Rule XXXV does not provide that it shall be done without debate.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; I think it does.

Mr. JONES. If the Senator will permit me, I will read Rule XXXV:

> On a motion made and seconded to close the doors of the Senate, on the discussion of any business which may, in the opinion of a Senator, require secrecy, the Presiding Officer shall direct the galleries to be cleared; and during the discussion of such motion the doors shall remain closed.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. That is, whenever a Senator makes that motion it is the duty of the Presiding Officer to immediately direct that the galleries be cleared and the doors closed, and then the Senate proceeds in closed session to discuss the motion.

Mr. MOSES. What is the essential difference between the Senator's amendment and that proposed by the committee?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. It is entirely different. The committee's report puts the burden entirely upon those who prefer open sessions. Under this amendment the normal procedure of the Senate will be in open session, both with respect to nominations and treaties, unless some Senator invokes Rule XXXV and causes a vote on the motion to proceed in closed session.

Mr. MOSES. In any event a majority determines it?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes.

Mr. MOSES. And the burden of which the Senator complains is that of making the motion?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; that is true. I want to establish the rule of the Senate to transact this character of business in the open or at least to start out in the open. The Senator from New Hampshire wants to start in closed session. That is the difference primarily between the two amendments.

Mr. MOSES. That is the only difference.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; it is not.

Mr. MOSES. In effect that is the only difference.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; that is not at all the only difference.

Mr. JONES. The real fundamental thing anyhow, the vital thing, is that we should start in open session.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; I have not yet made it clear to the Senator from Washington. My amendment relates to both treaties and nominations. The committee report relates only to nominations. I seek to reverse the rule and make the session open as to both treaties and nominations, and I think we ought to do it.

Mr. JONES. I am in hearty accord with that idea.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I think there is no reason why the same rule that applies to nominations should not apply to treaties. Of course, there is a great difference in the subject matter, but the principle is the same. If there is a reason sound in honest public policy for transacting the business either as to nominations or as to treaties in closed secret session, that reason ought to be responded to, but if there is no such reason, as in the case of most disputed questions over both treaties and nominations, then the business ought to be done in the open.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. I would like to ask the Senator whether I understand him correctly that he is doing nothing to change Rule XXXV?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No. I am applying Rule XXXV. The reason for doing that is to make harmonious the provisions of the new rule for open sessions. When we go into executive session and proceed to the consideration of nominations, unless Rule XXXV is invoked, the Senate proceeds to dispose of nominations in open session. If Rule XXXV is invoked the Senator from Connecticut, for instance, rises and says, "Mr. President, in my view there are reasons why this nomination should be considered in closed executive session," and thereupon, when he makes the motion——

Mr. MOSES. After it has been seconded.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; according to the rule—all we have to do is to follow the rule—the Chair then announces, "The Sergeant at Arms will clear the galleries and close the doors," and then the Senate is in closed session for the purpose of considering the motion that the nomination be determined in closed executive session. That is debated in closed session and the reason for so doing is perfectly clear. If one had to give in open session the reasons for wanting a secret session there would be no occasion, of course, for a secret session.

Mr. BINGHAM. I agree with the Senator entirely. Has the Senator changed his amendment?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Oh, yes; I stated in the beginning that I had modified the amendment so as to provide for determination of the motion to consider nominations in closed session.

Mr. BINGHAM. I was out of the Chamber when the Senator began his statement, and that is the reason probably why I seem somewhat confused about it.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I will ask to have the amendment reported.

Mr. MOSES. As modified.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; as modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas as modified.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

> Hereafter all business in the Senate shall be transacted in open session, unless the Senate in closed session by a majority vote shall determine that a particular nomination, treaty, or other matter shall be considered in closed executive session, in which case all subsequent proceedings with respect to such nomination, treaty, or other matter shall be kept secret: Provided, That the injunction of secrecy as to the whole or any part of proceedings in closed executive session may be removed on motion adopted by a majority vote of the Senate in closed executive session: Provided, That Rule XXXV shall apply to open executive sessions.
>
> Anything in the rules of the Senate inconsistent with the foregoing is hereby repealed.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. This is so perfectly simple after considering the modifications which I have presented that it is easily understood by everyone.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, may I ask a question about it?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. MOSES. I was reading from a printed copy of the amendment, which is very different from the one which has now been read. While I still believe it my duty as chairman of the Committee on Rules to maintain and press as vigorously as I may the report which the committee has instructed me to make, I wish to say that I shall shed no tears if the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas should be adopted.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield.

Mr. FLETCHER. Would the Senator have any objection to providing in the rule, "But in any case the vote for and against confirmations shall not be secret but shall be entered upon the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD"?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; I do not approve of that amendment, and I will tell the Senator why. It is perfectly clear to me that if the evidence upon which a Senator reaches his conclusion as to the merits of the nomination is kept secret, he ought not to be required to divulge the way in which he has voted. In other words, if I vote against the nomination, for instance, some person chosen for the President's Cabinet on the ground that he is shown by evidence submitted to be wholly unfit for the position morally or mentally, then to require me to say that I voted against that confirmation, but that I am estopped from telling why I did so, seems to me unreasonable and unjust.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. A Senator may in secret session state his reasons for his vote, and if the suggestion of the Senator from Florida were incorporated in the rule, his vote would be made public, but the reasons would not be made public.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Exactly. He would be at a disadvantage and he would be on the defensive. Some one would say, "I see that you voted against the nomination of President Coolidge's nominee for Attorney General?" "Yes;

I voted against it, and I had good reasons for doing so, but I can not tell you why I voted against it. The evidence was secret, and I am liable to be expelled from the Senate or destroyed politically if I tell. Something very bad is liable to happen to me if I tell why I voted as I did." It occurs to me that if any part of it is to be made public mandatorially, then in all fairness it all ought to be made public.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. BINGHAM. It is not the intention of the Senator from Arkansas, as I understand, to have a stenographic record of the proceedings in closed session?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; I have not proposed to change the rule in that regard.

Mr. BINGHAM. If that provision were changed, then the making public of the proceedings would bring out all of the things which had been said.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. My substitute provides that the injunction of secrecy as to the whole or any part of the proceedings in closed executive session may be removed on motion adopted by majority vote of the Senate in closed executive session.

Mr. BINGHAM. But the Senator will realize that unless every word is published it might be perfectly possible to remove the injunction of secrecy on the vote and not on the reasons in general, without anyone being forced to disclose some particular thing that should have been kept secret. If the Senator does not change the rule about stenographically reporting the proceedings in closed sessions, then it seems to me the amendment offered by the Senator meets the objection.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I only propose what is in the amendment. Of course, I have not suggested what the Senator has in mind and I would not favor that at present. If the Senator will read my amendment he will see that I only change the rule in this respect. I propose to make Rule XXXV applicable to the consideration of nominations and treaties in open session so as to leave no question in the mind of anyone as to the right of any Senator to invoke the judgment of the Senate on the question as to whether the proceedings should be secret, but that judgment is determined by a majority vote, as I think it should be.

Mr. BINGHAM. If the Senator will bear with me further——

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator's amendment reads, in the copy I have, "amending Rule XXXVIII," which relates only to nominations.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, the Senator is wrong about that. My amendment has no specific reference to any rule; it is a new rule purposing to repeal all rules in conflict with it. I will read it:

> Hereafter all business in the Senate——

Mr. BINGHAM. I ask the Senator to read the preamble to his proposed amendment, which reads:

> Intended to be proposed by Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas to the resolution (S. Res. 19) by Mr. JONES amending Rule XXXVIII.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; it is in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. BINGHAM. Will the Senator then tell us whether his proposal, if adopted, will take the form of a new rule with a new number?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I do not care one iota how it may be numbered.

Mr. JONES. I am only desiring to ascertain the situation.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I do not think it makes the slightest difference.

Mr. BINGHAM. Does the Senator from Arkansas move to strike out Rule XXXVIII?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; I do not. I merely propose to repeal that part of the rule that is in conflict with my amendment.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President——

Mr. MOSES. That will be found in calendar print, Calendar No. 22, which reads:

> Resolved, That paragraph 2 of Rule XXXVIII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, relating to proceedings on nominations in executive session, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

And the motion of the Senator from Arkansas is to substitute for the amendment proposed.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I have framed my amendment so as to repeal everything in other rules which is in conflict with it, and, of course, it is in the nature of a new rule.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, it would give me very great pleasure to vote with the Senator from Arkansas——

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BINGHAM. Although I have been known as one of the most reactionary of all those who have opposed a change in the rules, because I believe that the proposal which the Senator from Arkansas has made, if adopted, would meet the objection which I have in mind. The other proposals give us absolutely the chance to hear in secret the reasons why a given question should be discussed in secret, the only possible objection to it being the excitement of curiosity as to why the nomination of the particular person should be considered in secret.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. JONES. I want to ask the Senator whether, if his motion shall be adopted, yea-and-nay votes would be made public or whether a Senator would be liable to expulsion if he disclosed his vote without an express vote by a majority of the Senate?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I have never believed that a Senator was violating the rules of the Senate when he simply stated how he voted upon any question before the Senate.

Mr. JONES. The Senator from Arkansas knows there has at least been a decided difference of opinion as to that question; and does he not think that we ought to make it perfectly plain?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I have no objection to adding language which will do that, if the Senator thinks it necessary, because I certainly would not in any way want to prevent a Senator from stating, "I voted against this nomination" or "I voted for it." Of course, the vote would not be secret.

Mr. JONES. The Senator knows that there has been a very serious difference of opinion with reference to the rule in regard to a Senator making known his vote on a nomination; and that is one of the propositions I thought we ought to make plain.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I would object to making the publication of a vote mandatory, as some of the amendments propose to do, where the hearing had been had in secret session. I think that would be unjust and even unfair; but I should have no objection to adding such language as will make clear, if it is not already clear, the right of any Senator to make public his own vote.

Mr. JONES. I think the Senator should add such a provision so that hereafter if a Senator desires to make public his vote he does not run the risk of being guilty of a violation of the rules.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Arkansas will so change his amendment, because some of us, including my very learned friend, the distinguished Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN], and other Senators, have held that that may be done, whereas other Senators have held that it may not be done.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Following the proviso——

Mr. MOSES. On page 2, after line 2?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; on page 2, after the proviso as already written there, the additional proviso reads:

> Provided, That Rule XXXV shall apply to open executive sessions: And provided further, That any Senator may make public his vote in closed executive session.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arkansas yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Touching the power of the Senate to expel a Member for disorderly behavior, that power, I think, is involved in the question which we are here to consider to-day. Not now to divert the Senator from his line of thought, but before he finishes I wish he would give me the benefit of his view as to whether the Senate has the power to expel a Member for violating the rule of secrecy, upon the theory that his violation of that rule is disorderly behavior?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I have no doubt about the power, since the Senate, under the Constitution, is the sole judge of the election, qualifications, and returns of its Members, and is authorized to expel its Members; but I do not wish to involve any question of that nature in this discussion. My references to what might happen to a Senator for violating the rule of secrecy were intended to be humorous, although I realize that a case might arise in which a very serious issue could be presented.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator indulge me further?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. If the rule be amended so as to permit a Senator to announce how he voted upon a given question, does that carry with it the right to assign his reasons for so voting?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; perhaps it would not. It probably would carry with it nothing more than the language plainly implies, the right to tell how he voted.

Mr. President, after a study of the subject extending over a great many years, I feel that this is a fair solution of this question. If the Senate wants its proceedings to be closed they can be closed upon the theory that sound public policy so requires. Of course, there is no way in the world to prevent a disregard of the rule in any case, and I think it is idle to discuss that question in this connection.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield with pleasure.

Mr. MOSES. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry as to the present status. My understanding, in the first place, was that unanimous consent was requested to agree to the amendment proposed by the committee, and then that we were to take a vote on whatever substitute might be offered; and my understanding further was that the Senator from Washington was prepared to accept some substitute which was to be offered.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I will now offer my amendment, if the parliamentary situation permits, as perfected at the suggestion of the Senator from Washington, as a substitute for the resolution reported by the committee. I have no objection to perfecting the resolution as reported by the committee by agreeing to the amendments which have been reported.

Mr. MOSES. The members of the committee are by no means meticulous about it. We are seeking results just as is the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I realize that.

Mr. MOSES. In the event we come to that parliamentary situation, may I suggest that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas should be inserted in the resolution as printed after line 4, and should begin "2," so that it will be a substitute for paragraph 2 of Rule XXXVIII, in order that we may have the parliamentary situation perfectly understood.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I have no objection to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment is the first committee amendment to the resolution of the Senator from Washington.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, may I say before further action is taken——

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, we probably can expedite the proceeding by agreeing pro forma to the committee amendments as they are read, and then having the substitute offered.

Mr. JONES. It will take me but a moment to make the statement I desire to make. I think it would be well to agree formally to the amendments proposed by the committee, and then the substitute proposed by the Senator from Arkansas will make a square, straight issue, and one vote can settle the question.

I want to say that while the substitute proposed by the Senator from Arkansas does not go so far as personally I should like to have it go, I appreciate that this is an important matter and involves an important change, and we may not go as far at the start as some of us would like to go. So I am glad to support the substitute proposed by the Senator from Arkansas, and I will be glad to see it adopted.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I am glad to have this opportunity to express my hope that no change in the present status will be made. I am charged here, as every other Senator is charged, with the responsibility of selecting the best men for the positions to which they may be nominated from time to time. I may know certain things about an individual nominee which disqualify him for the office for which he has been chosen, and it is my duty as a public servant to state those facts as I know them.

This [indicating the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD] is a privileged document. What I say about a nominee, if the discussion occurs in open session, goes into that RECORD and stays there forever. I might disclose facts that would disqualify the nominee for the office, and no one would be affected except the particular individual nominated, who would not get the office; but, on the other hand, the facts which I brought to the attention of my colleagues which disqualifies the nominee might not be known to the public. He has been convicted of no crime; he is a citizen; but there are certain circumstances, and perhaps certain characteristics of the individual, which disqualify him. In the open I make a statement setting forth the facts, and that statement is put in this privileged document and forever any newspaper or any individual can use the facts thus brought out against the man. Our forbears who framed the rule regarding executive sessions had certainly an excellent idea in mind. They realized that an applicant for an office requires certain qualifications and that there may be certain disqualifications which reflect on a man in a general way, perhaps, which it would not be desirable to discuss in the open. He has no redress; he is under the Constitution prohibited from defending himself against what was said by a Senator on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. CARAWAY. I had intended to vote for and I think I shall vote for open executive sessions; but the proposal to make public the roll calls, showing how Senators voted, without the opportunity to assign any reason for so voting, leaves the enemies of the nominee, if the vote is against his confirmation, to suggest any reason they may desire for the action taken. If there is to be any publicity, it ought to be entire publicity.

Mr. SMITH. Certainly.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. That is the principle of the amendment which I have offered and which some Senators, including the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BINGHAM], have indicated a willingness to accept.

Mr. CARAWAY. I did not know that was the case. My point is merely that I do not think it is fair to a Senator or to the public merely to publish how a Senator voted. The public ought to know why he voted as he did. If I vote against a certain nominee, the facts ought to be known so that no one else may supply a reason which was not in my mind when I voted as I did. I do not think there should be afforded any opportunity for misrepresentation.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, here is a situation. Every Senator is charged in the performance of his duty with informing his colleagues, so far as he may be advised, as to the character of one who has been nominated for office. If what a Senator says tending to disqualify a nominee is going to be recorded and published in the open, he must remember his duty as an official and his duty to the individual who can not defend himself.

This is not a light matter. This is not a mere matter of our establishing a policy. We have in our hands the character of every individual whose name is sent here in nomination; and you will either be deterred from criticism, and derelict in your duty as a public official, if you have regard for the character and good name of a man and those who are associated with him, or, for some casual appointment, you will damn a man and his connections.

This is not a mere proposed change of our rules. It affects my duty as a public servant, and it affects the character of every nominee who comes here.

If you want to get this matter in the proper shape, amend the Constitution, and remove the immunity of Members of the House and Senate from proceedings charging libel and slander. Then you can have open doors; but now you are in a bombproof, and what you say here can not be questioned in any other place. At present any man can stand on this floor, and, in the discussion of a man for an office, can damn him forever, without recourse on the part of the individual, who perhaps not by his own choice is brought here as a nominee. The President may send down some name; I may suggest a name, and the President may send it in; and then that man is the victim of whoever sees fit even to suggest a charge against him.

I want to put this as a common-sense proposition to my colleagues: Looking at the matter from every standpoint, from the standpoint of the individual whose character is at stake, from the standpoint of our duty to guard the offices of this country, do you not think the provisions for secret executive sessions was a wise provision, and one that involved very little selfishness on our part with regard to our hunger for publicity? Do you not think the public good would be better served by shutting the doors, and treating a man's character frankly and openly behind closed doors, so that the public interests may be guarded, and the man himself may be guarded from everlasting publicity in this immunized RECORD?

This thing was not done just haphazard. This is the quintessence of the experience of those who love the character of men, and who revere the official positions that we are to fill. There is no rime of reason in the argument for open executive sessions. If an individual case arises in which, in the judgment of this body, the public should be acquainted with all the facts, we have the power under the rules to open the doors and let the public know what is said and done. Under the present situation, if the welfare of the public is endangered by a secret session, we can open the doors by a proper majority. Why should we attempt now to do it in all cases, because of this cry for publicity?

I believe as firmly and as profoundly as any man that public affairs should be conducted in the open, so far as everything is concerned, that affects all the public; but these nominations for office affect only the individual and the particular office. If a man dies, his place is filled, which proves that no one man is essential to the welfare of America, so far as its official work is concerned.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I invite the Senator now to enlarge his thought, and address himself to the case of the nomination of a man as ambassador to a foreign country. Should that be discussed in public, or a treaty affecting, it might be, the very existence of our country? Should that be discussed in open session?

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, in reply to my friend from California I want to say that a policy of this body that has lived through all the storms that have beaten against it but still stands is something that we ought to pause and study in all of its relations before we attempt, here and now, to enter a wedge which may, in the first place, lay a man liable to be damned beyond all reason, or, if we have more regard for him than we have for the office to which he aspires, the public is likely to suffer. Then, too, in relation to the foreign members of the international family we have no right to throw open these doors and discuss matters that may be entirely misunderstood, may be improperly reported, and a great amount of conjecture may be dug out of a little fact that may precipitate a discussion that would not reflect credit on us.

Something has been said about the leaks here in the Senate. I have been amazed to hear Senators in a way almost admit that the reports were true. Suppose some newspaper goes out and publishes what it alleges to be what transpired in the Senate. It is only an allegation. It is not official. The public has no right to take it as a fact; and any one of our Members who gives out what is said to have occurred in secret session will have his statement discounted by the public. So, even though you say it did leak out, there is no way in which it can be proved that the report is correct; and I state here, after 20 years of experience, that I have never seen one that was exactly correct.

I have no fears of the thing leaking. If, after mature thought and consideration, a Senator does not appreciate what a secret session means, and why it has existed, and why it gives him the privilege of maintaining efficiency in office, or stating why he thinks a man should be an official—if any Senator thinks that the splendid opportunity of getting the facts without hurting anyone, and the resulting great benefit to our officers, is of such little consequence that he can go out and jeopardize it by making a statement that might destroy it, that is with him.

Mr. President, I believe that we should not even approximate by any modification of this rule and custom of the Senate an open executive session, unless—as has been the case in all the years I have been here and those that went before—unless the matter before the Senate is of such a character that two-thirds of us believe that it would be for the best interests of the country to have open doors. Post-office appointees come up, insignificant individuals, but they are all the world to themselves; and the character and good name of such a man is as precious to him as to the most exalted man in the universe. There are things of which you and I might want to apprise our colleagues, if we happened to be intimately associated with such a nominee and knew the conditions, that we would not feel like visiting upon the individual. There are numerous offices the nominations for which come here, and what Senators say in open executive session goes into the RECORD, and the individual has no redress. Either you will prevent any criticism of a man out of respect for him and the innocent ones who are related to him and let the office suffer, or you will attempt to preserve the office and damn the man and his connections.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. SMITH. I do.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does not any man who submits himself before the people as a candidate for public office have to submit to the possibility of having his character and reputation assailed? And is an appointment any more sacred than the election of a man by the people?

Mr. SMITH. Ah, but when a man is seeking election on the stump he can defend himself; but here, when you damn him, he has no redress.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. In a political campaign he has his action for slander or for libel, but not here.

Mr. SMITH. To be sure. That is just what I said a moment ago.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Carolina further yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. SMITH. Just one minute. I said a moment ago that if you will amend the Constitution of the United States and make us liable to suit for libel and slander, then I will vote for open executive sessions.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I do not think the fact that we are protected in what we say here is any reason for attempting to consider nominations for public office behind closed doors. Besides that, although in a public campaign a man has a right to bring suit for libel or slander, there is not one case out of a million where anybody ever does it, even though he is slandered and libeled. Even in an open executive session, while he could not bring suit for anything a Senator might say about him, he has the avenues of the press to deny any statement made here, which is the course usually pursued.

Mr. SMITH. Precisely; and out on the hustings, where it is "every man for himself," it is taken as all those things are, as a personal controversy; but the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD is an official document.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator realizes that on the hustings so many things are said of an exaggerated character that the public pays no attention to them, believing that they are said largely for political effect; whereas the same things said on the floor of the Senate, out of the excitement of political campaigns, by a Senator of the United States, have a much more serious effect.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, we have arrived now at a point where we are boasting of our development and prosperity. What harm has been done the American public by closed executive sessions?

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. It may not be possible to estimate it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. SMITH. I want to finish this thought.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. SMITH. We have gone on, and from my experience on this floor I am as convinced as I can be of any proposition that more good has resulted to the public in the character of its officials from having closed and secret executive sessions than we could ever hope to get from open executive sessions.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator asked a question just a moment ago. He said, "What harm has come to the public by having closed doors?" Let me call his attention to the fact that during the last administration we had a scandal in the administration of the Department of Justice, in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, in the office of the Alien Property Custodian, and in practically every other office, because of the fact that men were put into office who were not qualified, either mentally or morally, for the positions to which they were appointed. If we had had open executive sessions, I do not believe that some of those men ever would have been confirmed by the Senate of the United States.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, every statement that the Senator makes is an argument in my favor, for the disclosure of the unfitness of these men came after their confirmation. I dare say there was not a single man but who was utterly astounded at the revelation of the want of character in some of the men enumerated by the Senator.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Carolina further yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. SMITH. No; wait a minute. I am going to finish this thought. If the Senator from Montana knew the characters of these men, he had an opportunity to make a statement about them.

Mr. WHEELER. Oh, no; I was not in the Senate at that time.

Mr. SMITH. Very well. Then others who knew them had an opportunity to make a statement about their characters. They had a better opportunity behind closed doors than they would have out in the open.

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator does not think that Lenroot would have been confirmed for the bench if we had had an open session, does he?

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I have no disposition to state anything connected with that confirmation. What I do believe is that his nomination was handled according to the rules of the Senate, and that his confirmation was, in its last analysis, the judgment of a majority on this floor.

Mr. WHEELER. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. The Senator is too good a lawyer to ask me, or to ask anybody, to legislate for exceptions. The best we can do is to legislate for a general rule, and the general rule is that more good can be done for the individual and the public by secret session than by open session. We do have exceptions, where it would be better, perhaps, to have the sessions open, but they are the exceptions. The general rule is that we should have secret executive sessions.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield now?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. Does the Senator believe that we should never have open sessions for the consideration of nominations, or that the only time we should have open sessions is when there is unanimous consent? Is that the Senator's idea?

Mr. SMITH. I do not give a snap of my finger for the method by which we proceed to regulate the matter, but I have stated, and I restate, that whenever there are conditions when the majority really believe that the public interest would be better served and furthered by an open session, I would vote for an open session. We have that power now.

Mr. WHEELER. I did not understand that the Senator felt that any time that a majority of the Senate agreed we should have an open session.

Mr. SMITH. I think whenever a case arises in which we could better serve the public by the consideration of nominations in open session, we have the power now to have an open session. But I do maintain that, with post-office appointees, and the thousands of other appointments which come to us from time to time in executive session, we are charged with the responsibility of stating to our colleagues what we know, if we are in a position to know, of the qualifications or disqualifications of appointees, which is a matter very intimate and one-sided, and in which an appointee has no redress. It is a solemn official action, and I do maintain that we have all the facilities for handling such matters in the best interests of all concerned now without any change of the rule whatever. We have all the facilities now of guarding this wonderful public.

I am just as close to and just as much in love with the welfare of my country as any of those who are interrogating me here, and I think the attitude I am taking in reference to these closed executive sessions proves that I am better qualified to carry out measures for the welfare of the public than they are.

I am not throwing any bouquets at myself even in saying that, because the idea that the public is interested in the nomination of a postmaster for Kalamazoo is absurd. Yet the character of the man nominated for that small office is as dear to him as is the character of the President of the United States to the President, and somebody is going to discuss his character if any question arises. Why should we in the Senate, where the man would have no redress, and could not save himself, jeopardize the character of that man by the absurd practice of considering his nomination in open executive session?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. There are 48 States in the Union, each of which has a State senate, and under the laws of each State certain officers, appointees of the governor, are required to be confirmed by the State senate. Can the Senator advise the Senate how many of those State senates require secret sessions for the confirmation of State officers appointed by the governors?

Mr. SMITH. When did the United States Government start to run itself according to the practices of a State government?

Mr. BARKLEY. In what instance has any harm come to a public officer, appointed by a governor, because the State senate considered his nomination in open session, instead of in secret session?

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, the relationship between that and what I am trying to say is just about the same as the connection between the number of teeth on a handsaw and the price of chickens. We are here representing all the States of the Union. What an individual State government may do does not concern us. It is not the criterion by which we are supposed to run the Federal business.

Mr. BARKLEY. Do not these State officers come more directly in contact with the people, and are they not as much interested in them as they can possibly be interested in a Federal officer considered by the Senate, and to that extent is there not an analogy that is worthy of consideration, in spite of the Senator's handsaw illustration?

Mr. SMITH. Yes; there is an analogy as to almost everything in the universe, but I do not think analogies should influence the legislation of the Federal Government. The State government can run its business to suit itself. We are supposed here to take care of the interests of all the American people, as experience and good judgment direct us.

The public business in reference to the appointment of officers and treaties is of such a character and of such a nature that the public are not in a position to know the details, and could not know. What do they know about the character of a man from some little village down in Virginia? Yet that man's character, as I said a moment ago, is as dear to him as any man's character is to himself. Is the public interested in that? It is only when such incidents occur as that which occurred not long ago, when one man was speaking as to the character and the qualifications of another man. That was an instance when the public should have been taken into the confidence of the Senate.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me to bring up a very important matter regarding the salaries of legislative employees?

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I am sorry to see the Nestor of the Senate, whom I love devotedly, state that he wants to have us take up a matter of importance. I hope he does not mean to insinuate that this matter of secret or open sessions is not a matter of importance.

Mr. WARREN. I do not want to interfere with that. I simply thought the Senator might lend me a little of his time.

Mr. SMITH. I yield to the Senator for that purpose, if the Chair is agreeable to my yielding.

Mr. WARREN. I wish to call up House bill 3966, the so-called salary bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to temporarily laying aside the unfinished business and proceeding to the consideration of the matter to which the Senator from Wyoming has referred?

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, I think we can dispose of this matter of the amendment of the rules very speedily. I know that there are several Senators not now on the floor who are interested in the salary bill, who want to propose amendments to it. I think we should go on with the matter of the amendment of the rules.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, may I state to the Senator that I thought perhaps this was a matter which would not consume any time. Of course, if it is to be a debatable matter I would prefer to proceed. I will finish in a few minutes what I have to say, and I hope that this matter of changing the rules may be thoroughly debated and digested, so that what we do will be in the best interests of the public and of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is objection to the request of the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. WARREN. I understand the Senator from New Hampshire to object to the taking up of the bill at this time, so, of course, I will not press the matter.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, since there has been objection, I want to recapitulate what I tried to place before the Senate. I do not want to charge this body with legislating on serious matters without giving them due thought, but I think I have seen instances of that, and I feel very profoundly about this matter. I want to do my duty as a public servant, and I want to do it in the most efficient way. I believe the freedom in a closed executive session is fundamentally correct in reference to the appointing of men to office and the discussion of their fitness on this floor. I think it is preeminently correct, in our dealings with foreign nations, as to the character of the treaties made, and the discussion leading up to their ratification.

As to the matter which has been so often paraded here, that the proceedings of the executive sessions have leaked out, which there is no way to verify, it is a discredited statement to start with.

The Senator from Arkansas, and those who have busied themselves with a modification of the rules, have talked about publishing a list of Senators, and how they voted. I will vote against that for the reasons already stated. At the time some nomination is presented to the Senate I may be in favor of the confirmation of the appointee. Facts may be brought out which change my mind, and I may vote contrary to the way I felt when the nomination was presented. Having the vote made public without giving any Senator the right to say why he changed is worse than publishing nothing at all.

Mr. President, I do maintain—and with this I close—that it is not right for us to insist that the characters of men shall be discussed here in the open and go into the permanent record of the Congress without any redress on their part.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I do claim that we ought to give this matter more thought than seems to have been given it, and we should investigate the principles at issue.

I shall content myself with voting against any amendment whatever looking toward a modification of the rules as to secret sessions.

I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator stated a moment ago, and I think perhaps he stated it on the spur of the moment, without reflection, that a majority of the Senate could at the present time vote to go into open executive session on a nomination, and that that result would follow. The Senator knows, of course, that the ruling of the Chair has been against that view repeatedly. The Chair has ruled that it takes a two-thirds vote to open the doors in such a case.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I am rather of the opinion that a matter so serious as the filling of public offices and the characters of those who are to fill those offices would justify the requirement of a two-thirds vote.

Mr. WHEELER. Then the Senator does not believe in majority rule in the Senate.

Mr. SMITH. I do not know why the Senator should seek to invoke that against me, when it takes a vote of two-thirds of both Houses of Congress to propose an amendment to the Constitution, and ratification by three-fourths of the States. That can not be accomplished by a majority vote in the Congress. I am not forever wedded to the fetish of a majority if the principles which underly the requiring of a two-thirds vote justify that course. I am not bound to buy a rule and apply it everywhere. I will apply it where it is indicated, and modify it when it is not indicated.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Has the Senator before him a memorandum of the date when this rule was put in force by the Senate?

Mr. SMITH. I do not recall the date.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. It has been in force for a century, has it not?

Mr. SMITH. I think so, and I think anyone reading the history of the matter will find that an attack similar to this has periodically arisen. I have not heard one single convincing argument as to why we should modify the rule.

I am going to content myself, as, of course, I know I must, with this statement: There is a small number of Senators here who either have not thought about it at all or have made up their minds, either after careful study or superficial consideration, how they are going to vote on a matter which is as vital as it possibly can be, not to you and me, perhaps, although it should be in the discharge of our duty, but is vital to every man whose name is sent to the Senate for consideration. If Senators want to have open executive sessions, then let them introduce an amendment to the Constitution and remove the immunization of Senators from responsibility outside for what they say inside the Senate and then we can have the right kind of open executive sessions.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendments. The committee amendments will be stated.

The amendments of the Committee on Rules were, on page 1, line 5, to strike out the word "open" and insert the word "closed"; in line 6, to strike out the words "closed executive" and insert the word "such"; in line 8, to strike out the word "closed" and insert the word "open"; in line 10, to strike out the word "all" and insert the word "no"; on page 2, line 2, to strike out the words "kept secret" and insert the word "disclosed," so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That paragraph 2 of Rule XXXVIII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, relating to proceedings on nominations in executive session, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"2. Nominations shall be considered in closed executive session unless the Senate, in such session, shall by a majority vote determine that any particular nomination shall be considered in open executive session. When nominations are considered in closed executive session no information communicated or remarks made by a Senator, when acting upon nominations, concerning the character or qualifications of the person nominated shall be disclosed. If, however, charges shall be made against a person nominated, the committee may, in its discretion, notify such nominee thereof, but the name of the person making such charges shall not be disclosed. The fact that a nomination has been made, or that it has been confirmed or rejected, shall not be regarded as a secret; and all roll calls in closed executive session, together with a statement of the question upon which such roll calls are had, shall be published in the RECORD."

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, is the question now on the substitute of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON]?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The committee amendments have just been agreed to. The substitute of the Senator from Arkansas has not yet been formally offered.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Hampshire will state it.

Mr. MOSES. Was the proposed amendment of the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] offered in the nature of a substitute?

Mr. JONES. I had one printed, but it is not actually pending. The Senator from Arkansas, I understood, expected to offer his amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Arkansas has been called from the Chamber temporarily, and in his absence I offer his substitute as modified.

Mr. NORRIS. Of course, before that is agreed to, I have an amendment to the substitute. When it is offered I want to be recognized for the purpose of offering my amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment of the Senator from Arkansas will be reported for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] proposes to strike out all of the resolution after the word "follows," and the colon in line 4, page 1, and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

Hereafter all business in the Senate shall be transacted in open session, unless the Senate in closed session by a majority vote shall determine that a particular nomination, treaty, or other matter shall be considered in closed executive session, in which case all subsequent proceedings with respect to said nomination, treaty, or other matter shall be kept secret: Provided, That the injunction of secrecy as to the whole or any part of proceedings in closed executive session may be removed on motion adopted by a majority vote of the Senate in closed executive session: Provided, That Rule XXXV shall apply to open executive sessions: Provided further, That any Senator may make public his vote in closed executive session.

Anything in the rules of the Senate inconsistent with the foregoing is hereby repealed.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, I want to call attention to a typographical error. I think the resolution as read did not have the numeral 2 and the period following the colon as it should, because it is a substitution of new language for paragraph 2 of Rule XXXVIII.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. NORRIS. I desire to offer the following amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska offers an amendment, which will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Nebraska proposes to strike out the last proviso, reading as follows: "Provided further, That any Senator may make public his vote in closed executive session," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

Provided further, That all roll calls in closed executive session, together with a statement of the question upon which such roll calls are had, shall be published in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] to the amendment, in the nature of a substitute, offered by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON].

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I can not accept the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska because a number of Senators, including my own colleague, the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY], have presented arguments in opposition to it. My proposition is: If the reasons for supporting or rejecting a nomination can not be published, the vote ought not to be published unless a majority of the Senate find that it should be published. Under the rule as I have proposed to frame it, if a majority of the Senate desire to remove the injunction of secrecy from the roll call on a nomination or treaty, that may be done by majority vote, but the vote taken in closed executive session will not be automatically published unless a majority of the Senate find and vote that it shall be published. I shall have to ask for a quorum because there are a number of Senators who are interested in this particular phase of the question, including my colleague, the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY], and I shall have to suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, before the Senator suggests the absence of a quorum, may I ask if he will yield for an inquiry?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. EDGE. Does the Senator's proposed substitute permit an individual Senator to announce how he has voted and give the reason publicly therefor?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; to announce how he voted, and, of course, if every individual Senator is approached and tells how he voted the same result is accomplished as by publishing the vote of the Senate. But I point out to the Senator from Nebraska what may have escaped his attention, and that is that under the proposed rule it will be in order to move that the injunction of secrecy be removed from any phase of the proceedings and a majority vote will determine that question. The only point that I urge is if a Senator can not tell his reasons for voting for the ratification of a treaty or the confirmation or rejection of a nomination, his vote on the subject ought not to be published unless a majority of the Senate find that it should be published.

Mr. EDGE. I would like to ask the Senator an additional question. I have not been in the Chamber during all of the debate on the question. Under his proposed substitute will we start with the consideration of pending nominations in open or closed session?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. In open session.

Mr. EDGE. In other words, the motion is made to proceed to the consideration of executive business and we simply remain in open session. Is that the idea?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator does not realize that what the Senator from Arkansas is now doing is applying Rule XXXV.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes. All nominations and treaties shall be considered in open session, unless Rule XXXV is invoked, which may be invoked by any Senator, and the motion then to consider a nomination or treaty in closed session shall be determined by majority vote of the Senate in closed session. The reason for that is simply that if one had to make public the ground upon which he seeks a closed session there would be no occasion for a closed session.

Mr. BINGHAM. Rule XXXV prevents a whimsical Senator making that motion of his own accord. He has to convince at least one other Senator, because it must be seconded.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I want to inquire of the Senator about that immediate point. I can not quite follow the reasoning which actuates the provision that in order to go into closed session on any nomination or treaty the Senate must take the vote on that motion in closed session. Why is there any more reason for having a vote in closed session on whether the session shall be closed or open than for having the nomination voted on in closed session?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. This is the reason: When a Senator moves for a closed session it is presumptively for some reason, and if he has to explain the ground upon which the closed session is justified the whole proceeding might just as well be in open session. The proceeding is started in open session, but if any Senator feels that the question should be decided in closed session and moves that the doors be closed, and his motion is seconded by another Senator, then the doors are closed and his motion is determined in closed session.

Mr. BARKLEY. In that way might not the very object of an open session be defeated?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; I think not. I think a majority in every instance would determine it, and I think unless we do provide that such question shall be determined in closed session we can not have any closed session.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. BRATTON. If the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] should be adopted and the substitute of the Senator from Arkansas as thus amended should be adopted, would each Senator have the right to explain why he voted for or against a certain nomination or in favor of or against a certain treaty?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No. In neither case would he be entitled to give his reasons unless the injunction of secrecy were removed by a majority vote of the Senate.

Mr. BRATTON. Am I to understand that we then would be in the position of having our vote made public and denied the right to state why we voted for or against the nomination or treaty involved?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Not in case the amendment I have offered is agreed to, unless it shall be modified by the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska, which I have just stated I was not in a position to accept for the very reason that the Senator from New Mexico has implied.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, in my judgment, the objection made to the amendment applies to the proposition of the Senator from Arkansas as it already stands. In other words, the only objection made to publishing in the RECORD the vote is that a Senator is deprived of the right to give the reasons for his vote as published in the RECORD; but under the amendment without my proposed amendment, under the substitute offered by the Senator from Arkansas without my amendment, that same objection exists. The proposal of the Senator from Arkansas is that every Senator may tell how he voted, so that if a Senator is asked, "How did you vote on this nomination or this treaty or this other business in executive session?" he may tell how he voted.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. But he does not have to tell.

Mr. NORRIS. No; he does not have to tell.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. But under the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska the vote is made public and the reasons for the vote are kept secret.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; and the same thing is kept secret when the individual tells how he voted. He does not dare tell why he voted for or against a given matter.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. He does not have to tell how he voted. He is not compelled to do that.

Mr. NORRIS. I understand that, but if he tells and gets into difficulty and charges are made against him, he will tell undoubtedly anyway. That is the object of it. He ought to be allowed to tell. But he can not go any farther when he does tell than he can go when the roll call itself is published in the RECORD, and I think not quite as far, because the amendment provides that the roll call shall be published in the RECORD together with a statement of the question upon which the roll call was had.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. As I recall, in answer to my query a moment ago the Senator from Arkansas stated that in addition to a Senator being given the privilege of stating publicly how he voted he also would be given the privilege of stating why he voted.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; that is not correct. He could not tell why he voted except by permission granted by a majority vote of the Senate.

Mr. NORRIS. That is when the vote itself is made public. Under the proposal of the Senator from Arkansas the Senate could order the publication of the vote in the RECORD.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; or any of the proceedings in whole or in part.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; that is very true.

Mr. EDGE. Then under the proposed substitute of the Senator from Arkansas a Senator could simply state "I voted for or against," whatever the issue was, and beyond that he could not go, unless, as the Senator has already explained, the Senate by majority vote permits him to do so.

Mr. NORRIS. Unless a majority vote permits otherwise.

Mr. EDGE. That was my understanding.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, a roll call of the Senate, whether taken in secret or in public, is a part of the official records of public business. The framers of the Constitution went so far as to say that one-fifth of the Members present at any time—merely one-fifth—could compel the taking of the yeas and nays, making a record of how every man voted. The secret method of transacting public business is in reality and effect a means of getting around a plain constitutional provision that on the demand of one-fifth of the Members present the vote on any proposition may be put upon the Journal of the proceedings.

Mr. President, I do not care to take up the time of the Senate in debating the pending proposition. I have myself prepared a substitute which, as I look at the matter, and as I understand the situation, would be much better than the one now proposed. It provides, in substance, that when a nomination or treaty is brought into the Senate from a committee, the committee shall report whether, in its judgment, it ought to be considered in closed executive session or in open session—a committee, having investigated the subject, would have some information as to whether or not there was a question involved which ought to be considered in closed executive session—and if the committee reported in favor of considering the question in closed executive session it should be so considered, with a proviso that at any time during the consideration of the subject in closed executive session the Senate, by a majority vote, could determine to consider the question in open session. I should like that better than the amendment in the nature of a substitute proposed by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON]. I should be glad, in order to reach a conclusion and to prevent extended debate and delay here which might put the matter over the extra session, if possible, to amend the substitute by putting in the provision which I have proposed. If my modification should be included, I should not have any further objection to the amendment to the rule, but should be willing to accept it.

I am not willing, when we are considering public business, that a portion of the official record shall not be made public. A Senator's vote on a roll call is a part of his official life. As to the idea of not being able to explain one's reason for his vote, that will not happen once in a thousand years. If Senators will think of the nominations we have considered in executive session, they will recall that they were discussed from one end of the country to the other by the newspapers before we voted on them. The question has been asked, "How did you vote on the nomination of Warren for Attorney General? How did you vote on the nomination of Roy West? How did you vote on the Lenroot nomination?" Those nominations were discussed all over the country before we ever voted on them. Everybody knew the facts. If we should say, "Why, I voted for Mr. West," or "I voted against Mr. Lenroot," he would not need an opportunity to give his reasons; they would already be known and already have been published. If, as a matter of fact, a Senator's vote on a roll call constitutes his record, then his constituency, indeed the entire country, ought to know what it is; they have a right to know what it is; and to conceal it behind closed doors and in a secret record is not fair either to him or to the country.

Mr. President, there is also another difficulty into which we shall get if we do not publish these records. There will be published all kinds of reports as to how this Senator or that Senator voted. In one end of a State the newspapers will publish a statement that he voted against a certain nominee, and in another locality they will publish a statement that he voted for him, and it will be difficult to know what the truth is. If there be a record made of it, if it is published in the official RECORD, anybody can see it, and everybody will know what the fact is. A Senator will always be able to defend himself on his record.

Therefore, Mr. President, I hope that the words in the substitute of the Senator from Arkansas—

> That any Senator may make public his vote in closed executive session—

may be changed so that the language will read as I have offered the amendment:

> That all roll calls in closed executive sessions shall be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Mr. President, very often a roll call is had on the question of considering some matter in open session. Senators will remember that in the controversies which we have had behind closed doors, perhaps, most of the time was taken up in debating whether or not we should publish this roll call or whether we should publish that roll call. It seems to me that the right way to settle this matter is to publish all the roll calls taken in the Senate.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, it is not my purpose to discuss the pending question upon the broad principles which I believe are involved. I think the minds of Senators are made up that there should be an amendment to the rules of the Senate regarding secret sessions. The question which now confronts us is as to which one of the proposals which have been made shall be accepted by the Senate.

Public sentiment has finally forced the Senate to make a change in the secrecy rule which has existed for so many years. If I had my way about it, Mr. President, I would abolish any and all secret sessions of the Senate. I should like to see them done away with. I take the same ground as that taken by the former distinguished Senator from Connecticut, Mr. Platt, who, in 1886, made such a suggestion in so far as the consideration of nominations was concerned, and proposed an amendment to the rules, and delivered a brilliant speech in favor of its adoption.

Mr. President, the resolution as reported by the Senate Committee on Rules provides that all roll calls shall be made public. In that respect it is a more liberal amendment of the rules than is the substitute proposed by the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON]. It seems perfectly clear to me that the record vote cast by a Senator on the confirmation of nominations to important executive positions is as much a vital part of his public record as is his vote upon any question affecting legislation. In some instances the votes cast upon the question of the confirmation of nominations to important executive offices submitted by the President may have far more reaching results so far as the people of the country are concerned than do the votes cast upon legislative questions. Yet the proposal made by the Senator from Arkansas leaves it with a majority of the Senate or with an individual Senator to say whether or not a Senator shall disclose how he has discharged his responsibility in this Chamber to his constituents and to the country when acting on the important question of nominations to high executive positions.

Mr. President, I have no fear as to where Senators who do not hesitate to make public their position will stand if the substitute proposed by the Senator from Arkansas shall be adopted; but I realize that at least some Senators desire to continue the secrecy rule in order to relieve them of the responsibility of making known to their constituents how they voted upon the important questions which are involved in the confirmation of nominations for important executive positions.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BINGHAM. I hope the Senator from Wisconsin does not mean exactly what he says, because it appears to me that he impugns the motives of his brother Senators when he claims that that is the reason for their attitude on this question, when he knows that they have repeatedly stated in public that they believe it is in the public interest that certain matters be not discussed in public, and not because they desire to conceal from their constituents how they acted or voted in connection with any particular matter.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I have made my statement, and the Senator can make his; and I assume responsibility for my statement. I am firmly convinced that had certain nominations been considered by this body in open session they would not have been confirmed. Likewise, I am firmly convinced that had the nomination of Charles Beecher Warren been considered in secret session it would have been confirmed instead of having been rejected by a vote of one majority. If that impugns the motives of any particular Senator, he may put the coat on if it fits him.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. GLASS. I do not undertake to put on the coat to which the Senator refers at all, but I do undertake to deny with the utmost vehemence the suggestion that all Senators who favor secret executive sessions are cowards and are afraid to permit it to be known how they vote.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That is not what the Senator from Wisconsin stated. The Senator from Wisconsin stated that he had no question in his own mind that certain Senators who desire to cling to the rule of secrecy were motivated by the desire to prevent their constituents from knowing how they voted.

Mr. GLASS. Well, Mr. President, that in a way is an imputation against every Senator who has advocated secret executive sessions. I, for one, have always and consistently advocated secret executive sessions. I have contended that there is not a town council in the United States that does not reserve to itself the right to have such sessions; but any implication drawn from my position to the effect that I have ever been afraid to tell my constituents or anybody else's constituents how I voted on a nomination is totally unwarranted.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the question that concerns the Senate is whether or not there shall be included in the rule regarding secrecy a provision that the roll calls cast in secret session shall be made public. In my judgment, there is a responsibility which Senators must bear concerning the questions upon which they are called upon to vote, either in closed executive or in open session. If there is any reason why a Senator should not have his vote disclosed concerning any nomination considered in executive session, I have not heard it advanced, other than the statement made by the Senator from Arkansas, that, in his opinion, Senators should not be subjected to having roll calls made public unless they were at liberty to state the reasons for their votes, and that therefore the debate upon a nomination should also be made public.

Mr. President, in my judgment, if the rule is amended so as to provide that there shall be published the roll calls upon all important questions, even though those votes be cast in secret session, then every Senator will be relieved from the report or rumor that he has cast a vote in a manner in which he has not cast it. The only way in which Senators can be relieved from the charge that they have voted in a manner contrary to the one in which they cast their vote is to provide for the publication of the official roll call had in executive session.

So far as the net results are concerned, Mr. President, these roll calls, and the manner in which Senators voted, are going to be published in the press, and we know it. We have had two examples of it recently. Prior to that time we have had in every instance a publication of the summary of debate as advanced by Senators in secret session. Those summaries have been accurate. They reveal how the Senators who get up on the floor and discuss nominations have cast their votes. If Senators who are to participate in debate are to have their votes and the position which they have taken published in the public prints, then is it not a fair and a just proposition that every other Senator should have his record and his vote made public, and made public officially, so that there can be no question as to its accuracy?

It seems to me, Mr. President, that it is a step forward in the democratization of the Senate, that it is in keeping with the best traditions of our time, that this rule should provide not only that the Senate shall consider nominations in open executive session, excepting where a majority declare otherwise, but that also, when the majority declares for the consideration of a nomination in secret session, a Senator must take public responsibility for the discharge in this body of his obligation to his constituents.

I hope the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska will be adopted.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I shall detain the Senate but a moment.

I am heartily in favor of the resolution that provides for open executive sessions. I think it places a Senator in a ridiculous attitude to have him go behind closed doors and vote on the confirmation of some appointee, and when he comes out of the executive session and his own constituents ask him if he voted to put this particular man or that in office, he is not permitted to tell those who sent him here how he voted on the question.

Senators, that is not the American way of doing things. That harks back to the star-chamber proceedings of the old days that have been criticized and condemned by every liberty-loving person the world over.

Senators talk to us here about these men who are appointed to positions by the President having their character discussed in the open; and it is said that somebody may assail a man for the purpose of injuring him back home. Mr. President, that is not worth the time that it takes to tell it. The President himself is selected in the open. Every Senator in this body is selected in the open; and do you mean to tell us that the President who appoints the man to office, and the Senate that confirms or rejects him, both selected in the open, must retire behind closed doors and, in secret, select somebody to fill the various offices of the Government, and then that those who select the man are not permitted, when they come out of the secret executive sessions, to tell whether or not they voted to confirm him?

Senators, the people of the States of this Union, when they learn just what is going on here, if they can not get this change made now, will have the change made.

I am not going to detain the Senate. I wanted to say that much. I agree with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE]. I participated in the debate against Mr. Charles B. Warren in open executive session, and I think the Senator is absolutely right. If we had had that nomination considered in executive session he would have been Attorney General of the United States, when he was the very man who organized the Sugar Trust of the United States—the biggest criminal, perhaps, in the Government. He would have been Attorney General, where he could have kept down prosecutions of the biggest criminal in the Nation—a criminal that he himself had brought into existence. That is a good example that the Senator has cited. That shows the good that open executive sessions have done.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I have always favored the practice of the closed executive session. I presume one reason for it is that it has been a part of legislative practice in our country, including the Constitutional Convention, which sat behind closed doors.

I do not favor the closed executive session on the basis that so many Members of the Senate have charged, namely, that you do not want the public to know how you vote. I think that charge could not be seriously made against any Senator; certainly not against many. I do not think a self-respecting Senator would hide behind closed doors in order to shield his vote from the public. That argument has absolutely no effect at all except that it makes one incensed when he hears the charge that those of us who vote for the closed executive session are trying to protect ourselves.

I have always supported the closed executive session upon two bases only. One is that I have great regard for the character of a man, especially for the reputation of a man. You can not change his character much, but you can modify his reputation. I think about all we have is the good name and the good wishes of those for whom we have respect; and I hesitate very much to vote to give an opportunity for irresponsible attacks in the open upon the name of public men.

It may be that it is a foolish position for me to take that the reputation of a man amounts to anything.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. FESS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senator has just taken great umbrage at my statement that I believed that certain Senators favored secret sessions in order to protect themselves from revealing to their constituents how they voted. It seems to me that the argument which the Senator is now making in favor of secret sessions is an invitation to some Senators—I do not know to whom he refers—but he has just stated that he does not want open sessions for fear some Senator is going to get up here and make irresponsible statements attacking the character of men. I do not know any Senator in this body who would be guilty of any such practice.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, I had no reference to what the Senator from Wisconsin said in his address. I was referring to the general statement that those of us who believe in the secret executive session were advocating it because we did not want the public to know how we voted. I repeat that that is not significant enough to pay any attention to at all. I do not think there is any Senator who would put his vote upon that basis.

On the other hand, the practice of attempting to protect a candidate from attacks on the part of Senators seems not to have been successful. In other words, we have the closed session; discussions are heard, and then the newspapers usually print what has been said. We do not know how it gets out. I am sure I do not know, and yet this enterprising group of people have some method by which they pretty accurately delineate what takes place in closed session. So that the argument of protecting a man's name by secret sessions has not the weight that it would have if the secret sessions could be made effective.

The other position I have always taken is that in secret session we would be freer to go into all the items of interest in cases of appointments and of treaties. I am of the firm conviction that we ought not to discuss every treaty in open session. I should be afraid that utterances might be made which might be very embarrassing. Different Senators look upon the same thing in different ways. I might make a statement about some country that would shock another Senator. I might not think at the time that it was shocking, but it might involve something that ought not to have been said in the open.

I am in favor of the secret session only to protect the character and reputation of men and to prevent the involution of our relationship with other countries. If a change is to be made I think the change suggested by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] is the better suggestion. If the sessions are to be open generally but are to be closed when a majority vote of the Senate so decides, that leaves it to the Senate to say when the doors shall be closed. I would not vote for the Senator's resolution as it is now printed, under which the discussion of whether or not the session is to be closed is to be had in open session. The question as to whether a treaty should be discussed in closed or open session surely ought to be considered in secret session rather than in open session.

Mr. President, I am not going to detain the Senate longer than simply to state that I do not care a whit about the closed session for the protection of individual Members of the Senate, and if we can not, under the rule providing for closed sessions, give greater protection to the good name of a nominee than we can in open session, I do not care for the change as to that, but it would seem to me that we ought to keep the way open so as to go into closed session whenever the sense of the Senate would so decree. I am assuming that we are going to change the rule, but still maintain the right to have a closed session when the Senate by a majority vote so decides.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1548) extending the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the White River at or near Newport, Ark.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bill and concurrent resolution, each with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

S. 669. An act to alter and amend an act entitled "An act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Lake Superior to Puget Sound, on the Pacific coast, by the northern route," approved July 2, 1864, and to alter and amend a joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution authorizing the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. to issue its bonds for the construction of its road and to secure the same by mortgage, and for other purposes," approved May 31, 1870; to declare forfeited to the United States certain claimed rights asserted by the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. or the Northern Pacific Railway Co.; to direct the institution and prosecution of proceedings looking to the adjustment of the grant, and for other purposes; and

S. Con. Res. 16. Concurrent resolution for an adjournment of the Senate from June 19 to August 19, 1929.

NORTHERN PACIFIC LAND GRANT

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 669) to alter and amend an act entitled "An act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Lake Superior to Puget Sound, on the Pacific coast, by the northern route," approved July 2, 1864, and to alter and amend a joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution authorizing the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. to issue its bonds for the construction of its road and to secure the same by mortgage, and for other purposes," approved May 31, 1870; to declare forfeited to the United States certain claimed rights asserted by the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. or the Northern Pacific Railway Co.; to direct the institution and prosecution of proceedings looking to the adjustment of the grant, and for other purposes, which was, on page 5, line 4, to strike out the word "of" and insert "or."

Mr. JONES. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

SUMMER ADJOURNMENT

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 16) for an adjournment of the Senate from June 19 to August 19, 1929, which was, to strike out all after the resolving clause and insert:

That when the two Houses adjourn on Wednesday, June 19, 1929, the Senate shall stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian on Monday, August 19, 1929, and that the House shall stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian Monday, September 23, 1929.

Mr. WATSON. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

Mr. HOWELL. I object to its consideration at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is a privileged matter. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Indiana.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENTS TO TARIFF BILL

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I desire to present for reference to the Finance Committee an amendment which I shall propose to the tariff bill now under consideration.

Let me say, in a word, in presenting the proposed amendment, that I am not undertaking to say that stock gambling, or, in more polite terms, stock "speculation," is essentially wicked or in any moral sense wrong. I am simply undertaking in this proposed amendment to distinguish, if I may, by the definition incorporated in the bill, between what some people regard as legitimate "investments" on stock exchanges and what others regard as pure gambling in stocks.

The distinction has often been attempted, and in the drafting of this amendment I may have had no better luck at it than those who have preceded me and failed. I am simply trying to reflect the view in this amendment that, whether right or wrong, moral or immoral, when stock gambling or stock speculation reaches that stupendous volume which it did reach recently, of $6,000,000,000, it constitutes an actual economic menace to the legitimate business of the country, and, if possible, something should be done to abate the menace. If this may not effectively be done, we should, at the very least, collect a considerable revenue from those who persist in this process of making quick fortunes at the expense of simple people who are allured into the market.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BROOKHART. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by me to House bill 2667, the tariff bill. It is a companion amendment to the one offered by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I move that the amendment be referred to the Committee on Finance and printed.

The motion was agreed to.

KILLING AT INTERNATIONAL FALLS, MINN.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President, I should like to have read into the RECORD and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary a resolution unanimously adopted by the Board of Aldermen of International Falls, Minn., and signed by the mayor and city clerk of International Falls.

There being no objection, the memorial was read and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, as follows:

JUNE 11, 1929.

Alderman Somers presented the following resolution and moved its adoption:

"Whereas the Government of the United States has stationed at International Falls, Minn., a large number of patrolmen, including men in uniform and plain clothes men who patrol all the roads leading into and out of International Falls and which officers have for a considerable time last past made it a practice of stopping persons driving in automobiles into or out of International Falls, either day or night, and on many occasions have stopped the automobiles of persons out driving with their families and have searched the automobiles of respectable, law-abiding people at all hours of the day or night without proper search warrant or other process and have in this and other ways humiliated respectable, law-abiding citizens and have subjected them to improper and to unnecessary interference with their rights and liberties; that under the said practice farmers coming to market or returning home with their families and persons out driving with their wives and children have been subjected to these indignities; that many of these officers so stationed in the city of International Falls are heavily armed at all times, and on several occasions have shot at cars driven by law-abiding citizens who did not have sufficient warning from the said officers to bring their cars to a stop in time, and that many of the said patrolmen have on these and other occasions manifested a lack of judgment in the use of the said guns and firearms; that the said practice of the said patrolmen and governmental officials have brought about a condition extremely humiliating to the people of International Falls and to the farmers living in the vicinity thereof, and have rendered it unsafe and dangerous for persons to use their automobiles on the said highways for the benefit of themselves and their wives and children; that during the summer months, many tourists spend their vacations in the vicinity of International Falls and use automobiles largely for means of travel, and that these tourists are unacquainted with the practice of being stopped upon the highways by persons unknown to them at any hour of the day or night and these practices, if continued, will result in the loss of more lives and the practice of stopping people and searching their automobiles while they are in the exercise of their just rights is extremely distasteful and objectionable to residents and tourists; and

"Whereas the aforementioned practice on the part of the said patrolmen has culminated in a tragedy which has aroused the entire community, when, on the night of June 8, 1929, one of the said patrolmen fired several shots into the rear of an automobile driven by Henry Wirkkula while returning to his home with his wife and two small children, said shots instantly killing the said Henry Wirkkula, and causing his car to run into the ditch, his said two children lying asleep in the back seat of the said car and his wife sitting alongside of him in the front seat miraculously escaping death and narrowly missing being killed by the bullets fired from a riot gun or sawed-off shotgun; that said Henry Wirkkula and his said family at the time of the said shooting were merely returning to their home and were not engaged in the violation of any laws of the United States; that the said tragedy has aroused the sympathy of the entire community for the stricken family and has made the aforementioned practice no longer tolerable in the said community: Be it therefore

"Resolved by the City Council of the City of International Falls, in regular meeting assembled, That it is the sense of the said council that the practice of patroling the highways in the vicinity of International Falls with patrolmen armed with guns which they use without proper provocation and the practice of indiscriminately stopping automobiles on the highways and searching them can no longer be tolerated, and that unless something is done to change the present conditions more innocent lives will be taken and the use of the highways by innocent residents, farmers, and tourists will be unsafe and dangerous, and that it is the sentiment of the council that a protest against the practice be filed with the proper officials; be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to United States Senators SHIPSTEAD and SCHALL and to Congressman PITTINGER, requesting them to use their efforts and influence in remedying this situation, and that they be called upon to use their influence to properly safeguard the lives and rights of people in this community or visiting the same."

Which resolution was seconded by Alderman Lang, and upon roll call was, by the president, declared to have passed unanimously.

OSCAR SANDSTROM, Mayor.
GEO. JOHNSTON City Clerk.

TARIFF ON FOREIGN CRUDE AND REFINED OIL

Mr. PINE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an excellent address by Hon. Wirt Franklin delivered at the Oil Conservation Conference, called by President Hoover at Colorado Springs, Colo.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the conference, I represent, and speak in behalf of, the small operators of southern Oklahoma, engaged in the production of oil, sometimes erroneously referred to as independent producers, a misnomer, because there is no class engaged in productive enterprise more dependent than the small oil producer; dependent because he must of necessity drill his wells to prevent his land from drainage and sell his oil at the posted price, whatever it may be at the time, whether remunerative or not, to the major purchasing agencies.

At the outset I desire to correct the mistaken idea in the minds of many members of this conference that there now exists an overproduction of oil in Oklahoma, for, as a matter of fact, Oklahoma is now producing much less oil than the market demand for oil in that State. I am reliably informed, no longer ago than yesterday, by a high official of a major purchasing company, that more than 50,000 barrels per day is being taken out of storage to supply that demand and every oil field in the State is producing at the present time at its maximum capacity.

We are met to confer and discuss a compact or agreement among the States, as I understand it, looking toward the conservation of crude oil. In that connection it is pertinent to inquire what is conservation. The question of what conservation consists of varies with the individual, but is generally understood to be the prevention of waste, actual and economic, and the prevention of the wasteful utilization of oil. As President Coolidge has well said, a low price for crude oil tends to encourage the uneconomic and wasteful use thereof. Therefore the consideration of this problem can not be divorced from a consideration of the price at which crude oil is sold.

How then may conservation of crude oil be accomplished? It must be admitted that a proper utilization of the oil produced can not be considered as waste, and that we are entitled to produce as much oil as market demands require; and when it appears, from time to time, that the production of oil in any given area exceeds the reasonable market demand therefor the production thereof should be controlled. In my opinion, by far the best method of controlling production is by securing an agreement among operators in any given pool, immediately after discovery of oil, for an orderly development of the pool by the proper spacing of wells over the supposed geological structure in such a manner as to produce the oil from that pool over a long period of time, instead of as in the past allowing a wild orgy of drilling to be brought about, bringing the oil from that pool to the surface in a few months, thus bringing chaos to the industry, the most glaring example of which in Oklahoma may be found in the comparatively recent development of the greater Seminole area. If orderly development can not thus be had by cooperative agreement, the next best method is by proration of production from flush fields, reducing the amount of oil allowed to be taken from the ground to the reasonable market demand within the given area.

In this connection I would call attention to the oil and gas conservation laws of the State of Oklahoma, which were passed in the year 1915, shortly after the producing industry had been thrown into chaos and confusion because of great flush production at the same time from the Cushing and Healdton fields. I would remind this conference that the original conservationists in the oil industry were the small producers of Oklahoma. The two laws in question were written and presented to the Legislature of Oklahoma by representatives of the Southern Oklahoma Oil and Gas Association (formerly called the Ardmore Producers Association), the Okmulgee District Oil and Gas Association, and the Bartlesville-Nowata Oil and Gas Association. At the time these laws were presented to the legislature they met with the concerted and determined opposition of the major pipe line and purchasing companies, the very interests which during the past two years have claimed to be the originators of conservation.

Jurisdiction under the Oklahoma law, as is well known, is conferred upon the corporation commission of that State to enforce and carry out the provisions of the oil and gas conservation laws, and by rules and regulations, which may be adopted by the corporation commission, it is now possible, if the law is enforced, to control the production of oil in Oklahoma in such manner as to prevent the bringing to the surface of more oil than the reasonable market demands therefor.

The representatives of the Southern Oklahoma Oil and Gas Association have come to this conference in a spirit of cooperation with a desire to lend their support and influence to any reasonable method which may be worked out looking to the production of oil in a sane, orderly manner, under conditions that will not constitute waste, actual or economic, but any plan agreed upon must contain safeguards which will make it impossible for tyranny, oppression, and confiscation to be practiced. And, Mr. Chairman, I give you warning that no compact should be submitted to the Legislature of Oklahoma for adoption by that State which does not contain those safeguards, because every man, woman, and child in Oklahoma is interested to some extent in, and their prosperity and well being depends upon, the production of oil. In that State are literally thousands of investors in lands, royalties, and producing leases, and their influence is such that no compact can be adopted there which does not properly safeguard and protect their interests.

In view of what has been said in this conference by preceding speakers we are fearful that in the name of conservation a compact may be initiated and presented for adoption vesting such absolute authority in a commission, which might fall under the domination of the major factors of the industry, and which commission, once established, could restrict domestic production to any extent it might desire, on the ground that it might be necessary, as a matter of national defense or otherwise, to save our own oil for future use, allowing the domestic demand to be satisfied and filled by the importation of foreign oil.

If this condition should be brought about it would mean the annihilation and destruction of the small producer of crude oil. His property would become valueless and he would be compelled to sell his property at any price that it might bring in a market thus demoralized. Therefore it will be seen by the conference that any plan which may be submitted must contain such checks and safeguards as to prevent the possibility of the occurrence of such a catastrophe to the small operator as I have outlined.

I wish to confirm and approve what Mr. Pat Malloy has said to this conference as chairman of the delegation appointed by the Governor of Oklahoma, and more especially his reference to a restriction upon the importation of crude oil. I wish to go farther and to say that the very first measure of conservation which should be adopted is the restriction of the importation of oil by the adoption by Congress of a tariff on crude oil and the refined products thereof of not less than 50 cents nor more than $1 per barrel, leaving it discretionary with the President, upon recommendation of the Tariff Commission, as to what such tariff should be from time to time, depending upon the needs for oil in the domestic market of the United States, so that whenever the domestic production has declined to a point where foreign oil is needed the tariff could be lowered to 50 cents per barrel, allowing foreign oil to come in until such time as the domestic production might again equal the domestic demand therefor, at which time the tariff could be increased by Executive order as the facts at the time would justify, and in offering this suggestion I offer it as a conservation measure. I insist that it is germane to the discussion of conservation and that it ought to be the first measure adopted in any conservation program. I cite for your consideration in this connection the fact that yesterday Mr. Requa, the honorable chairman of this conference, stated that there are now 250,000 wells in the United States producing an average of 1 barrel per day. It is certain that these wells have been operated for the last three years at a loss, but nevertheless operated by the owners in the hope that the overproduction menace might soon cease and these wells again become profitable.

How much longer can the owners of these wells continue to operate them at a loss? Certainly not indefinitely. Still it is admitted that these small wells are the backbone of the oil industry, its very lifeblood. Their abandonment because they are unprofitable would be the most serious blow to conservation which could be imagined. Once abandoned, it would never be profitable in the future to again drill wells to the same sand from which they are producing, and this vast amount of production would be lost forever. A tariff of $1 a barrel on oil will save these wells for their owners and save 250,000 barrels of oil per day for the domestic consumers in the United States.

But opponents of a tariff on oil will say that it can not be enacted into law, because the consumer, the buyer of gasoline, will be adversely affected. I would say in answer to that that the consumer of gasoline has not received the benefit of the low price of crude oil in the last three years. Have you noticed any material difference in the price of gasoline at the filling station, and do you not now pay 35 cents a quart for lubricating oil for your engine, the same as you have always paid? The price of gasoline to the consumer has not fluctuated in proportion to the price of crude oil, but the burden has fallen upon fuel oil, the price of which has been reduced in the mid-continent area to as low as 50 cents per barrel, and this cheap fuel oil, coming into competition with coal, has thrown that great industry out of joint and thousands upon thousands of miners out of employment. The beneficiaries of this cheap fuel oil have been the manufacturing industries of the East and of New England, which are very loud in their protests against a tariff on oil, but which themselves depend for their existence upon a high protective tariff, without which they could not exist at all. These industries are anxious to continue the present policy of the free importation of low-grade oil suitable for fuel and, as I have said before, the consumer of gasoline does not receive the benefit thereof, but nevertheless the loss is passed on to the producer of crude in the shape of a low price for crude oil. The major companies have not suffered to any appreciable extent because of the low price for crude oil, but on the other hand the executives of some of these companies have stated in some of their public statements sent to stockholders, said statements being published in the Wall Street Journal and other financial papers, that their great and unusual profits for the year 1928 had been occasioned by the fact that they had been able to buy cheap crude oil in Oklahoma and Texas, and at the same time had marketed the refined products, with the exception of fuel oil, at about the same price as before.

I believe that American markets for crude oil should be kept for American producers of crude oil. There is no argument against a tariff on crude oil that can not be made against a tariff on anything else. For instance, why should we not conserve iron? It is indispensable to national defense. Why not remove the tariff on iron and steel products, allowing their free importation from England, France, and Germany, and save our own iron ore safe in the mines for that future time when it may be needed? If this were done, the oil producers of the United States could buy their casing, machinery, engines, and other oil-well supplies at a much less price, and at the same time wouldn't this be a fine way to collect our war debts from England, France, and Germany? They could soon pay us the $10,000,000,000 now owing by exporting to us all of our needs in steel products. Why not in truth save all of our natural resources, the products of our mines, lead and zinc and all the rest, and import from foreign countries our requirements thereof? This would be as reasonable a course to pursue as to save our crude oil in the ground while we import from foreign countries to supply domestic markets. I would like to refer at this point to the able remarks made by ex-Governor Brooks, of Wyoming, on the subject of conservation. He has forcibly called the attention of this conference to a conservation meeting of 25 years ago and the results thereof. If we should now reserve our oil in the ground, refusing to use it for the necessities of to-day, the future development of the use of electricity or some other form of power as yet undiscovered may take the place of the use of gasoline for power and make our vast reserves absolutely worthless and useless to mankind. Let us use our oil while we have it, while we need it, but not wastefully use it.

Again, the argument is made against a tariff on oil that it can not be adopted, because oil is a vital necessity to the entire population of the United States. Still we have a tariff on wheat, sugar, and beef, and many other articles of like importance, and what is of more vital necessity to every man, woman, and child in the United States than bread and meat?

If then the advocates of a compact among the States for the conservation of crude oil are in good faith, let them without further delay agree upon the conservation of oil from the 250,000 wells, which average only 1 barrel per day, by joining us in the advocacy of a tariff on crude oil and the refined products thereof. This one thing adopted would do more to conserve oil than all the efforts put forth in the last three years in all the fields of the United States.

I can not refrain from commenting on the bugaboo of the exhaustion of our oil resources, which has again been brought before us. Again the prediction has been made by gentlemen of high authority and standing that the next decade might see the exhaustion of our reserves of oil to such an extent as to impair our national safety. I have heard this cry ever since I can remember. For some years I heard it so often that I almost believed it, but I join Governor Erickson, of Montana, in stating that while the gentlemen who have put forth this idea may be in good faith, nevertheless all past experience strongly refutes the same. Our stores of oil in the ground in the States now producing, I venture to predict, will furnish sufficient oil to meet all requirements for an indefinite period to come. It is true that deeper drilling will have to be resorted to. It will cost more to bring the oil to the surface, but, in my opinion, the surface has only been scratched, and more oil will be produced in Oklahoma and other States of large production, by deeper drilling in the future, than has been produced in the past, and again, we are continually finding new pools. Our State geologist in Oklahoma in 1912 in a State report said that no oil would be found in commercial quantities south of the Arbuckle Mountains. In the very next year the great Healdton field was discovered, and during most of the time since 1913 the production of the area in which no commercial oil could be found has averaged more than 50,000 barrels per day. Then again, the petroleum geologists have heretofore pointed out that the Oklahoma City area lay in a very deep synclinal basin, that the red beds would be so thick that no drilling apparatus discovered by the science and skill of man could ever penetrate deep enough into the ground to pass through the red beds; nevertheless, in the face of this prediction, J. I. Cromwell, who sits in this conference, and I have for the past three years been carrying on exploration work at Oklahoma City, and there has been uncovered there another major pool which, while over 6,000 feet deep, is nevertheless another great reserve of oil added to that which we had before.

I can not close without extending to the producers of the Rocky Mountain States the sympathy of the producers of southern Oklahoma in the predicament in which they find themselves by reason of the blanket cancellation of permits which has been so forcibly presented to the conference by the speakers representing Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, and New Mexico. It appears to me that this blanket cancellation of permits in the Rocky Mountain area is a most convincing argument against the adoption of a compact among the States creating a commission with full authority to control the business of producing oil.

We hope that this action may be reconsidered and relief granted at least to the extent of considering each permit on its own merits. While this is a matter which does not concern the operators of Oklahoma in a personal or financial way, at the same time they can not refrain from extending their sympathy and support to the operators of the Rocky Mountain States whom we believe have been unjustly treated in this instance.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I take up the next subject, which I desire to discuss with a great deal of hesitancy; nevertheless, while I am on this platform I consider it to be my duty as an American citizen to bring the matter before the conference.

I would call the attention of the conference to a specific passage from the address of our honorable chairman, given to the conference at the opening of the meeting yesterday, and respectfully, but nevertheless certainly, cite it as a method of how not to secure the cooperation of the several branches of the industry in securing the ratification of a compact among the States. From a copy of said address I quote: "It has been cynically pointed out upon many occasions since the armistice that the petroleum industry in peace time can not be judged by the petroleum industry in time of war, and that my ideas of industrial self-government are fantastic and Utopian day dreams. I shall be convinced only after actual proof has shown me that I am wrong, and I might add that if and when Government has made it possible for the industry to cooperate and conserve, and that cooperation and conservation is not forthcoming, then, acting in behalf of national need, no one will be more insistent than myself in urging rigid Government coercive regulation. Failure upon the part of the industry to grasp its opportunity would merit just that alternative program." How do you like that? I don't like it! This language, it seems to me, can not be construed as other than a threat intended at the present time to coerce the members of this conference into supporting a compact among the States. Had our delegation come to this conference resolved to support a compact of the nature outlined, this statement would have done much to change our minds in that regard.

As citizens of the United States, possessed of all those attributes of liberty of action, and feeling that our land owned in fee is our own and that it can not be taken away from us without due process of law, the attempt to use coercion, thereby to sway our judgment, will necessarily have the opposite effect to that which it appears was intended. Perhaps I should not give expression to these thoughts, but many of the members of the conference have the same thoughts, I know, and I can not but believe that now is the time when frankness and candor should be displayed. I can not believe that our great and beloved President Hoover would countenance or approve a threat of this character addressed to a conference called together by his request to give dispassionate and conscientious study to a question affecting such a great basic industry.

As further expressing the views of the producers of crude oil of southern Oklahoma, in closing I would like to read a resolution adopted at a meeting of the producers of southern Oklahoma on the 3d day of June, 1929, and which is as follows:

"Whereas the Hon. Herbert Hoover has called a conference of the oil producers to be held at Colorado Springs, Colo., June 10, 1929, to discuss conservation and means of preventing waste and overproduction of crude oil; and

"Whereas we, the producers, landowners, and refiners of southern Oklahoma, are met to appoint, as delegates to that conference, Wirt Franklin, Ardmore, Okla.; H. B. Fell, Ardmore, Okla.; B. A. La Salle, Ada, Okla.; Frank Cowden, Duncan, Okla.; and Frank Fleet, Ada, Okla.: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That our delegates be requested to present and support at that meeting our belief that the paramount remedy for the present depression in the oil business is a tariff on foreign crude and foreign refined products. It is now possible, owing to the tremendous production of the wells obtained in the Mexican and South American countries, coupled with the cheapness of the labor and cheapness of water transportation, to deliver foreign crude at Bayonne, N. J., and other American seaports cheaper than our American crude can be piped out from the interior, thereby causing tremendous losses both to the producers and to the revenue of the various States in which they live. At the present time thousands upon thousands of small wells are being produced at a loss under the present price of crude, and these wells must soon be abandoned unless a tariff is put on foreign crude. This will cause a tremendous waste of our natural resources, since once these wells are abandoned it will never be profitable to drill a well to those depleted sands. Many thousands of proven locations are not now being drilled by virtue of the low prices now obtainable, and the consequent ultimate loss of recovery when these wells are eventually drilled will be tremendous because of depleted rock pressure and drainage of the fields; and

"Whereas there are 18 States of the Union which may be called oil-producing States: Therefore, be it further

"Resolved, That we desire it called to the attention of the conference that there is no other industry operating in as many States that does not receive protection from foreign competition. The business depression in these 18 States, due to the lack of tariff, inevitably reflects itself unfavorably on the business conditions of the Nation; and

"Whereas President Hoover has stated that one of the main objects of his administration will be the elimination of unemployment: Therefore, be it further

"Resolved, That we desire it called to the attention of the conference that many thousands of our American citizens who are drillers, roustabouts, pumpers, etc., are now out of employment because of this cheap South American and Mexican crude displacing our own oil in the American markets. We wish the high standard of American living to be maintained and to prevent the wastage of these small wells; therefore it is imperative that the oil produced be accorded the same degree of protection that the cattle, sugar, wheat, and other producers and manufacturers are afforded against cheap or foreign competition; and

"Whereas when new fields are brought in there has been indiscriminate and unnecessarily rapid development: Therefore, be it further

"Resolved, That we suggest that our representatives favor some plan to control the drilling up of a field immediately after discovery, both by the rate of drilling and the spacing of wells. It is our suggestion that a program in each case be worked out that is favored by 80 per cent of acreage in the field. We are unalterably opposed to any form of compulsory unit development, believing that the rights of the small producer must be protected. We do not want, however, any form of Federal control in this or any other connection. America has been made great by the freedom of action of the individual, and we are in favor of compulsory regulation of the rate of drilling and the spacing of wells, but not in favor of unit development, which is virtual confiscation of the individual producer's property; and

"Whereas one of the present causes of overproduction has been unnecessary wildcatting in times of overproduction: Therefore be it further

"Resolved, That we suggest that our representatives make an effort to include restricting of unnecessary wildcatting. There must be safeguards, however, when conditions make it necessary to drill before the expiration of leases. And further, the ban on wildcatting should only be used when there is an overproduction of crude; and

"Whereas proration has been used in the past to hold down production: Therefore be it further

"Resolved, That we recommend and request that in the future proration be confined to these flush fields which have caused the overproduction. We do not believe it fair or equitable to penalize the older producing fields by proration under any circumstances; and

"Whereas there has been great eagerness on the part of the pipe-line companies to construct pipe lines to connect to newly discovered fields in the past, and this has encouraged wildcatting: Therefore be it further

"Resolved, That we recommend that the corporation commissions of the various States refuse permission to the pipe-line companies to connect to wildcat wells in times of overproduction.

"In conclusion we recommend that the representatives from southern Oklahoma to the conservation conference shall refuse to agree to any measure that may be adopted at the meeting on June 10 that does not provide for a tariff on foreign crude oil and its refined products."

Now, Mr. Chairman, I wish to thank you sincerely for the opportunity to give a full, free, and untrammeled expression of my views; and ladies and gentlemen of the conference, I thank you also.

OPEN EXECUTIVE SESSIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the resolution (S. Res. 19) submitted by Mr. JONES May 6, 1926, to amend paragraph 2 of Rule 38, relating to proceedings on nominations in executive session.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I realize that Senators are anxious to take action on this matter and I shall not detain the Senate longer than for a very few minutes.

The senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. FESS] a little while ago expressed himself as being opposed to open sessions on the theory that the reputations of appointees ought to be protected, and for the further reason that with closed sessions the Senate would more freely examine the reputations of appointees and objections to their appointment.

Mr. President, it is perhaps because of the fact that I have not served in the Senate so long as have some other Senators I do not give as much weight to the traditions which the Senator from Ohio has invoked as one of his reasons; that is, that because secret sessions have long been the practice, and that even the Constitutional Convention was held in secret, he hesitated to give up that practice.

Mr. President, I believe in open executive sessions. I believe that open executive sessions ought to be the rule and not the exception. If I should have my way I would provide that even a majority of the Senate could not go into closed executive session. I would require a two-thirds vote. A majority can do as it pleases and it is against the action of majorities that checks on the action of public bodies are desirable. A majority can, of course, confirm and a majority can reject whether in secret or open session, but in order to give the minority an opportunity always to let the people know upon what basis the action of the Senate has been taken it is desirable that we have open executive sessions.

What does the committee amendment provide? In the first portion of the committee amendment the rule is made but little if any better than the present rule:

> Nominations shall be considered in closed executive session unless the Senate, in such closed session, shall by a majority vote determine that any particular nomination shall be considered in open executive session.

Why not have in the open the vote to go into executive session? Why not determine it here in open session? It is suggested by the Senator from Arkansas that to do so would require a statement of the reasons existing for such action. We now have Rule XXXV which provides for a vote to go into secret session with reference to any matter of business, and that does not seem to be an insuperable objection.

I want to refer again to the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FESS]. He said he is careful about the reputation of appointees. I want to know what particular sanctity attaches to a man because he has been appointed to an office rather than elected to the office? What is there so sacred about the confirmation or the consideration of an appointment because a man has been appointed by the President? He is appointed in secret executive session always, and I favor considering his nomination in open executive session.

Senators are required to go before the people in their elections and their reputations are examined and their characters are before the people. Governors of States and Members of the Congress and a large number of our public officers must submit their fortune to the suffrage of the people and to the light of public discussion in the streets and on the stump. Is that a good practice? I think it is. True, there are abuses, but there are abuses always in any form of government and the very abuses sometimes prove the value of the rule.

I would suggest to the Senator from Ohio that out of 500,000 Federal Government employees and officials only the Members of the House and the Senate and the President and Vice President, 533 in number out of a total of 500,000, are elected by the people of the United States. All the others are appointed. Why should the Senate not let the public know the reasons for confirmation or objection to confirmation? Why should a man, when his political fortune is based on a political appointment, be immune from discussion in the open as to his qualifications and the objections to his nomination? I submit these are things that go to the very root of free government. The power which the Congress possesses and exercises is not its own power. It is the power of the people. It is their power which the Congress exercises, and when the Senate passes upon the nomination of a judge who will be endowed with the power to determine property rights, to pass upon the lives and liberties of citizens, we are exercising a great responsibility imposed upon us by the people. In the selection of one who will have in his hands the administration of such tremendous power, a power over the people, over their property and their liberties, why should not the Senate consider the qualifications of an appointee or objections to such a nomination right here in the open where the press and the people may know what is taking place and may learn the motives of our action?

Mr. President, I shall vote for the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS]. I believe that in any case, even though the consideration itself may be in secret, the vote on confirmation ought to be made public. I would go farther than the Senator from Nebraska and provide that Senators might individually state their reasons for their votes. I think that is a necessary corollary to the other proposition.

I favor a portion of the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], but I prefer the last clause of the resolution as reported by the committee. I am anxious to record my views on the question because I have long advocated an amendment to the rules in this respect. In my campaign for nomination as United States Senator from my State I expressed before the people the view that the doors of the Senate ought to be opened. I do not believe that anywhere in this Government ought there to be any place where the eye of the people can not see. I do not believe there ought to be any screen behind which the people may not look. There ought to be no chamber in our system of Government so sacred or secret that the ear of the people may not hear what transpires there. Mr. President, I stand for open sessions of the Senate, for publication of the votes on confirmation, and the right of individual Senators to give their reasons supporting their votes.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I am going to detain the Senate only a moment. I am opposed to the amendment to the rule as offered by the committee. I happen to be a member of the Rules Committee. In the committee I offered the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] as a substitute for the committee proposal. I think the Robinson amendment comes nearer to doing what we ought to do than does the proposal of the committee.

Ever since I have been in the Senate I have advocated open sessions. I do not believe that we should transact the public business in secret. I have felt at all times that whatever we do here ought to be in the open light of day. We ought not to have closed sessions. It will make the Executive in all cases very much more careful about the character of his appointments. When he knows the appointments are going to be considered in open session, with the world looking on, he will be very much more careful about his appointments. I am not making any statement against the President's good faith in making appointments, but it will make him more careful and it will make it very much better for the country. For these reasons I am going to support the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] because I think it brings about the greatest publicity.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CARAWAY in the chair). Does the Senator from Tennessee yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Does not the Senator believe in any case that the roll calls upon nominations, even though they be considered in secret, should be made public?

Mr. McKELLAR. Of course, I see no reason why they should not be made public; but if they are made public the reasons which actuate Senators should be allowed at the same time to be made public. Senators should be allowed to make public their reasons if the vote is made public. Whenever we shall have public consideration of all nominations it will do away with secret sessions and in a short time there will be no such thing as secret sessions of the Senate, except in the most extreme cases; and when such cases as that arise the nominations will probably be withdrawn before the Senate shall have passed upon them.

The matter of secret sessions is an anachronism. The country has passed beyond that stage. It is an heritage of a bygone generation, and the sooner we get rid of it the better.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I agree with the Senator and it was for that reason that I wanted to bring out his position with regard to the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska as offered to the substitute of the Senator from Arkansas. I know that the Senator's record has been consistently in favor of transacting the public business in public.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let me answer the Senator from Wisconsin by saying I do not think the vote ought to be made public unless Senators are given the right to give their reasons for their votes. The mere publication of a roll call without Senators being allowed to give their reasons for their votes as provided in the Robinson substitute would be dangerous and ought not to be agreed to.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Tennessee a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes, indeed.

Mr. NORRIS. I suppose then because the Senator is opposed to giving the reasons that he is also opposed to the provision of the Robinson amendment that Senators may make public their vote taken in executive session. The Senator is opposed to that also, is he not?

Mr. McKELLAR. If I read the Robinson substitute correctly, it provides as follows:

Provided further, That any Senator may make public his vote in closed executive session.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator is opposed to that provision, I presume?

Mr. McKELLAR. No; I think it ought to be in there.

Mr. NORRIS. Does not the Senator realize that that does not include giving the reasons?

Mr. McKELLAR. To be perfectly frank I had overlooked that provision. I want to say that I would like to see a further provision that any Senator may make public his vote in closed session and the reasons therefor. In other words, I want to go on record as saying that I am for the greatest possible publicity, and I believe the Robinson substitute gives greater publicity than any other proposal. If I am wrong about it, I shall vote to adopt the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator must admit, if he is in favor of greater publicity, that he is in favor of the amendment I have offered. That amendment provides for the publication of the entire roll call.

Mr. McKELLAR. The whole roll call will not make it public enough.

Mr. NORRIS. It makes the roll call public.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes, the roll call; but I think the reasons ought to be made public.

Mr. NORRIS. I have no objection to such a provision.

Mr. McKELLAR. A Senator ought to have the right to do anything in the world he wants to do about his vote and the reasons therefor.

Mr. NORRIS. But the Senator must realize, if he wants to go as far as he says he does, that he does not want any executive session at all.

Mr. McKELLAR. Only in very unusual cases do I think there ought to be secret executive sessions.

Mr. NORRIS. I think so, too. I agree with the Senator that in order to make them as few as possible we ought to publish the roll call. The Senator is going to vote against a proposition to publish the roll call because he says no Senator is allowed to give the reasons for his vote, and yet he will vote in favor of a proposition that an individual Senator may tell his vote and not give his reasons for the vote.

Mr. McKELLAR. I had overlooked the fact that the individual Senator might not give his own reasons for his vote. I think such a provision ought to be included. I want to say to the Senator from Nebraska that he can not make the sessions too open for me. I want the greatest possible publicity in the transaction of the public business. I do not think we ought to have the right to transact public business behind closed doors, and I will vote for the most liberal rule to make that impossible.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I merely desire to say what I have probably stated previously, but what some Senators now present did not hear, that my thought is that the present rule should be reversed and that open sessions should be required as to all public business, including treaties and nominations, unless a majority of the Senate after due consideration reach the conclusion that for some reason sounding in the public interest, the subject matter under consideration should be disposed of in closed session, in which event the majority should still have the right to remove the injunction of secrecy as to the whole or any part of the proceedings.

But I was impressed with the suggestion made by the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY] and a number of other Senators on both sides of the Chamber that if the roll call is to be published, the reasons for the vote should also be published, in which event, of course, there would be no such thing as a closed executive session for any purpose.

Now under my theory——

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Just a moment. Under my theory, there still may arise cases which should be considered in executive session, but the proper authority to determine that is the Senate. When the Senate has determined it in good faith, then the proceedings ought to be kept secret, unless there is a reason for publishing them. That is all there is to it. I do not care anything about what conclusion the Senate reaches in reference to the matter; I never have asked secrecy concerning any action of mine on either a treaty or a nomination, but it does seem to me that unless we are going to abolish secret sessions absolutely—and I do not think that would be wise—there is no occasion for publishing the roll calls and denying the right to publish the reasons for votes recorded in those roll calls.

Senators are not children; they are patriotic public officers; but I have known of occasional instances where charges have been made against nominees for public office which upon investigation proved to be utterly unfounded, the charges having been made in order to invoke political influence to secure the rejection of the nomination in behalf of some person who hoped that he himself or some favorite of his might receive the appointment under consideration.

If the amendment which I have proposed shall be adopted, the Senate will consider all its business in open session, unless a majority of Senators shall find that it is necessary and proper to consider some part of its business in secret session; and if after it has considered that business in secret session every Senator is permitted to state that he voted for or against the nomination, there will be no restriction of his personal rights; but if we permit, without a majority vote of the Senate, the publication of roll calls in secret sessions we, of necessity, make the whole record public, in which event we shall completely abolish executive sessions. I have no objection to doing that if the Senate desires to do it.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arkansas yield to me, as I want to ask him a question?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. NORRIS. If I will add to my amendment these words—

Provided further, That any Senator shall have the right to publish his reasons for any vote he has cast in executive session—will the Senator accept my amendment?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; I am not in a position to accept it, for the reason that I believe if the Senate calmly determines that any matter should be considered in secret, that the public interest requires that it should be considered in secret, then it ought to keep faith with itself, and it ought not to publish any part of the proceedings except when authorized by a majority. Of course, if we publish the vote and the reasons for it, we have done a childish thing in ever having a secret session; we might as well have had an open session in the beginning. I do not object to that, if Senators wish to do it, but I do not propose to put myself in the position of voting to hold a closed executive session and then providing that after an executive session everything that was said and done in it must be made public.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senate decided in the case of the nomination of ex-Senator Lenroot to hold a secret session. After the first day all the metropolitan newspapers printed summaries of what every Senator had said here on the floor, all of the points that were raised, all of the rulings that had been made by the Vice President; on the second day the same thing occurred; and then, several days, thereafter, what purported to be a roll call of the Senate was printed in the newspapers.

It is all very well for the Senator from Arkansas to say that he feels that when the Senate has calmly decided that there are reasons compelling secrecy it ought to be maintained, but a study of the history of the Senate shows that it never has been maintained. Senator Platt, in 1886, when he was making his speech to which I have referred, mentioned the fact that it was absolutely impossible for the Senate to enforce secrecy.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, the argument of the Senator from Wisconsin goes to the point that since there can be no secrecy in executive sessions, executive sessions ought to be abolished, but it does not go to the point that a part of the proceedings shall be published and a part of the proceedings shall be withheld.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. No, Mr. President.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. If there can be no executive sessions, of course, there is no occasion for formally abolishing them by rule.

Now, Mr. President, I desire to say that I have not the intensity of feeling on this subject that my manner in argument may have indicated.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I should like to submit a question to the Senator from Arkansas.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator's argument in answer to the question which I have asked is to the effect that we might just as well make all the proceedings public if we are going to permit a Senator to have the right to give his reasons for his vote; but the Senator certainly will not forget that a great portion of his argument in opposition to the amendment which I have offered is based on the ground that it would not be right to publish a roll call without letting the Senators who cast the votes on the roll call give the reasons for their vote.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. My answer to the Senator from Nebraska is this: I would leave to a majority of the Senate to determine whether the proceedings in a closed session should be made public and what part of the proceedings should be made public, the Senate having adjudged in the beginning that there was necessity for secrecy concerning its procedure.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to his colleague?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield to my colleague.

Mr. CARAWAY. If the suggestion of the Senator from Nebraska and the Senator from Tennessee should prevail, that each Senator may be permitted to say how he voted and give his reasons for his vote, we would read in the newspapers the next day 95 different reasons for the vote. Each one would make a case for his particular vote, and no one would recognize what actually did happen, because every Senator would give his view of what it was that moved him, and nobody would know what the facts were.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arkansas yield further to me?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. In just a moment.

Mr. CARAWAY. If the facts are to be made public let us have a record of them, so that what actually occurred may be made public.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, my judgment is that since all the business of the Senate concerns the public it should be transacted in open session, unless the Senate believes that some part of that business should be transacted in secret because of considerations of public interest. I care nothing about the welfare of Senators or their interest in publishing or keeping secret their action. My thought is that a case might arise where it would be wise from the standpoint of the public as a whole not to publish the proceedings of the Senate. I say that seriously. Of course, the public would have been a great deal better off if a great many things which have happened had not occurred, but I am speaking now from the standpoint of what is best for the public. In the case of a treaty or in the case of a nomination it might be that the Senate would not want to reach its decision in public; it might feel that it was best to act in closed executive session; but if it should do that, if a majority of the Senate should decide that the matter was one which should be considered in closed executive session, it would be absurd, it seems to me, to say that without action of the Senate the proceedings must still be published either in whole or in part.

I leave the whole question to the Senate. Under the arrangement I have proposed if a majority shall vote to consider a subject in executive session, that subject will be considered in executive session, and then, if a majority of the Senate wants to relieve the proceedings from the injunction of secrecy, they will still be able to do so.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. In listening to this debate I have been impressed with the idea that we are talking much about a matter of very little consequence.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I think that is true.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I hope that we will get an opportunity to vote on this question, but I was going to say that I do not understand that the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska would debar any Senator, in case the vote were made public, from stating to his constituents or to anyone else the motives that actuated him in voting as he did. He would be prohibited, of course, from disclosing what transpired in the Senate, but he may not have said anything at all in the Senate, and so when the vote is published he does not disclose anything about what transpired in the Senate when he tells his constituents, "I voted as I did upon these considerations." So it seems to me that if we adopt the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska we do not encounter at all the difficulties and embarrassments which are suggested in that connection.

The Senator from Tennessee spoke feelingly upon this subject; but he put great store on the right when the vote was published to proclaim to his constituents the motives which actuated him in voting as he did. I think that the importance of that is very much magnified in this debate, even if it were well founded, but it seems to me there is no foundation for it.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator, then, thinks that under the Norris resolution any Senator could give his reasons why he had voted either one way or the other?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I can not doubt it.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am rather inclined to think the Senator is right.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. A Senator is prohibited from telling what transpired in the Senate, but he is not prohibited from telling what motives actuated him.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I yield.

Mr. SMITH. How would I go about explaining the motives which actuated me in secret session if some other Senator had made a statement that entirely changed my viewpoint. After I entered the Chamber and heard the argument made by one or perhaps by a combination of two or three Senators, how could

I explain why I voted in a certain way unless I were to state the things that caused me to change my mind and to vote as I did? It seems to me it would necessarily involve stating the source from which came the information which changed my vote.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. There is no occasion for the Senator telling the source of his information.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Montana yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I do.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator has examined both the Norris resolution and the Robinson resolution. Does the Senator think the Norris resolution brings about greater publicity than the Robinson resolution?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I can not say that it does.

Mr. McKELLAR. If I thought it did, I would vote for it. I will say to the Senator that I am going to vote for the greatest possible publicity about sessions.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the Senator from Tennessee must remember that the resolution I have offered is not pending in full. I have taken out of that resolution a clause which I have offered in place of the clause that is in the resolution of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON]. That is the pending amendment. I do not suppose we shall have any opportunity to vote on my entire proposition, because one substitute has already been offered, and unless that is voted down another one can not be offered after it is agreed to; and I do not want to bring about that condition of things.

I realize the good that is in the Senator's proposition; but I think it is very weak in this one particular, and I want to provide for the publication of the roll calls.

Let us take a practical instance. I am not disclosing any secret of executive sessions when I say that some time ago the Senate put in about two days considering the nomination of Mr. Lenroot to go on the Federal bench. The evidence of Mr. Lenroot's connection with Mr. Fall and his connection with the committee is public property. Suppose a Senator were taken to task down in his State for his vote cast on the confirmation or rejection of former Senator Lenroot, and suppose this amendment that I have now proposed were the law. In other words, suppose the roll call were published in the RECORD and a Senator were taken to task and somebody said, "Why did you vote for Mr. Lenroot?" or "Why did you vote against him?" Would the Senator's lips be sealed? Why, he can go down to the committee room and get the record; he can go to the court room and get the record; he can go to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys and get the evidence, which has been taken in public, all of which has been published in the newspapers, and he can pile one record upon another, if he chooses, as to why his vote should be this way or that way.

Take Mr. Charles Beecher Warren, who was defeated for confirmation for Attorney General by one vote in open executive session. His nomination was considered in the open. Not a thing ever transpired behind closed doors but that was public property. You can get it all to-day. You could go up and down the country now, publishing it in newspapers and telling it from the stump if you wanted to. You would not violate any executive secret, if this were part of the rule, in any case that the Senator can recall.

If the Senator wants publicity he had better vote for that amendment, publish the roll call a few times, and we will have more publicity. Does the Senator realize that every one of those over here who are in favor of secret sessions is going to vote against my amendment? Does the Senator realize that? What are they thinking about?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if the Senator will let me interrupt him——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. NORRIS. I do.

Mr. McKELLAR. Of course the Senator does not have to argue with me about open sessions. I have been for open sessions, as the Senator knows, ever since I have been in this body.

Mr. NORRIS. I realize that; but I was afraid the Senator was going to vote for closed sessions.

Mr. McKELLAR. The only question that arises in my mind is which proposal provides for the most open sessions. I am for the most open sessions that can be voted for; and if I am convinced that the Senator's plan is more open than the other plan, I will vote for his plan.

Mr. NORRIS. Does not the Senator think that the votes he casts in executive sessions are many times more important than the votes he casts in open sessions? Have we not passed on some of the most important things we have to deal with in executive sessions? We pass on the nominations for Federal judgeships of men who hold in their hands the lives of our countrymen; who stand between them and any illegal destruction or taking away of their property; who, in fact, have control of the liberties of all our people. We pass on them and we vote on them in executive session, behind closed doors. We have a roll call, and the Senator can not even tell how he voted. It is a secret, and yet it is public business that he has been transacting, that affects millions of people. We ask in this amendment that the Senator's official record on that action shall be given to the public.

That is all that this amendment does. It gives publicity to the official actions of official servants on public business. There is nothing else to it. The argument that has been made against it so far, at least up to the time that I interrupted the Senator from Arkansas, was practically one thing, and that was that it would be unfair to publish the roll call and not permit the Senator to give the reasons for his vote; and yet when I offer to include in the amendment the right to do that very thing, you know that you will not dare and will not vote for it, and will not accept it. When the very thing that you offer as an objection is cleared away, you will not take it.

I can see some reason for it myself. I am not finding fault with the Senator who takes that position; but he says it is unfair to do this because we do not permit the Senator to give his reasons for his vote. I say, "All right; we will just add that to it; let him give his reasons"; and they say, "Oh, well, that would be foolish; that is too much publicity."

Mr. CUTTING. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. NORRIS. I do.

Mr. CUTTING. Does not the Senator believe that under our rules we already have the right to explain everything pertinent to the question?

Mr. NORRIS. In most cases that is true.

Mr. CUTTING. Is not that true in 99 per cent of the cases?

Mr. NORRIS. More than that, I think. I do not recall any instance since I have been here, although there may be such, where that is not true. I ask Senators to go back in their memories and recall the various cases where we have had contests, and they will find that the reasons given were public reasons, gleaned from public records, from public testimony.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. CARAWAY. The thing I had in mind, that I wanted to call to the Senator's attention and get his views about, was this:

I personally am in favor of publicity, and I had thought that if the roll call is to be made public, every fact that transpired ought to be made public, so that the public might know why Senators voted this way or that way.

If the individual Senator is to give his reason and not the facts, his reason might reflect on somebody else, and it might start a dozen controversies that would rage for the rest of the session; but if it is determined that the roll call ought to be public, then everything that transpired ought to be published, so that the public could know what it was that influenced the Senators—not the reasons that they might give, but what the actual facts were, so that the public can determine whether we acted wisely or otherwise.

Mr. NORRIS. To do that we would have to have complete publicity.

Mr. CARAWAY. That is what I think. I think it ought to be complete publicity or no publicity; and I shall vote with the Senator for complete publicity.

Mr. NORRIS. I shall vote that way, too.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. NORRIS. Just a moment. Let me refer to what the Senator from Arkansas said.

I shall vote for complete publicity. The proposition that I offered is not what I should like to have if I knew I could get what I want; but I realize that other Senators do not agree with me, and I am not impugning their motives. We must take conditions as they are, and not as we should like to have them.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. NORRIS. I will yield in time.

I think complete publicity would be a cure for practically all the evils that come to us. I do not know of any reason why there should not be complete publicity, unless we can imagine a case, in time of war or great danger of war, when we might have some secret business in the way of a treaty with an ally, or something of that kind, that it would be necessary to keep secret.

Mr. McKELLAR. In that case it could be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. NORRIS. As the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] so well said a while ago, I do not see why we should consider the nomination of a judge in secret, and yet when we elect a judge at home we compel him to stand out like every other candidate before the people for public discussion, for public debate.

When we come to appoint a man to a more important office, who has greater jurisdiction, who has more to do with the liberties and the rights, both the personal and the property rights, of our people than any of these elective officers, I can not understand why we should then withdraw behind closed doors, and why the public servants of the country should not even be allowed to tell to their own constituents how they voted on something more important than anything else that comes before them. When we think of it for a moment, when we think of our own experiences, we will have to admit that the reasons for our votes can be given to the people without disclosing a single thing that ever transpired behind those closed doors. I do not know of a single instance where that is not true.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. What is the parliamentary situation? Does the Senator's amendment come up first to be voted on?

Mr. NORRIS. I will tell the Senator the parliamentary situation.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am inclined to think the Senator's resolution gives greater publicity, and for that reason I am inclined to vote for it; but I want to know how it is coming up. Let us see how it comes up.

Mr. NORRIS. Unfortunately, my entire proposition is not before the Senate. The Senator from Arkansas offered his proposition as a substitute for the resolution reported from the committee.

Mr. McKELLAR rose.

Mr. NORRIS. Wait just a minute. His substitute is subject to amendment. I have moved to strike out the words "Any Senator may make public his vote in closed executive session" and insert in lieu thereof the words from my resolution, "All roll calls in closed executive session, together with a statement of the question upon which such roll calls are had, shall be published in the RECORD."

That is the pending question.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me to say so, I am going to vote for his amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. McKELLAR. If it is voted down, then I am going to vote for the Robinson amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. Why, of course.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am going to vote for the greatest possible publicity.

Mr. NORRIS. Of course. That is what I am going to do.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote!

Mr. NORRIS. So far as I am concerned, I am ready to vote. I call for the years and nays.

Mr. CUTTING. Mr. President, I do not intend to discuss this matter at any length.

In the first place, I think all these resolutions that are pending are a vast improvement on our present rules. Furthermore, I should be in favor personally of a more liberal amendment than any of them. I was very much impressed by what the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] said a little while ago. It would be an improvement if a two-thirds majority were required to go into secret executive session; but I am not very much impressed with the argument that the mere fact that we publish the roll calls makes it necessary to publish the debates.

In the first place, I think our votes are official acts, and debates and discussions are comparatively incidental. In the second place, I think that in at least 99 per cent of the cases our votes speak for themselves, and require no elaborate explanations.

Furthermore, if there ever was a body in which every privilege and every license is given to every individual to explain his vote, it surely is the Senate of the United States, under the present rules, or as it would be under any of the amendments which are being proposed.

I do not believe that in any but an infinitesimal proportion of the cases before the Senate would it be necessary to make any explanation of a vote delivered in executive session, which would necessitate the giving to the public of any information revealed in executive session which had not been the property of the public long before.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, I shall take but a moment. I shall not vote for the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska, for the reason that it would not be fair either to the one whose name was being considered or to the Senate itself to publish a roll call without the whole proceedings back of the roll call being made public. If I vote against somebody whose name is submitted for confirmation his enemies could say that I was actuated by this or that. They could impute to me reasons and to him conduct which I never entertained and of which he was never guilty.

The public is not much interested in how I vote. Information as to that does not shed any light on the question at all. The question is, What is the reason that impels me to cast my vote? My conclusions are not important. I should not be permitted to go out and state what occurred and make it so exceedingly sure that I was correct; but if there is to be publicity there ought to be full publicity. The country ought to know how I voted; but beyond that, of far more importance, it ought to know why I voted in the way I did; not what I say is my reason, because if every Senator gave his reasons there would be 95 reasons given, and they might cross each other at right angles, each Senator picking out the particular facts of the case that suits him, and they might to everybody else seem ridiculous.

Let us have either complete publicity or no publicity. That has been the view I have entertained all the time. I shall vote, if I get the opportunity, to have complete publicity; but if that is denied me, I am not willing that half a fact shall be made if the other half is to be concealed. If the public has the right to know how I vote they have equally a right to know why I voted in the way I did. The question is, What were the facts back of this that led me to reach the conclusion I reached? That is the important thing anyway. The only real benefit of publicity is that the people at large may know the character of any man who has been nominated for public office, not what I think about it, but what the facts are, what sort of a man it is who is being suggested to fill the particular place. I would be glad to vote for an amendment covering that, but I am not willing to vote that half of that shall be made known and half of it concealed.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CARAWAY. I yield.

Mr. SMITH. Carrying out the idea which the Senator has expressed, that actual facts and not as I try to remember them, not the reasons which I may give but the real things which transpire, shall be made public, that would necessitate the presence of a reporter.

Mr. CARAWAY. Absolutely.

Mr. SMITH. And the making of a stenographic report, so that the public might be made familiar with what goes on.

Mr. CARAWAY. Absolutely. If we are to have roll calls published, let us have a report of everything that transpires, and then, after the vote, if the Senate sees fit to make public the roll call, let it make public the entire record.

Mr. SMITH. In the form of a complete report rather than a partial report.

Mr. CARAWAY. Letting some one state what happened and giving his version of it invites self-serving declarations. I hope not to be embarrassed by having to make one myself, and I should not like to be embarrassed by having somebody make one that would impugn my motives. So let us have complete publicity or no publicity.

The Senator from Wisconsin said there never was a secret executive session. If there never was, then the kind we have ought to satisfy even the Senator. But I do not think his statement is accurate. I have read garbled statements of what it has been alleged has occurred in executive sessions. I have sometimes felt that I should like very much to contradict the statements and conclusions with reference to what had occurred in executive sessions, but I have not felt at liberty to do so. I would like to have either complete publicity or no publicity.

I deny that we can not have complete secrecy if we want it. Of course, that would take away from somebody a market for stolen wares and from somebody the opportunity to purchase that sort of wares; but that would not be any great loss. I still believe there is honor among men, and I think if the question were brought home to them we would get complete secrecy if we wanted it. I do not want it, although I have never felt at liberty to tell how I voted on any question in executive session.

I do not remember ever having expressed an opinion about anything that happened in executive session. I have felt in honor bound not to do that. I have been perfectly willing for the record to be made public, and if it is made public, I am willing to stand on the record as the public may get it. If it is to be made public, let us have every word of it made public.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I ask that the amendment be stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] proposes to strike out of the substitute of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] the following language: "That any Senator may make public his vote in closed executive session," and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

All roll calls in closed executive session, together with a statement of the question upon which such roll calls are had, shall be published in the RECORD.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen	Fess	La Follette	Shortridge
Ashurst	Fletcher	McKellar	Smith
Barkley	Frazier	McNary	Smoot
Bingham	George	Metcalf	Steck
Blease	Glass	Moses	Steiwer
Borah	Goff	Norbeck	Swanson
Brookhart	Goldsborough	Norris	Thomas, Okla.
Broussard	Harris	Nye	Townsend
Burton	Harrison	Overman	Trammell
Capper	Hastings	Patterson	Tyson
Caraway	Hatfield	Pine	Vandenberg
Connally	Hawes	Ransdell	Walcott
Copeland	Hayden	Reed	Walsh, Mass.
Couzens	Hebert	Robinson, Ark.	Walsh, Mont.
Cutting	Heflin	Robinson, Ind.	Warren
Dale	Howell	Sackett	Waterman
Deneen	Johnson	Schall	Watson
Edge	Jones	Sheppard	Wheeler

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. COUZENS. I would like to have the amendment read.

The Chief Clerk read the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HEFLIN (when Mr. BLACK'S name was called). My colleague [Mr. BLACK] is absent on account of illness. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE (when Mr. BLAINE'S name was called). I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague [Mr. BLAINE]. He has a general pair with the junior Senator from Maine [Mr. GOULD]. If my colleague were present and permitted to vote, he would vote "yea."

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] and vote "yea."

Mr. NORBECK (when Mr. MCMASTER'S name was called). My colleague the junior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MCMASTER] is unavoidably out of the city. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. REED (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BRATTON]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Idaho [Mr. THOMAS] and vote "nay."

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS]. In his absence I withhold my vote. If I were permitted to vote, I would vote "yea."

Mr. SWANSON (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] and vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HAWES. I desire to announce that the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] is necessarily detained on official business.

Mr. SCHALL. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] is ill.

Mr. FESS. I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT] with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS]; and

The junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. ODDIE] with the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN].

Mr. MOSES. I desire to announce that the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] is unavoidably absent from the Senate. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. COPELAND. My colleague the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is unavoidably detained from the Senate. If he were present and not paired, he would vote "yea."

Mr. SHEPPARD. I desire to announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MCMASTER] has a general pair with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK]. If present, the Senator from South Dakota would vote "yea," and the Senator from Wyoming would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 34, nays 39, as follows:

YEAS—34

Barkley	George	McKellar	Swanson
Borah	Harris	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Brookhart	Harrison	Norbeck	Trammell
Capper	Hawes	Norris	Vandenberg
Connally	Heflin	Nye	Walsh, Mass.
Copeland	Howell	Pine	Walsh, Mont.
Couzens	Johnson	Sheppard	Wheeler
Cutting	Jones	Simmons
Frazier	La Follette	Steck

NAYS—39

Allen	Fess	Metcalf	Smith
Ashurst	Fletcher	Moses	Smoot
Bingham	Glass	Overman	Steiwer
Blease	Goff	Patterson	Townsend
Broussard	Goldsborough	Ransdell	Tyson
Burton	Greene	Reed	Walcott
Caraway	Hastings	Robinson, Ark.	Warren
Dale	Hatfield	Sackett	Waterman
Deneen	Hayden	Schall	Watson
Edge	Hebert	Shortridge

NOT VOTING—22

Black	Gould	McMaster	Stephens
Blaine	Hale	Oddie	Thomas, Idaho
Bratton	Kean	Phipps	Tydings
Dill	Kendrick	Pittman	Wagner
Gillett	Keyes	Robinson, Ind.
Glenn	King	Shipstead

So Mr. NORRIS'S amendment to the amendment of Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the substitute proposed by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON].

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, let the substitute be reported.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The substitute of the Senator from Arkansas will be reported for the information of the Senate.

The Chief Clerk read the proposed substitute, as follows:

Resolved, That paragraph 2 of Rule XXXVIII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, relating to proceedings on nominations in executive session, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"2. Hereafter all business in the Senate shall be transacted in open session, unless the Senate, in closed session by a majority vote, shall determine that a particular nomination, treaty, or other matter shall be considered in closed executive session, in which case all subsequent proceedings with respect to said nomination, treaty, or other matter shall be kept secret: Provided, That the injunction of secrecy as to the whole or any part of proceedings in closed executive session may be removed on motion adopted by a majority vote of the Senate in closed executive session: Provided further, That Rule XXXV shall apply to open executive sessions: And provided further, That any Senator may make public his vote in closed executive session.

"Anything in the rules of the Senate inconsistent with the foregoing is hereby repealed."

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, I desire to state, before the vote is taken on the substitute of the Senator from Arkansas, that notwithstanding the outcome of the vote I propose to reserve unto myself the right to say how and when and why I vote on any particular public business. I want that announcement to stand notwithstanding how the vote may come out upon any of these questions.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I ask now that the proposal of the committee for which the substitute has been offered by the Senator from Arkansas may be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the proposed amendment of the rule as reported by the committee.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That paragraph 2 of Rule XXXVIII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, relating to proceedings on nominations in executive session, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"2. Nominations shall be considered in closed executive session unless the Senate in such session shall by a majority vote determine that any particular nomination shall be considered in open executive session. When nominations are considered in closed executive session no information communicated or remarks made by a Senator, when acting upon nominations, concerning the character or qualifications of the person nominated shall be disclosed. If, however, charges shall be made against a person nominated, the committee may, in its discretion, notify such nominee thereof, but the name of the person making such charges shall not be disclosed. The fact that a nomination has been made, or that it has been confirmed or rejected, shall not be regarded as a secret; and all roll calls in closed executive session, together with a statement of the question upon which such roll calls are had, shall be published in the RECORD."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the substitute proposed by the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I merely wish to say that it is my intention to vote against the substitute offered by the Senator from Arkansas because I regard it as even a less liberal provision concerning secrecy than that sponsored by the Committee on Rules. I shall therefore vote against the substitute.

Mr. NORRIS. On that let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Connecticut will state it.

Mr. BINGHAM. Are we about to vote on the substitute proposed by the Senator from Arkansas?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the substitute proposed by the Senator from Arkansas.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HEFLIN (when Mr. BLACK's name was called). My colleague the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] is absent on account of illness. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] and vote "yea."

Mr. REED (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as to my pair and its transfer as on the previous vote, I vote "yea."

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I would vote "yea."

Mr. SWANSON (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as on the last vote, I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HAWES. I desire to announce that the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] is necessarily detained on official business.

Mr. FESS. I desire to announce that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT] has a general pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] and that the junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. ODDIE] has a pair with the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN].

Mr. SHEPPARD. I desire to announce that the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK] has a general pair with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MCMASTER]. If present, the Senator from Wyoming would vote "yea," and the Senator from South Dakota would vote "nay."

Mr. COPELAND. My colleague the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is unavoidably detained from the Senate. If he were present and permitted to vote, he would vote "yea."

Mr. SCHALL. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] is ill.

Mr. REED (after having voted in the affirmative). The Senator from Idaho [Mr. THOMAS], to whom I transferred my pair, having entered the Chamber and voted, I now transfer my pair with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BRATTON] to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. KEAN] and allow my vote to stand.

The result was announced—yeas 59, nays 15, as follows:

YEAS—59

Allen	Glass	McNary	Steiwer
Ashurst	Goff	Metcalf	Swanson
Barkley	Goldsborough	Moses	Thomas, Idaho
Bingham	Greene	Norris	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Harris	Overman	Townsend
Broussard	Harrison	Ransdell	Trammell
Burton	Hastings	Reed	Tyson
Caraway	Hatfield	Robinson, Ark.	Vandenberg
Connally	Hawes	Sackett	Walcott
Copeland	Hayden	Schall	Walsh, Mass.
Deneen	Hebert	Sheppard	Walsh, Mont.
Edge	Heflin	Shortridge	Warren
Fess	Howell	Simmons	Watson
Fletcher	Jones	Smoot	Wheeler
George	McKellar	Steck

NAYS—15

Blease	Cutting	La Follette	Pine
Brookhart	Dale	Norbeck	Smith
Capper	Frazier	Nye	Waterman
Couzens	Johnson	Patterson

NOT VOTING—21

Black	Gould	McMaster	Stephens
Blaine	Hale	Oddie	Tydings
Bratton	Kean	Phipps	Wagner
Dill	Kendrick	Pittman
Gillett	Keyes	Robinson, Ind.
Glenn	King	Shipstead

So the amendment of Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question now is upon agreeing to the resolution as amended.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, we are now to vote, as I understand, on the original resolution as amended by the adoption of the substitute offered by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON].

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is correct.

Mr. SMITH. I wish merely to say that I voted against the substitute, and I am going to vote against the resolution, as amended, because I am opposed to this silly procedure of amending what, in my opinion, is already the proper rule in reference to executive sessions.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, there seems to be some misunderstanding as to the meaning of my previous remarks relative to my not being bound by the rule of the Senate as to secrecy. I wish to make it perfectly plain that obviously I shall abide by all of the rules of the Senate as to proceedings which are conducted in the open. I do not admit, however, that the Senate has a right to commit me to secrecy in public business. It was only with respect to secrecy in public business that I said I would refuse to be bound.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution as amended.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask for the yeas and nays on the passage of the resolution as amended.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE (when Mr. BLAINE's name was called). I desire to make the same announcement as before concerning the absence of my colleague the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. BLAINE] and his pair. If he were present, on this vote he would vote "yea."

Mr. NORBECK (when Mr. MCMASTER's name was called). Making the same announcement as before regarding the absence of my colleague [Mr. MCMASTER], I wish to say that if present on this question he would vote "yea."

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before with reference to my pair and its transfer, I vote "yea."

Mr. REED (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BRATTON], but being advised that if present he would vote as I intend to vote I shall vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before as to my pair, I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. SWANSON (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as on the last roll call regarding my pair and its transfer, I vote "yea."

Mr. COPELAND (when Mr. WAGNER's name was called). If my colleague the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] were here and permitted to vote, he would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HEFLIN. My colleague the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] is absent on account of illness. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. MOSES. I wish again to announce that the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] is absent from the Senate unavoidably. If present, he would vote "yea." The same statements apply also to my colleague the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES].

Mr. FESS. I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT] with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS]; and

The junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. ODDIE] with the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN].

Mr. SHEPPARD. I desire to announce that the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. DILL], the junior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK], the junior Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], and the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are necessarily absent from the Senate. If present, they would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 69, nays 5, as follows:

YEAS—69

Allen	Borah	Capper	Cutting
Ashurst	Brookhart	Caraway	Dale
Barkley	Broussard	Connally	Deneen
Bingham	Burton	Copeland	Edge

Fess	Hebert	Pine	Thomas, Okla.
Fletcher	Heflin	Ransdell	Townsend
Frazier	Howell	Reed	Trammell
George	Johnson	Robinson, Ark.	Tyson
Glass	Jones	Sackett	Vandenberg
Goff	La Follette	Schall	Walcott
Goldsborough	McKellar	Sheppard	Walsh, Mass.
Greene	McNary	Shortridge	Walsh, Mont.
Harris	Metcalf	Simmons	Warren
Harrison	Moses	Smoot	Watson
Hastings	Norbeck	Steck	Wheeler
Hatfield	Norris	Steiwer
Hawes	Nye	Swanson
Hayden	Overman	Thomas, Idaho

NAYS—5

Blease	Patterson	Smith	Waterman
Couzens

NOT VOTING—21

Black	Gould	McMaster	Stephens
Blaine	Hale	Oddie	Tydings
Bratton	Kean	Phipps	Wagner
Dill	Kendrick	Pittman
Gillett	Keyes	Robinson, Ind.
Glenn	King	Shipstead

So the resolution, as amended, was agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That paragraph 2 of Rule XXXVIII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, relating to proceedings on nominations in executive session, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"2. Hereafter all business in the Senate shall be transacted in open session unless the Senate in closed session, by a majority vote, shall determine that a particular nomination, treaty, or other matter shall be considered in closed executive session, in which case all subsequent proceedings with respect to said nomination, treaty, or other matter shall be kept secret: Provided, That the injunction of secrecy as to the whole or any part of proceedings in closed executive session may be removed on motion adopted by a majority vote of the Senate in closed executive session: Provided further, That Rule XXXV shall apply to open executive sessions: And provided further, That any Senator may make public his vote in closed executive session.

"Anything in the rules of the Senate inconsistent with the foregoing is hereby repealed."

THOUSANDTH ANNIVERSARY OF NATIONAL PARLIAMENT OF ICELAND

Mr. WARREN obtained the floor.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator from Wyoming will permit me to report a joint resolution, which I think it will take only a moment to pass? If it involves any discussion, I will withdraw it.

Mr. WARREN. I will yield to the Senator from Idaho for that purpose.

Mr. BORAH. From the Committee on Foreign Relations I report back favorably without amendment the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 2) to authorize the President to accept the invitation of the Kingdom of Iceland to participate in the celebration of the one thousandth anniversary of the Althing—that is the parliament of Iceland—and in connection therewith to present to the people of Iceland a statue of Leif Ericsson. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution, which was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and requested to accept the invitation of the presidents of the legislative assembly of the Kingdom of Iceland (the Althing) to the Government of the United States of America to appoint official representatives of the American people to the celebration of the one thousandth anniversary of the Althing, the national parliament of Iceland, by appointing and sending five special representatives to take part in this celebration on behalf of the Government of the United States of America; and the President be, and he is hereby, further authorized and requested to procure a suitable statue or other memorial of Leif Ericsson and present the same as a gift of the American people to the people of Iceland in connection with the American participation in such celebration.

SEC. 2. That for the purpose of defraying the expense of participation by the Government of the United States in the said celebration as aforesaid an appropriation of such sum as may be necessary, not exceeding $55,000, is hereby authorized to include transportation, subsistence, or per diem in lieu of subsistence (notwithstanding the provisions of any previous act), sculptors' fees, and such other expenses as the President shall deem appropriate.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COMPENSATION OF OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

Mr. WARREN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 3966) to fix the compensation of officers and employees of the legislative branch of the Government.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations without amendment.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President——

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wyoming yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. WARREN. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I merely wish to ask the Senator a question. I asked him the same question privately, but I will now ask it publicly. Is the Senator of the opinion that if any amendment shall be offered and adopted in connection with this bill it will jeopardize the passage of the bill before the recess?

Mr. WARREN. I will glady answer the Senator who makes the inquiry. I was about to say—and I regret to say it—that there is no longer a quorum in the House of Representatives. That body passed this bill without any amendment, and, of course, to amend it here would mean that its passage would be delayed until the House again could act on it.

Mr. McKELLAR. I will accept the statement of the Senator from Wyoming. Frankly, I had intended to offer two amendments to the pending bill, both referring to salary inequalities. One was to raise the salaries of Senators and Representatives in Congress to $12,000 a year, and the other was to increase, in a small way, the salaries of the chief of the document room and his assistants. Those were omissions which, in my judgment, were made by the joint committee. However, in view of what the Senator has said concerning the probable failure of the bill if amendments were adopted to it, I will not offer the amendments at this time, unless the Senator thinks we can secure action by the House of Representatives.

Mr. WARREN. Let me say, Mr. President, that the bill which is now before the Senate was formulated and reported as the result of the study and deliberations of the members of a joint select committee who were chosen for that purpose. The report on the bill is signed by all six of the members of that select committee. The consideration of the subject matter of the bill has taken practically all of the extra session, and has required hard work and much thought.

As the Senator knows, the bill affects the employees both of the House and Senate. The bill passed the House practically unanimously. I had hoped to have it passed earlier in to-day's session, and had even hoped to have it passed yesterday, but because of the debate which ensued on the Borah and Jones amendments, the consideration of the bill has been delayed.

So far as amendments are concerned, I have before me four or five amendments, which I believe ought to go into the bill, if there was opportunity to incorporate them in it. The matters covered by the amendments, however, may be considered by the Appropriations Committee hereafter. While the bill now before us, if enacted, will place on the statute books what might be called a standard law affecting the salaries of employees of the Senate and the House, so that various employees will receive the salaries provided for therein, nevertheless, of course, after its enactment it may be amended at any time. Thus, we can provide later for all necessary and proper changes.

I think the proceedings of to-day—and I have no complaint to make of them at all—show how long it takes to bring the minds of Senators together. There are only 96 Senators, when they are all present, but the pending bill as reported affects 2,496 salaries of different men and women who are employees of the Senate and the House, the Architect of the Capitol, and so forth. If we should start in to amend the bill because one clerk thinks, perhaps, he has not been given quite as much as another clerk or as much as he thinks he should get, in view of the great number of employees involved, that would be the course to destruction rather than construction. If we have made mistakes—and I concede that we have made mistakes in two or three instances—it will be easy to correct them and amend the measure after it shall have become a law, but it seems to me, under the present circumstances, that we have either got to take the bill as it is, or else it is finished, so far as this session is concerned, and will have to be considered again later on.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield.

Mr. MOSES. I understand that a quorum has been gathered in the House. If a quorum is not there, it is none of our business. We do not have to run our affairs in a certain way because the House or any other body is negligent.

This bill, as the Senator in charge of it has just admitted, contains certain inequities and injustices. I should like to see them remedied. No harm will be done, except a three months' delay, if we amend this bill now. In September, when the House is back here, it will have a quorum and can deal with the matter. I think it is much better to delay the bill for three months, and make it correct and equitable, than to pass it in its present form.

At any rate, Mr. President, I am unwilling to see the bill passed in this hurried manner unless I can have some assurance that certain glaring injustices that occur in the bill are going to be corrected and corrected speedily. Once we pass this measure it becomes, as the Senator from Wyoming has said, substantive law and requires a new act of Congress to change it.

Mr. WARREN. O Mr. President, the Senator must not say that.

Mr. MOSES. It will require an item in an appropriation bill; and those who have to go before the Committee on Appropriations to get items know that it is sometimes much easier to pass a bill than it is to get an item from the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. WARREN. Has the Senator himself had any trouble with the Appropriations Committee?

Mr. MOSES. I have had heated arguments with them at any rate, Mr. President.

Mr. WARREN. I will admit that; but has the Senator really suffered any injustice or any inequality?

Mr. MOSES. That is probably due, Mr. President, to the fact that my arguments were superior both in merit and in presentation. [Laughter.]

Mr. WARREN. That I can not admit, of course.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. WARREN. Yes; I yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. I have just been in telephonic communication with the majority leader of the House, who says that to-day they lack 16 of a quorum but that they will have a quorum to-morrow.

Mr. MOSES. Now, Mr. President, to resume:

The Senator from Tennessee adverted to a subject which is of great consequence to every Member of the Senate. Those of us who remember the difficulties which have attended the raising of our own salaries, however easy it may be for us to raise the salaries of others, will remember that points of order were frequently made and difficulties and impediments were put in the way. Under this bill the amendment which the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR] presents is, I believe, perfectly germane.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Does the Senator from New Hampshire seriously anticipate that under present conditions the two Houses are going to increase the salaries of Members of the Senate and of the House of Representatives at this time? If the Senator expects——

Mr. MOSES. I can answer that question right now.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. If the Senator expects or desires to prevent the passage of the bill reported to the Senate by the Senator from Wyoming relating to clerks' salaries and other salaries, he can accomplish it by bringing forward the amendment suggested by the Senator from Tennessee; and, of course, we all know that between this hour and the hour of adjournment to-morrow, already fixed, there is no possibility of increasing senatorial and congressional salaries.

Mr. MOSES. I will say frankly that I do not expect to see the senatorial and congressional salaries increased, Mr. President; but I am just throwing that out as part of a general argument that there is no reason why we should be hasty about this bill, especially if there is going to be a quorum in the House to-morrow. The House will readily concur in any amendment which we make affecting our own employees.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I wish to say that my information does not bear out the statement that the House will have or expects to have a quorum here to-morrow. I have the contrary information that it is not expected.

Mr. MOSES. The Senator from Connecticut said he had just been in telephonic communication with the majority leader of the House.

Mr. WARREN. The Senator from Connecticut doubtless has some amendment in the bill which he can probably get without doing it in this backhanded way.

Mr. MOSES. All right. I said, if the Senator listened to me——

Mr. WARREN. Of course I listened to the Senator.

Mr. MOSES. I do not intend to permit this bill to pass speedily as it now stands unless I have a very definite assurance that some things in it are going to be corrected. I have no intention of having certain clerks given a salary which shall include extra services rendered when other clerks are given that salary without any reference to extra services, which are cared for in special annual items.

The Senator has spoken of the joint select committee which dealt with salaries. I am chairman of the Joint Committee on Printing, which exists by statute and which is at work every day in the year, as the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] can testify, he having been chairman of that committee for several years. When that committee, through all six of its members, Democrats and Republicans, unanimously and in writing made recommendations to the Joint Select Committee on Salaries as to what should be done with reference to the salaries of the clerks of the Joint Committee on Printing, the select committee did what? They disregarded what the Joint Committee on Printing recommended for increases for its clerks, and increased the salaries of employees of the committee when the committee had not asked for it.

If I can have some assurance that that inequality will be remedied in the next legislative bill, or in a deficiency bill following the recess—if any assurance of that kind can be given me in some binding fashion, I shall not impede the passage of this bill. I do not wish to deprive the clerks and employees of the Senate of three months' additional pay which they would get by the immediate passage of this bill; but I do not intend to stand here and permit the bill to pass in its present form without making my opinions known about it.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. MOSES. I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. WARREN. I doubt if the Senator wants to yield to others while I have the floor.

Mr. MOSES. I beg the pardon of the Senator. I supposed I had been recognized.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wyoming has the floor.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, if the Senator from Wyoming will permit me, I hope the Senator from Wyoming will assure the Senator from New Hampshire that if there are inequalities in the bill he will undertake to correct them.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President——

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I should like to know how the Senate can be assured that certain inequalities are going to be corrected when there is no evidence before us as to just what those inequalities are. That is an impossible way to legislate. I should like to be informed as to how one Senator can be given an assurance that certain things will be done three months from now. That is a process with which I should like to be familiar.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

Mr. MOSES. If the Senator would appear before the Committee on Appropriations he would learn.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wyoming has the floor.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, if I may reply to some of these inquiries, I want to say to the Senator that I think he will not deny that I gave him every assurance one man could give to another that I expected to rearrange for him the matters that he brought to my attention as he stated them.

Mr. MOSES. That is perfectly true.

Mr. WARREN. I will bring them before the proper tribunal at the proper time.

Mr. MOSES. And the Senator was very generous about it; but the Senator from Tennessee had set the practice here this afternoon of saying that he had received private assurances from the chairman, but he wanted to have the chairman make a statement on the floor about the matter.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, no!

Mr. WARREN. The Senator did not mean "private" in the sense that the Senator from New Hampshire means. He simply asked me if amendments could be made, and I told him I did not think they could. I trust the Senator from New Hampshire will give me credit once in a while for honesty and decency in a business way.

Mr. MOSES. I give the Senator 108 per cent credit in every way.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming yield to me?

Mr. WARREN. Certainly.

Mr. McKELLAR. Speaking of inequalities, I want to say to the Senator from Idaho that the inequality that was in my mind was this: In the last few years we have created a great number of important offices.

Mr. BORAH. Yes, indeed.

Mr. McKELLAR. And I do not recall a single important office that the Congress has created—I am talking about the Congress, not this particular Congress—to which we have not given a salary of at least $12,000. Members of the Farm Board, members of the Reserve Board, members of various other boards, have in most cases received $12,000. It is a common practice to make an office of anything like the first class a $12,000 office. If that becomes the common practice of the Congress, with all good intentions, we certainly ought to treat the Members of Congress, both House and Senate, in the same fair and just way in reference to salaries.

For that reason, while I am not going to embarrass the Senator from Wyoming by offering the amendment to his bill now, because I realize that many of the increases that have been made in this bill are just and fair and ought to be made, I want to say to the Senator from Wyoming and to the Senate that at the very first opportunity I am going to offer an amendment increasing the salaries of Senators and Congressmen, because I think they are entitled to it.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wyoming yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. WARREN. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. I am interested to know if the increases of salaries to which the Senator from Tennessee has referred are covered by this private assurance?

Mr. McKELLAR. There was no assurance whatsoever to me by the Senator from Wyoming. There was a misunderstanding about the matter. If I so expressed myself, I expressed myself very badly. The only assurance the Senator from Wyoming gave me was that, in his judgment, if any amendment should be adopted to this bill, it would not be agreed to by the House before the recess.

Mr. BORAH. I should like to know from the Senator from New Hampshire if he has a list of the inequalities in regard to which we are going to have an assurance?

Mr. MOSES. No, Mr. President; because it is not that long; but I am perfectly willing to point out certain things. It will not embarrass me at all.

The clerk of the Naval Affairs Committee receives a stated salary; and yet it is provided in other legislation yearly that he shall receive $500 additional for the preparation of the Naval Yearbook.

The clerk to the Committee on Rules receives a certain salary, which is the same as that for the Committee on Naval Affairs; and yet it is provided in this bill that that salary for that clerk shall be inclusive of the work of preparing the Senate Manual. The Senator from Wyoming has assured me that that was an oversight, copied from the old statute.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to say that I used the same language in which the law has been enacted for several years; in other words, I rewrote it exactly as it now is except for fixing a higher salary for the clerks.

Mr. MOSES. No; I think the Senator is wrong about that. For the last two or three years that language has not been in the bill.

Mr. WARREN. Oh, yes, it has.

Mr. MOSES. It was prior to that time.

The salary of the clerk of the Committee on Appropriations is fixed, and it does not say "inclusive of the work of preparing the statement of appropriations"; but, through other legislation, appropriations are made for the work of preparing the statement of appropriations.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for just a moment?

Mr. MOSES. I have not the floor. We are all speaking by the courtesy of the Senator from Wyoming.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wyoming has the floor. To whom does he yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. WATSON. I happen to have been a member of this joint committee, and to have attended most of its sessions. The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BRATTON] was present at all of them. The distinguished Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] was originally appointed; but, because of enforced absence from the city, he resigned from the joint committee, and the Senator from New Mexico was appointed in his place.

The matter referred to by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. MOSES] was called to my attention after the report of the committee had been formulated. I never heard of it before. He came to my office to mention it. I looked it up and found that it was clearly an oversight. I then took it up and discussed it with the Senator from Wyoming, and he agreed with me, of course, knowing more about it than I did, that it was an oversight, and that it was one that ought to be corrected and in the future would be corrected if the majority of the Senate would agree to the correction.

That is all there is to that story. It was an oversight. I think myself that the proposition the Senator is insisting on is a meritorious one; but it is not one that can be corrected now without endangering the passage of the whole measure.

Mr. MOSES. Oh, no; it merely delays it for three months.

Mr. WATSON. It delays it for three months; and I think that in order to correct one or two oversights, or even mistakes, it is unjustifiable to hold up the passage of this bill and imperil the salaries of all of these people connected both with the Senate and with the House.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wyoming yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. WARREN. I do.

Mr. BORAH. Let it be understood that if this bill passes, all parties are upon the same level on the question of correcting any inequalities hereafter; that these individual assurances do not count. If there are inequalities in this bill, they ought to be corrected; and therefore, while I shall not object to the passage of the bill, I shall expect that when we come to consider those matters there will be no special consideration given to any particular item.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President, I desired to propose an amendment which I consider very important to each Senator in the body, and I think in five minutes I could have the Senator from Wyoming of the same opinion as myself regarding the matter. Accepting the statement of the Senator from Wyoming, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, however, I shall withhold the amendment, but shall offer it at the first available opportunity.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, the Senator from Wyoming has very kindly been listening to me in private in regard to the necessity of having an additional clerk for the committee——

Mr. WARREN. The Senator simply inquired on the reporting of the bill as to the procedure. I met him here and talked to him. Was there anything private about that?

Mr. BINGHAM. I meant to say that the Senator from Wyoming had heard from me of the necessity of an additional clerk for my committee.

Mr. WARREN. In a very respectful way, and I honored the Senator for it.

Mr. BINGHAM. There was nothing private or personal or confidential about it. The Senator referred to me a few minutes ago as needing an additional clerk and trying to get the additional clerk in a bankhanded manner.

Mr. WARREN. Yes.

Mr. BINGHAM. I did not so intend. I knew that the Senator from Wyoming had been informed that there was no quorum of the House present and that there would be no quorum. A moment or two ago I telephoned to the majority leader of the House, and he told me there would be a quorum there to-morrow. But in order that there may be no delay whatever I shall not propose the amendment about which I spoke to the Senator, but I hope that when some of the other inequalities are ironed out that particular inequality may be ironed out in order that the committee of which I have the honor to be chairman may have an opportunity to have its foreign correspondence answered in the languages in which it originates.

Mr. WARREN. I trust that that may be brought about.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator about some apparent inequalities in the bill. I notice the salaries of secretaries to Senators, and clerks, appear to have been increased from $3,300 to $3,900. I think the clerks and secretaries are entitled to those increases, and that principle seems to have prevailed throughout the bill, except in two instances. One clerk of the Committee on Finance was raised from $3,600 to $4,200, and one clerk in the Committee on Appropriations was raised from $3,300 to $4,200. Those two seem to differ from the general plan worked out in the bill. I do not see why those differences should be made.

Mr. WARREN. Since I have been in the Senate, quite some years, we have always expected to pay more to those working in the two Committees of Finance and Appropriations, who do more work than those engaged in other committees. The Senator knows very well the difference between the work the Committee on Appropriations has to do and the services of Senators and attachés in other committees. The Committee on Finance handles all revenue bills, and the clerks connected with that committee receive more pay because of that work, and they always have done so. They received more before this revision was suggested to the committee, and they are to get only what we believe they should receive.

Mr. FLETCHER. The Committee on Appropriations has some nine clerks and the Committee on Finance nine. There is another item in the bill, the report shows, where there have been four increases. I thought perhaps some explanation might be made about those matters. For instance, on page 3 the recommendation of the committee as to new employment provides for six new places. Is it necessary to provide for those?

Mr. WARREN. It has been so considered. The requests were put before the committee by the chairmen of the committees, considered, and granted. Two of the new places are in the House, four in the Senate.

Mr. FLETCHER. The Senator knows that a number of these people are not here at all during the recess of Congress. On the contrary, as the Senator from New Hampshire has said, there are clerks with certain committee work who are here all the while, and it seems to me in those important positions the clerks ought to be paid more than those who are here when certain bills are up, and are working when certain bills are up and the rest of the time are away, not giving attention to the work here at all. I think all these clerks who are here for the year, working in season and out of season, ought to be raised to $4,200.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming permit me to make a correction?

Mr. WARREN. I am willing to have as many corrections made as Senators desire.

Mr. MOSES. I spoke of the preparation of the Naval Yearbook. I am informed authoritatively that that is the practice which has fallen into innocuous desuetude since the chairmanship of the distinguished Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], from whose place I am now speaking; that that work is no longer carried on, and that the appropriation is not used.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, if I may be allowed a moment, I want to say this, that I believe from the bottom of my heart that either we shall pass this bill now as it is before us, or it will not be passed at all. If Senators want to take the responsibility here to-day of leaving these clerks unprovided for in the way of increases, while the committee has done its best to arrange it, of course I can go no farther than to ask, as I do now, that the bill be passed as it is.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill is in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment. If there be no amendment proposed, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I am not going to delay the passage of the bill. But I want to say this: We are providing a permanent system, at least one for some years to come, for dealing with legislative employees. There is a glaring inequality in the distribution of clerks to the various Senators. I have in my hand a list of 18 States with a combined total population less than the population of my State. The Senators representing these States have 144 clerks to do work for a population less than the population of my State, served by eight clerks—four for each Senator.

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] four or five years ago made a plea to the Senate that each Senator from each of the largest States might have an additional clerk, and when I get opportunity, I shall undertake to make a plea that that be done. It is manifestly unfair to ask the Senators from the big States to serve their tremendous constituencies with pitifully small staffs. I am sure the Senate will recognize the justice of this appeal.

I do think that in the correction of inequalities, when we come to consider the matter at another time, appropriate action should be taken. But I have no disposition at all to delay the vote at this time. I shall urge the matter on another occasion. I trust the pending bill will pass.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no amendment to be offered in the Senate the question is on the third reading.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill (S. 1531) to fix the compensation of officers and employees of the legislative branch of the Government will be indefinitely postponed.

CARL A. LOEFFLER

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, I offer a resolution, and ask for its immediate consideration.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Let it be reported.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the resolution.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 96), as follows:

Resolved, That Carl A. Loeffler, of Pennsylvania, be, and he is hereby, elected secretary for the majority of the Senate, effective on and after July 1, 1929.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, Mr. Loeffler has held the position of and has hitherto been called the Assistant Sergeant at Arms. The bill that has just been passed changes his title to "secretary for the majority of the Senate." Unless this resolution be passed he will go out of office on the 1st of July, because his position is an elective one, and he must be elected by the Senate. Therefore I have offered this resolution, and I understand the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] will offer a similar one on behalf of Colonel Halsey.

Mr. WARREN. I hope the resolution may be agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

EDWIN A. HALSEY

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I send to the desk a resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 97) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That Edwin A. Halsey, of Virginia, be, and he is hereby, elected secretary for the minority of the Senate, effective on and after July 1, 1929.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, Senate Joint Resolution 53 is a measure for the purpose of carrying out the special message of the President of a few days ago providing for a joint commission of Senators and Representatives to look into the matter of the reorganization of the prohibition units of the Government. It seems to me this is a very appropriate time for the passage of the joint resolution. I hope it can be passed by the House to-morrow. There are some minor amendments only, suggested by the Judiciary Committee. I ask for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I hope this joint resolution may go over until to-morrow. I notified the Senator from Washington of my intention to speak on the measure, and for three days I have been ready to speak upon it, but it was not called up.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I have no objection to the immediate consideration of the joint resolution, but it could not be passed to-day. There are a number of Senators absent, some of whom have informed me that they wanted to be present when the joint resolution is considered.

Mr. JONES. I trust I may be able to get consideration of the joint resolution to-morrow.

AMENDMENT OF IMMIGRATION LAW

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I report back favorably from the Committee on Immigration the bill (S. 1537) to amend subdivision (a) of section 1 of the act entitled "An act making it a felony with penalty for certain aliens to enter the United States of America under certain conditions in violation of law," approved March 4, 1929.

This has been submitted to the various members of the committee, and it ought to be passed to relieve three or four cruel situations that were brought about on account of the passage of the Blease deportation bill at the last session. I ask for the immediate consideration of the bill.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President, before the bill is acted upon, I would like to state that the provisions causing the inequalities mentioned by the Senator from California, the chairman of the Committee on Immigration, were put into the law by the House. They were not in the original bill as introduced by me.

Mr. JOHNSON. That is correct.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from California?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subdivision (a) of section 1 of the act entitled "An act making it a felony with penalty for certain aliens to enter the United States of America under certain conditions in violation of law," approved March 4, 1929 (Public Law No. 1018, 70th Cong.), is amended to read as follows:

"That (a) if any alien has been arrested and deported in pursuance of law, he shall be excluded from admission to the United States whether such deportation took place before or after the enactment of this act, and if he enters or attempts to enter the United States after the expiration of 60 days after the enactment of this act he shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction thereof shall, unless a different penalty is otherwise expressly provided by law, be punished by imprisonment for not more than two years or by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by both such fine and imprisonment: Provided, That this act shall not apply to any alien arrested and deported before March 4, 1929, in pursuance of law, in whose case prior to his reembarkation at a place outside the United States, or his application in foreign contiguous territory for admission to the United States, the Secretary of Labor has granted such alien permission to reapply for admission."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CLAIMS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES GRAIN CORPORATION

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I send to the desk a resolution and ask that it may be read, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 98) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Whereas on the 4th day of February, 1929, Senate Joint Resolution No. 59, now Public Resolution No. 80 of the Seventieth Congress, providing for the settlement, adjustment, and method of payment of certain claims, for insurance and interest, growing out of a certain contract, therein referred to as the "grain dealers' agreement," between the United States Grain Corporation and divers parties; and

Whereas all books, records, and information in relation thereto are in the possession and custody of the Department of Commerce under and by virtue of the proclamation of the President dated December 31, 1927, and numbered 4791; and

Whereas it is essential that the Senate be informed in relation thereto: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Department of Commerce be, and it is hereby, directed to furnish, in typewritten form, to the Senate and file with its Secretary, promptly after the adoption of this resolution—

(a) The names and addresses of each person, firm, or corporation as they appear on such books and records of the United States Grain Corporation and who have, or appear to have, therefrom, a claim against the United States Grain Corporation or the United States, unpaid, in whole or in part, for such interest and insurance under and by virtue of said contract; and

(b) The respective amounts entered on said books and records as apparently earned by each said person, firm, and corporation, under and by virtue of said contract.

The preamble was agreed to.

TULSA INTERNATIONAL OIL EXPOSITION

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, there is now pending before the Committee on Foreign Relations House Joint Resolution 109, an exact copy of a joint resolution passed by the Congress during the Seventieth Congress. It authorizes the President to extend an invitation to foreign governments to participate in the Tulsa International Oil Exposition. With the cooperation and approval of my colleague [Mr. PINE] and with the consent of the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations I have polled the committee. I now send to the desk the joint resolution with the names of 15 members of the committee, and I ask for the immediate consideration of the measure. It contains no appropriation of any kind or character.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oklahoma?

There being no objection, the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 109) authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., to begin October 5, 1929, was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and it was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is authorized to invite by proclamation, or in such other manner as he may deem proper, the States of the Union and all foreign countries to participate in the proposed International Petroleum Exposition, to be held at Tulsa, Okla., beginning October 5, 1929, for the purpose of exhibiting samples of fabricated and raw products of all countries used in the petroleum industry and bringing together buyers and sellers for promotion of trade and commerce in such products.

SEC. 2. All articles that shall be imported from foreign countries for the sole purpose of exhibition at the International Petroleum Exposition upon which there shall be a tariff or customs duty shall be admitted free of the payment of duty, customs fees, or charges, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but it shall be lawful at any time during the exhibition to sell any goods or property imported for and actually on exhibition, subject to such regulations for the security of the revenue and for the collection of import duties as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe: Provided, That all such articles when sold or withdrawn for consumption or use in the United States shall be subject to the duty, if any, imposed upon such articles by the revenue laws in force at the date of withdrawal; and on such articles which shall have suffered diminution or deterioration from incidental handling and necessary exposure, the duty, if paid, shall be assessed according to the appraised value at the time of withdrawal for consumption or use, and the penalties prescribed by law shall be enforced against any person guilty of any illegal sale, use, or withdrawal.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE COMMITTEE ON TERRITORIES AND INSULAR AFFAIRS

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, there is lying on the desk a resolution (S. Res. 55) which I called up some time ago and which was objected to at that time by the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. ROBINSON]. It merely provides for a change in the name of the Committee on Territories and Insular Possessions to "Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs." I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Connecticut?

There being no objection, the resolution was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the last paragraph of section 1 of Rule XXV of the Standing Rules of the Senate be, and hereby is, amended to read as follows: "Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, to consist of 14 Senators."

THE COLOR LINE AT A BOY SCOUT CAMP

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks, and immediately following this statement, an editorial appearing in the Philadelphia Record of to-day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The editorial is as follows:

[From the Philadelphia Record, Tuesday, June 18, 1929]

THE COLOR LINE AT A BOY SCOUT CAMP

"Negro Boy Scouts Barred from Summer Camp."

That might be a news headline from Opelika, Ala., or Possumneck, Miss. But it isn't. It conveys a suggestive bit of news about Philadelphia.

In the Delaware River above Trenton lies Treasure Island, the gift of Edward W. Bok to the Boy Scout organization of this area. As romantic in its natural beauties as in its name, it provides a summer encampment where hundreds of youngsters enjoy the healthful fascination of outdoor life, learning to live by the code of manliness and self-reliance, which implants in them the ideals of loyal, helpful, democratic citizenship.

But for admission to this scout training ground there is a special test quite outside the matter of fidelity to the scout oath and the scout law.

The facilities are reserved for scouts who are white.

Negro scouts are eligible for every reward of merit except admission to Treasure Island. If they want to study nature and practice woodcraft, they must do so at a remote camp set apart for them.

There has been no criticism of the racial separation of scouts into white and colored troops. But forbidding the latter to use even part of the main camping ground has caused the disbanding of several of them. Nine have formally surrendered their charters. The scout movement among negro boys has been seriously weakened and may be discarded.

These actions were not hasty. When the segregation order was put into effect a year ago the negro scout leaders protested that it was "arbitrary, uncalled for, un-Christianlike, and in violation of the principles of scouting." But they did not withdraw until all appeals and months of negotiation had failed to move the council.

The segregation rule was confirmed by that body "in the interest of scouting as a whole" and "to conform with an agreement among all welfare organizations of the State."

Those responsible for it are confident, apparently, that it is wise and necessary. Nevertheless, it would seem that all essential requirements as to separation of the groups could be observed on a spacious camping ground without resort to the provocative order of absolute exclusion.

"A scout," one reads in the manual, "is kind to everything that lives"—presumably without distinction of race.

"He must do at least one good turn to somebody every day"—not necessarily to some white person.

"He is a friend to all and a brother to every other scout"—no reservation as to color there.

So if the scout authorities justify the Jim Crow rule to themselves it must be purely as an administrative measure, not as an exemplification of any principle or doctrine or aim underlying the admirable institution of scoutcraft.

THE PARIS PEACE PACT

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I ask leave to print in the RECORD a speech delivered by the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] on the subject How to Make the Paris Peace Pact Effective. The address was delivered before the American Society of International Law upon the occasion of their annual meeting in Washington on April 27 last.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The address is as follows:

Almost every important nation in the world has signified its adhesion to the Kellogg peace pact.

To what extent is world peace made more certain by it? And what can be done to make the objectives of this pact attainable? There is no machinery created by it; there is no international court set up or League of Nations to which disputes if they arise between signatories must be referred. Neither is there in this treaty any plan outlined or contemplated for disarmament, although with any real and effective renunciation of war disarmament should naturally follow.

This peace pact operates merely in the moral sphere. The nations may build their battleships, submarines, airships, maintain armies, and manufacture munitions and poisonous gases as in the past.

Even with no limits or restrictions upon spending unlimited sums of money in preparation for war, and with the existing of treaties and conventions between groups of nations to go to war under prescribed conditions, yet in my opinion it is presumptuous to assume that this treaty is worthless and that upon the arising of an issue which would arouse the jealousy and anger of a nation or nations the barrier set up against war in this treaty is so fragile that it would break down instantly.

This assumption is necessarily based upon the value of moral barriers. How powerful are they? How can they be made more powerful? Among individuals are not most barriers primarily moral and not merely the existence of policemen, prisons, courts, and judges? It is the spirit which is imbued into the moral forces of civilization which is the barrier against crime. If it was not for this spirit in the world, civilization would have been destroyed long ago.

How are these moral forces created? The moral conscience is built up in individuals by religion and education, which includes customs, traditions, laws, literature, and experience. Thus it must be with nations. Just as there is a sentiment in humanity against robbing, killing, and other serious violations, so there can be an effectual moral force built up in favor of peace and against war.

Peace can be made a powerful sentiment in the average man once he is properly informed as to its importance to civilization, and to him. Let him fully understand the new rôle which he must play in future wars; that the burdens of war rest chiefly upon him; that the wars of the future are to be not between armies and navies, but the airplane, the submarine, poisonous gases, and other war inventions, used, as they will be, to wipe out and destroy peoples, will be directly against the individual.

Educational forces throughout the world must be set in motion which will not only show present unsettled peace conditions of the world, but which will appeal to the enlightened self-interests of mankind.

The masses of human beings everywhere must realize who are responsible for war and center their attention upon remedies at the fountain source. Who are the war makers? The man in the street does not want war. It is he who must meet its terrible drafts of life and health; of man power and woman power and national resources, of taxes and waste and destruction; of corruption and violence and oppression.

The average citizen does not cherish the ideas that provoke war—hate and hypocrisy, fear and suspicion, industrial or commercial selfishness, deceitful propaganda, cunning and circumvention, espionage and treachery. He is guiltless of the common cause of war—ambition, envy, and national rivalry.

He knows too well what war has always meant for him and his children. He may now be inarticulate, but once he is persuaded of the vast and incurable immorality of war, he will hail with joy every argument or plan that tends to abolish it or diminish its menace. This common understanding must be made articulate. If so, it will make outlawry of war the one sentiment that is paramount to the spirit of nationalism.

Religion, all religion, must make the peace appeal. By religion I mean that natural religion to which every heart can be led to humanity; that religion that points out the criminal and immoral character of most wars and its unspeakable horrors; that religion which creates moral forces of justice and charity, to which we owe all that is permanent in our civilization. Unless religion educates the modern youth in every part of the world on solemn outlines of justice and charity, I see little hope for universal and lasting peace.

The great preventatives of wars, unfortunately, in the past have not found lodging in the world of statesmanship where wars usually originate. Once the plain men and women the world over are imbued with the educational and spiritual ideals of peace, and their power is internationally coordinated, they will demand from their statesmen good faith; that is, honesty in purpose and expression and a realization that no cause is ever settled until it is settled rightly; and that human beings are fallible and, therefore, we must observe the Golden Rule and deal with our neighbor as we want him to deal with us.

Care should be exercised in distinguishing between the principles of peace and the instruments which have been, or may be, set up to govern the international political agencies for peace. The international peace instruments which have been set up do not renounce war; in fact, one of the objections made in America to these instruments which have been set up was that they recognized and supported the doctrine of force as a means to peace.

Whatever differences there may be over the efficaciousness of these international institutions, there should be no difference in arousing a massed world-wide opinion to agree to renounce war and to settle the differences between nations by peaceful methods. This massed opinion will give a moral sanction to the Kellogg peace pact that will outlaw from the society of nations those governments which break their solemn obligation to settle their differences by peaceful means. Such an awakening of the intelligent public opinion of the world will make war internationally impossible and give the necessary moral sanction to this peace pact.

Particularly will it be found easy to create this moral and massed sentiment for peace among the smaller nations. They have special reasons for promoting a powerful international sentiment directed against war. It is the so-called great powers who particularly possess the ambitions, rivalries, and jealousies that lead to war, and the small nations well know that once they resort to war they have no respect for the rights of the smaller nations. The small nations have nothing to gain by war, neither has the average man or woman; both are economically paralyzed and injured by way; both, very naturally, should be most eager to create a world sentiment powerful and effective enough to make even the mightiest nation hesitate before violating the solemn pledge not to resort to war to settle its disputes.

The education for peace sentiment must be vigorously carried on among the so-called "great powers." Every effort should be made to bring about agreements for disarmament among them; also to force the statesmen of these nations to recognize that the moral obligations behind a treaty for peace must be as binding as a treaty for war. Once the "great powers" are made to realize that their subjects are both loyal nationalists, and at the same time good peace internationalists, we will have convinced the statesmen of the great powers that the sentiment that war is evil is compelling and controlling.

We must fully understand that force can not suddenly or promptly be eradicated. It is folly to believe that the great powers can be persuaded at once to disarm their armies and dismantle their navies and trust each other merely to settle differences between them by arbitration. We must search for some substitute for national armies and navies to adequately protect the rights, dignity, and territory of the respective nations. Already considerations of such plans are being made. My own belief is that with the peace movement and with the continuation of the burdens of taxation for war purposes upon the people that disarmament will naturally and inevitably follow, just as disarmament of individuals followed upon the establishment and maintenance of law-enforcing officials. Disarmament, or at least much of it, is inevitable as a result of the inculcation of principles of peace among the people of the world.

There are three positions one can take on the peace pact. Those who prefer war, of course, are consistent, at least, in expressing contempt for peace treaties. Those who think war is inevitable may be excused by considering the Kellogg peace pact despicable in their eyes. Those who know from experience how greatly peoples and nations suffer in war and who realize that peoples and nations can not fail to suffer grievously from a great war in the future can not take any other attitude than insisting that this pact be taken seriously; that it is not a piece of hypocrisy; and that politicians and statesmen must not break it.

Let us look upon this pact as a turning of the nations of the world from their war sprees and their decision to take a pledge, partly because they have learned how much their quarrels injure themselves and partly from genuine remorse, if not from higher motives. The pledge takers should be encouraged rather than discouraged to mend their ways. We should help them to keep their pledge instead of shouting that we know the pledge will not be kept. The attitude of being willing to do nothing to make nations keep their pledge is unworthy.

The wise course for all to take with regard to this treaty is simple and clear. Idealism and policy, our own interests, and the interests of the world all coincide in making our course plain. Granting even that the motives of many of the nations that led them to the signing of the treaty were extremely mixed, it should, nevertheless, be our endeavor to bring all support we can to those forces in the world which are striving to make this treaty a reality. Any other course means the pact must fail, as well as every other effort for peace. On the other hand, if the peoples of the world show that they expect and intend this treaty to be taken seriously, then statesmen and politicians will be less likely to break it.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER FLOOD SITUATION

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that to-morrow, as soon as I can get recognition, I shall speak briefly on Senate Resolution 69, which provides for the appointment of an engineering advisory board to deal with the Mississippi River flood situation.

DISARMAMENT, REPARATIONS, AND FOREIGN DEBTS

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that to-morrow, as soon as I can get recognition, I desire to make a very short speech on the subject of disarmament, reparations, and foreign debts.

STEUBEN SOCIETY OF AMERICA AND NATIONAL ORIGINS

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, a few days ago, in debate upon the question involving what is known as the national-origins provision of the immigration act, certain statements were made which led to debate concerning in an indirect way the patriotism and loyalty of the Steuben Society of America. I have received a letter from Mr. Theodore H. Hoffmann, first vice chairman and acting chairman of the Steuben Society of America, concerning the matter which I think invites the attention of all Members of the Senate who engaged in consideration of the question which was recently before us. I shall not ask that it be read at this time, but I invite the attention of Senators to it as it shall appear in the RECORD. I ask unanimous consent that the letter may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF THE STEUBEN SOCIETY OF AMERICA,
New York, N. Y., June 17, 1929.

Senator GERALD P. NYE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: There appeared in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD under date of June 6, 1929, on pages 2421 and 2422, during the debate on the national-origins question, certain statements referring to the Steuben Society of America which are erroneous and misleading. A statement has been made on the floor of the Senate that our society is an oath-bound secret society. May we point out to you that our society is not an oath-bound secret society.

Certain statements have also been made and contained on page 2422 questioning the allegiance of our society to the United States of America, and casting insinuations as to the loyalty and patriotism to this country by our society and members.

Perhaps it is not generally known that all members of our society are citizens of the United States of America, and for which our constitution and statutes expressly provide.

The aims and purposes of our society are as follows:

Loyally to support the Constitution of the United States of America by advocating the proper application of its provisions and inculcating the principles underlying true democratic government.

To quicken the spirit of sound Americanism and fostering a patriotic American spirit among all citizens.

To aid in maintaining the independence and sovereignty of the United States of America and its freedom from all foreign influence.

To establish cooperation among its members in the exercise of their civic duties and to encourage among them an active participation in every phase of our national life.

To promote the welfare and enhance the happiness of its members and their fellow men.

To perpetuate itself as a patriotic and fraternal voluntary membership organization and to provide for its government.

To guard our political liberty by maintaining an honest equality of citizenship regardless of the birth, origin, or religion of any citizen.

To maintain the traditions of our country.

Mention has also been made that the Progressive Magazine is the official organ of the Steuben Society of America. The Progressive Magazine never was and is not now the official organ of our society. It is quite probable that we have been confused with the Steuben Club, a purely local organization in the city of Chicago.

Our society is named after Gen. Baron Frederick William von Steuben, the drillmaster and inspector general of the American forces during the Revolution, a man whom General Washington held in the highest esteem.

It is the purpose of our society to uphold the traditions of the founders of this Republic; and the questions in which our society are interested are approached by us from a purely American standpoint. We resent vigorously any insinuation as to the loyalty, patriotism, and devotion to this country by our society and members.

Sincerely yours,

THEO. H. HOFFMANN,
First Vice Chairman and Acting Chairman.

RECESS

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, I had originally intended to ask for an adjournment to-night; but so many Senators have stated that they desire an opportunity to speak to-morrow that I think the entire day, with the exception of an executive session which must be had to-morrow, will be taken up with speeches. Therefore I move that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow at 12 o'clock noon.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate (at 5 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) took a recess until to-morrow, Wednesday, June 19, 1929, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, June 18, 1929

The House met at 12 o'clock noon and was called to order by the Speaker.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Draw near to us, our Heavenly Father, with Thy brooding Holy Spirit. Draw near to cleanse our minds from all fear, from doubt, from the sense of guilt, and all desire which is unworthy of the children of God. Let Thy kingdom come not only in this favored land but in all lands. O make the power of men to reside in goodness of heart, in the sense of justice, and in their intelligence. Those evils that come from discord and false understandings do Thou defeat them and banish cruelities and violence from the face of the earth. At this moment, which is momentous, may the two English-speaking peoples be guided into a more perfect knowledge and wisdom of their relations and responsibility to other nations. God be with the two notable sons in their counsels, and may the hour of mutual understanding speedily come. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Craven, its principal clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 3671. An act to authorize and direct a survey to be made of the Escambia River and its tributaries, Alabama and Florida; and

H. R. 4016. An act making an appropriation to carry out the provisions of the "agricultural marketing act," approved June 15, 1929.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed, with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H. J. Res. 102. Joint resolution making an appropriation for expenses of participation by the United States in the meeting of the International Technical Consulting Committee on Radio Communications to be held at The Hague in September, 1929.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills and a concurrent resolution of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 1535. An act to extend the time for the construction of the bridge across the Chesapeake Bay;

S. 1548. An act extending the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the White River at or near Newport, Ark.; and

S. Con. Res. 16. Concurrent resolution for an adjournment of the Senate from June 19 to August 19, 1929.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1453) entitled "An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of certain bridges, and for other purposes."

FUNERAL EXPENSES OF PRINCE ROBINSON

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, I present a privileged resolution from the Committee on Accounts.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts presents a privileged resolution from the Committee on Accounts, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 52

Resolved, That there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House, to L. E. Murray & Son, $250 to cover the funeral expenses of Prince Robinson, late an employee of the House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I should like to proceed for five minutes in regard to the order of business.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, the resolution that has just come over from the Senate proposes a recess of the Senate until August 19, provided the House concurs. There is one matter that is standing in the way. I hope if possible to take up that matter to-day by unanimous consent and have it disposed of. The matter referred to is the demand for the payment of $400,000,000 of the French debt due August 1. As Members know, the Secretary of the Treasury and the French ambassador two years or more ago entered into an agreement for the settlement of the French debt. The House of Representatives ratified that agreement. It was sent to the Senate. The French Government refused, or at any rate failed, to ratify it. It has not yet been ratified by France, and has not been ratified by the Senate.

As I now understand, there is a probability that the French will ratify that agreement within the next two or three weeks. If the agreement should be ratified it carries with it the $400,000,000 which by the agreement is merged in the greater settlement. No action has been taken giving the Secretary of the Treasury authority to suspend the demand for the payment of the $400,000,000, even though the French in the meanwhile should ratify the agreement merging the $400,000,000 in the greater settlement. The Secretary of the Treasury would still be compelled to make the demand. Under all the circumstances, it seems to me that the Secretary of the Treasury ought to be placed in a position where in case the agreement is ratified he need not make the demand for the payment of the $400,000,000.

I wish to make one further statement concerning something that is perhaps not known to everybody. The agreement in question was made more than two years ago. The House ratified it, though it has not been otherwise ratified, but at the same time the French Government has proceeded to act under that agreement and has lived up to it just as though it had been ratified. The French have made the payments each year under the agreement just as if it had been ratified, so that if it should be ratified now it would take effect at the time that was originally fixed.

What I now propose is that those of us who are here to-day should thresh this matter out by ourselves and see whether we can agree to allow the Secretary of the Treasury to suspend the demand if in the meanwhile the French shall have ratified the agreement. I now ask unanimous consent to take up the matter now and consider it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut asks unanimous consent that it may be in order to-day to consider the resolution suspending the demand for the payment of the $400,000,000. Is there objection?

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I feel in duty bound to object.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, let me ask the gentleman from Connecticut for more details in regard to the statement he made a moment ago. If I understand it, the gentleman's suggestion apparently comes from the executive department—or shall I say the White House? Why not state to the Congress the situation so that the House may understand it? I am opposed to the resolution that the gentleman from Connecticut refers to, and when the Committee on Ways and Means reported the resolution I gave notice at the time of my opposition to it.

Mr. TILSON. The gentleman is opposed to the ratification agreement?

Mr. GARNER. Yes; and I would not be in favor of anything that looked toward the confirmation of the French agreement. I am sure this resolution can not pass the House prior to the adjournment, and the resolution of the Senate, which has just come over, provides that when they adjourn to-morrow they shall adjourn until the 19th of August.

I understood the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. TILSON] a while ago to say that the powers that be, whoever they may be—the President of the United States; why not say who it is—states that if the House of Representatives will consider this matter and pass it, then he would feel justified in holding up presentation of the matter until the 19th day of August, when the Senate may have an opportunity to pass upon it.

The only difficulty I see is that some gentleman may want a roll call on this resolution. So far as I am individually concerned, I will not call for that. I merely want the opportunity of expressing myself and calling attention to the fact that I am opposed to it. I realize, and I think everyone else realizes, that if the French settlement comes up it is going to be ratified by the Congress. All the other settlements have been ratified, some of them, in my opinion, more detrimental to this country than the French settlement, but I do not know whether such an agreement can be made, because, in my judgment, if you call the roll to-day you will not find a quorum in the city. The result would be that you would have to get a quorum before you could adopt the resolution of adjournment. So either way you go, unless it is practically by unanimous consent, there is no chance of adopting this resolution and the resolution for adjournment.

Mr. TILSON. It was my purpose in bringing the matter to the attention of the House that we might dispose of the matter and then the road would be clear, so far as we are concerned, for adopting the recess resolution. If we have to go over until to-morrow in order to get a quorum here, and take this matter up under Calendar Wednesday business, it would certainly endanger the recess resolution. If we might consider it to-day, those of us who are here, representative, I believe, of the entire House, we can express our judgment, which, I believe, would be the judgment of the entire House if here, and then it would be out of the way for to-morrow. We could then do something else to-morrow, including passing the recess resolution.

Mr. WINGO. Will the gentleman from Connecticut yield for a question?

Mr. TILSON. Yes.

Mr. WINGO. It has been some time since the settlement was considered by the House. Is this $400,000,000 included in the settlement and made a part of it?

Mr. TILSON. Yes; it is merged into it.

Mr. WINGO. So if the French Government between now and August 1 should ratify that settlement and then subsequently the Senate should ratify the settlement, all of the French debt, including the $400,000,000, would be included in one settlement and in one series of payments?

Mr. TILSON. That is correct.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. May I interrupt the gentleman from Connecticut?

Mr. TILSON. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. In order that we may know precisely what we have been talking about, would the gentleman object to having the resolution read at the Clerk's desk?

Mr. TILSON. I wish the Clerk would read the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will read the resolution referred to.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Joint Resolution 80

Authorizing the postponement of the date of maturity of the principal of the indebtedness of the French Republic to the United States in respect of the purchase of surplus war supplies

Whereas an indebtedness of the French Republic to the United States in respect of the purchase of surplus war supplies in the amount of $400,000,000 is due and payable on August 1, 1929; and

Whereas the payment of such indebtedness is provided for in the agreement (known as the Mellon-Berenger agreement) made on behalf of the United States by the World War Foreign Debt Commission and approved by the President, providing for the funding and payment of the entire indebtedness of the French Republic to the United States; and

Whereas such agreement specifically provides that it shall not become effective until ratified in France and until approved by the Congress; and

Whereas the ratification in France of such agreement, in accordance with the terms thereof, is now under consideration: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, etc., That in the event that the agreement between the French Republic and the United States (known as the Mellon-Berenger agreement) made on behalf of the United States by the World War Foreign Debt Commission and approved by the President, providing for the funding and payment of the indebtedness of the French Republic to the United States is ratified in France in accordance with the terms thereof, prior to August 1, 1929, the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, is authorized to enter into an agreement with the French Republic providing for the postponement of the date of the maturity of the principal of its indebtedness in respect of its purchase of surplus war supplies, until the Mellon-Berenger agreement has been approved or disapproved by the Congress, but in no event shall such date be postponed beyond May 1, 1930. Such agreement shall not be entered into unless the French Republic agrees to pay the interest upon such indebtedness upon August 1, 1929, and February 1, 1930, but the amounts paid as interest shall be credited against the amounts first due under the Mellon-Berenger agreement, if such agreement is approved by the Congress.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, the resolution explains itself. It is in no wise waiving our demand. It is simply postponing the time until Congress shall have an opportunity to pass upon it and in no case extending the time beyond May 1, 1930.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. And as I understand the gentleman from Connecticut and the language of the resolution, the resolution, in substance, is a determination or agreement to postpone the final disposition of the matter only in the event the French Assembly or the French Government should ratify prior to the 1st of August.

Mr. TILSON. That is all. It is only a postponement in any event, and even the postponement does not take place unless meanwhile the French shall have ratified the agreement.

Mr. HASTINGS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TILSON. Yes.

Mr. HASTINGS. I have not voted for any of these debt settlements. I am not going to vote for this resolution of postponement. The House gave me an opportunity last Friday to make a rather extended speech in opposition to it.

The House ought to know, and its memory ought to be refreshed with respect to the fact that the consideration of this resolution was set down for last Wednesday a week ago, and we were given notice that the resolution was going to be called up, and you will recall that when we came into the Chamber on that Wednesday, instead of this resolution being called up, without any explanation to the House, a motion for an adjournment was agreed to.

For a number of days thereafter, until it became embarrassing to me, I made inquiry of the majority leader and others in control of this legislation as to when the resolution would likely be called up, and I was never able to get anything like a definite reply.

I am considerably embarrassed if my minority leader does not object. I am not on the Ways and Means Committee. I am vigorously opposed to this resolution, and I want to say another word or two on the merits.

The French settlement agreement was entered into on the 29th day of April, 1926. The House of Representatives ratified it on June 2, 1926, which is more than three years ago.

The $400,000,000 is for war supplies. I made a speech the other day on this subject and the gentleman from Michigan interrupted to say that these war supplies were bought at a very great discount.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Does not the record show that the war supplies were resold to other European governments?

Mr. HASTINGS. I do not know about that. The French finance commissioner reported within the first five years they had sold to their own people $270,000,000 worth of the $400,000,000, and during the last three years nothing has been done by France with reference to ratifying the settlement. Now it is called up when an adjournment resolution has been reported from the Senate, and we are asked under these circumstances to consent to the consideration by less than a quorum in order that we may get away.

I want to enter my vigorous protest against it. Objection has been made by others. I do not know just what attitude I would take if the minority leader, who is responsible as ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, permits the resolution to be considered.

Mr. DENISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HASTINGS. I yield.

Mr. DENISON. The $400,000,000 is merged in the general settlement, and this House has ratified that settlement. The gentleman from Oklahoma will agree to that. Now, if the French Government ratifies the general settlement and the Senate ratifies it so that provision is made for the collection of the $400,000,000, does the gentleman think that we still ought to go ahead and make them pay it again?

Mr. HASTINGS. This is $400,000,000 for which France gave her 10-year 5 per cent bonds due August 1, 1929. Let me say to the gentleman from Illinois, and I trust to the country, that I had rather have the $400,000,000 paid on August 1 than the French promises to pay, extended over a period of 62 years.

Mr. DENISON. That is not the question—the $400,000,000 has been merged.

Mr. HASTINGS. France has not ratified the agreement yet.

Mr. DENISON. But suppose they do ratify it.

Mr. HASTINGS. We ratified it in 1926. The French Government has had three years and has humiliated and embarrassed this Government during that length of time. The House passed the bill on June 2, 1926, and the Senate has not yet ratified it.

Mr. DENISON. The gentleman knows that if it is brought before the House again it will be ratified.

Mr. HASTINGS. I hope it will not be ratified.

Mr. DENISON. At any rate if the general settlement goes through the gentleman would not expect the Government to make a demand for the $400,000,000 again.

Mr. HASTINGS. If they collect the $400,000,000, they can deduct it from the $4,025,000,000 and extend the balance due over a period of 62 years.

Mr. TILSON. What the gentleman proposes would necessitate a new agreement which might be difficult to arrive at. If the gentleman insists on collecting the $400,000,000 now, it might defeat our chance to get the remainder of it.

Mr. HASTINGS. As I said before, I would rather have the $400,000,000 paid on August 1 than promises to pay extending over a period of 62 years.

Mr. DENISON. The gentleman knows that there were other billions borrowed during the war.

Mr. HASTINGS. I think I am familiar with it. Does not the gentleman from Illinois know that when we merge the $400,000,000 we are giving away 52.8 per cent of it?

Mr. DENISON. That is exactly right.

Mr. TILSON. And does the gentleman from Oklahoma say that he would rather have the $400,000,000 than to have the $4,000,000,000?

Mr. HASTINGS. Not the $4,000,000,000 but France's promises to pay extended over a period of 62 years.

Mr. TILSON. The gentleman realizes that France has punctually paid since this agreement was entered into.

Mr. HASTINGS. But the gentleman realizes that France has remained silent during three years and has taken no steps to ratify this agreement. Does the gentleman not think it rather humiliating and embarrassing to a great nation like ours to ratify this and then submit it to France and ask France to do nothing about it for three years?

Mr. TILSON. As the gentleman realizes, there have been greater disturbances in France than we have had here. They were much harder hit by the war than anybody else, and they have had their difficulties politically as well as financially. It has not been an easy matter to bring their people to consent to this agreement. Some of their people have insisted that they should not consent to it. The Government has not taken that attitude, but some of the people of France have. The gentleman knows that there has been considerable talk of that kind over there and should realize that they have had more than their share of sharp political differences among the many political parties in France during the last three years.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, will somebody in control of the floor yield to me?

Mr. TILSON. I am very glad to yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, we are nearing the time for going home. I had hoped that I might go home in a tranquil frame of mind.

Mr. TILSON. I hope the gentleman may.

Mr. HOWARD. I do not want to discuss this French matter before I go home. I was over in France a couple of years ago, and the memory of it is not happy. If we should go into this discussion I might be compelled to tell of the unhappy attitude of the French people toward us. I do not want to do that.

Mr. TILSON. I hope the gentleman will not feel disposed to do it.

Mr. HOWARD. So I have objected, selfishly very largely, because of my desire to go home in that tranquil frame of mind which so much becomes me.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TILSON. Yes.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Has the gentleman from Connecticut any information, or has anyone connected with this Government any information, as to whether or not France at this time has on hand $400,000,000 with which to pay this particular bill on the 1st day of August?

Mr. TILSON. Of course, we must assume that she has. We should not be justified in assuming anything else, although I have no definite information to give the gentleman on that subject.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Then I say to the gentleman that he simply lives up to his reputation as an optimist. If this agreement which is now being informally discussed were not approved by the House and the Congress, what reason have we to expect that this bill would be met on the 1st day of August? Possibly France might turn over to us some further promises to pay. I have no idea, and I doubt very much whether any of the Members of the House have any idea that France has the cash on hand to meet the obligation on the 1st day of August.

Mr. TILSON. The only thing that I know about it is that France has thus far met the terms of the agreement. I refer to the agreement entered into three years ago.

Mr. WOODRUFF. I am not challenging the integrity or the good faith of France. The thing I see is the impossibility of her meeting this obligation at the time she is supposed to meet it. If this proposed agreement is repudiated by the Congress, it means one thing, and one thing only, and that is that possibly we may have a settlement with France for $400,000,000, but no settlement with France for the more than $4,000,000,000 she now owes us. It seems to me that we would be derelict in our duty if we fail to ratify this agreement and thereby secure from France a definite agreement to meet her just obligation.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TILSON. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. I want to say to my friend from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS] with reference to the responsibility of objecting to this particular matter. I feel this way about it, as I discussed the matter with the Speaker of the House and the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. TILSON] this morning. I am opposed to this resolution. I believe it is to the best interest of our country that the $400,000,000 should be paid on the 1st day of August even if we never ratified any agreement with France. I am in perfect agreement with the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS] as to what is best for the country. If the majority leader and the Speaker of the House in connection with the President are going to insist that Congress remain here to pass this resolution it will take a quorum unless it can be taken up by unanimous consent. I do not think there is a quorum in the city. The result is that I will be responsible for having a quorum brought back. If the resolution that has just come from the Senate is not passed to-day or to-morrow, it will never be passed at this session in my judgment. I have had some discussion with Senators, and I think the gentleman is in agreement that unless the resolution of adjournment which the Senate has sent over to us is passed to-day, we will have no permanent recess this summer. Under the circumstances I felt that if he would give unlimited debate to this to-day, devote the entire time to it so that every gentleman opposed to it would have an opportunity to express himself on the debt resolution, that they might take it up and consider it, if they desire to do so, but it ought to be understood, if you do that, that you are not going to call for a quorum. If you call for a quorum you might just as well kill this resolution which has been sent to us by the Senate.

Mr. TILSON. We should have to wait until to-morrow to get a quorum here. Meanwhile, I think that all gentlemen should be willing as good sportsmen to say that those Members who are here, who are quite representative of the entire House, should discuss the resolution freely and vote upon it to-day by a standing vote. If there is a considerable majority for the resolution, then it would be understood that if the entire membership of the House were here a proportionate majority would probably be in favor of it. Is not that a fair sportsman's proposition? I submit it to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HOWARD].

Mr. HOWARD. Oh, from a sportsman's standpoint that would be absolutely a fair proposition, were it not that a principle stands between. My principle forbids me to yield in any respect with reference to this matter. I have tried to be quiet about it, and I am going to continue to be quiet about it.

I do not want to discuss the resolution now, because I am not feeling quite as well as I should like, and I fear the expenditure of the energy I might display might be harmful to me. [Laughter.] I would like to grant any request that my minority leader might make. I have never denied but one request of my majority leader since I have been in this House, but I am compelled now to file this objection, for the reasons I have stated, very regretfully. I am very much now in the attitude of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means [Mr. HAWLEY], who once so sweetly objected to a request of mine, and informed me at the same time that it gave him great pain. I am very much pained now, Mr. Speaker, but I must stand firm. [Laughter.]

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. HOWARD. Yes.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. If the gentleman does not object pretty soon, I am going to object and stop the agony. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOWARD. I would suggest to the gentleman from Wisconsin that I have objected.

Mr. DUNBAR. Mr. Speaker, I wish to propound a question to the gentleman from Connecticut. He said, concerning the calculations that resulted in the funding of the debt, made in 1925 and ratified by the House in 1926, that although France had never ratified that agreement, yet she had lived up to the obligations of that agreement.

Mr. TILSON. Yes; in the respect I mentioned.

Mr. DUNBAR. The object of that agreement was this, that France was to pay no interest for five years, but at the end of five years she was to commence to pay 1 per cent on her indebtedness and then gradually increase the payments until, near the conclusion of the period of 62 years, she would pay 3½ per cent interest. I understand France has made payments aggregating three or four hundred million dollars to the United States, although, as I understand it, in the meantime she was obligated to pay us nothing. Now the gentleman from Connecticut stated, if I understood him correctly, that this money paid by France to the United States, some three or four hundred million dollars, was to be used at the end of five years to liquidate her annual interest due.

Mr. TILSON. I understand that certain payments were provided for under the agreement, beginning small and gradually growing larger. Those payments have been made. I think they were about $30,000,000 a year to begin with.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. The fact is, as I recall the agreement, that it does not in itself specify anything in regard to the interest. It simply names certain annual payments to be made by France. The nature of these payments, whether of principal or interest, is shown in the reports of the Committee on Ways and Means, and those reports are illuminating, showing the nature of the agreement. The items themselves are specific amounts of money to be paid in 62 years, and as I understand it, France has made those specific payments provided for under the Berenger-Mellon agreement.

Mr. DUNBAR. I wish to state that of the $388,000,000 which France has paid on debt not funded, that $102,000,000 of this amount is to be made available to be applied to her annual payments, should France agree to the proposed funding of the debt by the United States Government. This $102,000,000 will be sufficient to pay France's obligations for the first two years should she agree to the funded debt proposed, and no payment will be required by her until 1933.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TILSON. Yes.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I would like to ask the gentleman this question, just for information: It is not intended, is it, to wait until the 19th day of August before starting the machinery under the farm relief bill?

Mr. TILSON. No.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I was wondering how before the 19th of August the President could appoint the board. If there was a vacancy during the recess, he would have authority to appoint a member of the board to fill the vacancy. Section 3 of Article II of the Constitution only gives him authority to make appointments when a vacancy occurs.

Mr. TILSON. I think that he could make the appointments just the same, but the appointees would not be entitled to draw pay unless they were subsequently confirmed by the Senate. Unless they were confirmed they would not be entitled to their pay, as a matter of legal right.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I object to the consideration of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard. Under the order of the House the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DENISON].

RAILROAD FREIGHT RATE ON WHEAT FOR EXPORT

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Speaker, on June 3 there were introduced into the House two resolutions, one by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES] and one by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HOWARD]. After reciting a number of "whereases," the resolutions provide in practically identical language as follows:

> That it is hereby declared to be the true policy in rate making to be pursued by the Interstate Commerce Commission in adjusting freight rates that the conditions which at any given time prevail in our several industries should be considered, in so far as it is possible to do so, to the end that commodities may freely move.
>
> SEC. 2. That in view of the existing depression in the wheat market, the Interstate Commerce Commission is hereby directed to effect, with the least practicable delay, reductions in freight rates on all wheat, intended for export, shipped from interior points to points of exportation, so that the same will be reduced over the present domestic rates on that commodity in a similar proportion to the reductions or advantages which now apply to manufactured iron and steel articles when intended for export over the rates applying on such articles of iron and steel when intended for domestic use.

The only difference between the two resolutions is that in the resolution of the gentleman from Texas the word "cotton" is inserted in addition to "wheat," which appears in the resolution of the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HOWARD].

Now, these resolutions, if enacted into law, would amount to a congressional mandate to the Interstate Commerce Commission to reduce the export freight rates on wheat and cotton to comparable rates with those on iron and steel products that are intended for export.

The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HOWARD] complained because the Speaker would not recognize him to ask unanimous consent to call up his resolution the other day for consideration. Of course, if the Speaker had recognized him for that purpose, there would have been objections from the various Members of the House, because there is involved in his resolution a very far-reaching and important principle, and such legislation ought not to be considered by the House until it has first been given the most careful consideration by the proper committee.

The Interstate Commerce Commission was organized in 1887, after the passage of the original interstate commerce act. Before that time there had been no regulation of freight rates. The railroads had been allowed to make their rates as they pleased, but in 1887 the Congress undertook the regulation of the railroads and the supervision of freight rates, and for that purpose created the Interstate Commerce Commission. Since then Congress has enacted various amendments to the interstate commerce act, until now the commission is composed of 11 men and they are performing one of the most important and most difficult functions of our Government.

Congress itself has never undertaken to make freight rates. We created a body of experts for that purpose; and they have to assist them a great number of experts in every line of railroad activities and economics; during the years that have passed since 1887 the commission, with its experts, has been giving very careful and strenuous study to the principles of rate making, until there have been evolved a great many fundamental and intricate principles of rate making which may be found stated and applied in the various decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

There is no problem of government that is so difficult, and, I may say, so important as that of making railroad rates. Congress can not do that kind of work. It is a work for experts. If Congress ever embarks upon the policy of making freight rates, then the Interstate Commerce Commission will soon be destroyed or its usefulness will soon be seriously impaired; then freight rates will be made on political lines rather than on scientific or economic lines. That would be the inevitable result of any attempt by Congress to change the wise policy that has been followed by our Government since 1887.

So when a resolution is offered to depart from this long-established and wise policy of the Government, it ought to receive the very serious consideration of the Members of the House, and my friend from Nebraska [Mr. HOWARD], and my friend from Texas [Mr. JONES], I am sure, when they have time to further study this question will realize their error in trying to have Congress embark on an entirely new policy of rate making that would destroy the usefulness of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Not only this, but if this resolution, by any chance, should have been passed it would have resulted in nothing that would have even approximately accomplished what the gentlemen from Nebraska and Texas have intended to accomplish; because I have found now, upon making inquiry of the commission, that the export rates on farm products have been reduced below the domestic rates more than have the export rates on iron and steel products. So that if the commission should be given a mandate to equalize these rates, as no doubt my friend from Nebraska had in mind, they would have had to increase the export rates on farm products rather than decrease them.

Mr. HOWARD rose.

Mr. DENISON. I can not yield now. I will yield in a moment.

I have taken this matter up with the commission to get some information, and I will take the liberty, with the consent of the House, of inserting in the RECORD a letter which I have just received from Commissioner Porter—and I understand the information in practically the same form has been furnished to other Members of the House—in which the commissioner discusses this question of export rates on farm products and shows in this letter that should the resolution be passed it would accomplish nothing, because the export rates on wheat and other farm products have already been reduced below the domestic rates to a greater extent than have the export rates on iron and steel products been reduced.

Let me now discuss just for a moment how these reductions in export rates happened to be brought about.

Prior to 1921 there were no such reductions in export rates. The export rates on iron and steel products and the export rates on farm products were the same as the domestic rates; but in 1921, I think it was, following the war, when there was quite a depression in some of the great industries, particularly in the steel industry and the automobile industry and in others, there was put into effect reductions in export rates on certain products amounting to about 25 per cent below the domestic rates. There was also put into effect similar or greater reductions on wheat, corn, and other farm products, and these reductions have been in effect ever since.

Mr. PALMER. Will the gentleman yield for a short question?

Mr. DENISON. I am afraid I will not have time to yield and complete my statement in the time I have.

Mr. PALMER. It is just a short question right on this subject. The gentlemen spoke about export rates; will the gentleman tell me, or can he tell me, how it was or why it was that in February, May wheat on the Chicago market was worth $1.33 and a few days ago it was only worth 94 cents? Tell me what agencies brought that about, and whether that is not more detrimental to the farmers than the export rate?

Mr. DENISON. I am sorry I can not answer that question. It is not relevant to the matter I am now discussing, and I want to take up the few moments I have to discuss the matter of export freight rates. I do not know what causes the price of wheat to fluctuate. If I did, I could soon be a rich man.

These reduced rates on farm products and upon certain other items were put into effect in 1920 or 1921. A few years later, in 1927, the railroads put into effect a still greater reduction in the export freight rates on automobiles, farm machinery, and on iron and steel products, amounting, in some cases, to 60 per cent of the domestic rates, which was the extreme; generally it amounted to 40 or 50 per cent.

This was done by the railroads voluntarily, without the authority or permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission. These were only temporary reductions, and they are temporary to-day. They would have expired by law on December 31, 1928, but the railroads have extended them another year, and so they will expire on December 31, 1929.

Mr. HOWARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DENISON. I yield.

Mr. HOWARD. Does the gentleman mean to say that the American railroads can put in any kind of a rate they want without the consent of the Interstate Commerce Commission?

Mr. DENISON. Yes; I say just that. I will take the liberty of inserting in my remarks certain sections of the interstate commerce act authorizing that—of any rates established must be lawful and reasonable.

Mr. HOWARD. That is very enlightening to me.

Mr. DENISON. And that is the reason I am making these remarks.

Mr. HOWARD. If the railroads have that much authority over the commission, perhaps I might in good parliamentary language repeat the declaration of a great statesman in this country who said under such circumstances that "they have too damned much authority." [Laughter.]

Mr. DENISON. I like to hear my friend from Nebraska make his humorous statements.

Mr. HOWARD. That is not humorous.

Mr. DENISON. I am trying to discuss this matter in a way that will give Members of the House some information. Our policy has always been and is to-day to allow railroads to make their own rates. Congress has laid down certain rules which must govern the making of rates. It has provided that the rate must be reasonable and that no rate shall be put into effect that shall unjustly discriminate against persons or communities. We have provided in the interstate commerce act certain principles upon which rates must be made, but the railroads themselves make the rates.

The law provides that whenever a railroad wants to change its rates and put in a new schedule of rates it must publish them in the manner provided by law and file a copy of the schedule with the Interstate Commerce Commission at least 30 days before the rates are to go into effect.

The interstate commerce act authorizes any person or community that may be adversely affected by them, or the officials of any States that may feel aggrieved, to file a protest, and then the commission is given the power to suspend the rates until full hearings can be had and the commission can determine whether the proposed new rates violate any of the principles provided for in the interstate commerce act.

So when during discussions that have occurred in the House on the so-called debenture plan it was claimed that the debenture plan was a subsidy and that the Government has been giving a subsidy to the iron and steel industries by reducing export freight rates, you can see how erroneous such a conclusion is. Neither the Government nor the commission has put into effect any reduced export freight rates. They have been put into effect by the railroads themselves.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Speaker, I ask permission to insert in the RECORD as part of my remarks certain sections of the interstate commerce act and also a letter from Interstate Commerce Commissioner Porter on this matter, and I also ask permission to insert a letter showing how the work of the commission is divided.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois to extend his remarks as indicated?

There was no objection.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague's time be extended five additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate this courtesy. Now, gentlemen, I want to briefly show how these export rates came to be put into effect. As I said a moment ago, the commission did not do it. The commission did not authorize it, but the railroads did. What brought it about? As a general rule the sea rates from the great markets of the world to our ports are the same. For instance, the water rate from points in Europe to New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, and New Orleans are the same. The lowest freight rate from a point in the central district, like Chicago, to a seaport would be from Chicago to Baltimore. If the railroads did not make similar rates to the other ports, then all of our exports would travel through the port of Baltimore, and it would require that the ships all go to the port of Baltimore. The other railroads, in order to treat the other ports of the country fairly, and in order to get their share of the export business of the country, put into effect export rates to New Orleans and Mobile and to the other Atlantic ports that are equal to the lowest rate to any of the Atlantic ports. So you will find that the export rates to New York, to Boston, and to Philadelphia have, generally speaking, been reduced by the railroads down to the rate to Baltimore, and a similar reduction has no doubt been made in the rates to New Orleans, so that part of our export business could move through the port of New Orleans, the ocean rate being the same to all these ports. It was in order to meet that situation and prevent all our exports from having to move to a single port and over a single railroad that the other railroads have reduced these rates to the other ports, and the same is true with reference to San Francisco. It happens that in order to reach certain foreign markets the same ocean freight rate has been made to San Francisco as to New York, and in order to move part of the export business by way of San Francisco the western railroads have put into effect the same export rate to San Francisco, from Chicago, for instance, as exists from Chicago to New York or from Chicago to Baltimore. I mention this briefly to show how these reduced export rates to different ports of the country came about. It is a matter purely of business relations between the railroads and the shippers.

Mr. LEATHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DENISON. Yes.

Mr. LEATHERWOOD. I am very much interested in that particular phase of the gentleman's discussion. In order to get an export rate, it is true that the railroad must first file an affidavit that the requested rate will not occasion a loss and that they will haul at a profit?

Mr. DENISON. No; that is not true.

Mr. LEATHERWOOD. What do they have to show?

Mr. DENISON. They do not have to show anything. They publish a schedule of the proposed new rates and file it with the Interstate Commerce Commission and the assumption is that if anybody is going to be injured or prejudiced by that rate they will make it known to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. LEATHERWOOD. But I understand that they have to file an affidavit that it will not occasion a loss.

Mr. DENISON. They are not required to by law.

Mr. LEATHERWOOD. Let us assume that if they do that, and they can haul at that rate without a loss as they say in their affidavit, then, why can they not haul other commodities at the same rate without a loss?

Mr. DENISON. It may depend somewhat on the commodity. There are many questions involved in this intricate problem of rate making, and on which I am not able to enlighten my friend from Utah; but I am sure that if he would take any of those questions up with representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the whole matter would be explained to him.

Mr. BURTNESS. Are not most of those export rates departures from the so-called fourth section, the long-and-short-haul clause of the act?

Mr. DENISON. No.

Mr. BURTNESS. Do not the railroads have to get specific consent before they can haul from a longer distance?

Mr. DENISON. No. An export rate is not considered a departure from the fourth section because it does not adversely affect any person or community in this country. Only domestic rates, I think, can violate the fourth section of the interstate commerce act.

Mr. Speaker, I insert here a letter which I have received from a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Mr. Claude R. Porter, with reference to the resolution of the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HOWARD]; this is the letter to which I have been referring during my remarks. I invite the attention of all Members of the House who are interested in this question of reduced export rates to the contents of this letter, because it is a frank statement from a very able member of the commission; it makes plain the functions of the commission with reference to rate making and explains how the reduced export rates on certain products were put into effect by the railroads. This letter also shows how futile would be the passage of either of the resolutions of the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HOWARD], or the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES].

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION,
Washington, June 12, 1929.

H. J. Res. 95. Export rates on wheat versus iron and steel articles.

Hon. EDWARD E. DENISON, M. C.,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. DENISON: I am informed that you have requested of the commission information bearing upon relative export rates on iron and steel articles and wheat, which is the subject of a resolution which has been introduced into the House of Representatives—H. J. Res. 95. Having had occasion to look into this subject as the result of a letter from another Member of the House, I submit below substantially the same information that has been furnished to him in answer to his letter.

The commission has power to require changes in rates only in a formal proceeding after full hearing. However, there is now pending a general investigation with respect to rates on grain and grain products to, from, and between points in the territory west of the Mississippi River to the Pacific coast and from the Canadian border to the Gulf, which investigation includes the export rates from that area to all ports. You can readily realize that this investigation is one of great magnitude. In an effort to afford all interested parties full opportunity to be heard, a commissioner and two examiners have conducted hearings in over a dozen of the principal cities in the area affected. Those hearings have been concluded and briefs consisting of many thousands of pages have been presented to the commission. The proceeding was assigned for argument on May 27, 1929, and because of the large number of persons who expressed a desire to argue various phases of the subject that argument is still in progress and will not be finished for several days. As soon as practicable after its conclusion the commission will reach its decision upon the issues, one of the most important of which is the matter of export rates. In view of the very large record developed and the many issues involved, I am not in position to venture any prediction as to when the commission's decision will be announced, and certainly it would not be proper for me to express any opinion as to what conclusions will be reached.

There are three important facts which should be borne in mind which will be outlined in the paragraphs Nos. 1, 2, and 3 below.

1. In the first place, there appears to be a general impression that existing export rates on iron and steel articles and various other commodities lower than the domestic rates were established by order of this commission. That understanding is erroneous. So far as I can find this commission has never required the establishment of any export rate on iron and steel articles lower than the domestic rate from and to the same points. Indeed, at the moment I can not recall any order of the commission which would require on any commodity any general basis of export rates lower than the domestic rates on the same articles.

2. Most of the iron and steel articles produced in the United States are manufactured east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers. The natural ports of exportation from that territory are those on the north Atlantic coast, principally New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and Boston. It is not true that rates on manufactured iron and steel articles from points of manufacture to such ports have for many years been from 45 to 60 per cent lower than the domestic rates, as the resolution appears to state. Prior to 1921, all such traffic for export moved on the same rates as domestic traffic. In that year export rates approximately 25 per cent below the domestic basis were established. It is true that since December 30, 1927, export rates from and to the points indicated on iron and steel articles have been approximately 60 per cent of the domestic rates. But such rates are published as temporary rates, having been in the first instance published to expire December 31, 1928, but later extended to expire December 31, 1929. On January 1, 1930, unless the tariffs are changed in the meantime, the former export rates, approximately 75 per cent of the domestic rates, will again become effective.

3. There are at the present time in effect temporary emergency reduced rates on wheat for export, which on the average probably do not exceed 55 per cent of the domestic rates from and to the same points. These rates are scheduled to expire September 30, 1929, at which time the standard basis of export rates will again become effective unless some change is made in the meantime. But even the standard export rates on wheat, speaking generally, probably average as much as 25 per cent lower than the domestic rates.

The interstate commerce act ever since its adoption has provided that carriers are free to publish any rates that they consider to be lawful, provided that the tariffs containing such rates are filed with the commission not less than 30 days before their date effective. Such tariffs when so filed become effective without any approval of this commission unless the commission exercises the power given to it by section 15 to suspend them before they become effective, but this is done only when there is reason to believe that the new rates would be unlawful if they became effective. The commission does not have power to dictate policies to the carriers, but is empowered only to carry out the provisions of the interstate commerce act. The more important provisions of that act prohibit the charging of unreasonable rates and prohibit undue prejudice and preference. The mere fact that carriers have seen fit to establish lower rates on another commodity is not proof that particular rates are unreasonable, and, as indicated below, it appears that rates on iron and steel are higher, instead of lower, than rates on wheat. As construed by the courts, a situation is not ordinarily considered to be in controvention of the undue prejudice and preference section of the act unless the party believing himself to be subject to undue prejudice would be helped by the cancellation or increase of the alleged unduly preferential rate or regulation. In other words, the mere existence of different rates does not necessarily constitute violation of the interstate commerce act.

While nothing here said should be construed as expressing an opinion one way or the other as to whether the maintenance of relatively lower export rates on iron and steel would be unduly prejudicial to shippers of wheat within the meaning of the interstate commerce act, I venture the guess that shippers of wheat would not be benefited by withdrawal of export rates on iron and steel. In any event, the examiners who heard the general grain case referred to above tell me that no one in the entire course of the hearings has raised the issue that there is any undue prejudice and preference arising out of the relative export rates on iron and steel as compared with wheat.

As stated, the commission did not cause the establishment of the existing export rates on iron and steel articles. No wheat shippers protested such export rates when they were published or asked the commission to suspend them. I think you can readily realize that in the absence of any allegation from shippers of other commodities that undue prejudice and preference would result, the commission would have subjected itself to a great deal of criticism to the effect that it was invading the realm of management and attempting to substitute its policies for those of the railroad managers without authority of law if it had suspended such rates and prevented the iron and steel shippers from obtaining the benefit thereof.

As a matter of fact, with the exception of grain, iron and steel articles, automobiles, agricultural implements, and a few other commodities, there is not now and never has been any general basis of export rates lower than the domestic rates made for the purpose of encouraging exportation. It should not be inferred from this statement that there have not for a great many years been many export rates that were lower than the domestic rates from and to the same points. But such rates in practically all instances resulted not from any attempt to make rates to encourage exportation of the commodities affected, but solely to permit movement through various ports on a comparative equality of rates. In other words, the underlying purpose of practically all export rates, except on the four commodities above mentioned, has not been to create rates lower than the domestic rates, but to equalize one port with another so that traffic from a given point of origin in the United States may be exported through more than one port instead of being confined to the port to which the domestic rate is the lowest. To put it another way, the export rates, except those indicated, especially to Gulf ports, have generally been constructed by determining the lowest domestic rate from a given point of origin to any port and applying either that same rate or a rate made differentially higher to other ports for the purpose of creating more than one route for the movement of traffic.

The following is a concrete illustration: Chicago is about 790 miles from Baltimore and about 900 miles from New Orleans. The haul through Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Maryland to Baltimore is through a territory where on practically all traffic the general level of rates is lower than in the area south of the Ohio River, due to the facts that the density of traffic is greater and the railroads are in position to haul the freight cheaper. Therefore on practically all commodities the domestic rates from Chicago to Baltimore are considerably lower than the domestic rates from Chicago to New Orleans, due to a combination of the two factors of lesser distance and more favorable transportation conditions in the case of Baltimore. Naturally, vessels operating on the ocean are not bound to go to any particular port. They can just as well go to New York or Baltimore as to New Orleans, and unless the rail lines so arrange the rates from Chicago to New Orleans that they will not be materially higher than the rates to North Atlantic ports, it is evident that export traffic from Chicago will practically all move through the North Atlantic ports. Many years ago the lines leading to Gulf ports, such as New Orleans, Mobile, and Galveston, arbitrarily made export rates lower than the domestic rates from and to the same points but approximately equal to the domestic rates to North Atlantic ports. Therefore, while it is true that for many years there have been export rates from the Middle West to Gulf ports considerably below the domestic basis (although I believe that the percentage would be considerably in excess of the figures of 45 and 60 shown in the resolution), such rates really do not in most instances result in any lower through charges to Europe or other foreign destinations than were already available through North Atlantic ports. I venture the guess that if the railroad lines to the Gulf ports had been owned by the same carriers as those leading to the Atlantic ports there would have been very few export rates to the Gulf because it would not have been to their interest to incur the longer hauls through higher-rated territory.

There have also been a number of export rates from the Middle West to Pacific ports. The underlying principle of most of these rates is the same. The railroads leading to the Pacific coast were owned by different corporations than those leading to the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. What they did was to figure out export rates from such places as Chicago which they thought would attract some of the traffic to routes through Pacific ports and thence to foreign destinations in competition with existing rates through Atlantic and Gulf ports. In some instances perhaps the rates so established are lower than are really remunerative. An important example of this is a rate of 40 cents on iron and steel articles from Chicago to Pacific ports. This export rate happens to be 40 per cent of the domestic rate of $1. But as above indicated, this rate was not established primarily for the purpose of encouraging exportation, nor, so far as I know, has it had any such effect. From 1921 to 1927 the Chicago-Baltimore rate was about 40 cents and since that time it has been 32 cents. Inasmuch as to many important foreign markets the ocean rates from New York generally are the same as or lower than those from Pacific ports, it is evident that if the domestic rate of $1 had been maintained on export traffic from Chicago to Pacific ports, there would have been no movement of iron and steel from Chicago for export via Pacific ports.

This, as above stated, is the underlying principle of practically all of the export rates with the exceptions above noted. Shippers naturally desire more than one route for the exportation of their commodities. Ports on the Gulf, South Atlantic, and Pacific coasts and the carriers leading thereto naturally desire to participate in the important export movements of the country, most of which, aside from agricultural products, originate in the territory east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers. There has never been any serious protest to the commission against the maintenance of export rates on the basis described. You can readily realize, therefore, that the commission did not feel that it should of its own volition take any steps to require the cancellation of all export rates lower than the domestic rates, assuming that it had the power to do so.

As a matter of fact, for many years export rates on grain on the average have been below the corresponding domestic rates to a considerably greater extent than has been true of most other commodities. The only important exception to this rule of which I am aware consists of the export rates on iron and steel articles, automobiles, and agricultural implements, which became effective in 1921, and the still further reduced rates on those commodities, which became effective December 31, 1927. But, as I have also explained, the latter reduced rates were published in the nature of emergency rates, and there are at present also emergency reduced rates on wheat for export which appear to be as much below the domestic rates as are those on the three articles named.

In order to determine whether a rate is reasonable or otherwise lawful, it is necessary to go beyond a mere comparison of the export rate with the domestic rate on the same article. As a matter of fact, I think it is beyond question that both domestic and export rates on wheat are, considering the relative transportation characteristics of the commodities, lower than the corresponding domestic and export rates on iron and steel articles. The latter articles probably are not worth over $3 per 100 pounds at the mill. Wheat has averaged somewhat over $1 a bushel, or $1.67 per 100 pounds, on the farms for several years, although at present it is considerably below that figure. While iron and steel articles are thus somewhat higher in value than wheat, from a transportation standpoint the liability of the carrier is less in the case of iron and steel than of wheat, because iron and steel is subject to very little damage in transit, whereas wheat may be subject to loss from various causes. Iron and steel articles load more heavily than grain and at the same rate per 100 pounds would pay the carrier considerably more per car, and therefore are more profitable to handle. And yet, generally speaking, the export rates per 100 pounds on iron and steel articles have been and are higher than the corresponding rates on wheat. For example, from Chicago to New York from 1921 to 1927 the iron and steel rate was 42.5 cents per 100 pounds, whereas the export rate on wheat originating at Chicago was during that period 30.5 cents, and on wheat originating in Nebraska, Iowa, and other States west of Chicago it was only 22.5 cents. Even when the special reduced rates on iron and steel became effective on December 31, 1927, the New York-Chicago rate still was not reduced below 34 cents, and therefore was still higher than the normal export rates on wheat, to say nothing of the present emergency export rate from Chicago to New York, which is only 17 cents, or exactly one-half of that on iron and steel.

My present view is that there would be no important movement of wheat that would in fact receive any reductions of importance if the basis set forth in H. J. Res. 95 should become effective, although it should be understood that I have not made an extended study of this subject and may perhaps be in error in this. Further, this statement is based on the assumption that the resolution means that the export wheat rates should be at least the same percentage under the domestic rates from and to the same points as exists in connection with iron and steel articles. Very little grain originating in the Northwest (Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, etc.) moves to either Atlantic or Gulf ports by rail in any event. Such wheat nearly all moves by rail to Lake Superior or Lake Michigan ports and thence by the Lakes on rates which are materially lower than the export rates by rail on iron and steel articles. From Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas to the Gulf, I have no present knowledge of any export rates on iron and steel articles that are lower than the domestic rates in as great a percentage as the export rates on wheat are already lower than the domestic rates. Similarly, I know of no export rates on iron or steel from Idaho, Washington, or Oregon which are a greater percentage under the domestic rates than is true of wheat from and to the same points.

In all that I have said I do not desire to give the impression that either myself or any of the commission are not deeply sympathetic with the situation that has and is confronting the farmer. As stated earlier in this letter, arguments are being concluded before the commission in the extensive grain-rate hearing conducted under the Hoch-Smith resolution, where the entire subject of the grain-rate structure, both domestic and export, is before us upon a very complete record. You may be assured that this whole subject will receive that most careful and thoughtful consideration of the entire membership of the commission which its importance demands.

For your information I am sending under separate cover copy of a statement showing export and domestic rates on various commodities from and to various points.

Very truly yours,

CLAUDE R. PORTER, Commissioner.

Mr. Speaker, I also insert here as part of my remarks the pertinent part of one paragraph of section 6 of the interstate commerce act as amended showing that the railroads themselves file schedules of their rates, and that they also file schedules of any changes in rates which they propose to make.

PARAGRAPH 1, SECTION 6, INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT, AS AMENDED

SEC. 6. That every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act shall file with the commission created by this act and print and keep open to public inspection schedules showing all the rates, fares, and charges for transportation between different points on its own route and between points on its own route and points on the route of any other carrier by railroad * * * when a through route and joint rate have been established. * * * (3) No change shall be made in the rates, fares, and charges or joint rates, fares, and charges which have been filed and published by any common carrier in compliance with the requirements of this section, except after 30 days' notice to the commission and to the public, published as aforesaid, which shall plainly state the changes proposed to be made in the schedule then in force and the time when the changed rates, fares, or charges will go into effect; and the proposed changes shall be shown by printing new schedules or shall be plainly indicated upon the schedules in force at the time and kept open to public inspection. * * *

I insert here paragraph 1 of section 13 of the interstate commerce act, as amended, showing the method provided by law for anyone who feels injured or aggrieved by any rate that is put into effect by any railroad can file his complaint with the Interstate Commerce Commission and bring about an investigation and full hearing by the commission on the legality or the justness or reasonableness of any rate, export or domestic.

SEC. 13. (1) That any person, firm, corporation, company, or association, or any mercantile, agricultural, or manufacturing society or other organization, or any body politic or municipal organization, or any common carrier, complaining of anything done or omitted to be done by any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, in contravention of the provisions thereof, may apply to said commission by petition, which shall briefly state the facts, whereupon a statement of the complaint thus made shall be forwarded by the commission to such common carrier, who shall be called upon to satisfy the complaint or to answer the same in writing within a reasonable time, to be specified by the commission. If such common carrier within the time specified shall make reparation for the injury alleged to have been done, the common carrier shall be relieved of liability to the complainant only for the particular violation of law thus complained of. If such carrier or carriers shall not satisfy the complaint within the time specified or there shall appear to be any reasonable ground for investigating said complaint, it shall be the duty of the commission to investigate the matters complained of in such manner and by such means as it shall deem proper.

I also insert paragraph 1 of section 15 of the interstate commerce act, as amended, showing the provision of the law authorizing the commission to correct any and all improper rates when complaint is made against such rates. While the railroads themselves have the right to put into effect any lawful rates that they may desire, and while the commission has full authority to change any rate established by the railroads and to establish proper rates, the commission can only do this after a full hearing upon the subject. No complaint has been filed with the commission against any export rate now in effect on iron or steel products, or automobiles, or farm machinery, or agricultural products. In the absence of such complaint the assumption is that no one has been injured or prejudiced unduly by them, and therefore the commission has held no hearings nor taken any action with respect to them.

SEC. 15. (1) That whenever, after full hearing, upon a complaint made as provided in section 13 of this act, or after full hearing under an order for investigation and hearing made by the commission on its own initiative, either in extension of any pending complaint or without any complaint whatever, the commission shall be of opinion that any individual or joint rate, fare, or charge whatsoever demanded, charged, or collected by any common carrier or carriers subject to this act for the transportation of persons or property or for the transmission of messages as defined in the first section of this act, or that any individual or joint classification, regulation, or practice whatsoever of such carrier or carriers subject to the provisions of this act, is or will be unjust or unreasonable or unjustly discriminatory or unduly preferential or prejudicial, or otherwise in violation of any of the provisions of this act, the commission is hereby authorized and empowered to determine and prescribe what will be the just and reasonable individual or joint rate, fare, or charge, or rates, fares, or charges, to be thereafter observed in such case, or the maximum or minimum, or maximum and minimum, to be charged (or, in the case of a through route where one of the carriers is a water line, the maximum rates, fares, and charges applicable thereto) and what individual or joint classification, regulation, or practice is or will be just, fair, and reasonable, to be thereafter followed, and to make an order that the carrier or carriers shall cease and desist from such violation to the extent to which the commission finds that the same does or will exist, and shall not thereafter publish, demand, or collect any rate, fare, or charge for such transportation or transmission other than the rate, fare, or charge so prescribed, or in excess of the maximum or less than the minimum so prescribed, as the case may be, and shall adopt the classification and shall conform to and observe the regulation or practice so prescribed.

Mr. Speaker, with further reference to the very great reduction in export rates on wheat that have been recently put into effect by the railroads, I wish to give the following illustrations:

The domestic rate on wheat from Chicago to New York is 30 cents per hundred; the ordinary export rate on wheat from Chicago to New York for a number of years has been 22½ cents per hundred; the recent emergency export rate that has been put into effect between Chicago and New York is 17 cents per hundred.

The domestic rate on wheat from Kansas City to Galveston is 37 cents per hundred; the ordinary export rate on wheat from Kansas City to Galveston for a number of years has been 30½ cents per hundred; the emergency rate that has been put into effect recently between those points is 19 cents per hundred.

The domestic rate on wheat from Wichita, Kans., to Galveston is 51½ cents per hundred; the ordinary export rate on wheat between those points for a number of years has been 47½ cents per hundred; the recent emergency rate put into effect between those points was 36 cents per hundred.

These recent emergency reductions in the export rates on wheat will expire the last of September. Similar emergency export rates on iron and steel products, automobiles, and farm implements will expire on December 31. After such expirations the normal export rates on wheat and other farm products, as well as those on iron and steel products and other manufactured products, will be restored and will be about 25 per cent below the normal domestic rates. I insert in this connection a table showing export rates and domestic rates on a number of manufactured products and agricultural products; this memorandum has been prepared and furnished to me by an official of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

I would again emphasize the fact that such reductions in export freight rates below domestic freight rates as are now in effect represent the action of the railroads themselves and not the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission. They have been established by the railroads in order to move products into foreign commerce that might not otherwise move and in order to allow the railroads establishing them to secure their part of the export freight business of the country, and by no stretch of the imagination can it be said that such reductions in export freight rates constitute a Government subsidy to the industries that enjoy them.

Comparative statement of export with domestic rates in force on May 29, 1929; except as otherwise shown rates apply in cents per 100 pounds; revised June 12, 1929

From—	Commodity (carloads)	To— Boston, Mass.		New York, N. Y.		Philadelphia, Pa.		Baltimore, Md.
		Export	Domestic	Export	Domestic	Export	Domestic	Export	Domestic
Chicago, Ill.:
Proper	Wheat	30.5 P-17	40	30.5 P-17	38	29.5 P-16	36	29 P-15.5	35
(N) Proportional	do	22.5 P-17	32	22.5 P-17	30	21.5 P-16	28	21 P-15.5	27
Proper	Wheat flour	31.5 P-18	40.5	31.5 P-18	38.5	30.5 P-17	36.5	29.5 P-16	35.5
(N) Proportional		23.5 P-18	32.5	23.5 P-18	30.5	22.5 P-17	28.5	21.5 P-16	27.5
	Passenger automobiles, boxed	106	164	106	156	104	154	103.5	153
Portsmouth, Ohio	Pig iron	G-520	G-742	G-520	G-702	G-480	G-662	G-460	G-642
Do	Iron and steel billets	G-520	G-770	G-520	G-730	G-480	G-690	G-460	G-670
Do	Manufactured iron and steel articles.	26	46.5	26	43.5	24	41.5	23	40.5
Pittsburgh, Pa	do			20.5	34	18.5	32	17.5	31
Chicago, Ill	do	34	59.5	34	56.5	32	54.5	31	53.5

From—	Commodity (carloads)	To— Galveston, Tex.		New Orleans, La.
		Export	Domestic	Export	Domestic
Chicago, Ill		I-47.5 J-41.5	105	I-47.5 J-41.5	73
Indianapolis, Ind	Agricultural	I-44 J-41	104	I-44 J-41	72
St. Louis, Mo	Implements	I-43 J-41	91	I-43 J-41	64
Chicago, Ill	Cement	23.5	52	23.5	29.5
St. Louis, Mo		17.5	45
Chicago, Ill	Chloride of calcium	39.5	62.5
Indianapolis, Ind		36.5	62.5	36.5	38.5
St. Louis, Mo		39.5	52
Chicago, Ill		29.5	42
Indianapolis, Ind	Fertilizer	29.5	42
St. Louis, Mo		23	36	23	26
Chicago, Ill	Salt	31.5	51
Indianapolis, Ind	do	29	51	29	31.5
St. Louis, Mo	do	31.5	42	31.5	28
Hutchinson, Kans	do	31.5	32.5
Chicago, Ill	Packing-house products			D-39 F-50.5	65
Indianapolis, Ind	do			D-39 F-50.5	65
St. Louis, Mo	do			D-38.5 F-50	56.5

From—	Commodity (carloads)	To— San Francisco, Calif.		Seattle, Wash.
		Export	Domestic	Export	Domestic
Chicago, Ill	Agricultural implements	100	193	100	193
Pittsburgh, Pa	Canned goods	120	145	120	145
Chicago, Ill	do	95	130	95	130
Pittsburgh, Pa	Iron and steel articles	72	115	72	115
Chicago, Ill	do	40	100	40	100
Pittsburgh, Pa	Paper and paper articles	100	140	100	140
Chicago, Ill	do	100	100	100	100
Pittsburgh, Pa	Roofing, building, and paving material.	100	125	100	125
Chicago, Ill	do	90	110	90	110
Pittsburgh, Pa	Soap or compounds	115	140	115	140
Chicago, Ill	do	115	125	115	125
Pittsburgh, Pa	Dry goods	144	173	144	173
Chicago, Ill	do	144	158	144	158

From—	Commodity (carloads)	To— Galveston, Tex.		New Orleans, La.
		Export	Domestic	Export	Domestic
Kansas City, Mo.:
Proper	Wheat and wheat flour	36.5	48	36.5	47
(N) Proportional	do	30.5 P-19	37	30.5 P-19	41
Proper	Corn	34.5	43	34.5	45
(N) Proportional	do	29	33.5	29	39.5
Frankfort, Kans	Wheat and wheat flour	43.5 P-32	50	43.5 P-32	51.5
Do	Corn	40	45	40	49
Jewell City, Kans	Wheat and wheat flour	47.5 P-36	51.5	47.5 P-36	56
Do	Corn	43	46.5	43	52.5
Wichita, Kans	Wheat and wheat flour	44 P-32.5	46	44 P-32.5	50
Do	Corn	39.5	41.5	39.5	45.5
Marshall, Mo	Wheat and wheat flour	36.5 P-25	49	35.5 P-24	44.5
Do	Corn	34.5	44	34.5	42
Enid, Okla	Wheat and wheat flour	35	37	48	48.5
Oklahoma City, Okla	Cotton in bales, delivered to carrier, compressed.	88	83	92.5	87
Little Rock, Ark	do	75	73	72	70
Eldorado, Ark	do	74	72	72	70
Wichita Falls, Tex	do	65	63	78	78
Sherman, Tex	do	65	63	65	78

Comparative statement of export with domestic rates in force on May 29, 1929; except as otherwise shown rates apply in cents per 100 pounds; revised June 18, 1929—Continued

From—	Commodity (carloads)	To— Galveston, Tex. Export	Galveston, Tex. Domestic	New Orleans, La. Export	New Orleans, La. Domestic
Arkansas City, Kans	Packing-house products	D-60		D-60
St. Joseph, Mo	do	E-48.5	91.5	E-48.5	66.5
Madison, Wis	do	D-60		D-60
Do	do	E-48.5	102.5	E-48.5	71.5
La Platte, Nebr	do	D-65		D-65
Do	do	E-53.5	100.5	E-53.5	71.5
Sioux Falls, S. Dak	do	D-65		D-65
Mason City, Iowa	do	E-53.5	106	E-53.5	71.5
Nebraska City, Nebr	do	D-65		D-65
Do	do	E-53.5	98	E-53.5	71.5
Mankato, Minn	do	D-65		D-65
Do	do	E-53.5	114.5	E-53.5	75

Commodity (carload)	From—	To— Jacksonville, Fla. Export	Jacksonville, Fla. Domestic	Savannah, Ga. Export	Savannah, Ga. Domestic	New Orleans, La. Export	New Orleans, La. Domestic	Galveston, Tex. Export	Galveston, Tex. Domestic
Cement	Cincinnati	C-20½	29½	C-20½	27	A-17½ B-21½	30	A-17½ B-21½	44½
Do	Louisville	C-20½	28½	C-20½	26½	A-16 B-20½	28	A-16 B-20½	36½
Do	St. Louis	C-29	32	C-29	31½	A-17½ B-21½	26½	A-17½ B-21½	37
Do	Birmingham	C-13½	20	C-13½	20
Potash, muriate of, and sulphate of	Cincinnati	C-33	H-655	C-33	H-615	A-29½	H-665	A-29½	105
Do	Louisville	C-33	H-635	C-33	H-605	A-29½	H-630	A-29½	100
Do	St. Louis	C-33	H-817	C-33	H-817	A-29½	31	A-29½	91
Shells, mussel	Cincinnati	C-30	H-655	C-30	H-615	A-38	H-665	A-38	46
Do	Louisville	C-30	H-635	C-30	H-605	A-38	H-630	A-38	44
Cottonseed meal	Atlanta	HC-410	H-425	HC-410	H-380
Do	Cincinnati	HC-597	H-655	HC-597	H-615	A-24	H-665	A-24	85
Do	Louisville	HC-597	H-635	HC-597	H-605	A-29½	H-630	A-29½	81
Do	Birmingham	HC-410	H-480	HC-410	H-480

EXPLANATION OF REFERENCE MARKS

A—Applies on traffic for export to insular possessions of United States, including Panama Canal Zone, and all foreign countries other than Canada, New Foundland, and Nova Scotia.
C—Applies on traffic to all foreign countries (except Canada) including insular possessions of United States and Canal Zone of Panama.
D—Applies on traffic for all countries except United Kingdom and Europe.
E—Applies on traffic for United Kingdom and Europe.
F—Applies on traffic for all foreign countries except Canada, Europe, New Foundland, and Nova Scotia.
G—Applies in cents per 2,240 pounds.
H—Applies in cents per 2,000 pounds.
I—Applies for export to all countries except Cuba, Africa, and Europe.
J—Applies for export to Europe and Africa.
N—Applies on traffic originating beyond.
P—These are temporary rates published to expire September 30, 1929, and while in force take preference over the other regular export rate shown in connection therewith.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order at any time to consider the adjournment resolution that came over from the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut asks unanimous consent that it may be in order at any time to consider the adjournment resolution referred to. Is there objection?

Mr. BURTNESS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I have not seen a copy of the resolution but if I understood it correctly when it was read, it deals only with the adjournment of the Senate.

Mr. TILSON. Yes; but it is my purpose to propose an amendment that the House adjourn until September 23, one month later. [Applause.]

Mr. BURTNESS. That is the question that I was going to ask.

Mr. TILSON. When other things are out of the way, and we come to the adjournment resolution, I intend to propose an amendment fixing the time for the House to adjourn for an additional month. It will then be sent back to the Senate, and the Senate will simply concur in the part of it that relates to the House, we having agreed to the part concerning the Senate.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The theory of that is that the House shall stay in recess during the time that the Senate requires for the consideration of the tariff bill?

Mr. TILSON. That is the idea.

Mr. MILLER. Does the gentleman think that the Senate can dispose of the bill in that period of time?

Mr. TILSON. We can only guess at what we think the Senate ought to do and then govern ourselves accordingly.

Mr. MILLER. Suppose the House Members return here on the 23d of September and the Senate has not nearly completed the consideration of the bill, what would be the attitude of the gentleman?

Mr. TILSON. I hope the House will pass a resolution of its own that we have 3-day recesses beginning on the 23d of September. I think my friend the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER] agrees that this would be the proper thing to do until there is actual business from the Senate to transact.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, a number of gentlemen have asked me this morning in case the Senate has not completed its labors and passed the bill and sent it to conference by the 23d of September what would be the attitude of the House. I could not give them any answer and I wish the gentleman from Connecticut would make it very clear just what he intends to do under those conditions. Take the case of the gentleman from Washington [Mr. MILLER], who just asked the gentleman a question. It is a very long way from his home to Washington. We ought to be able to tell the membership, and so accommodate them as far as we can, that in case the Senate has not passed the tariff bill by the 23d of September we will come here without a quorum and enter into an agreement to adjourn three days at a time until that body does pass it, and that the gentleman from Connecticut will not undertake to call up any legislation at that time unless he gives due notice of at least four days, so that Members would be able to get here for the purpose of considering the legislation.

Mr. TILSON. It is my purpose to offer such a resolution in the House, so that when the House convenes on September 23, thereafter until October 14 the House will meet only on Mondays and Thursdays, provided that at any time after September 23, upon notice given by the Clerk, at the direction of the Speaker of the House, the House may reassemble, and that during those 3-day recesses no business will be transacted. Mr. Speaker, is there objection to my request?

Mr. GARNER. Let us see. The gentleman from Connecticut asks unanimous consent to consider the resolution at any time?

Mr. TILSON. That is correct.

Mr. GARNER. Will the gentleman state just why?

Mr. TILSON. Because otherwise it will be necessary to call the Rules Committee together in order to get a rule. There seems to be some question about its being privileged. Unanimous consent or the securing of a rule would put it beyond question.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY

Mr. LETTS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate bill 669.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate bill 669. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 669) to alter and amend an act entitled "An act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Lake Superior to Puget Sound, on the Pacific coast, by the northern route," approved July 2, 1864, and to alter and amend a joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution authorizing the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. to issue its bonds for the construction of its road and to secure the same by mortgage, and for other purposes," approved May 31, 1870; to declare forfeited to the United States certain claimed rights asserted by the Northern Pacific Railroad Co., or the Northern Pacific Railway Co.; to direct the institution and prosecution of proceedings looking to the adjustment of the grant, and for other purposes.

Mr. LETTS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, what is the emergency nature of this legislation?

Mr. LETTS. This is the culmination of the work of a special committee that has extended over a considerable period of years. It provides a method by which differences growing out of the Northern Pacific land grants may be fought out in the courts. Unquestionably the Government has many interests and rights that are not now protected in any way. The Forest Service is particularly interested in having these uncertainties ironed out, and this bill provides a method of doing that and of getting these questions into court for ultimate decision, so that the Government and the Forestry Department may be fully protected.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Has this bill been considered by a committee?

Mr. LETTS. Yes. A special committee, composed of five Members of the House and five Members of the Senate, have considered this matter for five years.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Has this bill received the unanimous approval of that special committee?

Mr. LETTS. It has.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Does not the gentleman think this could well go over to the regular session?

Mr. LETTS. It is desirable that it be passed now, so that necessary litigation can go forward.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LETTS. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. GARNER. As I understand it, this bill is the result of legislation in a former Congress?

Mr. LETTS. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. Which Congress?

Mr. LETTS. The Sixty-eighth Congress.

Mr. GARNER. The Sixty-eighth Congress, then, passed a resolution for the appointment of this joint committee, and that committee has carefully gone through this matter, and this bill has the unanimous report of the Senate and House Members of that committee?

Mr. LETTS. Yes; that is true.

Mr. GARNER. In my judgment, this is a very important piece of legislation, and I understand its provisions are such that there should be a full discussion of it. But inasmuch as there is a unanimous report of the committee, and the emergency indicated by the gentleman exists, I shall not object to it.

Mr. DRIVER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to supplement the statement of the gentleman from Iowa. This same bill passed the House in the closing days of the last session of Congress, did it not?

Mr. LETTS. That is true.

Mr. DRIVER. And because of the congested condition of the calendar in the Senate it was not considered there?

Mr. LETTS. That is correct, as I remember it.

Mr. PATTERSON. This does not tend to weaken the Government's claims in any way?

Mr. LETTS. No. On the contrary, it will strengthen the Government's position. At present the burden of proof is on the Government to sustain its contentions. If we pass this bill, the burden of proof will rest on the railroad company.

Mr. Speaker, as I said at the outset this bill comes to the House from the joint committee created by the joint resolution of June 5, 1924, to investigate the Northern Pacific land grants. The chairman of the joint committee reported the bill to the House in behalf of the committee. The bill grows out of a controversy between the Forest Service and the Northern Pacific with respect to certain national forest lands that are within the indemnity limits of the land grant. The Northern Pacific has contended that it has the right to select these lands in satisfaction of the acreage of the grant, while the Forest Service has contended that the company is not entitled to these lands because the railroad has not complied with the provisions of the land grant, and for the further reason that the acreage of the land grant under a proper construction of the terms thereof has been satisfied in full. There are approximately 5,500 pages of the printed matter in the record of the hearings held by your joint committee, and the joint committee has submitted a report in connection with this bill. I do not care to go into a discussion of the details of the matter at this time other than to say that in the main the position of the Forest Service is concurred in by the committee and it is supported by an opinion to the committee from the Attorney General. The bill as reported has the unanimous approval of your committee. In substance it removes the forest lands from the operation of the land grant and provides that the railway company shall be compensated therefor if the courts find that compensation is due. It declares a limited forfeiture of the land grant, the forfeiture being confined to selection rights that have not as yet been satisfied by the company, and it provides for the institution of court proceedings in connection with other points that will have to be litigated before a final conclusion can be reached as to respective rights of the Government and the Northern Pacific.

Your joint committee reported this matter to the Seventieth Congress, second session, with a bill which was recommended for enactment. In drafting that bill your committee incorporated in it a number of "whereas" clauses showing some of the reasons for the enactment of the bill and following the precedent in the Oregon-California land grant legislation. When the bill was before the House Mr. Garrett suggested that the inclusion of "whereas" clauses was unusual. The committee did not regard the "wherens" clauses as vital, and rather than sacrifice the passage of the bill the chairman moved that the "whereas" clauses be eliminated. They were stricken out, and the bill was then passed by the House, but later it was objected to in the Senate by Senator WALSH of Montana.

When the present Congress convened your committee reported again reinstating the "whereas" clauses in the bill. The question of the inclusion of the "whereas" clauses came up in the Senate, but as the objection to them was technical, Senator KENDRICK, who presented the bill for the committee, moved that the "whereas" clauses be stricken out without prejudice to them. H. R. 2151 and S. 669 are identical. S. 669 was passed by the Senate on May 29 with the "whereas" clauses eliminated.

The Senate in eliminating the "whereas" clauses has followed the course of action that was taken by the House when the bill was before it in the Seventieth Congress. The reasons for the enactment of the bill are found in the "whereas" clauses, in the committee report, in the remarks of the chairman on March 12, and in the testimony taken at the hearings.

Mr. Speaker, I renew my request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill reads as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any and all lands within the indemnity limits of the land grants made by Congress to the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. under the act of July 2, 1864, and the resolution of May 31, 1870, which, on June 5, 1924, were embraced within the exterior boundaries of any national forest or other Government reservation and which, in the event of a deficiency in the said land grants to the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. upon the dates of the withdrawals of the said indemnity lands for governmental purposes, would be, or were, available to the Northern Pacific Railway Co., by indemnity selection or otherwise in satisfaction of such deficiency in said land grants, are hereby taken out of and removed from the operation of the said land grants, and are hereby retained by the United States as part and parcel of the Government reservations wherein they are situate, relieved and freed from all claims, if any exist, which the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. or its successor, the Northern Pacific Railway Co., may have to acquire the said lands by indemnity selection or otherwise in satisfaction of the said land grants: Provided, That for any or all of the aforesaid indemnity lands hereby retained by the United States under this act the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. or its successor, the Northern Pacific Railway Co., or any subsidiary of either or both, or any subsidiary of a subsidiary of either or both, shall be entitled to and shall receive compensation from the United States to the extent and in the amounts, if any, the courts hold that compensation is due from the United States.

SEC. 2. That all of the unsatisfied indemnity selection rights, if any exist, claimed by the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. or its successor, the Northern Pacific Railway Co., or any subsidiary of either or both, or any subsidiary of a subsidiary of either or both, or by any grantee or assignee of either or both, together with all claims to additional lands under and by virtue of the land grants contained in the act of July 2, 1864, and resolution of May 31, 1870, or any other acts of Congress supplemental or relating thereto, are hereby declared forfeited to the United States.

SEC. 3. The rights reserved to the United States in the act of July 2, 1864, to add to, alter, amend, or repeal said act, and in the resolution of May 31, 1870, to alter or amend said resolution, are not to be considered as fully exercised, waived, or destroyed by this act or the exercise of the authority conferred hereby; and the passage of this act shall not be construed as in anywise evidencing the purpose or intention of Congress to depart from the policy of the United States expressed in the resolution of May 31, 1870, relative to the disposition of granted lands by said grantee, and the right is hereby reserved to the United States to, at any time, enact further legislation relating thereto.

SEC. 4. The provisions of this act shall not be construed as affecting the present title of the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. or its successors, the Northern Pacific Railway Co., or any subsidiary of either or both, in the right of way of said road or lands actually used in good faith by the Northern Pacific Railway Co. in the operation of said road.

SEC. 5. The Attorney General is hereby authorized and directed forthwith to institute and prosecute such suit, or suits, as may, in his judgment, be required to remove the cloud cast upon the title to lands belonging to the United States as a result of the claim of said companies, and to have all said controversies and disputes respecting the operation and effect of said grants, and actions taken under them, judicially determined, and a full accounting had between the United States and said companies, and a determination made of the extent, if any, to which the said companies, or either of them, may be entitled to have patented to them additional lands of the United States in satisfaction of said grants, and as to whether either of the said companies is lawfully entitled to all or any part of the lands within the indemnity limits for which patents have not issued, and the extent to which the United States may be entitled to recover lands wrongfully patented or certified. In the judicial proceedings contemplated by this act there shall be presented, and the court of courts shall consider, make findings relating to, and determine to what extent the terms, conditions, and covenants, expressed or implied, in said granting acts have been performed by the United States, and by the Northern Pacific Railroad Co., or its successors, including the legal effect of the foreclosure of any and all mortgages which said Northern Pacific Railroad Co. claims to have placed on said granted lands by virtue of authority conferred in the said resolution of May 31, 1870, and the extent to which said proceedings and foreclosures meet the requirements of said resolution with respect to the disposition of said granted lands, and relative to what lands, if any, have been wrongfully or erroneously patented or certified to said companies, or either of them, as the result of fraud, mistake of law or fact, or through legislative or administrative misapprehension as to the proper construction of said grants or acts supplemental or relating thereto, or otherwise, and the United States and the Northern Pacific Railroad Co., or the Northern Pacific Railway Co., or any other proper person, shall be entitled to have heard and determined by the court all questions of law and fact, and all other claims and matters which may be germane to a full and complete adjudication of the respective rights of the United States and said companies, or their successors in interest under said act of July 2, 1864, and said joint resolution of May 31, 1870, and in other acts or resolutions supplemental thereto, and all other questions of law and fact presented to the joint congressional committee appointed under authority of the joint resolution of Congress of June 5, 1924 (43 Stat. 461), notwithstanding that such matters may not be specifically mentioned in this enactment.

SEC. 6. All lands received by the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. or its successors, the Northern Pacific Railway Co., under said grants or acts of Congress supplemental or relating thereto which have not been earned, but which have been, for any reason, erroneously credited or patented to either of said companies, or its, or their, successors, shall be fully accounted for by said companies, either by restitution of the land itself, where the said lands have not passed into the hands of innocent purchasers for value, or otherwise, in accordance with the findings and decrees of the courts. In fixing the amount, if any, the said companies are entitled to receive on account of the retention by the United States of indemnity lands within national forests and other Government reservations, as by this enactment provided, the court shall determine the full value of the interest which may be rightfully claimed by said companies, or either of them, in said lands under the terms of said grants, and shall determine what quantities in lands or values said companies have received in excess of the full amounts they were entitled to receive, either as a result of breaches of the terms, conditions, or covenants, either expressed or implied, of said granting acts by said companies, or either of them, or through mistake of law or fact, or through misapprehension as to the proper construction of said grants, or as a result of fraud, or otherwise, and said excess lands and values, if any, shall be charged against said companies in the judgments and decrees of said court. To carry out this enactment the court may render such judgments and decrees as law and equity may require.

SEC. 7. The suit, or suits, herein authorized shall be brought in a district court of the United States for some district within the States of Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington, or Oregon, and may be consolidated with any other actions now pending between the same parties in the same court involving the subject matter, and any such court shall in any such suit have jurisdiction to hear and determine all matters and things submitted to it in pursuance of the provisions of this act, and in any such suit brought by the Attorney General hereunder any persons having an interest in or lien upon any lands included in the lands claimed by the United States, or by said companies, or any interest in the proceeds or avails thereof may be made parties. On filing the complaint in such cause, writs of subpœna may be issued by the court against any parties defendant, which writs shall run into any districts and shall be served, as any other like process, by the respective marshals of such districts. The judgment, or judgments, which may be rendered in said district court shall be subject to review on appeal by the United States circuit court of appeals for the circuit which includes the district in which the suit is brought, and the judgment, or judgments, of such United States circuit court of appeals shall be reviewable by the Supreme Court of the United States, as in other cases. Any case begun in accordance with this act shall be expedited in every way, and be assigned for hearing at the earliest practicable day in any court in which it may be pending. Congress shall be given a reasonable time, which shall be fixed by the court, within which it may enact such legislation and appropriate such sums of money as may be necessary to meet the requirements of any final judgment resulting by reason of the litigation herein provided for.

SEC. 8. It shall be the duty of the Attorney General to report to the Congress of the United States any final determinations rendered in such suit or proceedings, and the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Secretary of Agriculture shall thereafter submit to Congress recommendations for the enactment of such legislation, if any, as may be deemed by them to be desirable in the interests of the United States in connection with the execution of said decree or otherwise.

SEC. 9. That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to withhold his approval of the adjustment of the Northern Pacific land grants under the act of July 2, 1864, and the joint resolution of May 31, 1870, and other acts relating thereto; and he is also hereby directed to withhold the issuance of any further patents and muniments of title under said act and the said resolution, or any legislative enactments supplemental thereto, or connected therewith, until the suit or suits contemplated by this act shall have been finally determined: Provided, That this act shall not prevent the adjudication of any claims arising under the public land laws where the claimants are not seeking title through the grants to the Northern Pacific Railroad Co., or its successors, or any acts in modification thereof or supplemental thereto.

Mr. HILL of Washington. Mr. Speaker, there is a clerical error in the bill. In one place it says "the court of courts." It should be "court or courts." I have not a copy of the bill here. I ask unanimous consent that that error be corrected.

Mr. LETTS. Mr. Speaker, I move that at the point where the language occurs, "the court of courts," which is a clerical error, it should be made to read "the court or courts."

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LETTS: Page 5, line 4, after the word "court," strike out "of" and insert "or."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

STATEMENT OF MATTHEW WOLL

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting a statement made by Mr. Matthew Woll before the Finance Committee of the Senate with reference to American valuations.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include a statement by Mr. Matthew Woll, before the Finance Committee of the Senate with reference to American valuations.

The statement is as follows:

Mr. WOLL. Mr. Chairman, I represent the American Wage Earners' Protective Conference. This is an organization of trade unions, international unions, about 20 in number, who are directly involved in competition with foreign-made commodities. In addition to that we have approximately 10 cooperating national and international unions, representing thus over two and a half millions of wage earners in direct competition with foreign-made commodities.

We come to you to-day with the approval and the support of the American Federation of Labor under its policy to approve and to support any of its affiliated organizations interested in tariff questions.

It may interest you to know of the action taken by the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled. I am quoting from pages 364–365, Report of the Proceedings, Thirty-seventh Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor, November 22, 1917:

"Reporting on Resolution No. 115, your committee recommends the elimination in the resolve of the words 'the skilled tradesmen' and substituting therefor the words 'all wage earners,' so that the resolution would read as follows:

"'Resolution No. 115 (by delegate E. L. Egerton, Steam and Operating Engineers):

"'Whereas we are aiding our Government in every possible way to win the war and we will if necessary make any reasonable sacrifice asked of us in order that humanity, justice, and civilization may survive; we call the attention of the delegates to this convention, the workers of the United States, especially the skilled tradesmen whose product is easily transported, to the danger that exists unless prior to the end of the present war some measures of industrial preparedness are taken by this country against a possible industrial invasion: Therefore be it:

"'Resolved, That this convention go on record in favor of a policy of industrial preparedness and the enactment of laws by Congress that will adequately protect all wage earners of our country against the loss of employment through any industrial invasion on the part of the products of any of the other nations.'

"We recommend that the resolution as amended be referred to the executive council with instructions to have the legislative committee carefully watch all legislation affecting the welfare of the wage earners and work unceasingly to secure the enactment of legislation which will safeguard the best interests of American labor.

"A motion was made and seconded that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

"Delegate Black offered the following addition to the resolve: 'And that such preparedness be in harmony with the standards of labor as recognized by the American Federation of Labor.' The resolve would then read:

"'Resolved, That this convention go on record in favor of a policy of industrial preparedness, and that such preparedness be in harmony with the standards of labor as recognized by the American Federation of Labor, and the enactment of laws by Congress that will adequately protect all wage earners of our country against the loss of employment through any industrial invasion on the part of the product of any of the other nations.'

"The amendment was seconded and carried, and the report of the committee as amended was adopted."

It was rather amusing to listen to the utterances made, and very entertaining to hear that in all this time the case of the importers and the foreign manufacturers and foreign workers was given so much consideration.

We come here to speak for the millions of wage earners of America. We come to you in the spirit as expressed by the Ways and Means Committee in its report that "It is intended to maintain confidence, encourage industry, foster agriculture, provide employment for our 27,000,000 of wage earners, and promote the continuance of our great and unusual prosperity."

The committee says: "This bill proposes such changes in the existing law as careful and extended investigation has found necessary to maintain the American standards. Foreign competitors have an uncanny aptitude for discovering what goods, wares, and commodities are insufficiently protected, and attacking them. Foreign labor is becoming more efficient; it receives less than 40 per cent of average American wages; it lives on a much lower standard. This is a most important factor in tariff making."

This is the spirit that prompts us in coming before your committee, not only to disprove the continuance of the existing method of evaluation or basis of evaluation for duty but to urge upon this committee the American valuation principle for the basis of determining the duties to be placed upon imports.

I think it has been made self-evident here this morning practically by all speakers that the present method of valuation—the foreign method of valuation—places the real factor in the control of foreigners and of importers and not upon American industry or the American Government. That the rate made determines the selling price, determines the actual rate to be paid. That there has been fraud, undervaluation, and other forms of manipulation under the existing law and the existing method of evaluating imports and placing duties upon them, I think, has been made clear to this committee. I shall therefore not take the time of this committee to practically repeat what has been stated on that subject.

Whether there is a change in the duty as between the United States valuation and the foreign valuation, if experts of long service in the Government can not agree it is difficult for me to say whether there is or not. But whether there is or not, we feel that there is not much change between the two systems that have been so clearly mentioned here. Because it does accept foreign valuation, although the first sales price determines the duty to be placed on it. So that there is very little change between the foreign valuation and the United States valuation. That is the selling price, wholesale selling price of foreign-made commodities when brought here, and based on the first sales price—very little difference. That difference does not spell any protection to the wage earner.

We are for protection. We believe that the American market ought to be protected and the American wage earners ought to be protected. We believe that the interests of the producers come prior to the interests of the merchants or importers.

We find to-day a most astounding situation going on in the industrial world. But I think these are factors your committee ought to give serious attention to.

First of all we find the mechanization of industry, the replacement of skill, the standardization of commodities, the wholesale methods not only of production but of distribution going on replacing hundreds of thousands of wage earners. Our army of unemployed is constantly increasing, and I believe it is of first importance that we protect the American market and give opportunity of employment to these hundreds of thousands of workers that are unemployed, for if this army of unemployed increases all industry will suffer and our whole social life will suffer. So it is first a question of self-preservation as against the profit making in all importation of commodities to compete with or to even lessen the opportunities of employment in the American market.

In addition to that we find that our international banking interests have been constantly increasing their loans abroad. For what purpose? The building up of industry abroad, and building it up on modern basis, on the American industrial basis. Which, of course, must ultimately result in not only lessening our foreign markets, but likewise in building up competitors for our own markets.

We find to-day our department stores, or chain stores, who have nothing to do with investment in the production field, who are purely merchants, and merely buy and sell, and employ labor only incidentally as clerical help—the lowest paid in our industrial life—are interested in this question. They want the doors wide open.

Our banks are concerned in this in order to make their foreign loans profitable to them, caring not what may happen to our industrial life here in America. So it is with the department stores, with the chain stores, who are little concerned with what happens to our industrial life, confining their labor only to their sales force, which is the lowest paid in industrial life, as a means of making profit in enterprises which are not productive industries.

So we find these elements are concerned in this question. And we find this resulting in our industrial life. We find industry laying off men, closing down their factories, importations increasing. We find a general agitation among the American people that commodities made abroad are superior to domestic articles. And everywhere we see the word "imported" as being superior in quality, all tending just simply to destroy our own industrial life and making for a worse condition.

More recently what do we find? We find our industrialists going out with their excess capital and putting it in capital investments abroad. What does that mean? We point with pride to our exports and to our foreign markets. Here is Ford and General Motors and these other people going out into Europe, building their own factories abroad. For what purpose? To get this lower labor cost—40 per cent of that paid in America. Transportation charges are removed. They are building up these factories abroad first of all to supply their foreign markets, it is true.

Senator HARRISON. Mr. Woll, may I ask you a question?

Mr. WOLL. If you do not mind, Senator, I would like to finish first. I will not be very long. These industrialists are going abroad and building factories abroad first of all to supply their foreign markets. That means a reduction of opportunity of employment of the workers here, because we have always been ready to believe that the foreign markets developed by American manufacturers gives employment to American labor here, and therefore they should be encouraged. But now we find that, having developed a foreign market, they are no longer concerned with American labor to supply these demands, but they are establishing their factories abroad to supply their foreign markets. And what is true of General Motors and Ford is true of the General Electric, Singer Sewing Machine, and a large number of other enterprises. Hence the opportunity for employment of American workers will be lessened.

Now as these European enterprises of these American industrialists develop, as American capital becomes more interested in the development of industries abroad, having filled their foreign markets, they will be anxious to exploit even the American market, which we have already experienced. The Singer Sewing Machine Co. is one illustration. They closed their Elizabeth plant and just maintained their other plant for assembling purposes, and manufactured abroad, and brought their commodities here to be sold as American-made commodities.

Now those things are going on, and we as wage earners see these things going on. We are not concerned with the technical features. We are concerned with the grave situation staring the American wage earners and producers in the face, and with these developments taking place we think that this committee, and Congress, should clearly declare for the American valuation principle, for an increase in rates in a number of industries where it has been found that American wage earners and American wages are not protected, and where the American wage may be destroyed by competition abroad.

By establishing their factories abroad there is this differentiation in wages of 40 per cent of the American wages on the average; in some cases only 10 per cent of American wages. Those figures varying, of course. Are we going to sit silently by and close our doors against immigration, and let commodities come in and do the same damage to our wage earners?

Therefore we feel that the American principle of valuation ought to be enacted into law, and we believe that duties ought to be raised to give protection. Some might be lowered where there is undue protection. That is a matter that your subcommittees, I understand, are to take up. This committee now is only taking up the matter of valuation here.

We are supported in this view by no less a person than the President of the United States, for in his message he stated very clearly that there should be some other form of valuation given to the Treasury in order to adequately, fairly, and justly administer this important law meaning so much to our industrial life.

I am concerned about the peoples of Europe, but yet I do not want to see American standards lowered down to European standards, and I do not feel that the American people should suffer because we ought to give some help to European people.

Then when we look further what do we find after all with reference to these importations? We are speaking of wholesale prices, of foreign valuations, of United States valuations; but what does the consumer gain by it in the price that he pays? The report that your committee had four years ago in a letter transmitted by the United States Treasury, what does it show? That the retail price varies but little from that of the American retail price. But excessive profits are made by those who import these commodities. And they merely maintain their prices just a little lower to compete successfully with American-made commodities in order to capture the market and thus enlarge their profits. Why, I do not blame the American manufacturer for closing down his plant to-day and building a foreign plant, importing the commodity, and then having a larger distribution of profits for himself. And that is the situation we are in.

We find great comfort in the statement made by President Hoover in his address to this special session of Congress asking that a new principle of valuation be made. And then when we look further to see what he really means in that connection we find that eight years ago, when he was Secretary of Commerce and when he was summoned before the House Ways and Means Committee, he was in favor of the American valuation principle. He was asked if it was possible to introduce it, and here is what occurred:

"Mr. FREAR. If the American valuation system was adopted you do not consider the difficulties of administration insurmountable, do you?

"Secretary HOOVER. No. I do not presume that anything is administratively insurmountable."

Now, we have all these fancied arguments of those who have been in the Government service. You speak of the Customs Court. We know it only as an importers court, because no one else has any standing there. I do not want to take up the time of this committee to give you some illustrations of experiences we have had there, even though we are not represented in the Customs Court—we have no voice there, we have no standing there. But we have been watching decisions, we have been watching proceedings, and we know what is going on. And I say to you very frankly that while in principle I should not want to give power to one administrator in a great important matter of this kind, yet from the experience had in this Customs Court I would rather trust the Treasury of the United States in the fixing of a proper rate than oftentimes I would the Customs Court.

We feel that if this Congress really intends to protect the American wage earners, because both the Democratic and the Republican Parties have now enunciated that the tariff legislation should be to equalize the wage factor and protect American wage earners, I say there is only one basis of carrying that out and that is to take the American basis of wages, of conditions, as the factor upon which to estimate the cost.

The last speaker spoke of the lower wage cost and the lower wholesale cost in France or Japan as compared with the United States. The United States, after all, accepts the foreign value and then maintains really its favoritism to the country of lowest standards of production and places a penalty upon that most advanced nation, which is more fairly treating its wage earners. We find, of course, naturally that in England they are paying higher wages than in any other foreign country. We find next Germany, then Italy, then Czechoslovakia, and so on, constantly going down and down, but with our foreign evaluation or with our United States valuation we give incentive to the country with the lowest wage standard and the worst industrial condition—we give them preference to the American market. So the United States valuation based upon this foreign valuation does not meet the situation.

We feel that the duty upon all should be alike, and it should be based upon American cost of production, American selling price. Of course, I realize that such a change would necessitate a rearrangement in the schedule, because we have no desire to place an embargo. We have no desire to stop fair competition. And, of course, I think, as the chairman so well stated, that is a practical thing and it is a possibility. We have no desire to have this committee or Congress place itself in the position that we are going to close the doors entirely to all imports. But we do feel that there should be a greater protection and that the American principle of valuation will lend itself to that with the readjustment in the various schedules.

Now, I do not know that I could add anything more to this. I want to say to you very frankly that this is the first time that organized labor has taken hold of this situation of its own accord. We are not supported by any manufacturer or by any tariff league or organization. The organizations that are affiliated with us contribute $50 a month for the maintenance of one secretary in this work. And that is all the finances we have. We have come to realize this in past years. Employers would come to us and urge our support in legislation, and we find this: That when it comes to the finished product, when they are competing with it—oh, yes; they want a high tariff on that; but everything that enters into that production in the form of raw material, or even finished commodities essential to its production, there they want a low tariff. And we are tired of that.

We want all American labor protected. We do not want special privileges given to any. Take the wall-paper industry. That is a good illustration. The employer and the wage earner joined in asking for protection, and got it, and thereafter in the matter of the highest skilled labor connected with it, the print roller, through the Customs Court decisions that was brought down so that there was no protection whatever, and those are all imported from Europe to-day, and the skilled labor to-day is unemployed.

We know what the manufacturers are doing. They blow hot and cold. We know that. And we know when men come before you why they do not give direct answers. It is because they find themselves in dual positions, as importers as well as producers.

We come to your committee because we are interested in the labor conditions in America, and we are interested in the industrial life of our people. We want to safeguard their opportunities of employment. We see these great changes going on, and we want to meet them in an orderly and peaceable fashion, but we want the opportunities for employment protected, and so do we want to see protected the merchant and manufacturer as well. For while he may gain a temporary advantage by importation, he only destroys the market that he must ultimately rely upon.

Senator SIMMONS. Mr. Woll, what per cent of the benefits of protection are passed on to the laboring classes?

Mr. WOLL. Why, it is difficult to say what per cent. Might I give you one illustration of where we receive no protection whatever, but where the American valuation principle obtains, and that is in the coal-tar industry, employing 9,000 men, and half of them getting mere living wages. Now, there the principle of the American valuation applies. And we do not say that the tariff itself will ultimately give the protection to the workers, because they can only get what they wring from the man that they are employed by. We have not yet found the employer who voluntarily gives away profits to the wage earners. It is only when competition or forceful action compels him to give a greater reward that we get the benefit.

Senator SIMMONS. The answer is that they give you just as much as you force them to give you?

Mr. WOLL. Yes; but we know this: That despite that fact, if foreign importation is encouraged, if merchants and manufacturers are forced to close their manufactures down and bring in importations, we have no chance to struggle for a greater return in the returns of industry.

Senator EDGE. You spoke about the employment increasing, following it, as I recall, with a plea for greater duty in some cases?

Mr. WOLL. Yes; absolutely true.

Senator EDGE. As I understand it, you do believe that there are many industrial commodities, or some industrial commodities, where the duty is not sufficient to keep the factories running at anywhere near 100 per cent?

Mr. WOLL. Absolutely true. There is no question about that. And I am not concerned about this general cry about no increase in tariff duties. We know the power of the press. I am in the printing industry, and we know who are the large advertisers of the metropolitan press. And if it is not the department stores and the importers that are the great bulk of the advertisers I would like to know where they come from. And certainly the press is responsive to its income.

Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. Woll, the records show that American exports are approximately $5,000,000,000 annually.

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma. A good portion of that exportable product is manufactured and is produced by American labor.

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma. Higher rates would probably destroy to a certain extent some of those exports. Has your organization given thought to that?

Mr. WOLL. Most assuredly we have. And I tried to indicate to you that while we point with pride to our exports, and we seek to minimize the effect of our imports, because we accept foreign valuation and not American valuation when we estimate our imports—despite that, do we not find industries going out to organize their factories abroad and making their capital investments abroad so that our exports are not going to maintain even the happy situation we are in to-day, regardless of what this committee or Congress may do on the tariff question.

Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma. Just another question. It has been admitted here by some witnesses that this proposed change would raise the price of imports.

Mr. WOLL. The American valuation would undoubtedly raise all of them. That is, if no adjustments were taking place in the fixation of the several schedules. And I do not urge that we shall maintain the rate in the present schedules and simply substitute the American valuation principle in place of them, thus in a deceptive sense, you might say, raising the rates. I do not urge that at all.

Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma. Considering that to be true, then it is proposed in this bill to further raise the rate on imports?

Mr. WOLL. I certainly do urge the raising of the protection of duty on a number of industries.

Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma. Then this bill would raise the rates in two ways: First, by the change of valuation; second, by an increase of the percentage rate.

Mr. WOLL. The substitution of the American valuation in place of the foreign valuation can take place by a formula which I am sure that your committee, with its experts, is able to develop, where it will not need a substantial increase or any increase whatever. The question of a particular industry which should receive protection is quite another thing, and I understand you have your subcommittees for that purpose.

Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma. Your organization would not be favorable to raising those rates so high as to cut off our exports, would it?

Mr. WOLL. We certainly do not want to place an embargo on imports, but we do want a tariff that will protect American industry and that will safeguard not only existing conditions of employment but enable the hundreds of thousands who are not employed to have an opportunity for employment.

Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma. You concede, do you not, that we have to sell abroad in order for foreigners to buy our products?

Mr. WOLL. I quite agree with you that we must have an export market. But to my mind the American market, which is far superior to our foreign market, ought to receive first and foremost consideration and should first be protected before attention is given to the foreign market—not ignoring the importance of it, but I see the importance of it dwindling away because these large industries are merging and they are going out and establishing their own foreign plants because they can buy them for a song. They can hire labor at 40 per cent of what it costs here and supply their foreign markets by that means.

Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma. Have you a list of American investors who have built factories abroad?

Mr. WOLL. I have no list here, but that information can be obtained.

Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma. Could you get that information for us?

Mr. WOLL. I will be very glad to.

Of course, the tariff sets up other reactions. If Europeans are anxious to get into the American market, let them invest their money here. Let them put up their factories here and let them employ American labor. The doors are open to capital always.

Senator REED. You have been talking about the foreign wage level being 40 per cent of ours.

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

Senator REED. My impression was that it was not as high as that.

Mr. WOLL. That is the average. If you take China and Japan it is about 10 per cent.

Senator REED. I was thinking about Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, and Italy.

Mr. WOLL. England is the highest wage nation of the European and Asiatic nations. Next in order comes Germany, next follows France, and then Italy and Czechoslovakia, and so on down the line. When I say 40 per cent, that is the finding of the Ways and Means Committee as to the average of the lowest and the highest. In China and Japan you will find it about 10 per cent, or even less than that, of the American wages.

Senator SHORTRIDGE. I want the committee to know this, Mr. Woll, that at my suggestion, after a discussion with him, our Secretary of Labor set Mr. Stewart, who is in charge of that branch of the work of his department, to work gathering authoritative data concerning the wage scales in practically all the nations of the world. The Senate authorized the publication of that study, and I am informed here within the last few moments that the Public Printer will issue that document in the course of a few days.

Mr. WOLL. It will be an astounding document, I dare say.

Senator SHORTRIDGE. I propose to invite the earnest attention of this committee and of the Senate, and of the Congress, and of the country, I hope, to that document. I venture now to say that the general average of wages paid to labor in all the handicrafts and all the branches of human labor in other countries is far less than 40 per cent of our wage scales.

Mr. WOLL. There is no question about it. I am using the figures of the Ways and Means Committee.

Senator SHORTRIDGE. Precisely; but I was astounded and shocked and perhaps grieved to note the wages paid to laboring men and women in other countries of the earth.

Mr. WOLL. And you would be still more astounded if you took into consideration the hours of labor and the home work done, as compared with the conditions prevailing here.

Senator HARRISON. Would you not still be astounded if you took into consideration the enormous profits certain manufacturing interests have made, and the small amounts of profits they have given to labor?

Mr. WOLL. If the protective tariff to industry could be regulated according to the benefits distributed to wage earners, and if such a system could be developed, we would be heartily in favor of it. There is no question about it. As I have tried to indicate before, our return for services rendered in industry is only what we can wring out of industry, and what competition between employers for labor compels them to give.

Senator KING. In determining wages, necessarily you must take into account the price levels, must you not? That is to say, in countries where there is a lower wage, but the commodities of life which the wage earner purchases are very much less; that also must be taken into consideration.

Mr. WOLL. But what consolation is that with the American wage earner?

Senator KING. But when you are instituting a comparison you have to take into account price levels, do you not?

Mr. WOLL. There is no question about that; and if I were to compare the social life of the American worker with that of the foreign worker I could not be guided entirely by the amount of wages paid, because the exchange rate might be different. But when I study the competition of American labor with foreign labor, it is of little consolation to me that he can purchase more with his centime than we can with our penny.

The CHAIRMAN. That is not true. He can not purchase very much more of the necessities of life than he can in this country.

Mr. WOLL. Even allowing for the slight difference in exchange.

Senator REED. And the man out of a job does not care what the price level is.

Mr. WOLL. The man who is working to-day and is laid off because of competition from foreign-made goods does not quibble about the principles involved or the technicalities. He knows he is out of a job, and he is wondering where he will get a job. He has given all his life to that skilled training, and he just goes on the human scrap heap. That is the reason for the great agitation for taking care of men who have reached the age of 40, whom industry will not employ, because they can find younger men in the prime of life to produce. I say we have serious problems confronting us. As to our home markets, we want them protected first of all, and that is the way we think it can be done.

Senator EDGE. You emphasized the importance of protecting the home market. I agree with you. That represents about 85 per cent of our products, does it not?

Mr. WOLL. I can not give you the exact ratio, but suppose it is 85 per cent. It is constantly lessening. If you go to the department stores to-day, or the chain stores to-day, or go to any stores, you will find the shelves filled with imported articles. Where they can sell them because they are imported, they will maintain that emblem on them. Where they find they will meet with opposition, they find a ready means of taking the markings off in order to deceive the American buying public.

Senator EDGE. I am merely emphasizing that as one of the necessities for further protection.

Mr. WOLL. There is no question about it.

Senator HARRISON. I did not understand you to say that you indorsed all the increases in the House bill.

Mr. WOLL. I can not say that I indorse all the increases. Various organizations appeared before the committee and presented their particular demands and peculiar requirements. I can not answer for various industries, because I am not familiar with the details, but that has been done by respective industries involved, who gave the wage rates, conditions of employment, and opportunities of the industry, and what has taken place.

Senator SIMMONS. I understand you are in favor of increased duties wherever it is necessary, from your standpoint?

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

Senator SIMMONS. You think you are also in favor of United States valuation.

Mr. WOLL. American valuation.

Senator SIMMONS. Because you think that will increase the protection.

Mr. WOLL. No. I say there that you can regulate the schedules on the particular items so that there will be no increase; but we say this, that if one set system is adopted, as conditions change it will make it possible, as industry develops, for industry itself to meet that situation. It may mean that the duty will go down, because if the American selling price goes down those foreign competitors would get that advantage automatically.

Senator SIMMONS. Then you are not in favor of the American standard selling price?

Mr. WOLL. Not the United States value; no.

Senator SIMMONS. You are not in favor of that. You are in favor of the American price?

Mr. WOLL. Yes; to accept the American cost of production and American means of production as a standard.

Senator SIMMONS. You think that if you should apply to that the rates carried in the House bill it would not materially increase the duties?

Mr. WOLL. I say, if you accepted the schedule in the existing law and substituted the American valuation principle to-day, it would increase the duties. For instance, some commodity might be increased 100 per cent.

Senator SIMMONS. Would it not very largely increase it?

Mr. WOLL. In some instances it would be very large. In some instances it would go over 100 per cent. But suppose here is a commodity where the American valuation would increase the duty 100 per cent. Then it is a simple matter of revising the schedule so as to put it on a par with what it was before.

Senator SIMMONS. Therefore, if we adopt the American valuation, you are in favor of——

Mr. WOLL. Readjusting the rates so as to meet that situation.

Senator SIMMONS. The rates must be lowered.

Mr. WOLL. Yes.

Senator KING. Are you still in favor of the repeal of the Sherman antitrust law and those other laws against monopolies?

Mr. WOLL. Certainly, because I think they have been inefficient and ineffective.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE WHITE RIVER, ARK.

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 1548, which has just been messaged over from the Senate, extending the time for the construction of a bridge in Arkansas. It is very important, as I am informed by certain Senators, as well as by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. PARKS], a member of the Subcommittee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce on bridges.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. 1548

A bill extending the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the White River at or near Newport, Ark.

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the White River at or near Newport, Ark., authorized to be built by the State Highway Commission of Arkansas by the act of Congress approved May 29, 1928, are hereby extended one and three years, respectively, from the date of approval hereof.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask for recognition on the bill.

My purpose in doing this is to reply briefly to some remarks which were made a few moments ago by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DENISON] in reference to freight rates.

In his remarks the gentleman referred to two resolutions which have been introduced in connection with this subject. In the beginning of his remarks the gentleman from Illinois made a statement that no one will take issue with, and that is that the Congress as a practical matter can not engage in the duty of rate making. These resolutions do not undertake to do so. They undertake simply to lay down the broad principles of rate making which Congress has always done.

Congress in creating the Interstate Commerce Commission laid down certain fundamental principles which the commission must comply with in carrying out their duties. Under the terms of the Esch-Cummins law the Congress undertook to lay down certain general principles of rate making. This has always been the duty of Congress.

These resolutions simply say that the same general reductions on freight rates on farm products intended for exportation shall be applied as now exist on the exportation of iron and steel.

This does not violate in any sense the proposition or the problem of rate making as laid down generally.

On the merits of the proposition the gentleman states that the same reductions are now applied to farm products generally as they are applied to iron and steel. This is rather a remarkable statement.

Mr. DENISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. Yes.

Mr. DENISON. I said the reductions on farm products were greater, not the same.

Mr. JONES of Texas. The gentleman may put in his remarks or in his extension of remarks some of the instances. I would like to have them. I want to say I have four or five instances here where that is not true. I do not know about all of them, generally, but in reply I will just read from Commissioner Esch's testimony and from Director Hardie's testimony, Mr. Hardie being the director of traffic of the Interstate Commerce Commission. He appeared before the gentleman's committee last summer and after detailing the decreased exportation rates that applied on the products of iron and steel and some other commodities, Mr. Hardie, the director of traffic, in response to a question, states:

> The rates on cotton to export ports are the same, whether for exportation or for domestic use.

I ask the gentleman to cite me a single interior point from which cotton may be shipped to a point of exportation at a less rate than for domestic use.

Mr. DENISON. I have not those tables here, but if the gentleman will inquire of the commission they will give them to him. The railroads have put into effect the same export rates to Galveston as to New Orleans and vice versa, and in one case or the other the export rate is below the domestic rate.

Mr. JONES of Texas. That is merely an assertion. I have quoted the testimony given last summer, less than a year ago, by the director of traffic of the Interstate Commerce Commission, who says they are the same. His statement conflicts with that just made by the gentleman from Illinois. As to wheat, the same director of traffic, with Commissioner Esch sitting on the stand at the time, said that from certain interior points to points of exportation there was a reduction of 4 cents a bushel on wheat that had been on at times and off at times, but he did not indicate that it was a part of the permanent rate structure of the country. The recent reduction made on wheat was made to apply to certain railway companies from certain interior points, and was an average reduction of only about 7½ cents per bushel. The rate on which shipments from even my section of the country to points of exportation is some 32 cents per bushel, and a 7½-cent reduction is less than a 25 per cent reduction to those points.

Here is a letter, dated just a few days ago, from the Interstate Commerce Commission, which says that the freight rate on steel and iron products from Chicago, Ill., to San Francisco, Calif., when intended for export, is 40 cents a hundred, and when intended for domestic use $1 per hundred. This is a reduction to two-fifths. In other words, if you had given that much reduction on wheat from my country to points of exportation, you would have given a reduction of 20 cents a bushel. Now, I ask for the citation again.

Mr. DENISON. The gentleman does not read all the letter. The letter also states that on iron products intended for export they require 80,000 pounds in a car, whereas for domestic they only require 40,000 pounds, and when you translate that into percentages you can see it makes quite a difference.

Mr. JONES of Texas. The gentleman is wrong again. True, some of the rates in the letter I referred to were for 80,000-pound cars, and some for 40,000-pound cars, but the limitations it cited applied alike to domestic and export rates, unless I wholly misinterpreted the letter. I am talking about the fact that the export rate is less than the domestic rate, and if that 40-cent rate is a fair rate, then the dollar rate is highway robbery, and if the dollar rate is a fair rate, the 40-cent rate is entirely too little, and under the instructions embodied in the Esch-Cummins law the Interstate Commerce Commission must permit those rates to be made up in the general rate structure of the country. In that sense I claim that in the collections throughout the country you are paying an export premium on steel, as well as some other commodities, and it is just the same, and certainly no less, a subsidy than the debenture plan. I do not say these export rates are not justified. I am not arguing the merits of that proposition. I am simply saying that if they are justified on steel, most certainly similar rates would be justified on cotton, which is the greatest export commodity in America, and is responsible, more than any other single commodity, for our great balance of trade.

Mr. DENISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I yield.

Mr. DENISON. The domestic rate on wheat from Kansas City to Galveston is 37 cents, and the export rate has been reduced for years to 30½ cents. Recently it has been further reduced to 19 cents, or about 50 per cent of the domestic rate.

Mr. JONES of Texas. The gentleman was so much in error about some of his other statements that I am not sure whether I should accept his figures. At any rate, whatever reductions have been made is a temporary matter and only runs until September 1. Besides, no such general reductions as the gentleman cited have been allowed on wheat.

Mr. DENISON. And on steel products the large reduction runs to only December 31, 1929, when it expires.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Oh, no; I have cited the testimony of Commissioner Esch to the effect that the reduced export rates on steel had existed since before he became a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission. That is the testimony before the gentleman's committee. That is in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 17, and the hearings were held in May, 1928. It has been in effect, as I have been informed, for more than 25 years—perhaps not the same rate, but a reduced export rate on steel.

Then the figures which the gentleman picks out on steel is not the same reduction even as a temporary matter. I would like to have the gentleman cite me a decision under which they limit the reduction to December 31.

Mr. DENISON. I will read from a letter from Commissioner Porter.

Mr. JONES of Texas. The gentleman has said that in making changes they must hold hearings and let all sides be heard. How is the commission going to do away with the rates without a hearing?

Mr. DENISON. Let me read to the gentleman from this letter. Let me first state that there have been reductions on iron and steel products in effect amounting to about 25 per cent below the domestic rate since 1921. There have been similar reductions on farm products, notably on wheat and corn.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Not on cotton.

Mr. DENISON. Not on cotton, and if I had time I could explain why not. In 1927 the railroads put into effect a still greater reduction on automobiles, iron and steel products.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Yes; I have already cited that.

Mr. DENISON. The gentleman was discussing the rate reductions that have been in effect since 1921; he was not discussing the greater reductions that were put into effect later.

Mr. JONES of Texas. The gentleman refers to the export rate on wheat from Kansas City to Galveston. Is not that a general reduction? They made the reduction apply to local rates.

Mr. DENISON. No. Now let me read from a letter from Commissioner Porter:

> Most of the iron and steel articles produced in the United States are manufactured east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers. The natural ports of exportation from that territory are those on the North Atlantic coast, principally New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and Boston. It is not true that rates on manufactured iron and steel articles from ports have for many years been from 45 to 60 per cent lower than the domestic rates, as the resolution appears to state. Prior to 1921 all such traffic for export moved on the same rates as domestic traffic. In that year export rates approximately 25 per cent below the domestic basis were established. It is true that since December 30, 1927, export rates from and to the points indicated on iron and steel articles have been approximately 60 per cent of the domestic rates. But such rates are published as temporary rates, having been in the first instance published to expire December 31, 1928, but later extended to expire December 31, 1929.

Mr. JONES of Texas. What particular rate is the gentleman referring to?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas will realize that this debate is irregular. The Chair thinks that the gentleman from Texas should ask for some specific length of time.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. DENISON. Now, if the gentleman will yield, I want to complete my statement. I quote further from the letter of Commissioner Porter:

> On January 1, 1930, unless the tariffs are changed in the meantime, the former export rates, approximately 75 per cent of the domestic rates, will again become effective.
>
> There are at the present time in effect temporary emergency reduced rates on wheat for export which on the average probably do not exceed 55 per cent of the domestic rates from and to the same points. These rates are scheduled to expire September 30, 1929, at which time the standard basis of export rates will again become effective unless some change is made in the meantime. But even the standard export rates on wheat, speaking generally, probably average as much as 25 per cent lower than the domestic rates.

Mr. JONES of Texas. That letter sounds like a plea in confession and avoidance. According to the gentleman's own statement that is a temporary rate. The permanent rate gives 25 per cent reduction on steel, and it has not been given on cotton and some other farm products. Even the temporary rate on wheat has only applied to certain points. There was a 4-cent differential on wheat to certain points, 4 cents a bushel or 4 cents a hundred pounds, one or the other, but that is the only general reduction that they had to export points on wheat. It is much less reduction than applies to steel, automobiles, or even farm implements.

Mr. DENISON. I will put this letter into the RECORD; it shows that there have been permanent reductions in the export rates on farm productions amounting to more than the reduction in the export rates on iron and steel products for a number of years. The railroads recently have put into effect a still greater reduction on wheat in order to move it.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Does that represent a greater percentage as compared to the total value of the commodities? Of course, you take the total value of wheat and cotton, and it is tremendous.

Mr. DENISON. I am not prepared to state that.

Mr. JONES of Texas. The rates which I have cited show no such reductions on wheat and cotton, and they are specific rates instead of general statements. Whether there is one on corn I do not know, but I know that from my own country there have not been any such reductions on wheat and cotton. There have not been any at all on cotton that I have been able to find, and I have the commissioners' own statements that there has been none. Let me cite the gentleman to some of the other rates on farm implements. For instance, from Chicago, Ill., to San Francisco, on implements intended for export the rate is $1 a hundred, and when intended for domestic use the rate is $1.93, nearly twice as much. From Cincinnati, Ohio, to San Francisco it is $1 a hundred for export and $2 a hundred for domestic use. On the same farm implements from Chicago to New Orleans, where they are intended for export, the rate is 47½ cents per hundred, and when intended for domestic use 73 cents per hundred, and so it runs all the way down. I have a number of places and the rates cited, and I have in my office a number of other rates which bear a similar proportion on all those commodities. On automobiles the rate from Cleveland, Ohio, to San Francisco, Calif., intended for export, is $2.10 a hundred, and when intended for domestic use, $4.80 per hundred. That is less than half the regular rate. This was not given to me as a temporary rate. It may be.

I hope the gentleman will put into the RECORD the points to which the export rate on cotton generally has been less than the domestic rate and the points from which it may be shipped. In shipments of automobiles from Cleveland to New Orleans for export the rate is $1.74, and for domestic use, $2.42. The gentleman said that in making these rates they were trying to balance up and cause exports to go through certain ports—to flow to the Gulf ports. They gave a much less reduction on automobiles to the Gulf ports than they did to the Pacific ports, and a less reduction than to the Atlantic ports, so it does not seem that they have any particular system. I would like to have the gentleman put something in the RECORD on corn. We export so little corn that it amounts to nothing. We export less than 2 per cent of the corn produced, and more than 85 per cent of all of the corn raised in America never crosses the county line but is fed within the county in which it is grown. The great export commodities are wheat and cotton, especially cotton, which accounts for nearly a billion dollars of our exports—between $800,000,000 and $900,000,000—and at times it has run over a billion dollars. We ordinarily ship abroad from $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 worth of wheat; all the way from 150,000,000 bushels to 289,000,000 bushels.

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. Oh, I know what the gentleman has in his hand, as I have it in my office. You can pick out a specific rate.

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. Yes.

Mr. DENISON. The export rate on corn from Kansas City to Galveston is 34.5 cents and the domestic rate is 43 cents. The export rate on corn to New Orleans from Kansas City is 43.5 cents and the domestic rate, 51.5 cents.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Those are very small reductions. Read some on cotton.

Mr. DENISON. I do not seem to have any on cotton.

Mr. JONES of Texas. And does not the gentleman think that cotton has been discriminated against.

Mr. DENISON. If the gentleman will inquire of the Interstate Commerce Commission, he will find that these other exports move from the central competitive manufacturing district; that is, east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers. Cotton moves from an entirely different territory and has no competition abroad.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Does the gentleman think that they ought to be favored?

Mr. DENISON. Cotton is not produced in that territory and it is not shipped from there. Cotton is produced in the South and is generally exported through Galveston and New Orleans. If you will inquire of the commission you will find reduced export rates have been allowed on cotton so as to equalize the flow of cotton as between those two ports.

Mr. JONES of Texas. I wish the gentleman would quit talking general and cite me the specific reduction on cotton rates. A lot of cotton is shipped out of New York and a lot of cotton is shipped through there for factory purposes and a great deal is shipped to the mills of New England.

Mr. DENISON. Not for export.

Mr. JONES of Texas. It is shipped up there, and we ship some cotton to New York for export. Some cotton is produced nearly a thousand miles from the coast and is shipped that far. Cotton in my section is shipped 800 miles before it reaches the water, in the most direct line. It is 800 miles by rail from the district I represent to the coast. That is a good deal farther than a lot of these factory products that I have cited to the gentleman are shipped. Some of them do not run half that far before they get to the seacoast.

Mr. DENISON. Whatever these rates may be—and some of them may be wrong—I do not know, and the commission does not know, because they have never had hearings on them, because nobody has ever made complaint against them. The law provides for a method of making complaint against any rate which is put into effect by the railroads. The gentleman can make complaint.

Mr. JONES of Texas. It seems to me that some three or four years ago we passed the Hoch-Smith resolution asking the commission to reduce rates.

Mr. DENISON. No; the gentleman is wrong.

Mr. JONES of Texas. The gentleman has a very short memory. We have spent the last three or four years vainly attempting to get relief, while the farmers have been going broke.

Mr. DENISON. The law provides that if any person or any community complains that a rate is unreasonable or unlawful or discriminatory in any way, the commission shall have a hearing and pass upon that rate. Now, the commission informs me they have never had a complaint filed against any of these export rates.

Mr. JONES of Texas. That is exactly the trouble. The gentleman told the secret a little while ago. The steel people and these manufacturers can slip in and get a railroad to grant a reduction, and, of course, the cotton grower or the wheat grower does not know anything about that reduction, and he does not know that that is going to make him pay higher rates. Is the gentleman from Illinois in favor of a general policy of reducing rates?

Mr. DENISON. All rates have to be published for 30 days before being put into effect.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Such publications mean little to anyone except an expert rate man unless they are translated into plain terms.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

DECEASED SOLDIERS FROM FLORIDA BURIED IN PERMANENT AMERICAN CEMETERIES IN EUROPE

Mrs. OWEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a list of citizens of Florida who gave up their lives for their country in the World War.

The SPEAKER. I there objection to the request of the lady from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mrs. OWEN. Mr. Speaker, under leave given me by the House, I am presenting herewith a list of the Florida soldiers and sailors buried overseas, together with the location of their graves, which is made available through the assistance and cooperation of the Quartermaster General of the Army.

The list is as follows:

KEY TO PERMANENT AMERICAN CEMETERIES IN EUROPE

FRANCE

No. 1232. Meuse-Argonne American Cemetery, Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, Meuse.

No. 1764. Aisne-Marne American Cemetery, Belleau, Aisne.

No. 34. Suresnes American Cemetery, Suresnes, Seine (near Paris).

No. 636. Somme American Cemetery, Bony Aisne.

No. 608. Oise-Aisne American Cemetery, Seringes-et-Nesles, Aisne.

No. 1233. St. Mihiel American Cemetery, Thiaucourt, Meurthe-et-Moselle.

BELGIUM

No. 1252. Flanders Field American Cemetery, Waereghem, Belgium.

ENGLAND

No. 107–E. Brookwood American Cemetery, Brookwood (near London), England.

Deceased soldiers from Florida buried in cemeteries in Europe

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
FIRST DIVISION
Jones, Bennie A.	Cpl. Co. M, 28 Inf.	636	10	10	C
Mahoney, Grover C.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. K, 28 Inf.	608	16	14	D
SECOND DIVISION
Pilcher, Luther Wade.	Sgt. 20 Co., 5 Regt. U. S. M. C.	1764	76	9	A
Saunders, George Raymond.	Trumpeter, 82 Co., 6 Regt. U. S. M. C.	608	4	23	B
Butler, Charles.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. B, 15 F. A.	1233	36	15	D
White, Patrick C.	Cpl. Bty. E, 15 F. A.	34	31	11	A
THIRD DIVISION
Marston, Frank R.	Capt. Co. E, 30 Inf.	608	32	20	A
Anderson, Carl O.	Pvt. Co. B, 30 Inf.	1232	9	4	H
Lopez, Charles L.	Pvt. 1 cl. Bty. F, 18 F. A.	608	8	39	B
Jones, Arthur S.	Pvt. Co. E, 6 Engrs.	1232	34	36	E
Ridgdill, Rufus W.	Cpl. Co. D, 6 Engrs.	1232	21	36	F
FOURTH DIVISION
Losco, Marion J.	Pvt. Co. A, 47 Inf.	608	5	1	A
Coarsey, James C.	Pvt. Co. G, 58 Inf.	608	8	4	C
FIFTH DIVISION
Bentz, Newton C.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. C, 6 Inf.	1232	13	39	G
Ceruti, James D. W.	Pvt. Co. A, 61 Inf.	1232	10	4	A
Monath, Walter A.	Sgt. Bty. D, 19 F. A.	1233	11	12	D
Simmons, William C.	Pvt. Co. F, 7 Engrs.	1232	39	42	B
SIXTH DIVISION
Harvey, Essie L.	Pvt. Co. K, 52 Inf.	1232	1	23	F
Lindland, Tellef.	Saddler, Sup. Co. 3 F. A.	1232	13	11	A
Lynn, Simon P.	Pvt. Co. F, 6 Ammn. Train.	1232	33	28	A
Clifton, Leary.	Pvt. Co. A, 102 Inf.	608	33	12	A
THIRTIETH DIVISION
Ridgdill, Sill V.	Pvt. Co. K, 118 Inf.	636	3	5	D
Waldron, Harold E.	Pvt. Co. E, 105 Engrs.	636	8	16	B
Denmark, Gordon H.	Cpl. Co. A, 106 Engrs.	107–E	2	11	C
Ingram, John W.	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. B, 105 Engrs.	608	12	20	D
Watson, Elmer T.	Pvt. Co. M, 125 Inf.	1232	3	35	G
THIRTY-EIGHTH DIVISION
Hall, Washington.	Pvt. Co. D, 149 Inf.	107–E	17	4	D
Vandevelde, Louis.	Pvt. Sup. Co., 139 F. A.	107–E	10	4	D
FORTY-FIRST DIVISION
Hill, Thomas L.	Pvt. Sup. Co., 163 Inf.	608	2	31	A
Pitts, John H.	Pvt. Bty. D, 146 F. A.	1232	12	34	A
Lowe, Henry.	Wag. Co. L, 116 Engrs.	608	38	22	D

Deceased soldiers from Florida buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
FORTY-SECOND DIVISION
Heisler, Ralph E.	Pvt. M. G. Co., 165 Inf.	608	10	9	B
Campbell, Frank A.	Pvt. Co. M, 166 Inf.	608	3	8	B
Roberts, John H.	Pvt. Co. K, 166 Inf.	1233	4	3	C
Forsythe, William O.	Pvt. Co. F, 167 Inf.	608	15	6	B
Wilkison, Rabe O.	Pvt. Co. M, 167 Inf.	1233	12	21	D
Bell, William Z.	Pvt. Co. C, 168 Inf.	1232	7	29	E
Leonardy, Charlie C.	Pvt. Co. H, 168 Inf.	608	12	5	A
SEVENTY-SEVENTH DIVISION
Lusk, Willard T.	2 lt. 308 Inf.	608	3	17	B
EIGHTY-FIRST DIVISION
Bennett, Leroy M.	Pvt. Co. I, 322 Inf.	1233	31	16	B
Fowler, Ira J.	Cook, Co. E, 323 Inf.	1232	33	35	D
Emerson, Clyde A.	Sgt. Hq. Co. 318 M. G. Bn.	1764	8	11	B
Caine, John S.	Pvt. Hq. Co., 316 F. A.	1232	30	7	B
Hamm, Arthur E.	Capt. Co. M, 326 Inf.	1233	4	27	C
Perry, Paul E.	Pvt. Co. B, 327 Inf.	1233	20	21	B
Desaussure, Edward C.	1 lt. M. G. Co., 328 Inf.	1232	22	33	B
Waldron, Luther M.	Pvt. Bty. E, 321 F. A.	1233	28	1	B
Mott, Thomas St. C.	Pvt. 1 cl. Amb. Co., 325, 307 S. Tr.	1232	34	19	C
Hinson, Paul T.	Pvt. 1 cl. Q. M. Det., 308 S. Tr.	608	35	27	D
Pantzar, Gunnar	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. F, 360 Inf.	1233	1	19	C
NINETY-SECOND DIVISION
Morris, John	Pvt. Co. G, 368 Inf.	1233	2	26	G
Campbell, True	Wagoner, Co. A, 349 M. G. Bn.	1233	32	7	C
Hightower, Adolphus	Pvt. Co. C, 351 M. G. Bn.	1233	1	12	D
NONDIVISIONAL
Dingley, George P.	Pvt. 1108 Aero Sq.	34	34	12	B
Franzen, Herbert	Pvt. 8 Co., 4 Regt. M. M. Air Serv.	608	23	22	D
Weston, Josie C.	Sgt. maj. Hq. Det. 2 Army Art. CAC.	1233	19	21	C
Lee, William T.	Pvt. 1 cl. Trk. Co. 5, 1st Corps Art. Park.	1232	34	44	A
Wilson, John T.	Pvt. Ft. Screvens S. A. R. D. No. 2.	107–E	1	2	C
Baker, Ralph M.	Pvt. 1 cl. Base Hosp. No. 89, M. C.	1233	26	12	A
Tillis, Walter D.	Pvt. 488 Co., M. T. C.	608	19	30	D
Fuller, Ellis F.	Sgt. Co. H, 310, M. R. Unit.	608	25	31	D
Rooney, Allen	Pvt. Co. B, 8 P. O. Bn.	608	5	30	A
Garcia, John M.	Cpl. Co. H, 1 Pioneer Inf.	608	15	42	D
Taylor, William S., jr.	Pvt. 1 cl., Co. M, 1 Pioneer Inf.	1232	40	22	G
Lopez, Archie	Pvt. Co. H, 63 Pioneer Inf.	1233	8	22	A
Baker, Ruben	Pvt. Co. B, 807 Pioneer Inf.	608	30	19	D
Butler, Hallie	Pvt. Co. A, 807 Pioneer Inf.	608	7	30	A
Campbell, Lucius	Pvt. Co. K, 807 Pioneer Inf.	608	7	20	C
Davis, Isaac	do	608	2	21	A
Green, Isaiah	Cook, Sup. Co., 807 Pioneer Inf.	1232	29	20	F
Jones, Thomas J.	Pvt. Co. M, 807 Pioneer Inf.	1232	1	21	F
Kelly, Isiah	Pvt. Co. G, 807 Pioneer Inf.	608	10	24	B
Knight, Moses S.	Pvt. Co. L, 807 Pioneer Inf.	608	20	29	A
Madra, John	Pvt. Co. C, 807 Pioneer Inf.	608	25	28	D
Major, Newton	Pvt. Co. D, 807 Pioneer Inf.	608	18	30	B
Martin, Charlie	Pvt. Co. G, 807 Pioneer Inf.	608	11	24	B
McNiah, Henry	Pvt. Co. L, 807 Pioneer Inf.	608	30	39	D
Murray, Henry	Pvt. Co. M, 807 Pioneer Inf.	1232	32	14	E
Pinder, Paul	do	608	24	21	C
Shellman, George	Pvt. Co. K, 807 Pioneer Inf.	608	21	30	B
Todd, Will	Pvt. Co. C, 807 Pioneer Inf.	1232	35	4	B
Watkins, John D.	Cpl. Co. H, 807 Pioneer Inf.	1232	23	6	H
Wright, Riley	Pvt. Co. L, 807 Pioneer Inf.	1232	28	10	H
Torres, Louis A.	1 lt. Q. M. C.	34	4	16	B
Johnson, William	Pvt. Co. D, 329 Bn. Lab. Q. M. C.	1232	19	36	C
Favors, James	Pvt. Co. D, 331 Bn. Lab. Q. M. C.	1232	14	12	H
Davis, Boise	Pvt. Co. B, 335 Lab. Bn., Q. M. C.	608	8	14	C
Carrington, Dudley	Pvt. Co. H, 302 Stevedores Regt.	608	19	23	B
Butler, Thomas A.	Pvt. 850 Co. 813 Bn. Stevedores.	608	11	30	D
Davis, Walter	Pvt. 3 Co. Cp. Lee MRD.	608	20	25	B
Peters, Joseph A.	Cpl. Co. C, 323 Bn. F. S. Bn. SC.	608	14	35	A
Jones, Eugene L.	Cpl. Co. E, 402 Tele. Bn., SC.	1233	27	26	A
Giles, Pete	Cpl. Co. C, 17 Engrs.	608	4	24	B
Wiemann, Emil	Pvt. 1 cl., Co. A, 17 Engrs.	608	18	21	C
Riggins, Charles	Pvt. Co. B, 536 Engrs.	608	10	35	A
Bradley, Daniel	Pvt. Co. D, 546 Engrs.	107–E	7	5	D
Cornell, Englebert W.	Pvt. Co. A, 546 Serv. Bn., Engrs.	107–E	4	10	D
Green, Willie	Pvt. Co. D, 546 Serv. Bn. Engrs.	107–E	1	1	D
Hagler, Jesse	do	1233	19	15	D
Jeffries, Lawrence L.	do	107–E	2	4	B
Hickey, Albert	do	107–E	15	4	D
Neil, Charlie	Pvt. Co. A, 546 Serv. Bn. Engrs.	107–E	7	5	A
Norton, William	do	107–E	17	1	D
White, Fred	Pvt. Co. C, 547 Engrs.	1232	3	7	C
Jones, John	Pvt. Co. C, 550 Serv. Bn. Engrs.	608	16	18	C

Deceased soldiers from Florida buried in cemeteries in Europe—Con.

Name	Rank and organization	No.	Grave	Row	Block
NONDIVISIONAL—CON.
May, Albert	Pvt. 1 cl. Co. D, 701 Engrs.	34	16	10	B
Williamson, Leo E.	Pvt. 526 Mot. Tk. Co., 424 M. S. Tr.	608	4	31	D
Austin, Frederick C.	Cpl. 527 Mot. Tk. Co., 425 M. S. Tr.	608	7	29	B
Salvino, Marco	Pvt. Co. C, 439 Mot. Sup. Tr.	1233	26	22	C

For the full information of the mothers and widows eligible to these pilgrimages of love and remembrance, I am giving below the law which has been enacted by Congress.

Public Law No. 952, Seventieth Congress (S. 5332)

An act to enable the mothers and widows of the deceased soldiers, sailors, and marines of the American forces now interred in the cemeteries of Europe to make a pilgrimage to these cemeteries

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to arrange for pilgrimages to cemeteries in Europe by mothers and widows of members of the military or naval forces of the United States who died in the military or naval service at any time between April 5, 1917, and July 1, 1921, and whose remains are now interred in such cemeteries. Such pilgrimages shall be made at the expense of the United States under the conditions set forth in section 2.

SEC. 2. The conditions under which such pilgrimages may be made are as follows:

(a) Invitations to make the pilgrimages shall be extended in the name of the United States to the mothers and widows for whom the pilgrimages are authorized to be arranged under section 1.

(b) Upon acceptance of the invitation the mother or widow shall be entitled to make one such pilgrimage; but no mother or widow who has previous to the pilgrimage visited cemeteries described in section 1 shall be entitled to make any such pilgrimage, and no mother or widow shall be entitled to make more than one such pilgrimage.

(c) The pilgrimages shall be made at such times during the period from May 1, 1930, to October 31, 1933, as may be designated by the Secretary of War.

(d) For the purpose of the pilgrimages the Secretary of State shall (1) issue special passports limited to the duration of the pilgrimage, to mothers and widows making the pilgrimages and to such personnel as may be selected to accompany and/or arrange for the pilgrimages, if such mothers, widows, and personnel are citizens of the United States, and (2) issue suitable travel documents, if aliens. No fee for either of such documents or for any application therefor shall be charged. Such alien mothers, widows, and personnel shall be permitted to return and be granted admission to the United States without regard to any law, convention, or treaty relating to the immigration or exclusion of aliens, if the return is made within the period covered by the pilgrimage of the particular group or, in the case of personnel, within such times as the Secretary of War shall by regulation prescribe; except that in any case of unavoidable detention the Secretary of War may extend in such case the time during which return may be made without regard to such laws, conventions, or treaties.

(e) The pilgrimages shall be by the shortest practicable route and for the shortest practicable time, to be designated by the Secretary of War. No mother or widow shall be provided for at Government expense in Europe for a longer period than two weeks from the time of disembarkation in Europe to the time of reembarkation in Europe. In the case of any mother or widow willfully failing to continue the pilgrimage of her particular group, the United States shall not incur or be subject to any expense with regard to her pilgrimage after such failure.

(f) Vessels owned or operated by the United States Government or any agency thereof shall be used for transportation at sea wherever practicable.

(g) Suitable transportation, accommodations, meals, and other necessities pertaining thereto, as prescribed by the Secretary of War, shall be furnished each mother or widow included in any pilgrimage for the entire distance at sea and on land and while sojourning in Europe and while en route in the United States from home to port and from port to home. Cabin-class accommodations shall be furnished for all transportation at sea. No mother or widow shall be entitled, by reason of any payment made by or for her, to be furnished by the Government with transportation, accommodations, meals, and other necessities pertaining thereto different in kind from those prescribed by the Secretary of War for the pilgrimage of the particular group.

(h) All pilgrimages shall be made in accordance with such regulations as the Secretary of War may from time to time prescribe as to the time, route, itineraries, composition of groups, accommodations, transportation, program, arrangements, management, and other matters pertaining to such pilgrimages.

SEC. 3. There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act. The Secretary of War is directed to make an investigation for the purpose of determining (1) the total number of mothers and widows entitled to make the pilgrimages, (2) the number of such mothers and widows who desire to make the pilgrimages and the number who desire to make the pilgrimages during the calendar year 1930, and (3) the probable cost of the pilgrimages to be made. The Secretary of War shall report to the Congress not later than December 15, 1929, the results of such investigation.

SEC. 4. As used in this act—

(a) The term "mother" means mother, stepmother, mother through adoption, or any woman who stood in loco parentis to the deceased member of the military or naval forces for the year prior to the commencement of his service in such forces.

(b) The term "widow" means a widow who has not remarried since the death of the member of the military or naval forces.

THE SUGAR TARIFF

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD, including therein a statement on the Sugar Trust put out by the National City Bank of New York.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Speaker, under consent given me to extend my remarks I include a statement put out by the National City Bank of New York on the sugar tariff.

The statement is as follows:

In the April number of this publication comment was made upon the arguments then being offered at Washington for an increase in the duty on sugar, and now that the new tariff bill has emerged from the House committee with a provision for increasing the general duty on raw sugar from 2.20 to 3 cents per pound we are moved to present more fully the reasons why we think such an increase will be unwise and unjustified from the standpoint of sound public policy.

We are not accustomed to comment upon tariff policies, for the tariff usually has a close relation to party politics, in which a banking institution does not wish to be involved. Furthermore, we are aware that in discussing the sugar situation, and particularly as related to Cuba, we may expect to have it said that our views are influenced by interests which the bank has in Cuba. It is, of course, not a secret that the bank has interests in Cuba as have thousands of American business corporations and individuals, and it may be fairly claimed that an intimate knowledge of the relations existing between Cuba and the United States is not a disqualification for discussing them. Moreover, it is hardly open to dispute that interests which will be adversely affected by the proposed sugar tariff are as much entitled to a hearing as interests which will be benefited, particularly if the former, in number of persons and aggregate of values affected, are shown to be much more important than the latter. Undoubtedly the controversy should be settled, after a full hearing, with proper regard for the interests of all people concerned, including the masses who consume sugar in the United States.

It may be said further that this bank has business interests not only in Cuba but in Porto Rico and the Philippines, countries which are expecting to benefit by the proposed increase, and that its chief interest, incomparably, is in the prosperity of the United States. It is concerned for the many industries of this country whose prosperity is largely dependent upon foreign trade, as the automobile industry, the electrical-equipment industry, the farm implement, machine tool, sewing machine, and other branches of the machinery industry, the steel, textile, and flour-milling industries, and numerous branches of agriculture, and all the other industries which in the aggregate are selling abroad over $5,000,000,000 worth per year of this country's products. The branches of the bank in every part of the world are charged with a study of trade relations, and we feel that we know by direct and trustworthy information what this country stands to gain in foreign trade by fair and conciliatory trade policies and what it stands to lose by policies which provoke antagonism and resentment. The proposed increase of the sugar duty is so unfair to Cuba and would deal such a deadly blow to a people whom fate has placed in close relation to this country that we can not forbear further comment upon the situation.

THE PRINCIPAL SOURCE OF INTERNATIONAL ANTAGONISMS

The people of this country say in generalities that the United States desires to do its full share in efforts to promote the common welfare of nations and develop the spirit of peace and amity throughout the world. Inasmuch as the contacts of the inhabitants of different countries with each other are chiefly in trade, it follows that fair and considerate policies in trade, and particularly where affecting trade relations of long standing, are of the greatest importance to that end. Wherever the livelihood of masses of people is affected by what seems to be arbitrary and unfair action there is bound to be vigorous protest and ill feeling. Moreover, although nations are free to regulate trade, there is a moral obligation upon every member of the world community not to violently disturb conditions upon which the prosperity of other nations is founded without consideration for the effects. Order and permanence in trade relations contribute to general prosperity, and a nation with a volume of international trade as great as that of the United States has an important responsibility in this respect.

It should not be overlooked that acts by a nation in its organized capacity are in a different class from the competitive acts of individuals. Private competition, whether in the domestic or international fields, may be disregarded, for it is free, exists everywhere, and on the whole serves the general interest, but when nations through their governments strike deliberate blows at each other's essential industries, bitterness and resentment result.

PAN AMERICANISM AND CUBA

For many years our statesmen of all parties have professed the doctrine of Pan Americanism, which is supposed to mean that a fundamental basis exists for close and harmonious relations between the countries of the Americas, and that such relations should be cultivated. Our Government maintains at no slight expense commercial advisers and consular officials in all the capitals of Latin America, and the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce publishes numerous bulletins giving information thus gathered. Our trade associations and chambers of commerce hold numerous conventions, not only on the seaboard but in the Mississippi Valley and on the Pacific coast, to arouse the business interests to an appreciation of the growing opportunities for profitable trade with Latin America. It is a fair presumption that the good will of Latin America should not be sacrificed for a mess of pottage. The official headquarters of the Pan American Union are located in Washington, D. C., and it would seem that the purpose which prompted the formation of that organization and the gift of the building which it occupies should find some degree of expression in our national legislation affecting trade.

The announcement last November that President-elect Hoover would make a good-will trip to South America was hailed with genuine enthusiasm in this country and throughout South America, as significant of a desire for closer relations. The influence of good-will trips, however, can not be expected to survive the blighting effects of unfriendly legislation.

We have more intimate relations with Cuba than with any other member of the Pan American Union. We assisted in establishing her independence, making war upon Spain upon the ground that Cuba was so near to our shores that we could not be indifferent to the human distress which existed there or tolerate it longer. In the treaty determining the relations which henceforth should exist between the two countries the United States reserved a certain right of supervision over Cuba's fiscal affairs, a right to intervene in the event of social disorder, and a veto right upon alliances between her and other countries. These reservations were made with a friendly purpose toward Cuba and have not been exercised to her disadvantage. All of this history, however, implies that we hold the relations between Cuba and this country to be permanently closer than the relations ordinarily existing between nations. They are based fundamentally upon the proximity of Cuba to our shores. The fact that the United States has an important naval base on the southern coast of Cuba makes the island practically a first line of defense in the event of our being involved in war, and the Guantanamo base is one of the most important defenses of the Panama Canal.

The loyalty of Cuba to the relations established by the intervention and treaty is strikingly shown by the manner in which that country followed the United States into the European war. The United States entered the war by the declaration of Congress on April 6, 1917, and on April 7, 1917, the Secretary of State received an official dispatch from the United States Minister to Cuba, dated at Habana on that day, saying:

"Congress convened at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Thirty minutes later Senate unanimously passed measure authorizing the President to declare war on Germany. Fifteen minutes after 6, House unanimously passed the act, members standing and cheering."

This was a voluntary and spontaneous act, inspired, as the preamble of the resolution declares, by "the historic ties and gratitude which bind us to the great American Republic."

UTTERANCES OF AMERICAN OFFICIALS

The men whose utterances are quoted below were the public officials who had most to do with the negotiations which established the relations of Cuba with this country at the beginning of Cuba's career as a nation. There were others, among them Senator Platt, of Connecticut, but they were in full sympathy with the purpose of McKinley, Roosevelt, and Root. That purpose was to give independence to Cuba, but to attach her closely to the United States for the good of both countries. These men established Cuba's faith in the United States. The first quotation is from the message of President McKinley to Congress in December, 1899, advising tariff concessions upon Cuban products:

"It is important that our relations with this people [of Cuba] shall be of the most friendly character and our commercial relations close and reciprocal. * * *

"We expect Cuba to treat us on an exceptional footing politically and we should put her in the same exceptional position economically. The proposed action is in line with the course we have pursued as regards all the islands with which we have been brought into relations of varying intimacy by the Spanish war. Porto Rico and Hawaii have been included within our tariff lines to their great benefit as well as ours, and without any of the feared detriment to our own industries. The Philippines, which stand in a different relation, have been given substantial tariff concessions. Products of the Philippines were given free entry into the United States in 1909.

"Cuba is an independent Republic, but a Republic which has assumed certain special obligations as regards her international position, in compliance with our request. I ask for her certain special economic concessions in return, these economic concessions to benefit us as well as her. There are few brighter pages in American history than the page which tells of our dealings with Cuba. On her behalf we waged a war of which the mainspring was generous indignation against oppression, and we have kept faith absolutely. It is earnestly to be hoped that we will complete in the same spirit the record so well begun and show in our dealings with Cuba that steady continuity of policy which it is essential for our Nation to establish in foreign affairs if we desire to play well our part as a world power."

The Hon. Elihu Root in 1901, Secretary of War in President Roosevelt's Cabinet, made the following statement:

"In reliance upon fair and generous treatment by the United States, the Cuban planters have made strenuous efforts to revive their great industry. * * * Incited by our precept and trusting to our friendship, they have struggled to retrieve the disasters under which their country had suffered. All the capital they had or could borrow has been invested in the rebuilding of their mills and the replanting of their land. More than half of the people of the island are depending directly or indirectly upon the success of that industry. If it succeeds, we may expect peace, plenty, domestic order, and the happiness of a free and contented people to reward the sacrifice of American lives and treasure through which Cuba was set free. If it fails, we may expect that the fields will again become waste, the mills will again be dismantled, the great body of laborers will be thrown out of employment, and that poverty and starvation, disorder, and anarchy will ensue; that the charities and the schools which we have been building up will find no money for their support and will be discontinued; that the sanitary precautions which have made Cuba no longer a dreaded source of pestilence but one of the most healthy islands in the world will, of necessity, be abandoned and our Atlantic seaboard must again suffer from the injury to commerce and the maintenance of quarantines at an annual cost of many millions.

"Cuba has acquiesced in our right to say that she shall not put herself in the hands of any other power, whatever her necessities, and in our right to insist upon the maintenance of free and orderly government throughout her limits, however impoverished and desperate may be her people. Correlative to this right is a duty of the highest obligation to treat her not as an enemy, not at arm's length as an aggressive commercial rival, but with a generosity which, toward her, will be but justice; to shape our laws so that they shall contribute to her welfare as well as our own."

In December, 1901, President Roosevelt, in his annual message to Congress, said:

"Elsewhere I have discussed the question of reciprocity. In the case of Cuba, however, there are weighty reasons of morality and of national interests why the policy should be held to have a peculiar application, and, I most earnestly ask your attention to the wisdom, indeed to the vital need, of providing for a substantial reduction in the tariff duties on Cuban imports into the United States. Cuba has in her constitution affirmed what we desired, that she should stand in international matters in closer and more friendly relations with us than any other power, and we are bound by every consideration of honor and expediency to pass commercial measures in the interest of her material well-being."

The trade relations between the two countries have been advantageous to the United States. In her years of prosperity Cuba has bought more of the products of the United States than has any other member of the Pan American Union, and in proportion to her population always has bought more. In fact, Cuba takes normally about one-fourth of all the United States products sold in Latin America. The trade is naturally reciprocal and complementary, rather than competitive, for while Cuba produces sugar more economically than it can be produced in the United States, she buys nearly all other agricultural products and most articles of manufacture in this country. In all relations the two countries have been growing more closely together.

In view of this natural community of interests, as well as the political ties existing, it would seem that if Pan Americanism means anything in the trade policies of this country it should appear in our trade relations with Cuba. Do we want to say that it means nothing there; and if this is the case, how can we make any more professions in its behalf?

Do we want to say that the prosperity and welfare of Cuba, whose principal industry through long-established relations have developed in natural and confident dependence upon the United States market, means so little to us that we will adopt a policy which threatens the ultimate exclusion of the product from this country and the destruction of the industry?

THE SITUATION IN CUBA

Sugar is by far the most important product of Cuba, and nearly the entire production must be sold abroad. The home consumption is estimated at 150,000 tons and the crop of 1928–29 is above 5,000,000 tons. In the five years 1924–1928 the exports of sugar amounted to 84.6 per cent in value of the total exports of the country. Tobacco, which ranks next, answered for 11.4 per cent of export value in the same time. Sugar is the chief money crop, giving employment to labor, distributing income throughout the island, and affording the basis for all business. The predominance of sugar in Cuba is easily accounted for—

"Cuba has vast areas of land better adapted, perhaps, than any other region in the world, both with respect to soil and climate, for the production of sugar."

This quotation is from a book entitled "Sugar in Relation to the Tariff," by Prof. Philip G. Wright, former expert of the United States Tariff Commission, under the sponsorship of the Institute of Economics, Washington, D. C., a fact-finding organization established by the Carnegie Corporation of New York.

Moreover, besides having the natural conditions for the cheap production of sugar it also happens that Cuba is located close to the greatest consumption market for sugar in the world, the United States market. From no other source can the people of the United States be supplied with sugar at so low a price as from Cuba, and be it noted that this is the result of a combination of natural conditions. Judged by the value to a great population of a cheap supply of an essential article of food, it would be called a fortunate situation.

Under the circumstances it was natural that Cuba always should be an important source of sugar supplies for the United States, and when the United States took Cuba under her protection, and order, property rights, and close economic relations between the two countries seemingly were guaranteed, capital flowed from this country into the island in large amounts for the reconstruction, improvement, and development of the industry. Although Secretary Root, as quoted above, said of the Cuban planters that "all of the capital which they had or could borrow had been invested in rebuilding their mills and replanting their land," they would not have been able alone to command the capital required to develop the industry to its present capacity and high standard of efficient operations. American capital assisted, and it is not too much to say that in doing so it was acting under the encouragement and following the lead of the American Government. The aggregate investment of capital in the sugar industry in Cuba at the present time is estimated at $1,250,000,000, and the American-owned share at two-thirds to three-fourths of the total. The total of American capital invested in Cuba is estimated in a report of our Department of Commerce at $1,250,000,000, and that portion which is in railroads and other properties outside of the sugar industry may be said to be almost as dependent upon sugar as that which is invested in the sugar industry direct. The same is true of all business in the island.

AMERICAN INVESTMENTS IN CUBA

We do not say that these American investments are entitled to any more consideration than like investments of Cubans or citizens of other countries, but we say that all investments in legitimate industry are entitled to consideration, and that investments in Cuba in the last 30 years have been encouraged by the political relations existing between the two countries. Moreover, the transfer of these sums of capital from the United States to Cuba has been accomplished largely by expenditures made in the United States for industrial machinery and equipment, construction materials, etc., and American industries have benefited thereby. Furthermore, the increase of the productive capacity and purchasing power of Cuba was reflected in a sustained increase of imports from this country. Prior to the adoption of the reciprocity treaty in 1903 the exports of the United States to Cuba had reached their highest point in 1902, when they aggregated $26,623,000. They increased steadily to $95,750,000 in 1915, and thereafter the figures, of course, are affected by rising commodity prices, but reached $515,209,000 in 1920. From that point, with the decline both in the prices of United States exports and also in the purchasing power of Cuba due to the falling price of sugar, they slumped to $198,625,000 in 1925, $160,500,000 in 1926, $155,000,000 in 1927, and $128,000,000 in 1928. In 1920 Cuba occupied fourth place among countries in volume of imports from the United States. In 1928 she had fallen to eleventh place. The falling-off in Cuban purchases is notable in flour, lard, eggs, meats, condensed milk, lumber, cotton goods, shoes, machinery, and a wide variety of merchandise.

In comparison with the above figures of capital invested in the sugar industry of Cuba it is proper to say that the United States Tariff Commission in its report upon sugar in 1926, page 98, gives the total investment in the beet-sugar industry of the United States as $221,000,000, and in the cane-sugar industry of Louisiana as $56,274,000.

Mr. John E. Snyder, representing the Hershey Corporation, of Hershey, Pa., manufacturers of chocolate, appearing before the House Committee on Ways and Means recently, submitted a statement in behalf of that corporation from which we take the following. This corporation is a large consumer of sugar and went into the sugar industry in Cuba some years ago primarily for the purpose of supplying its own needs:

"Acting under the provisions of the reciprocity treaty and encouraged by all the administrations of the United States, without regard to political views or parties, United States capital has gone into the island of Cuba and aided in the development of its industry to the extent of approximately 75 per cent of its sugar production. The ownership of the securities of these companies is widely and generally held throughout the United States. Of those who have done this the Hershey Corporation is one and is there engaged in growing cane, making sugar, and refining it.

"At the time this capital was invested and these developments undertaken such acts were looked upon with favor in the United States as thereby extending its influence in developing trade relations with other countries, which were then being encouraged. What was then looked upon with favor and encouragement, discussions before your committee in relation to the tariff now indicate to have been high crimes and misdemeanors, which should be penalized by tariff legislation, thereby causing the parties engaged in them to forfeit their investments.

"To show the importance of the matter under consideration to the Hershey Corporation and that portion of the Republic of Cuba in which its industry is conducted, the following is submitted showing the land areas occupied, the railroads used, employees, etc., whose interests are at stake:

Land area occupied, owned, and leased—acres	133,115
Railroads, plantation and used for public service—miles	197
Employees	3,241
Colonos and subcolonos (cane farmers and growers)	2,965
Colonos and subcolonos (employees)	6,000

[End of quotation.]

COMPETITION WITH CUBAN SUGAR IN THE UNITED STATES MARKET

Although Cuba always has been an important source of supply for the United States it never has had a monopoly. The reciprocity treaty with Cuba was ratified on December 27, 1903, and 1904 was the first year under the treaty. The statistics of imports prior to 1904 do not show the quantities coming from Cuba, but the first table shows the quantities coming from the several sources of our supply in 1904 and in 1928, with the percentage of each contribution to the total.

These figures show that although Cuban sugar has gained in its share of the total consumption of the United States it has not gained at the expense of beet sugar, for the latter has increased largely. It shows the large gains made by our insular possessions under the stimulus of free entry to the United States. The falling off in our imports from Cuba in 1928 and to some extent in 1927 was due in part to the governmental restriction of the Cuban crop. As giving a more complete showing of the relation of Cuban imports to other supplies in recent years we give in the second table figures for the last five years.

IMPORT DUTIES SINCE 1890

Imported sugar almost always has borne a customs duty, originally imposed for revenue purposes but soon appreciated by domestic producers for the protection it afforded against foreign competition. Beet sugar did not appear in considerable quantities until about 1890, and in 1900 the production was only 77,000 long tons. Under the McKinley Act, passed in 1890, foreign sugars were admitted duty free and a bounty of 2 cents per pound was paid upon all home production. This gave a strong impetus to the beet-sugar industry. The McKinley Act was repealed under the Cleveland administration in 1894 and a duty of 40 per cent ad valorem applied for revenue. This realized a shade more than 1 cent per pound. Beginning with this tariff the changes upon raw sugar by the several acts have been as follows, the figures applying to 96° sugar:

	Cents per pound
	Full duty	Reciprocity rate to Cuba
Wilson bill, 1894, 40 per cent ad valorem, yielding approximately	1.05	----------
Dingley bill, 1897	1.685	----------
Porto Rico given 85 per cent reduction from full duty after May 1, 1900.
Porto Rico product made free, 1901.
Philippines product fixed at 1.26 cents, 1903.
Reciprocity act applied to Cuban sugar, Dec. 27, 1903	----------	1.348
Philippines product made free, 1909, with limit of 300,000 tons per year.
Underwood bill, 1914	1.256	1.008
Limit removed from free Philippines product.
Virgin Islands, free, 1917.
Emergency tariff act, 1921	2.00	1.60
Fordney act, 1922; now in force	2.206	1.7648

With the growth of the beet-sugar industry in this country, and particularly with its extension east of the Missouri River, the question of the rate of duty required for its protection has been the subject of increasing controversy. Freight charges from New York on imported sugar afford a degree of protection for sugar produced in the western territory for consumption there which producers farther east do not have. The present rate on sugar from New York to St. Louis is 66 cents per hundredweight, and to St. Paul-Minneapolis, 69 by rail or 60½, rail and lake.

It will be seen that during the period of 35 years covered by the above table the present rate of 1.76 cents per pound has been the highest rate at any time in force against Cuban sugar. In the 10 years from 1904 to 1914 the production of beet sugar increased from 208,000 tons to 654,000 tons, although the reciprocity rate on Cuban sugar was only 1.348 cents per pound. After 1914 beet-sugar production made a further increase to 969,000 tons in the crop year 1920–21, but in these years it is conceded that war conditions rather than tariff conditions ruled the sugar markets. The record production of beet sugar was in the crop year 1924–25, when it was 974,000 long tons. The production of the last two years has been only slightly less, to wit, in 1927–28, 965,000 tons, and in 1928–29, 949,000 tons. Since 1920 the sugar industry all over the world has passed into an extreme depression, and it is significant that although prices in this country have been lower, production has not declined materially.

COST OF PRODUCTION

Several calculations under impartial supervision have been made in recent years to determine the actual difference in costs of producing beet sugar in the United States and raw sugar in Cuba. The Food Administration made such an effort during the war, with the aid of the Tariff Commission, and its conclusion was 1.38 cents per pound.

In 1923 the United States Tariff Commission undertook an investigation with the approval of President Harding. This was an exhaustive study, including an examination by a staff of experts of the books of cane sugar companies in Cuba, Porto Rico, Louisiana, and Hawaii and of beet-sugar producers in the United States. The commission divided in its conclusions, the majority finding the difference to be 1.23 cents per pound, and recommending a reduction on full-duty sugars from 2.206 to 1.54 cents, which would involve a reduction on Cuban sugar from 1.764 to 1.23 cents. The minority, however, found the difference in cost to be 1.8525 cents and dissented from the recommendation of the majority.

In 1924 the Institute of Economics, Washington, D. C., to which reference has been made above, undertook its investigation of the sugar industry, under the direction of Prof. Philip G. Wright. The Tariff Commission had not concluded its investigation. The institute made a careful and impartial survey of the industry, giving weight to the vested interests of producers both in this country and in Cuba, as the result of governmental encouragement. It pointed out that in order to determine the rate of duty required to properly protect the beet-sugar industry of the United States it was necessary to first determine what part of the consumption of the United States it was desirable to have supplied from this source. If it was intended to exclude all Cuban sugar and develop the domestic industry to completely supply the domestic demand, obviously a higher rate of duty would be necessary than if the intention was only to maintain the present proportion of domestic production, or any proportion short of 100 per cent. It is also pointed out that revenues from sugar always have been an important factor in our fiscal system, while furnishing protection to a gradually growing domestic industry, but that if foreign sugars were excluded entirely, revenues from that source would cease entirely, and the duties would remain simply as a means of securing higher prices for the producers. It reached the conclusion that a rate of 1.25 to 1.50 cents per pound would be sufficient to stabilize the industry.

THE WORLD DEPRESSION IN SUGAR

The organized movement of domestic sugar producers for more protection is based largely upon representations that the industry is suffering from the aggressions of foreign producers, and particularly the Cuban producers. The increase, therefore, is represented as a defensive measure necessary to preserve the domestic industry from extinction. This is not a correct or fair representation. The truth is that the sugar industry is in greater distress in Cuba than in the United States, and there is every reason to believe that a greater decline of production will occur elsewhere than in this country. The war almost destroyed the beet-sugar industry in Europe, and production fell from 7,968,000 tons in 1913–14 to 2,594,000 tons in 1919–20. The demand upon the producing countries outside of the war area and the high prices resulting naturally caused the expansion of the industry wherever sugar could be produced advantageously. Cuba responded to the appeal to produce more food, as did the farmers of the United States. Then came the recovery of agriculture in Europe, including the beet-sugar industry. The beet-sugar output of Europe has risen from 2,594,000 in 1919–20 to 8,315,000 tons in the season of 1928–29, and world production in 1928–29 is estimated at 26,900,000 tons, against 15,501,000 tons in 1919–20. The world does not want so much sugar, and it is selling everywhere at very low prices. The remedy is in a curtailment of production, or the situation will gradually correct itself by an increase of consumption, provided no artificial measures are adopted which will stimulate greater production.

Cuba has not increased its production in recent years more proportionately than other countries, and has done more than any other country to relieve the stress of overproduction by an act of Congress under which the output was curtailed in 1927 and 1928.

The situation as it now stands is temporary, because the increase of production has been stopped and the tendency is to curtailment, but if every country which is now an importer to any extent puts up its tariff wall to exclude all imports, increased production in such countries will be stimulated, the aggregate of world production will be increased, and disastrous results will follow in all countries which are accustomed to export sugar. This will mean a far-reaching disturbance of international trade, illustrated by the figures showing the shrinkage of Cuban imports from the United States in the last three years from $198,000,000 to $127,000,000.

The very reasonable calculation of the Institute of Economics makes the difference between the costs of sugar production in Cuba and in the principal beet-sugar districts of the United States as ranging from 1¼ cents to 1½ cents per pound. It should be borne in mind that costs vary between producers even in the same localities, and this calculation was intended to amply cover the variations between reasonably efficient producers. There is no reason to think that the difference now is greater than in 1924, and since the duty on Cuban sugar is 1.76 cents per pound, the difference in production costs is more than covered, without taking into account charges which Cuban sugar must pay to reach any point in the interior of this country.

The fact is that the sugar industry in Cuba is not being operated at a profit but under heavy losses, as the balance sheets of even the most efficient companies show. Furthermore, the industry has been for several years on a basis which afforded profits to but few producers. Many have been obliged to borrow money to pay interest upon indebtedness and continue operations. Their situation has been worse by 1.76 cents per pound than that of the insular producers who have had free access to the United States market, and the beet-sugar producers have had a further advantage in freight charges.

We have compiled the following table showing the results of the operations of 43 companies producing sugar in Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the United States, which is the full number for whom reports upon 1928 business are now available. The figures show results in 1927 and 1928, and the percentage of gain in 1928 over 1927, where gains in the aggregate were made:

Net profits of principal American sugar-producing companies for calendar or fiscal years

(000 omitted)

Number	Group	1927	1928	Per cent
16	Cuban	$4,448	[1] $4,281
4	Porto Rican	7,154	7,970	+11.4
17	Hawaiian	10,200	11,671	+14.4
6	Domestic beet	3,957	9,027	+128.0
43	Total	25,759	24,387	−5.3

[1] Deficit.

NOTE.—The 16 Cuban companies above are leading companies, producing approximately 45 per cent of the production of the island. Of these, 11 had deficits and 5 showed nominal profits, but these profits are scanty or worse. For example, the Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation, the largest producer in the island, reported net profits of $214,000, before charging off $5,431,000 against doubtful colono accounts, some of which had been carried over from previous years. This showing was on production sales aggregating $27,013,000 and upon capital and surplus funds of $67,479,000. Cuban American Sugar Co. is another of the five, reporting profits of $183,000 on sales of $23,670,000 and a net worth of $44,598,000. Manati Sugar Co. reported profits of $318,000 before charging off $505,000, on sales of $5,438,000 and a net worth of $14,274,000. Francisco Sugar Co. reported profits of $398,000 before charging off $472,000, on sales of $6,093,000 and a net worth of $9,503,000. Cespedes Sugar Co. reported (17-month period) profits of $105,000 on sales of $2,053,000 and a net worth of $5,242,000. The combined showing of net profits of the five companies amounted to $1,218,000, which represented only 1.9 per cent on sales of $64,267,000 and only 0.9 per cent return on a net worth of $141,095,000, and this reported profit would be more than offset by the special surplus adjustments made by the accountants against colono accounts.

The remaining 11 Cuban companies which operated at a loss had combined deficits last year of $5,499,000, or 4 per cent loss on a net worth of $137,398,000.

All 4 of the leading Porto Rican sugar companies reported profits last year, and the same is true of the 17 Hawaiian producers.

Of the six domestic beet companies reporting for last year, all showed a profit except one, which had a small deficit. These six companies produced about 80 per cent of the total domestic production.

Return on net worth of principal American sugar-producing companies for 1928 calendar or fiscal year

(000 omitted)

Number	Group	Net worth	Net profits	Per cent return
16	Cuban	$278,493	[1] $4,281	[1] 1.5
4	Porto Rican	58,312	7,970	13.7
17	Hawaiian	105,282	11,671	11.0
6	Domestic beet	131,495	9,027	6.9
43	Total	573,582	24,387	4.2

[1] Deficit.

The foregoing statements cover the crop year 1927–28. At the hearings of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, held in January, 1929, the United States Sugar Association, composed of American companies interested in the Cuban sugar industry, presented a statement of the earnings over several preceding years of 23 leading companies, producing approximately 40 per cent of the total Cuban production and representing about $300,000,000 of invested capital. In the aggregate, their operations in the crop year 1926–27 yielded a net profit of $4,229,404, in 1925–26 resulted in a loss of $7,545,034, and in 1924–25 yielded a profit of $711,076. Thus in the four years 1925–1929 these 23 companies—among the largest and most efficient producers of sugar in the world—in the aggregate of their operations have lost money. And if this is the situation as to these companies, what probably is it as to the smaller companies? Furthermore, the current year 1928–29 will make a worse showing as the price of sugar is lower than at any time last year.

It is evident that the sugar industry of Cuba is on the verge of ruin. The first cause is not the impending tariff, but the state of overproduction which exists in the industry throughout the world. This evil, however, will be gradually corrected by the curtailment of production which must inevitably occur, and the producers who are able to hold on and save their properties may look forward to a restoration of normal conditions in time, providing no new factor develops to prevent such recovery. The proposed increase in the United States tariff is a new factor which immediately affects the ability to hold on, and almost banishes hope.

PROBABLE EFFECTS OF INCREASING THE DUTY

The first effect of the proposed increase of duty will be to increase the price of sugar to consumers in this country, for the addition of 0.64 cent per pound in landed cost, even with the accretions which may occur on the way through the trade, will not deter the American people from eating sugar, and since the production of sugar in this country can not be readily increased, imports will continue about as heretofore. The alarming possibilities of the act as seen by producers in Cuba are in the inducement which will be offered for increasing production in the United States and the insular possessions which have free access to this market. These producers are now supplying approximately one-half of the sugar consumed in this country, and considerably more than one-half of the one-half is from the islands.

Leaving out of consideration the probabilities of expansion in the islands, there will remain under a duty of 2.4 cents per pound and a difference in costs of only 1¼ to 1½ cents, an enormous inducement for the expansion of beet-sugar production in the United States. At the present price of Cuban sugar in New York harbor, preduty, an import tax of 2.4 cents per pound would be approximately 133 per cent ad valorem, and an advantage of 1 cent per pound in price—after practically equalizing costs—would mean exclusion to Cuban sugar as fast as the domestic product could take its place. It is not too much to say that a duty of 2.4 cents will be an invitation to produce beet sugar almost without regard to costs, until domestic production has expanded to a point where it can completely supply the needs of the country. After that the wholesome influence of competition will be felt, but meantime consumers will pay close to the full duty and the Cuban producers can see themselves steadily losing their place in the market. If this should not be the result, it would only prove that the beet-sugar industry is so unsuited to agriculture over the greater part of this country that it is not entitled to the extraordinary subsidy which it is asking at the expense of sugar consumers.

THE THREAT TO CUBA

Throughout the propaganda in behalf of the increase there runs the plea for an expansion of the beet-sugar industry to supply the full consumption of the American people. It is urged for the diversification of agriculture, to keep more of the population on the land, to keep our money at home, to make us more independent in case of war, and for various reasons to which we need not refer. The point is that the purpose of the movement is not simply the maintenance of domestic sugar production on the present scale, but an increase to cover all needs. This would mean ruin not only to the Cuban sugar industry, but to Cuba, for the location of the island makes it practically dependent upon the United States for a market for any products which it may produce above its own needs. Europe is far away, and England has preferential relations with her own colonies, while the sugar beet has been so long established in the agriculture of the continent that no new market can be looked for there.

A tariff which would make beet-sugar production generally profitable in this country, in comparison with other agricultural products would be a standing menace to Cuba as long as it was in force. It would enforce a gradual process of strangulation, as domestic production increased, but the immediate blow to the Cuban industry would be fatal to perhaps most of the producers, for the credit of the industry and the salability of sugar properties would be affected at once. As more of the Cuban product was forced upon other markets the natural recovery from the present crisis would be prevented and the crisis in the world industry prolonged.

When the full measure is taken of what the ruin of the sugar industry would mean to the 3,500,000 inhabitants of Cuba, no parallel for the disaster can be found outside of the annals of war, and the injury done in this case would be far more lasting than the injuries of war. Devastated Belgium and France have been rebuilt and are more prosperous than before, but there would be no rebuilding of Cuba until a market was found for her products. The prosperity of Cuba depends upon her ability to utilize her soil and climate for the purpose to which they are supremely suited and to trade with a population which will take such products in exchange for their own. In all history there has been no such destruction of property values or displacement of an industrial population by legislative decree as would result from forcing the people of Cuba to abandon sugar production, or even to cut it one-half. Alternative employment for the population can not be named. The people are unskilled and without experience in anything else, and the United States wants nothing else from Cuba any more than it wants sugar. Exclusion of its products from this country would mean the depression of Cuba to a distinctly lower level of social life.

It can not be too forcibly stated that while the beet-sugar industry is fighting for expansion—to capture the full United States market—Cuba is fighting for life, to hold the place she has long held in the only available market for her product, and for the only means of a decent livelihood for her people.

We do not believe for a moment that the American Congress will do this wrong to Cuba if the significance of the action is fully understood.

OBSTACLES TO BEET-SUGAR DEVELOPMENT

We are not predicting that Cuba will be rapidly forced out of the United States market, for there remains the possibility that the beet-sugar industry will prove to be so far unsuited to the agriculture of this country that it will not develop even under the enormous bounty proposed. In the first place, the situation will be so artificial and dependent upon the will of Congress that it may be doubted that much capital can be found for investment under the conditions. In the second place, all experience with the industry has shown that American labor can not be found to do beet farming. The Bureau of Labor, Washington, D. C., reported in 1927 the results of a survey of the industry, showing that in the sugar-beet fields of Ohio, Michigan, Iowa, Minnesota, and North Dakota 75 to 90 per cent of the workers were Mexicans, usually imported for the purpose. The other 10 to 25 per cent were largely Europeans. Testimony before the House committee has been practically unanimous to the effect that beet cultivation is not the American kind of farming, and since there is a question whether Mexican labor will be continually excepted from the immigration laws, the expansion of the industry is by no means a certainty.

Bills for applying the immigration laws to immigrants from Mexico are pending before Congress now, and the House Committee on Immigration has been taking testimony on the subject. The beet-sugar industry opposes such action on the ground that the Mexican labor is necessary to the industry. We quote from a few examples of this testimony.

The labor superintendent of the American Beet Sugar Co. testified as follows:

"The class of labor used in the beet fields of which I speak (Iowa and Minnesota) is composed of German-Russians, Bohemians, Belgians, Hungarians, and Mexicans. The percentage of this labor is divided into approximately 40 per cent white and 60 per cent Mexican. * * * Present industrial conditions are such that this white labor has been absorbed, and we are now dependent upon Mexican farm labor as the only available kind to be secured."

Congressman EDWARD T. TAYLOR, of Colorado, is quoted as follows:

"Our American labor does not do this kind of work. I never in my life have known of any member of organized labor going into a sugar-beet field. * * * The American laboring people will not get down on their hands and knees in the dirt and pull weeds and thin these beets and break their backs doing that kind of work."

The vice president of the Mountain States Beet Sugar Growers' Association testified as follows:

"I want to say to you that there is not a white man of any intelligence in our country that will work an acre of beets. * * * I do not want to see the condition arise again when white men who are reared and educated in our schools have got to bend their backs and skin their fingers to pull those little beets."

THE MENACE OF UNCERTAINTY

If this foreign labor supply should be cut off, the plan for making this country self-supporting in sugar might not be realized for a long time. Nevertheless, the injury to the Cuban industry may be very great, even though benefits to the United States are very small. Without Mexican labor higher wages might be paid for other labor, and probably would be, up to the point where the profits of the industry would be no greater than now, and higher duties might be asked for and obtained on that ground. The Cuban industry would not know where it stood during all this period of experimentation, nor, for that matter, would the domestic industry. There always would be the chance that a change of political power at Washington might knock the props from under the industry.

If the increase was to be only temporary, to protect the price in the United States during the temporary depression in world prices, the case would not be so serious, but new vested interests will be created from the day the increase goes into effect. Every new sugar-beet factory built will be said, and with some reason, to have been established in reliance upon the good faith of the United States, and every year that passes and every new factory built will make more difficult any downward revision. There always will be marginal producers, established where they have no business to be, who will claim that any reduction will ruin them and that they were established under the pledge of protection.

NOT A NATURAL INDUSTRY

The consideration of outstanding importance in this sugar controversy is that sugar is produced in the Tropics through the medium of the cane plant more economically than it is produced anywhere through the beet plant. It is a product of the sun acting upon vegetation, and the larger gain which results from production under the most favorable conditions is a gift of nature which, in the interest of human welfare, should be gladly availed of unless there are opposing considerations as clearly related to the general welfare. Much is said of the long-established policy of European nations in encouraging beet-sugar production, but Europe has not the climate for sugar cane, and there is no cane-sugar production nearer than Asia or the West Indies. When the beet sugar was founded in Europe ocean transportation was slow and uncertain for various reasons, the danger of interruption by war being one. The value of home food supplies is still highly rated in Europe. The position of the United States as regards sugar is different. Cuba, geographically, is almost part of the United States, is naturally so economically, and there is no danger of its becoming an "enemy" country.

For the United States to develop the beet-sugar industry to supply all its own needs would require the payment of an enormous subsidy to induce the farmers of this country to displace their natural crops. It would be an unprofitable, disadvantageous employment of land and labor. An illustration of fallacious thinking on the subject is afforded by an argument by the secretary of the American Beet Sugar Association submitted to the Ways and Means Committee, in which the beet-sugar industry is represented as "saving hundreds of millions of dollars by substituting home-produced sugar for imported sugar." This suggests a query: If a man having regular employment at $10 per day should lay off to do work for himself which he could hire done at $5 per day, would he be "saving" $5 per day?

THE CONSUMERS' INTEREST IN THE DUTY

The price of sugar is raised to consumers by more than the amount of duty paid. In the first place, the duty is paid upon raw sugar, which loses weight in the refining process, so that when the duty is reckoned upon the refined product it is approximately 1.88 cents per pound instead of 1.76. Moreover, since the duty is approximately equal to the present price of sugar c. and f. New York, the amount of working capital required by refiners in handling sugar is nearly doubled by the duty, and interest charges are correspondingly increased. It is calculated that by the time sugar leaves the refiners the cost attributable to the duty has been increased to 2 cents per pound. Since the consumption of sugar in the United States in 1928 was 12,415,000,000 pounds, it follows that the increase due to the tariff was not less than $248,000,000. Of this amount approximately $118,000,000 went to the Treasury of the United States upon imports from Cuba and the remainder, approximately $130,000,000, was a bonus to the sugar producers of the continental United States and our insular possessions, distributed $52,000,000 to the United States of America and $78,000,000 to the insular possessions.

Profs. B. H. Hibbard, John R. Commons, and Selig Perlman, of the University of Wisconsin, have published an estimate that the proposed increase will cost consumers $150,000,000, as against a gain of $26,000,000 to less than 3 per cent of the American farmers. According to this estimate, the increase in the cost of sugar to all farmers will be $33,000,000. The three economists, who are men of reputation and closely identified with the work of the Wisconsin State College of Agriculture, estimate that under the present tariff the benefit to the growers amounts to $43,000,000 annually and the burden to all farmers to $64,000,000—a net cost of $21,000,000 per year to the farming population.

The research department of the American Farm Bureau Federation estimated in 1923 that all consumers paid $192,000,000 more as the result of the existing tariff on sugar, and that the farming population paid $48,100,000 of this amount, as against a gain to the sugar growers of the United States of $45,800,000—a net cost of $2,300,000 to the farmers as a whole.

The proposal for the increase is supported mainly on the ground that it is a measure of agricultural relief, but it is evident that unless a farmer expects to grow sugar beets he will simply have more taxes to pay. The University of Wisconsin professors calculate the number of farmers growing beets to be about 3 per cent of all farmers, but this must include part-time laborers, as the census of 1920 gives the total number of farms producing sugar beets in 1919 as 47,211, and this was only seventy-three one-hundredths of 1 per cent of the total number of farms in the country. The total acreage in beets in that year was thirteen one-hundredths of 1 per cent of all improved land in farms. The average number of acres per sugar-beet producing farm was 13.48.

Another argument in behalf of the measure is that it is necessary to enlarge beet-sugar production in order to diversify farm crops and reduce the overproduction of other crops. The total number of acres in sugar beets in 1928 was 644,000, which is less than one-quarter of 1 per cent of the improved land in all farms. Just how much 644,000 acres amounts to in the agriculture of the United States may be judged by the figures for the acreage in wheat in the single State of Kansas in 1928. The acreage sown in the fall of 1927 was 12,296,000 acres, the condition report on May 1, 1928, indicated that 10,824,000 acres had come through the winter, and the prospect was for a crop of 142,877,000 bushels of wheat. The final report on the crop was that 10,433,000 acres had been harvested (1,863,000 less than planted), and that the crop was 177,361,000 bushels.

The number of acres in cotton reported under cultivation in Texas on June 1, 1928, was 18,353,000, and the number harvested was 17,766,000, showing abandonment of 687,000 acres, or something more than the total acreage of sugar beets in the country.

These illustrations might be extended. If the acreage in sugar beets was doubled, the amount of land withdrawn from any one crop would be negligible. It is safe to say that the flour, meats, cotton goods, and other farm products sold in profitable trade with Cuba and the countries around the Caribbean, together with the farm products consumed by American workmen who one way or another are employed in producing for that trade, account for the use of more farm land than is occupied by sugar beets.

A FAIR SETTLEMENT DESIRABLE

In conclusion, it should be said that nobody is attacking the beet-sugar industry or seeking to deprive it of a reasonable degree of protection, corresponding to what it has had in the years during which it developed to approximately its present position. In the plains region where it has had its chief development, the climatic conditions are favorable to a higher percentage of sugar in the beets than in other sections of the country, freight charges on sugar from the seaboard are an important factor, and the industry is worth more to agriculture than in regions farther east. The cane-sugar industry of Louisiana has been long established and nobody is seeking to deprive it of such protection as it has enjoyed. So long as the nondutiable production was confined to these two sources the bulk of the price increase which resulted from the import duty went into the Public Treasury and this always has been the principal justification for sugar duty. With the free admission of the insular sugars, however, not more than one-half of the increase now goes to the Treasury, and if domestic sugar finally excludes foreign sugar, none of the increase resulting from the duty will reach the Treasury. Thus will gradually disappear what in the past has been one of the strongest supports of the sugar duty, and whether the Louisiana and western beet producers realize it or not, their position is weakened by the propaganda for a full domestic supply.

If the policy of the country upon sugar in the past virtually pledges the country to a consistent policy in the future, the United States is pledged to fair treatment of the Cuban sugar industry. Although the proposed tariff purports to give a preferential rate to Cuban sugar, a rate which ultimately excludes Cuban sugar can not be considered fair treatment even though a higher nominal rate is named against other sugars. The fact is that Cuba has had no benefit from the reciprocity rate for many years, because she has had more sugar than could be sold in the United States, and the price at which the surplus could be sold in world markets has necessarily governed sales to the United States.

For practical economic reasons Cuban sugar is entitled to a place in the markets of the United States. The lower cost of sugar production in Cuba is due in the main to climatic conditions rather than to lower wage rates. In the words of Professor Wright, less labor is required to produce sugar in Cuba than in the United States, while on the other hand nearly all manufactures and most of the farm products of this country can be sold to Cuba at prices below the costs at which that country is able to produce them. This affords the basis of trade advantages to both sides. We close with another quotation from Professor Wright and the Institute of Economics, summing up the case:

"In recent years a little less than one-half of the domestic consumption has been of domestic production. This situation may be regarded as by no means unsatisfactory. It was brought about by the rates of 1.685 cents per pound of the act of 1897, later reduced to 1.348 cents per pound by the reciprocity treaty with Cuba; continued at the same rate (1.348 cents per pound) under the act of 1909; and again reduced to 1.0048 cents per pound by the act of 1913. The acts of 1921 and 1922 have not yet had time greatly to affect the marginal costs of production either in the United States or Cuba.

"In making a recommendation the institute is guided by the principle just outlined. A weighing of the conflicting interests (the government in its need for revenue, the masses of the people as taxpayers and consumers, the domestic producers, the refiners, and the American investors in Cuban sugar properties) has led to the conclusion that the most equitable adjustment will be affected by a rate which will stabilize the industry in about its present position with reference to foreign and domestic sugars.

* * * * * * *

"A careful weighing of all the arguments and of all the results developed by the inquiry leads to the conclusion that from the standpoint both of revenue and protection sugar is a suitable commodity to be subject to a moderate rate of duty. A rate that will maintain roughly the present proportions of domestic and foreign sugars in the domestic market is recommended. From the best data now available a rate of not less than 1.25 nor more than 1.5 cents per pound on 96° Cuban centrifugals is suggested as adequate to accomplish this purpose."

THE NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. CAMPBELL of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the House of the following title, which was thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 4016. An act making an appropriation to carry out the provisions of the "agricultural marketing act," approved June 15, 1929.

The SPEAKER also announced his signature to an enrolled bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 1453. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of certain bridges, and for other purposes.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS

Mr. BUTLER, by unanimous consent, was granted leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of Etta J. Hyney, widow of Le Roy Hyney, H. R. 11476 (Public Law No. 470), Sixty-ninth Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

SUMMER ADJOURNMENT

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I call up the Senate concurrent resolution providing for a recess.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut calls up the Senate concurrent resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate Concurrent Resolution 16

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That when the Senate adjourns on Wednesday, June 19, 1929, it stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian on Monday, August 19, 1929.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I send to the Clerk's desk an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the resolving clause and insert:

"That when the two Houses adjourn on Wednesday, June 19, 1929, the Senate shall stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian on Monday, August 19, 1929, and that the House shall stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian on Monday, September 23, 1929."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the Senate concurrent resolution as amended.

The Senate concurrent resolution as amended was agreed to.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Andrew	Campbell, Pa.	Crowther	Estep
Arents	Cannon	Cullen	Evans, Calif.
Auf der Heide	Carew	Curry	Fenn
Bachmann	Carley	Dallinger	Fish
Bacon	Celler	Davenport	Fisher
Baird	Chalmers	Davis	Fitzgerald
Bankhead	Chase	Dempsey	Fitzpatrick
Beck	Christopherson	De Rouen	Frear
Bell	Clark, Md.	Dickinson	Freeman
Black	Clark, N. C.	Dickstein	Fuller
Blackburn	Clarke, N. Y.	Dominick	Gambrill
Bohn	Cole	Doughton	Garber, Okla.
Bolton	Colton	Douglas, Ariz.	Garrett
Boylan	Connery	Douglass, Mass.	Gibson
Brand, Ga.	Connolly	Doutrich	Gifford
Brand, Ohio	Cooke	Dowell	Glynn
Brigham	Cooper, Ohio	Doxey	Golder
Browne	Corning	Doyle	Goldsborough
Brumm	Craddock	Drane	Graham
Brunner	Crail	Drewry	Greenwood
Buckbee	Cramton	Dyer	Griest
Cable	Crisp	Edwards	Griffin
Campbell, Iowa	Crosser	Ellis	Hall, Ill.

Hall, Ind.	Lambertson	O'Connell, R. I.	Sproul, Kans.
Hancock	Lampert	O'Connor, La.	Stafford
Hare	Lanham	O'Connor, N. Y.	Stalker
Hartley	Larsen	Oliver, N. Y.	Steagall
Haugen	Lea, Calif.	Palmisano	Stevenson
Hess	Lindsay	Parker	Sullivan, N. Y.
Hickey	Linthicum	Parks	Sullivan, Pa.
Hill, Ala.	Lozier	Patman	Swick
Holaday	McClintic, Okla.	Perkins	Swing
Hooper	McClintock, Ohio	Porter	Taber
Hudspeth	McCormack, Mass.	Pratt, Harcourt J.	Tarver
Hughes	McCormick, Ill.	Pratt, Ruth	Taylor, Colo.
Hull, Morton D.	McFadden	Purnell	Temple
Hull, William E.	McKeown	Quayle	Thompson
Hull, Tenn.	McLeod	Ragon	Timberlake
Igoe	McReynolds	Ramseyer	Treadway
Irwin	Maas	Reece	Tucker
Jeffers	Mansfield	Reed, N. Y.	Underwood
Jenkins	Martin	Reid, Ill.	Vinson, Ga.
Johnson, Ill.	Mead	Romjue	Wainwright
Johnston, Mo.	Menges	Rutherford	Walker
Kading	Merritt	Sabath	Warren
Kahn	Michaelson	Sanders, N. Y.	Watson
Kearns	Michener	Schneider	Welch, Calif.
Kelly	Milligan	Sears	Welsh, Pa.
Kemp	Mooney	Seiberling	White
Kendall, Pa.	Moore, Ohio	Selvig	Whitehead
Kerr	Morgan	Shreve	Whitley
Ketcham	Mouser	Sirovich	Williamson
Kiefner	Nelson, Me.	Smith, W. Va.	Wilson
Kiess	Nelson, Mo.	Snell	Woodrum
Kunz	Nelson, Wis.	Somers, N. Y.	Wright
Kurtz	Niedringhaus	Sparks	Zihlman
Kvale	Norton	Spearing
LaGuardia	O'Connell, N. Y.	Sproul, Ill.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TILSON. I understand that thus far the roll call has not developed a quorum. A quorum not being present, it will be necessary to adjourn. I simply wish to give notice to all who are here to-day that it is necessary that they be here to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will announce the number present. On this call of the House, answering "present" 198; not a quorum.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 8 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, June 19, 1929, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

36. Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a letter from the Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting report and recommendation to the Congress concerning the claim of William K. Kennedy, of El Paso, Tex., was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on Claims.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. UNDERHILL, Committee on Accounts. H. Res. 52. A resolution to pay funeral expenses of Prince Robinson, late an employee of the House; without amendment (Rept. No. 23). Ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BRIGGS: A bill (H. R. 4060) to establish a marine fish-cultural station on the eastern coast of the State of Texas at or near Galveston; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 4061) to confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to inquire into whether or not the immigrant Cherokees by blood are entitled to be reimbursed for lands allotted to negro freedmen Cherokees from lands granted to immigrant Cherokees by blood under treaty of 1835, and inquire into and determine the validity of the treaty of 1866; to the Committee on Indians Affairs.

By Mr. GOODWIN: A bill (H. R. 4062) to prohibit the use of certain types of weapons by Federal agents charged with the enforcement of the prohibition law; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 4063) to increase the minimum rate of invalid pensions; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LANKFORD of Virginia: A bill (H. R. 4064) to amend the act entitled "An act for the relief of contractors and subcontractors for the post offices and other buildings and work under the supervision of the Treasury Department, and for other purposes," approved August 25, 1919, as amended by act of March 6, 1920; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4065) to authorize the construction of barracks and mess hall for enlisted men at the naval training station, Hampton Roads, Va.; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4066) to provide for a building for the use of the United States Army Engineers at Fort Norfolk, Norfolk, Va.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4067) authorizing the widening and deepening of the entrance to Willoughby Channel, Va.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4068) authorizing the widening and deepening of the channel of the Nansemond River, Va.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4069) authorizing the deepening and widening of the channel of Scotts Creek, Va.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4070) to provide an anchorage basin in the vicinity of Craney Island, Norfolk Harbor, Va.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4071) authorizing the widening and deepening of the channel in the western branch of the Elizabeth River, Norfolk, Va.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. GASQUE: A bill (H. R. 4072) for the erection of a public building at Conway, S. C., and appropriating money therefor; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4073) for the erection of a public building at Mullins, S. C., and appropriating money therefor; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. THATCHER: A bill (H. R. 4074) to provide for the construction of the Panama Canal memorial; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. WATRES: A bill (H. R. 4075) to provide a rehabilitation center for World War veterans; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4076) to amend the act of Congress entitled "An act for the prevention of smoke in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," enacted February 2, 1899; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, relating to the repeal of the national-origins provision of the Federal immigration law; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ALLGOOD: A bill (H. R. 4077) granting a pension to William C. Mason; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4078) granting a pension to Mary Evaline Keith; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4079) for the relief of Claudie Savage; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BLAND: A bill (H. R. 4080) granting a pension to Charles Peterson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BRIGGS: A bill (H. R. 4081) to confer the medal of honor for service in the Philippine insurrection on William O. Trafton; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4082) to authorize a preliminary examination and survey of Anahuac Channel, Tex., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4083) to authorize a survey of Dickinson Bayou, Tex., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 4084) for the relief of United States Bank of St. Louis, Mo.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CRADDOCK: A bill (H. R. 4085) granting a pension to James R. Clark; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DEMPSEY: A bill (H. R. 4086) for the relief of August A. Carminati; to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4087) granting a pension to Charles Brussow; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4088) granting an increase of pension to James F. Kelly; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GASQUE: A bill (H. R. 4089) granting a pension to William J. Bodiford; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HAMMER: A bill (H. R. 4090) granting an increase of pension to Rachel Dunning; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HOPE: A bill (H. R. 4091) granting an increase of pension to Zachary T. Anthony; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HOPKINS: A bill (H. R. 4092) granting a pension to Rhajene Riley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JENKINS: A bill (H. R. 4093) granting an increase of pension to Emily A. Broce; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4094) granting an increase of pension to Margaret Kitts; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4095) granting a pension to Nancy J. Martindale; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KIESS: A bill (H. R. 4096) granting an increase of pension to Louise A. Hubbard; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LANKFORD of Virginia: A bill (H. R. 4097) granting a pension to Frank E. Trimyer; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4098) granting a pension to Joseph B. Nee; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4099) to provide for the relief of C. A. Sterling; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4100) for the relief of George T. Eason; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4101) to extend the benefits of the employees' compensation act of September 7, 1916, to Willie Louise Johnson; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4102) to extend the benefits of the employees' compensation act of September 7, 1916, to Howard Lewter; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4103) for the relief of J. B. Jones; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4104) to provide for an examination and survey of Paradise Creek, Portsmouth, Va.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4105) to provide for an examination and survey of Lafayette River, Va.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4106) to provide for an examination and survey of waterway from Norfolk, Va., to the sounds of North Carolina, including Dismal Swamp Canal; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4107) to provide for an examination and survey of the locks at Lake Drummond, Norfolk County, Va.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4108) to provide for an examination and survey for the preservation of the old lighthouse at Cape Henry, Va.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McFADDEN: A bill (H. R. 4109) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth S. Deats; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOORE of Virginia: A bill (H. R. 4110) to credit the accounts of Maj. Benjamin L. Jacobson, Finance Department, United States Army; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mrs. NORTON: A bill (H. R. 4111) granting an increase of pension to Annie Pride; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PITTENGER: A bill (H. R. 4112) for the relief of Senelma Wirkkula, also known as Selma Wirkkula, Alice Marie Wirkkula, and Bernice Elaine Wirkkula; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HARCOURT J. PRATT: A bill (H. R. 4113) granting an increase of pension to Susannah Finkle; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHORT of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 4114) granting a pension to Betty Viles; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4115) granting a pension to Amelia Waltrip; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4116) granting a pension to Sarah Weathers; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SUMNERS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 4117) for the relief of George T. Smith; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SUMMERS of Washington: A bill (H. R. 4118) granting a pension to Hezekiah William Weaver; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. UNDERWOOD: A bill (H. R. 4119) granting an increase of pension to Mary M. Poling; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4120) granting an increase of pension to Mariah Haynes; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VINCENT of Michigan: A bill (H. R. 4121) granting a pension to Jennie Chesnut; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4122) granting an increase of pension to Sophia Mesack; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

676. By Mr. BLOOM: Petition of the Yorkville Chamber of Commerce, urging the continuance of the quota-limit system now in operation and approving the repeal of the national-origins provision of the immigration law of 1924 because of its tendency to create racial antagonism; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

677. Also, petition of the Southern Commissioners of Agriculture and their authorized representatives and allied interests, urging need of providing more adequate tariff protection for the products of agriculture; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

678. By Mr. DOWELL: Petition of sundry citizens of the seventh district of Iowa, favoring increase of pension to Civil War veterans and their widows; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

679. By Mr. HOOPER: Petition of J. J. Kleindinst and 69 other residents of Battle Creek, Mich., urging the bringing to vote of a Civil War pension bill; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

680. By Mr. JENKINS: Petition signed by 119 citizens of Ironton, Ohio, urging Congress to take immediate steps to bring to a vote a Civil War pension bill to grant increases to Civil War veterans and widows of veterans; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

681. Also, a petition signed by 128 citizens of Middleport, Ohio, urging Congress to take immediate steps to bring to a vote a Civil War pension bill to grant increases to Civil War veterans and widows of veterans; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

682. By Mr. THOMPSON: Petition of 102 citizens of Liberty Center, Ohio, for general increase of pensions to Civil War veterans and the widows of veterans; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, June 19, 1929

(Legislative day of Monday, June 17, 1929)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

PUBLIC SAFETY IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA (S. DOC. NO. 20)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the president of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, reporting in response to Senate Resolution 62—by Mr. COPELAND, agreed to May 20, 1929—relative to the rules and regulations in force in the District of Columbia pertaining to the public safety, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia and ordered to be printed.

CLAIM OF PETERSON-COLWELL (INC.)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on the claim of Peterson-Colwell (Inc.), Builders' Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., together with his recommendations thereon, which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

HARRIET H. GALLAGHER V. ALABAMA & NEW ORLEANS TRANSPORTATION CO.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from E. J. Tinsdale, of Asheville, N. C., requesting a hearing on a petition of certain bondholders, stockholders, and creditors of the Alabama & New Orleans Transportation Co. for relief in the case of Harriet H. Gallagher v. Alabama & New Orleans Transportation Co., pending in the United States district court of Massachusetts, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting a petition to the Congress of 27 property owners and residents of Zamboanga, Mindanao, P. I., praying for the passage of legislation providing for the appointment of the officers of the provincial and municipal governments of the southern part of Mindanao and Sulu, namely, the provincial governors and municipal presidents, vice presidents, and councilors, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions unanimously adopted by the Thirtieth Annual Encampment of the Department of the District of Columbia, United Spanish War Veterans, favoring the passage of Senate bill 477, the so-called Robinson bill, granting increased pensions to veterans of the Civil War and their widows, and also Senate bill 476, granting increased pensions to Spanish War veterans, which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BINGHAM presented a resolution adopted by Charles L. Burdett Auxiliary, No. 4, United Spanish War Veterans, of Hartford, Conn., favoring the passage of Senate bill 476, the so-called Robinson bill, granting increased pensions to Spanish War veterans, which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, I present and ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Commerce a concurrent resolution passed by the Legislature of the State of New Jersey referring to the construction of a bridge across the Delaware River.

There being no objection, the resolution, with the letter of transmittal, were referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY,
CLERK'S OFFICE,
Trenton, N. J., June 19, 1929.

Hon. WALTER E. EDGE,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR EDGE: By the direction of the house of assembly, I am inclosing herewith an official copy of a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of New Jersey for the 1929 session.

Very truly yours,

FRED'K A. BRODESSER,
Clerk of the Assembly.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY,
STATEHOUSE, TRENTON, N. J.

Assembly concurrent resolution

Introduced and adopted by the house of assembly April 24, 1929

Whereas application will be made to Congress of the United States for permission to construct a bridge across the Delaware River at a point near Pennsgrove, N. J., and Wilmington, Del., suitable to the interests of navigation, which, if enacted into law, will grant such franchise to the Delaware & New Jersey Bridge Corporation and others; and

Whereas it is deemed highly desirable that a bridge be constructed across the Delaware River at this point for the development of the entire southern section of the State of New Jersey and in the interests of interstate communications; and

Whereas the State of New Jersey is not in a financial position to cooperate with the State of Delaware in the construction of this very desirable public improvement: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of assembly (the senate concurring):

1. That the Legislature of the State of New Jersey do recommend to the Congress of the United States the prompt passage of such act; and be it further

Resolved, That an official copy of this resolution, signed by the speaker and attested to by the clerk of the house, respectively, be forwarded to each Member in Congress from this State, to the Vice President of the United States, and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

We hereby certify that the above resolution is a true and official copy of the resolution adopted by the house of assembly on April 24, 1929.

_____,
Speaker of the House of Assembly.

Attest:

FREDERICK A. BRODESSER,
Clerk of the House of Assembly.

Mr. CONNALLY presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Texas, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

House Concurrent Resolution 5

Whereas it is authentically reported that at certain ports of entry on the Texas-Mexican border the former method of inspection by Federal authorities at the port of entry may be abandoned and inspection made en route inland; and

Whereas such practice would permit the entry from Mexico into Texas of fruit infested with the Mexican orange worm and other dangerous insect pests and plant diseases detrimental and injurious to the citrus industry of Texas; and

Whereas the citrus industry has grown to be one of the major industries of Texas: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Forty-first Legislature of the State of Texas (the Senate concurring), That we request the Federal Plant Quarantine and Control Administration of the United States Department of Agriculture to provide for proper inspection of all passengers, baggage, etc., coming from Mexico through Texas ports at the border as was formerly done, in order to prevent the carrying of any infested fruits, vegetables, plants, or other possible carriers of dangerous insect pests or plant diseases into the interior of the State.

Resolved further, That a copy of this resolution be sent by the chief clerk of the house to the Chief of the Plant Quarantine and Control Administration, Washington, D. C., and to the members of the Texas delegation in the Congress of the United States.

BARRY MILLER,
President of the Senate.
W. S. BARRON,
Speaker of the House.

I certify that House Concurrent Resolution No. 5 was adopted by the house on June 5, 1929.

LOUISE SNOW PHINNEY,
Chief Clerk of the House.

I certify that House Concurrent Resolution No. 5 was adopted by the Senate on June 6, 1929.

MORRIS C. HAWKINS,
Assistant Secretary of the Senate.

THE CONSUMER AND THE PROTECTIVE TARIFF

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, I present a statement issued on behalf of the National Agricultural Organizations relative to the consumer and the protective tariff, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the statement was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE CONSUMER AND THE PROTECTIVE TARIFF

Present criticism of a proposed tariff on agricultural products is a direct attack on the American protective tariff system. It is an attack hiding behind the cloak of an appeal to the "consuming public."

Certain interests, as yet veiled, but easily identified by their self-evident purpose, say that the "consumer" will pay heavily for certain foods—beef, butter, sugar, bread, fruit, and vegetables—if tariff rates are levied as now proposed by Congress. These foods, the consumer is told, can be produced more cheaply in other countries and he has the right to buy where he can buy cheapest; the Argentines for cheap beef; New Zealand, cheap butter; Cuba, cheap sugar; Canada, cheap wheat; and Mexico, cheap vegetables.

This broadside of half truth needs a vigorous all-American analysis. The rest of the truth needs to be told, for every "producer" is a consumer; every "consumer" except the tramp is a "producer."

A tariff on these commodities is justified by a broader principle of fairness and general national interest than that which actuates this narrow selfishness of the critics.

If a foreign country can produce a product at a somewhat lower cost than it can be produced on American farms—take beef, for example—then the absence of a tariff on beef would lead to two direct results.

The first would be the flow of a vast amount of American money—consumer's money, if you will—to a place where it can be produced more cheaply—money once sent away never to come back, except as interest and profits for the rich American capitalist and investor in foreign industry.

The second would be the ruin of the American beef-producing industry—a source of production of natural wealth and of employment of some million men; in fact, the destruction of a national self-sufficiency, indispensable to national defense and national honor. If that is not sufficient, then let it be also understood that these millions of men would cease buying the products of urban industries—automobiles, furniture, carpets, clothing, boots and shoes, etc.—which they would purchase as prosperous producers and would flock into the urban industries, creating a veritable frame of underemployment.

This is the reverse side of these half truths and it should be shouted from every housetop.

In the campaign of half truth going on, the consumer is very certainly not reminded of that period following the World War when he paid 30 cents a pound for sugar because he had to, because the foreign sugar producers were in control and temporarily without competition from domestic producers.

The industrial worker wants his job, needs his job, and the present wage, or a larger one, or he is ruined. And his interest in that job far exceeds his interest in a cent or two more for even his beef or his fruit or his sugar. And that job and its price is subject to just the same law of supply and demand as the price of the beef or the fruit or the sugar. He needs to know what will happen to the labor supply of the farmers and the men in the plants and factories if a foreign food invasion, which completes the ruin of these agricultural industries, forces them to seek urban employment.

To summarize: If the consumer-producer would benefit by the maintenance of a steady market for his industry, he necessarily must be a purchaser of the products of others.

For you can not be a consumer and not be a producer or the dependent of a producer.

The established policy in America to-day, regardless of partisan politics, is for protection through tariff and through restricted immigration. This principle of protection to all classes, for all products, agricultural or industrial, must be applied with even-handed justice, or that same justice, plus the most evident self-interest, demands that all bars of all kinds be let down, and we have a free-trade Nation, without exclusion laws against cheap labor or tariff restrictions against the products of cheap labor.

Without tariff protection "consumers" would buy steel, tractors, cream separators, and factory equipment more cheaply from Germany, shipping equipment from England, textiles from Czechoslovakia, paper products from Japan and China, sugar and starches from Java (where labor is paid 15 cents a day), crockery and dishes from Belgium and Sweden, dairy products from New Zealand and Denmark, fruits from the Tropics, fuel oil from Mexico, and on down the line, until our "consumers" would each and severally be either out of a job or working at the price of the cheap labor of the rest of the world—and buying nothing because they would not have the money with which to buy.

The American protective tariff has enabled the consumer to be a consumer by making it possible for him to be a producer.

You can not eat your pie and have it. You can not send your beef money to the Argentines and sell your products to American producers. It is impossible to conceive our giving the keys of an American city to a foreign invader and then allow him to use his gunfire to destroy the men, women, and children of that city.

It is equally impossible for a government to invite foreign trade, built upon low standards and costs, into any branch of American industry, agricultural or nonagricultural.

Sugar is a farm product which has been especially singled out for attack in this campaign of half truth; so let us consider closely the difference in cost under a reasonable protective tariff.

Using accepted statistics, the average person's consumption of sugar is 100 pounds of sugar a year, and the proposed tariff would increase the cost 64 cents a year per person. However, this does not mean a direct consumption by each individual of 100 pounds a year or 64 cents a year increase, because included in the 100 pounds is the sugar used in bakery products, candy, soft drinks, ice cream, and the sugar served free to the consumer in hotels and restaurants.

Solely in the household it has been estimated that the average sugar consumption is from 40 to 60 pounds a year per person. On this basis, then, the average cost of the increased tariff on sugar to the individual consumer in his own home is 38 cents a year.

The consumer must know this and must determine whether this insurance premium of 38 cents a year is worth the guaranty of protection from foreign control of the sugar market in the United States—a control, the absence of which in 1920 cost him 30 cents a pound for sugar, or the rate of $12 to $18 a year per consumer. He must determine whether it is worth 38 cents a year to obtain the security of domestic sugar production at all times, including changes in international relations or trade, or even war, plus the profitable employment of a million farmers and the development of a sugar industry to employ perhaps a million more.

The purchasing power of the farmer determines the success of many factories and of the wage earners in the consuming centers. And the urban consumer depends upon the buying power of farmers.

So it is all an interlocking and interdependent nation-wide organization. Plain horse sense shows that any industry wiped out by a foreign competition dangerously damages every other domestic industry, and that American high standards and the welfare of the consuming public depends upon the protection of all domestic industry. The dust storm raised about a few cents on sugar, butter, beef, etc., is not for the benefit of the "consumer" but for the benefit of the importers who collect the toll and of the foreign capitalists whose investments are in these cheap-labor foreign fields.

Protection of the farmer is a consumer's guaranty of continued employment, wages, and ability to pay, safety from foreign trusts and cartels, and finally a balanced national industrial fabric.

National self-sufficiency is national safety.

You can not be a consumer and not be a producer or the dependent of a producer.

These are thoughts that the consumers of America must know, fight for, and reverence.

Respectfully submitted by the undersigned organizations, representing growers of commodities mentioned in this communication.

FRED BRENCKMAN,
Washington Representative National Grange.
CHESTER H. GRAY,
Washington Representative American Farm Bureau Federation.
ERNEST A. BURGUIERES,
President Domestic Sugar Producers Association.
C. B. DENMAN,
President National Live Stock Producers Association.
A. M. LOOMIS,
Secretary The National Dairy Union.
C. E. DURST,
Secretary National Horticultural Council.

TARIFF FOR AGRICULTURAL RELIEF

Mr. BORAH. I present a telegram from Minneapolis, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the telegram was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 17, 1929.

Senator WILLIAM E. BORAH,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Supplementing our telegram of Sunday congratulating you upon your resolution demanding that Congress heed the Republican Party's campaign pledges to agriculture. Every one of the 220 organizations we have been able to reach among the signers of the telegram to Senator SMOOT, protesting against tariff schedules inimical to agriculture, join heartily in our message to you. These organizations representative of practically all the farming and business interests of the Northwest include the following: Central Cooperative Association, South St. Paul, representing 125,000 farmer livestock shippers in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana, and western Wisconsin; Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation, St. Paul, with 40,000 farmer members; Land O'Lakes Creameries (Inc.), Minneapolis, owned and operated by 90,000 dairy farmers in Minnesota and adjoining States; Farmers' Elevator Association of Minnesota, Minneapolis, owned and operated by 60,000 grain farmers; Twin City Milk Producers Association, St. Paul, owned and operated by 7,999 dairy farmers in vicinity of twin cities; Minnesota Horticultural Society and Allied Associations, Minneapolis, representing 5,999 growers; Federal Farm Relief Association, Minneapolis, representing 5,000 business men and farmers in Minnesota, North and South Dakota; Minnesota Holstein Friesan Association, Minneapolis, representing 1,500 leading dairy farmers; Ten Thousand Lakes-Greater Minnesota Association, St. Paul, representing 10,000 business and professional men throughout Minnesota; North Dakota Farmer's Grain Dealers Association, Fargo, N. Dak., owned and operated by 60,000 North Dakota farmers; Greater North Dakota Association, Fargo, N. Dak., composed of 5,000 business and professional men and farmer leaders throughout North Dakota; Farmers' Elevator Association of South Dakota, Sioux Falls, owned and operated by 30,000 Dakota farmers; South Dakota State Chamber of Commerce, Huron, S. Dak., representing 6,500 business and professional men throughout South Dakota. Allowing for duplications in membership, it can be said that these organizations directly represent 250,000 of the 335,000 farmers in Minnesota, North and South Dakota. This canvass of sentiment and the more intensive canvass in May leave no doubt of the practically unanimous opinion in this Northwest territory that Congress is expected in this special session to concern itself primarily with legislation helpful to the farmer.

THE MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE.

FALL IN PRICE OF WHEAT

Mr. NORBECK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article from the Los Angeles Examiner entitled "Fall in Wheat Prices Called Prosperity Aid."

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Los Angeles (Calif.) Examiner of May 14, 1929]

FALL IN WHEAT PRICES CALLED PROSPERITY AID

WASHINGTON, May 13, 1929.—Reports that commodity prices were declining so sharply as to threaten prosperity were scouted by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon to-day. He said a recent drop in the indexes was due to the fall in wheat prices. Although serious for the growers, such a price decline, as viewed by economists, would be favorable to general prosperity, since it would operate to increase consumption, Mr. Mellon indicated.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON CIVIL SERVICE

Mr. DENEEN, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, reported back favorably without amendment the resolution (S. Res. 92) submitted by Mr. DALE on the 14th instant, which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Civil Service, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and hereby is, authorized during the Seventy-first Congress to send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not to exceed 25 cents per 100 words, to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be before said committee, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate.

LIMIT OF EXPENDITURES, SURVEY OF INDIAN CONDITIONS

Mr. DENEEN, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, reported back favorably without amendment the resolution (S. Res. 83) submitted by Mr. FRAZIER on May 31, which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Whereas the Committee on Indian Affairs has completed its preliminary investigation pursuant to Senate Resolution 79, Seventieth Congress, agreed to February 1, 1928, providing for a general survey of the conditions of Indians in the United States; and

Whereas in order to properly complete this investigation and make a report it will be necessary to hold hearings in certain States and to take the testimony of a considerable number of witnesses whose testimony is material to a proper understanding of the situation in those States; and

Whereas since the commencement of the investigation pursuant to such resolution there has been a change in the administration of the Bureau of Indian Affairs; and

Whereas the funds available for expenditure by the committee are insufficient to enable it to properly complete such investigation and make a report thereon: Therefore be it

Resolved, That in order to enable the Committee on Indian Affairs to complete its investigation and make its report pursuant to Senate Resolution 79, Seventieth Congress, agreed to February 1, 1928, providing for a general survey of the conditions of Indians in the United States, the committee is hereby authorized to expend from the contingent fund of the Senate the sum of $15,000.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, on behalf of the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], who is absent from the Senate by reason of illness, I introduce a bill to be referred to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. MOSES (for Mr. HALE):

A bill (S. 1566) for the relief of Henry Stanley Wood (with an accompanying paper); to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. FLETCHER:

A bill (S. 1567) granting a pension to James Marshall; and

A bill (S. 1568) granting a pension to Owen O'Hare; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SWANSON:

A bill (S. 1569) for the relief of Maj. Benjamin L. Jacobson, Finance Department, United States Army (with an accompanying paper); to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McNARY:

A bill (S. 1570) establishing a fund for the propagation of salmon in the Columbia River district; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. HOWELL:

A bill (S. 1571) for the relief of William K. Kennedy (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 1572) for the relief of the Allegheny Forging Co. (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. JONES:

A bill (S. 1573) for the relief of William Smith; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. NORRIS:

A bill (S. 1574) to secure safe working conditions on board vessels for those employed in loading and unloading cargo, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. NYE:

A bill (S. 1575) for the relief of Daniel Wells; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GOFF:

A bill (S. 1576) granting an increase of pension to Angeline Fincham (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McKELLAR:

A bill (S. 1577) increasing the compensation of the Vice President, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, Senators, Representatives, heads of the executive departments, and others; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. DENEEN:

A bill (S. 1578) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Illinois River at or near Peoria, Ill.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. GILLETT:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 64) authorizing and directing the Interstate Commerce Commission and the United States Shipping Board to make a joint investigation into the practicability of equalizing rail rates and ocean rates on export and import freight traffic between points in the United States and points in foreign countries by way of the several United States ports, and to make joint report thereon; to the Committee on Commerce.

PUBLICATION OF COTTON TRANSACTIONS

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I introduce a joint resolution which I propose vigorously to push after the recess of Congress, the general purpose of it being to require boards of trade and exchanges dealing in cotton to publish in a daily newspaper published in the city where the board of trade or exchange is located a statement of the number of bales of cotton dealt in on the previous business day, and for other purposes.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 65) to provide for the publication of certain transactions in cotton on boards of trade and exchanges, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

AMENDMENT TO TARIFF BILL—THE DEBENTURE PLAN

Mr. BROOKHART. I offer an amendment intended to be proposed by me to the amendment proposed by Mr. NORRIS to House bill 2667, the tariff revision bill, relative to the debenture plan. I move that the amendment be referred to the Committee on Finance and printed.

The motion was agreed to.

CONCEPTIONS AND IDEAS LEADING TO INVENTION AND DISCOVERY

Mr. KING (by request) submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 101), which was referred to the Committee on Patents:

Whereas it is contended that statutory protection for property and proprietary rights and ownership in original thoughts, conceptions, and ideas in art, literature, science, mechanics, and the useful arts is incomplete and that artists, authors, scientists, and inventors are not now satisfactorily protected by law in their proprietary and property rights and ownership during the progress of their original ideas and works from conception to reduction to practice, and from reduction to practice to and through sale for use, and for application and use of their original conceptions and ideas after reduction to practice or to tangible form; and

Whereas it is contended by artists, authors, scientists, and inventors that property and proprietary rights exist in original ideas or combinations of original ideas, if definitely formulated and forwarded, and in their use or application irrespective of whether they are combined with physical, material, or tangible means of making practical application of such ideas; and

Whereas the subject and situation warrant careful investigation and consideration by Congress with a view to defining and protecting property and proprietary rights in such original thoughts, conceptions, and ideas: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Committee on Patents, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized and directed (1) to investigate the extent to which the rights of persons engaged in art, literature, science, mechanics, and the useful arts in their original thoughts, conceptions, and ideas leading to invention and discovery have been and may be considered in law, equity, and common usage as property and proprietary rights, and the extent to which such persons have been or may reasonably be protected in the commercial or other use of such original thoughts, conceptions, and ideas, and (2) to report to the Senate as soon as practicable, but in no event later than April 15, 1930, the results of its investigation, together with its recommendations for necessary legislation to protect for a limited time the property and proprietary rights of such persons in their original thoughts, conceptions, and ideas leading to invention and discovery.

SEC. 2. For the purposes of this resolution the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such public hearings, to sit and act at such times and places, to employ such experts and clerical, stenographic, and other assistants, to require by subpœna or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, and to make such expenditures, as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services in reporting such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per 100 words. The expenses of the committee, which shall not exceed $2,000, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1535) to extend the time for the construction of the bridge across the Chesapeake Bay.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 102) making an appropriation for expenses of participation by the United States in the meeting of the International Technical Consulting Committee on Radio Communications to be held at The Hague in September, 1929, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 669. An act to alter and amend an act entitled "An act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Lake Superior to Puget Sound, on the Pacific coast, by the northern route," approved July 2, 1864, and to alter and amend a joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution authorizing the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. to issue its bonds for the construction of its road and to secure the same by mortgage, and for other purposes," approved May 31, 1870; to declare forfeited to the United States certain claimed rights asserted by the Northern Pacific Railroad Co., or the Northern Pacific Railway Co.; to direct the institution and prosecution of proceedings looking to the adjustment of the grant, and for other purposes;

S. 1548. An act extending the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the White River at or near Newport, Ark.;

H. R. 3671. An act to authorize and direct a survey to be made of the Escambia River and its tributaries, Alabama and Florida; and

H. R. 3966. An act to fix the compensation of officers and employees of the legislative branch of the Government.

INTERNATIONAL RADIO CONFERENCE

Mr. WARREN. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the amendment of the Senate to House Joint Resolution 102.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FESS in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the amendment of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 102) making an appropriation for expenses of participation by the United States in the meeting of the International Technical Consulting Committee on Radio Communications to be held at The Hague in September, 1929, which was, in lieu of the matter inserted by the Senate amendment, to insert "$27,500."

Mr. WARREN. I move that the Senate agree to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate. The amount appropriated by the House, $35,000, was reduced by the Senate to $20,000, and now the House fixed the amount at $27,500.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion to agree to the House amendment to the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

THE TARIFF

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial appearing in this morning's Baltimore Sun, entitled "More Upward Revision."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The editorial is as follows:

[From the Baltimore Sun, Wednesday, June 19, 1929]

MORE UPWARD REVISION

If uncertainty is bad for business, refusal of the Senate to restrict tariff revision to agricultural schedules is not a hopeful sign. The decision means wide revision, as there has been general agreement that, unless a way could be found to confine the Senate's activities within narrow limitations, it would outdo the House in the extent of its tariff changes, remaking the House bill and going still farther in revising schedules upward. In consequence, contrary to all campaign promises, the country is in for a long siege of tariff tinkering, the main purpose of which will be higher protection for industries and manufactures.

The issue in the Senate hinged, apparently, on the attitude of the President, Senators taking diametrically opposite views as to his wishes in the premises. It is reasonable to conclude, in the circumstances, that had Mr. Hoover been determined to hold revision within narrow bounds, dealing with agricultural products, he could have had his way by saying so. His refusal to take a hand in the controversy is not unlikely to lead to the confusion of counsel that arose over the debenture, when two of the President's erstwhile valient champions, Senator BORAH and Senator BROOKHART, were left out on a limb by a belated indictment of the scheme as wholly meretricious.

If one undertakes to decide what Mr. Hoover actually wants done from what various presidential "spokesmen" in the Senate insist he wants, it must be said that the Delphic oracle had nothing on the White House. More than one Senator can appreciate the predicament of Crœsus, who, unable to decide whether to make war upon the Persians, cast the die on the answer of that font of wisdom to the effect that in doing so he "would destroy a mighty empire." And so he did, but it turned out to be his own, which, nevertheless, left the oracle with a batting average of 100 per cent.

The President, however, has never said that only agricultural schedules should be touched. He has referred with Delphic nebulosity to "limited revision," but has not excluded consideration of changes in duties on "other industries than agriculture" where there have been "economic shifts necessitating a readjustment." In the minds of high protectionists this covers a field so wide as to embrace whatever they wish—sugar, shoes, hides, cement, plate glass, steel, textiles, shingles, potteries, and any other commodity backed by interests which can make their influence felt in Congress.

It is knowledge of this fact which prompts the country to prepare for a long summer of tariff manipulation, in course of which those who did not get what they wanted in the House will be in Washington shouting that this is the time for all good high protectionists to stand together. The raid is on, with at least eight Democratic Senators ready joiners, and only the President or a real revolt of Senators from the agricultural States can stop it.

PRIZE-WINNING ESSAY—"OLD GLORY'S GREATEST GLORY"

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have published in the RECORD the prize-winning essay in region 14 in the contest held by the United States Flag Association, the essay being by Nora Nell Johnson, of San Antonio, Tex.

There being no objection, the prize essay was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OLD GLORY'S GREATEST GLORY

What a task has been set before us! To try to tell of the greatest glory of our glorious flag. A task which great statesmen and poets have failed to do justice to. And yet we are asked to tell of it in the simple language of a school child. For if we turn back the pages of our country's history to the first days of the American flag, we will find numerous glories of our flag listed there, as it is the one emblem for which brave men and women have sacrificed their lives in order to keep it flying over the country they loved.

Although our flag has gained countless glories in every war that she was carried through and has always been the banner of victory, I think she has gained her greatest glory during time of peace, for the American flag has ever been the symbol of liberty. And no matter to what land it has been carried, it has always been looked upon as freedom's messenger. Never has it been carried to battle for an unjust cause. Never has the purity of its beautiful colors been stained with the blood of its patriots in a battle to conquer the weak or to widen the borders of our possessions.

We who have been born and bred beneath the folds of our "starry banner" realize what it means to enjoy the blessings of freedom, justice, equality, and prosperity, as we see many nations around us who are suffering from poverty, tyranny, and oppression. It is for this reason that many foreigners come to our beautiful land of America and learn to love and honor the flag as we do. They leave their home, family, and friends to become citizens of this land of opportunity. Some come to escape oppression, others to seek their fortune, but one and all receive the same privileges and rights of our native-born Americans. Here their children may receive the best of education and have instilled into them a true spirit of patriotism. During the time of war, when our country's flag was in need of protection, many of these adopted sons sprang to the defense of the flag that had sheltered them and were willing to lay down their lives on the altar of sacrifice.

I think that nothing more beautiful can express the sentiments of the American people regarding the flag than these words of Henry Ward Beecher:

"Let us, then, twine each thread of the glorious tissue of our country's flag about our heartstrings; and looking upon our homes and catching the spirit that breathes upon us from the battle fields of our fathers, let us resolve that, come weal or woe, we will in life and in death, now and forever, stand by the Stars and Stripes. They have floated over our cradle; let them also, we pray, float over the graves."

COMMENT ON CRIME COMMISSION

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a comment on the Crime Commission by W. A. James, of Bishopville, S. C., a constituent of mine.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

DEAR SENATOR SMITH:

Apropos the appointment of a crime commission.

The ancients held that a state was held together by reward and punishment. From the personnel of the crime commission that President Hoover has appointed I glean that he is an advocate of the punishment route, which is the English method.

Crime with us is a retaliatory act, as 70 per cent of our people believe that nearly all wealth has been accumulated among us by sleight-of-hand methods and therefore dishonestly acquired. This belief has been thrust upon us and has placed us in the position of the outwitted and defrauded; in other words, our laws have deprived us citizens of our just rewards in the distribution of the products of labor, and from thence arises the determination to rob back; at least there is enough of that kind of talk to influence a few of our young people to action.

This principle is well known in the South under the denotation of "Mausa nigger, Mausa hog," a fair justification for stealing the hog from one who was working the negro without reward; consequently the slave appointed himself his own paymaster.

In the South we are all poor alike, and there is not so much of this warfare going on. But I am informed that in some sections of our Nation there exists great contrasts between wealth and poverty; and there one finds more of the spirit of the Irishman who, when ordered off the premises of the Englishman, asked: "How did you come into possession of this land?"; and when the Englishman told him that his father had fought for it, he said: "Begorrah, then I will fight you for it."

So the spirit of America, with memories of the conquests of the Indian and the forest and the English and the Confederates to give assurance and audacity, is due to die slowly, and Mr. Hoover may expect it to flare up spasmodically for a good spell yet.

There is no need of feeling any uneasiness over the conduct of the South, for we have been annihilated and are as peaceful as Poland appeared in a report made once upon a time to the Czar of Russia. We are very low with a bad case of financial typhoid fever. A few are living on the remnants of their capital, while the balance are merely existing on borrowed help. We borrow without any idea of reaping a profit, but simply to extend our mortal lives for one more year, exactly like a poor man would go out and borrow from his neighbor a quart of corn meal to make a supper for his wife and children. The American spirit of independence, self-reliance, and initiative has "flewed the coop" and is no more resident among us. We have three kinds to occupy until all are driven hence—the dead, the damned, and the doomed.

In view of our sorry plight, we feel constrained to beg Congress to excuse us from helping when the law violators of the North become hard to handle, not that we have the slightest taint of disloyalty, but that we are down flat and helpless with a malignant case of financial typhoid fever.

W. A. JAMES.

Bishopville, S. C.

"EQUALITY OF BELLIGERENTS AND THE EMBARGO RESOLUTIONS"

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, there can be no doubt that one of the most difficult problems involving international relations and the universal desire to maintain world peace is that with respect to the furnishing of arms and ammunitions to belligerents by nations otherwise neutral.

The subject is one that demands careful study and intelligent action, as well as definite agreement among all nations sincerely desirous of maintaining peace.

Recently one of the foremost authorities on the subject of international law, Dr. Joseph P. Chamberlain, of Columbia University, made an address at Philadelphia before the American Society of Political and Social Science in which he discussed in a very interesting and enlightening way the embargo I have proposed on arms shipments. In the same address Doctor Chamberlain also discussed some of the other important aspects of the definite movement to insure world peace. The subject is of such general interest and of such great importance that I feel justified in asking that Doctor Chamberlain's address be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EQUALITY OF BELLIGERENTS AND THE EMBARGO RESOLUTIONS

It is argued that this country should permit belligerent small powers access to our arms factories to prevent the danger of building up large stores of war goods in peace and to be of aid to them against the danger of oppression by great states. But under the rules of neutrality, what would it benefit a small nation to have legal access in an international sense to the supply of arms manufactured in the United States?

Under the law of neutrality as it exists to-day, arms and military supplies are contraband of war and subject to capture. Therefore the power which controls these has in effect a most effective "embargo" against any land power which has no convenient land access to the United States and can prevent that land power supplying itself in the United States. There is no such thing as a free and equal treatment in practice of both belligerents by a neutral like the United States in respect to the supplying of those belligerents with arms and ammunition, with food, and with the other supplies which are so necessary in the event of war. The experience of the World War proves that the Central Powers had no opportunity to supply themselves in this country with a rifle, with a cannon, with a cartridge during the war. There was an absolute embargo in fact against them, an embargo with which the Government and Congress of the United States had nothing to do, and against which they made no attempt to protest. The right of a belligerent to seize contraband of war in itself, then, makes it impossible to send supplies to the enemy of the sea power. It establishes an embargo against the possibility of that enemy supplying itself with weapons in this country. What chance would a small power have to make use of the manufacturing capacity of the United States in the event of hostilities with any power which controlled the sea lanes along which the contraband must pass? Neither the embargo which Senator CAPPER proposes, the double embargo proposed in the House committee resolution, would change in one iota the position of the small powers in respect to the right to replenish their ammunition supplies in the United States if a great power barred the way. They would be in the same position if either of these resolutions is passed and put in effect as they are under the existing international custom. They could not get those supplies from the United States under the law of contraband if the resolutions are not passed; they would be no more effectively barred if either resolution were in effect.

LAND POWERS

The same is true of the great land powers. At the present time, in spite of the policy of equality in law, there is no equality in fact, in the treatment of the belligerents by this country as a neutral. It is certain that there is a custom which, in fact, amounts to an embargo against the land powers, in respect to munitions of war, and a license to the sea powers to freely provision themselves in this country. That is the result of the policy of equal treatment in law set up by Washington's Cabinet and continued by our Government during the last war. Suppose that policy were changed and the policy of the double embargo put into effect. The double embargo means that no shipment of arms or ammunition, no shipment of supplies and munitions of war, should be allowed to leave the United States. This Government would assume the duty of stopping all such shipments at our ports.

This, in practice, would mean a change in the policy of the United States to favor the land as against the sea powers. The consequence of this double embargo would be that a land power planning a war against a sea power would be greatly encouraged by the realization that once the war began, the United States would immediately stop the provisioning of that sea power from its factories and workshops. The sea powers would lose an advantage which they have under the existing custom. If the embargo were enforced against all belligerents they would be treated equally in law as they are treated to-day equally in law. The embargo would be enforced against them all under the double embargo rule and no arms would leave the country, exactly the converse to the law existing to-day, under which the markets and the workshops of the United States are open to everyone.

RESULTS OF A DOUBLE EMBARGO

In fact—and, after all, facts have a curious way of taking on a greater importance in times of stress than law—in fact, the result of the enforcement of the double embargo would be to encourage and aid the land powers in their wars against sea powers, and whether this change of policy is desirable is a question of policy which has no relation to the preservation of peace or the implementing of the Kellogg pact. The United States may continue the existing rule of neutrality under which the sea powers profit, or it may adopt the double embargo resolution under which the land powers would profit. But if this country intends to take any step toward interfering with the existing rule regarding the supply from this country of munitions of war to one of two belligerent powers, or groups of powers, it seems only logical that it should apply the discrimination against the power which has broken an engagement with the United States, in particular the pact of Paris, by an aggressive war.

For the nation which makes aggressive war, which uses war as an instrument of national policy against any other signatory nation, commits by that act a breach of the pact of Paris and an affront to the United States. It commits a breach of its agreement with the United States. The conviction upon which this pact is based, the only justification for its existence, is that war is an interest of all the peoples of the earth, that a war beginning between two small powers in the Balkans, between two small states in South America, may spread until it covers the whole of the civilized earth and may result in the calamity which Secretary Kellogg clearly foreshadowed. Therefore the United States is justified morally, as it is justified legally under the pact of Paris, in protesting against aggressive war and in refusing to treat a nation which is guilty of aggression as entitled to equality of treatment with the state which has tried to do its duty under the pact by making a peaceful settlement of the dispute.

MOVEMENT OF PEACE MACHINERY

The modern development of peace machinery is based on the same theory. It is working to prevent war as the machinery of modern international sanitary conventions is devised to act within a country to stop a plague before it goes over the boundary and spreads throughout the world. So, when the plague of war threatens in any region of the earth, the modern peace machinery is put in action at once. It is admitted that stopping war is the business of all the nations, especially of the great nations. It is not a question of keeping the peace of the world and preventing the use of war as an instrument of national policy. A warlike government is faced with the demand on the part of governments not directly interested in the quarrel that it keep its peace; and, since the Covenant of the League and the Kellogg pact, this demand is based on a treaty right, it is not a mere offer of good offices. The response of the government to this demand on the part of governments not directly interested will give a good indication of its will to peace or to war, and so permit the United States to decide whether, if it finally goes to war, it has committed a breach of the pact of Paris or was acting in self-defense.

An impressive instance of the way in which the peace machinery of the world is moving is the stopping of the recent dispute between Bolivia and Paraguay.

On the 6th of December, 1928, Fort Vangvardia, a Bolivian post in territory whose ownership was disputed, was captured by a Paraguayan force, the fort burned, the flag of Bolivia torn down, a large number of the garrison killed, and the others taken away as prisoners to a Paraguayan post. On December 14 a counter attack by the Bolivian troops resulted in the capture of two Paraguayan forts and the loss of a number of Paraguayan lives. Bolivia and Paraguay both considered their honor engaged. Bolivia refused to consent to the setting up of a committee of conciliation, declaring:

"One can understand the formation of an investigatory tribunal to prevent conflicts when they do not yet exist and when there are strained relations or when it is impossible to reach an agreement in the foreign office discussions—but not when a fort lies in ruins, when citizens are sacrificed, and when soldiers are carried off as prisoners of war to the fort of the aggressor."

There was the perfect set-up for a war with a certainty that a war would have been begun had this event occurred 50 years ago. It occurred, however, in 1928, and immediately the other nations of the earth set themselves to work to prevent war, and this is the new policy to which the countries of the earth are committed. Immediately by telegraph and cable the Bolivian and Paraguayan Governments were warned by the president of the council of the League of Nations to observe their duties under the pact. The Conference of American States on Conciliation and Arbitration, sitting in Washington, resolved on December 10:

"I. To express to the Governments of the sister Republics of Bolivia and Paraguay the keen aspiration and hope which it fosters that their present differences shall be adjusted peacefully in a spirit of justice, concord, and fraternity.

"II. To convey in a cordial and respectful manner to the aforementioned Governments, in conformity with the tradition of this continent and with the practices which have become general in modern international law, that nations under circumstances such as the present have at their disposal adequate and effective organs and means to find solutions which harmonize the preservation of peace with the right of the states.

"III. To transmit this resolution by telegraph to the Governments of Bolivia and Paraguay.

"IV. To form a committee charged with the duty of advising the conference upon the conciliatory action which, if necessary, it might render by cooperating with the instrumentalities now employed in the friendly solution of the problem."

The movements of troops were immediately stopped, and on December 18, less than two weeks after blood had been shed, and an insult offered to the flag of one of the countries; four days after an insult had been offered to the flag of the other, the representatives of the two countries met in Washington and signed an agreement to submit their quarrel to peaceful settlement. A commission is now determining, not which of the two countries was an aggressor, not the merits of the dispute over disputed territory, but how this fight originally occurred, and what arrangements should be made as between the two countries to settle peaceably the quarrel which threatened to develop into an armed conflict.

The procedure under the covenant of the league is illustrated by the Greek-Bulgarian incident. "On October 22, 1925, the Bulgarian Minister of Foreign Affairs telegraphed to the Secretary-General that, as a result of a border fight between sentries, Greek troops had been ordered to advance into Bulgarian territory and were about 5 miles over the line. He appealed to the league under article 11, of the covenant, by which it is the duty of the Secretary-General to 'forthwith summon a meeting of the council.'" The council met at Paris, October 26 at 6 p. m., one member arriving by airplane.

"After statements by the Bulgarian and Greek representatives, they were brought to associate with the council in calling upon the two Governments to give unconditional orders for their troops to withdraw behind their respective frontiers within 24 hours, and to accomplish that within 60 hours. This was accomplished and other phases of the difficulty were discussed until October 29, when the council appointed a commission to investigate on the spot. Both parties agreed in advance to accept the decisions of the council.

"The report came before the council on December 7, and involved a payment of 30,000,000 levas ($210,000) by Greece to Bulgaria for damage done, and this was duly paid. * * *

"The report called attention to the fact that the Greek order to suspend operations reached the scene of action only two hours and a half before the attack was timed to begin. The conclusion was that a state of hospitilities was narrowly averted by the prompt action of the council." (Nine Years of the League of Nations, Denys Myers, World Peace Foundation. Vol. XII, No. 1, 1929.)

So is the peace machinery of the earth working, and it is to help that peace machinery to work, to effectuate its purposes and to sharpen its proceeding that the people of this country must move if they are going to move in the spirit that inspired the Cabinet of President Washington in 1794 to follow, as Senator Capper said, the modern notions of international law and the best interests of the people.

PROPOSED MODIFICATION OF MEAT PACKERS' CONSENT DECREE

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, the People's Lobby, with headquarters in Washington, have prepared a statement on the efforts being made to have the meat packers' consent decree modified so that the big meat packers may retail meat and meat products and handle groceries. I ask unanimous consent that the statement may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT OF PEOPLE'S LOBBY

The extraordinary similarity of phraseology used in the petitions and resolutions adopted by several livestock and stock raisers' associations urging a hearing and modification of the packers consent decree, and a knowledge of the devious practices of the big meat packers affected by the decree, led the People's Lobby to write the following letter on June 8, 1929, to the Attorney General:

Hon. WM. D. MITCHELL,

Attorney General, Department of Justice, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. ATTORNEY GENERAL: On behalf of the People's Lobby, I ask, and with the utmost confidence, that as Attorney General you continue your own policy as Solicitor General, and the policy of your two predecessors, in opposing any modification of what is known as the meat packers consent decree.

Since the report of the Federal Trade Commission on its investigation of the meat-packing industry in 1918, we have consistently sought adequate Government control of that industry. When the "Big Five" meat packers—which, as one of their spokesmen phrased it, "faced indictments"—prevented legislation to protect the people from their rapacity and law-breaking proclivities and sought immunity by requesting the entry of a consent decree, we opposed that. (The title of our organization at that time was the People's Reconstruction League.)

Since the packer and stockyards act of 1921 failed to incorporate adequate safeguards for the people, we opposed any modification of the decree, and were permitted on two occasions to intervene by counsel as "amicus curiæ." We fully recognize that economic as well as legal questions are involved in this problem.

You have recently received several resolutions from various livestock and cattle growers' associations requesting modification of the meat packers consent decree to the extent of permitting the packers affected to retail meat, and to sell groceries. The similarity of these spontaneous resolutions is ominous.

The inclusion in a large number of them of a misstatement of fact, apparently purposely by the obvious single inspiration of these resolutions to mislead the public, is not inconsistent with the meat packers' past moral turpitude.

The petitioners, with cattle growers and livestock associations aliases, assert that with such modification as sought of the consent decree the meat packers would "be on the same basis as their competitors," "on a basis of equality with their competitors," "on the same basis and equality as their competitors."

The fact is that the "Big Four" meat packers through ownership of stockyards and of approximately nine-tenths of the refrigerator cars, which receive expedited service on the railroads, enjoy a special advantage over both of their two classes of competitors—the chain grocery stores and independent grocers.

That the meat packers affected by the decree have failed to fulfill their solemn voluntary agreement to divest themselves of their stockyards may explain the fact that they have adopted the subterfuge of an alibied petition to modify that decree.

There will not be any fair competition between these meat packers and anyone else as long as the meat packers own these refrigerator cars, and until they offer to sell them to a holding corporation or some similar agency, so that they shall be equally available to all, they stand self-convicted of duplicity or dangerous innocence in talking about "equality with their competitors."

We would not be understood, Mr. Attorney General, as advocating unmitigated nor wasteful competition as a means of insuring the public fair service or fair prices. On the contrary, at our request Senator WALSH of Montana introduced in a previous Congress and has reintroduced a resolution (S. Res. 72) directing the Federal Trade Commission to investigate mergers of over $20,000,000 effected during the past four years and to report to the Senate their recommendations as to how to prevent excessive capitalization, speculative bankers' control, and excessive profits.

The "Big Five" (now condensed to four) meat packers have, however, indulged in speculative bankers' control, excessive capitalization, and excessive profits, as well as subnormal prices to livestock growers. Their sudden change of front from aspiration at world domination in all lines to a copiously camouflaged plea for competition would excite the risibilities of a jaded world, save for the fact their law-breaking proclivities might engage the attention of the recently created crime commission. One is justified in wondering whether the meat packers plan a merger with the grocery chain stores.

Yours sincerely,

BENJAMIN C. MARSH,
Executive Secretary.

The facts regarding the efforts of the "Big Five" meat packers as reported by the Federal Trade Commission in 1918 are as follows:

"It appears that five great packing concerns of the country—Swift, Armour, Morris, Cudahy, and Wilson—have attained such a dominant position that they control at will the market in which they buy their supplies, the market in which they sell their products, and hold the fortunes of their competitors in their hands.

"Not only is the business of gathering, preparing, and selling meat products in their control, but an almost countless number of by-product industries are similarly dominated; and not content with reaching out for mastery as to commodities which substitute for meat and its by-products, they have invaded allied industries and even unrelated ones.

"The combination has not stopped at the most minute integration but has gone on into a stage of conglomeration, so that unrelated heterogeneous enterprises are brought under control.

"As we have followed these five great corporations through their amazing and devious ramifications—followed them through important branches of industry, of commerce, and of finance—we have been able to trace back to its source the great power which has made possible their growth. We have found that it is not so much the means of production and preparation, nor the sheer momentum of great wealth, but the advantage which is obtained through a monopolistic control of the market places and means of transportation and distribution.

"If these five great concerns owned no packing plants and killed no cattle and still retained control of the instruments of transportation, of marketing, and of storage, their position would not be less strong than it is.

"The producer of livestock is at the mercy of these five companies because they control the market and the marketing facilities and, to some extent, the rolling stock which transports the product to the market.

"The competitors of these five concerns are at their mercy because of the control of the market places, storage facilities, and the refrigerator cars of distribution.

"The consumer of meat products is at the mercy of these five, because both producer and competitor are helpless to bring relief.

"The stock car is a part of the equipment of the common carrier, whose services are necessary to the producer of meat animals so that he may reach the market. The railroads furnish suitable cars for the transportation of other kinds of freight, and as to the use of such cars the miner of coal or the manufacturer of furniture are on an equality, but in the matter of transportation of livestock to a small degree there comes in a private ownership and a control and a manipulation of the means of transportation—the stock car."

Moody's Manual gives the following percentage of profits of the "Big Five" meat packers on capital stock:

	Percentage on capital stock
	1912–1914	1916–1918
Swift & Co	12.1	30.5
Armour & Co	32.1	88.9
Cudahy Packing Co	10.7	25.4
Wilson & Co	4.7	20.9
Morris & Co	65.9	146.1
	14.4	36.9

During the war years the average net income of the five companies was more than two and one-half times their net income for the previous period.

Typical of the methods of the Armour interests is the record of the dealings of the Armour Grain Corporation with the Grain Marketing Corporation organized by the farmers to help them market their wheat.

The Chicago Tribune (March 17, 1927), in an editorial entitled, "The Scandal in the Grain Trade," discussing the practices of the Armour Grain Corporation, stated:

"Something more than condemnation is called for. The company and its officials stand accused not only of shrewd practices which men of honor choose not to employ, but of gross dishonesty. The difference is the difference between the brink and the abyss."

A leading Washington paper (March 9, 1927) stated editorially:

"Chicago has been hit by a scandal that hurts worse than gunman terrorism, * * *. It is publicly announced by Edward E. Brown, vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago, whose word is accepted by any Chicago business man, that the Armour Company was guilty of plain thievery in its dealing with the Grain Marketing Co."

As a result of the findings of Mr. Brown, the Armour Grain Co. was compelled to pay the Grain Marketing Corporation $3,000,000.

The Chicago Tribune (March 4, 1927) stated:

"The financial brunt of the decision falls upon J. Ogden Armour, Philip D. Armour III, and Lester Armour, who own about 85 per cent of the stock in the Armour Grain Co."

Frank D. Crombie, superintendent of the Northwestern Elevator, testified that at the times covered "at the direction of George E. Thompson, general superintendent of the Armour Grain Co., who had told him he was acting on the instructions of George E. Marcy—then president of that company—he changed the records of the elevator, though about 2,000,000 bushels of wheat had deteriorated."

Since the packers consent decree was entered, on request of the big packers they have made repeated efforts to have it set aside entirely or modified as in the most recent effort, but have not complied with the stipulation that they divest themselves of ownership of their stockyards.

The most thorough investigation of the economic reasons for a modification of the decree was made in 1921 by an interdepartmental committee composed of representatives designated by the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, and Justice on request of the California Cooperative Canneries and others.

That committee referred the decision back to the court. Hon. Nelson B. Gaskill, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, states to the committee:

"The Federal Trade Commission felt at the time of its entry that the consent decree failed to secure to the public the complete remedy for and protection against the practices charged in the bill of complaint, for which the commission believed sufficient evidence was then available. It was no party to framing the terms of this decree and it was not consulted with reference to its provisions.

"The commission feels that the proposed modification would still further lessen the remedial effect of the decree. It would be a surrender of one of the protective measures taken for the public which at the time of the compromise settlement was regarded as essential to the public right and which the respondents were willing to concede in exchange for concessions to them. If the provisions now sought to be eliminated from the decree were then essential to the protection of the public, they are essential now.

"The Federal Trade Commission in the light of its experience with the subject matter and with due regard only to the public right in the maintenance of the principles of free and fair competition, presents its opposition to the proposed course of action with reference to this decree."

On May 1, 1925, the consent decree was suspended by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The packers appealed it as a partial decision. The Government appealed against it as interlocutory.

The Supreme Court of the District of Columbia denied the California canneries permission to intervene, but this decision was reversed by the Court of Appeals of the District. The Government then appealed from the court of appeals, and the Supreme Court of the United States, on May 20, 1929, upheld the Government's contention and denied the canneries permission to intervene, thus apparently removing every obstacle to the enforcement of the decree.

This fact explains the hysterical effort of the meat packers to have another "hearing" and "investigation" for which there is obviously no occasion.

Among the New York banking connections of the big meat packers listed by the Federal Trade Commission in their report on the meat packers are:

Armour: National City Bank, International Banking Corporation, Irving National Bank, Irving Trust Co.

Wilson: Chase National Bank, Guaranty Trust Co., Hallgarten & Co.

Swift: Irving National Bank.

The New York Times (June 18, 1929) reports the merger of the Chase National Bank and the National Park Bank "into an institution having the largest capital funds of any bank in this country, and ranking second in resources."

It gives the resources of the National City Bank-Farmers' Trust merger as $2,066,700,000; of the Chase-National Park Bank merger as $1,700,000,000; and of the Guaranty Trust Co.-National Bank of Commerce merger as $1,655,000,000.

The American people should be protected from a "Big Four" meat packers' food trust with such an integrated financial banking of $5,421,000,000 resources, connected with only two of the "Big Four."

CONSERVATION OF OIL

Mr. KING. Mr. President, one of the live subjects is the so-called oil conservation policy of the President. Recently a conference was called in Colorado Springs, Colo., which was an abortive attempt to accomplish something, no one knows exactly what, unless it was to secure an agreement of oil producers to restrict production so as to increase prices. I have received a letter from former Senator Charles S. Thomas, of Colorado, referring to the conference and its results, which I ask may be inserted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JUNE 13, 1929.

MY DEAR SENATOR: The conservation convention appointed and officered by the President and designed to obtain an accord on the subject of oil conservation, of course, including that of "complete conservation on the public domain," was staged last Monday, according to program. Yesterday afternoon it disappeared by a process of automatic dissolution. Its disembodied spirit, if it had one, might well exclaim, "If I so soon am dead and done for, I wonder what I was begun for."

Perhaps those who conceived and directed it can solve the conundrum. Although a farcical failure, some features developed during its brief experience of three days may be worth recording.

A presiding officer was chosen for it by the authority which summoned it into being. It must have been deemed hazardous to permit the gathering to proceed in the usual way and choose its own chairman. Its control by strong-arm methods would safeguard it against that contingency. Its deliberations might tend toward an undesirable result; hence it were well to restrict the topics for discussion by arbitrary rulings. The purpose of the meeting, or rather of those calling it, might otherwise prove difficult to accomplish, and an adverse result must be avoided at any cost.

So Mr. M. L. Requa, the gentleman to whom rumor has been ascribed the doubtful honor of suggesting to the President the launching of a policy in direct conflict with a Federal statute, was commissioned to run the convention and doubtless carefully groomed as to his conduct, before receiving his credentials. The hand-picked chairman, proud of his commission, went blithely to the land of the western mountaineer and proceeded in opening the convention to tell that somewhat independent citizen just "where to get off."

Mr. Requa demanded a prompt approval of the President's plan of oil and gas conservation, including his program of March 12 as to the public domain States. If this were not forthcoming, he, the chairman, might, upon his return, advise resort to coercive measures. He virtually said to the assembly: "You must concede what I demand or take the consequences." Negative action would not do. Is it possible that Mr. Requa, himself a westerner, could for an instant have expected compliance with such an alternative by an assemblage of western men gathered together in the western city of Colorado Springs pursuant to an official call, and for a specific purpose? If so, he is now a sadder, and, it is to be hoped, a much wiser man. Any messenger armed with a demand in one hand and a threat in the other can expect but one result in this country, and justly merits what he receives.

But not content with this line of effrontery, Chairman Requa, when the occasion arose, and it arose at once, ruled that discussion and criticism of the President's oil-land policy, barely three months old, was not in order. That was sacrosanct, also immutable. No delegate should be heard on that subject.

There you have in true outline the nature and the conduct of the Colorado Springs convention, this child of the administration, this agency for sounding and directing public opinion on Executive nullification of written law, officered by machine methods, working under the application of gag law, and required to do one specific thing and nothing else, the convention took the only course left open to honest men. They refused to do anything, and thus left the problem for whose solution they were summoned just where it was.

Obviously, the convention might, and I think should have appealed from the ruling of the Chair and then conducted its future proceedings in its own way. An organized body of men can not, any more than can an individual, submit to such transgressions of propriety and personal rights without inviting their repetition. Fortunately for Mr. Requa, they did not do this. Perhaps their response to his indefensible methods of procedure was equally drastic.

Chairman Requa, now en route to the National Capital, will make a report, but I doubt if it will be a written one. And now for his threatened coercive measures: We hope the public will soon be apprised of them. They will doubtless prove to be executive in character. The Congress has hitherto been the custodian of that political authority which formulates policies, coercive and others, and enacts them into law, but Mr. Requa now seems to be the spokesman for that governmental function. His early announcement of the policy of disciplinary administration will be interesting in any event.

C. S. THOMAS.

Hon. W. H. KING,
United States Senator, Washington.

"EXTERMINATION OF INDEPENDENT MOVING-PICTURE HOUSES"

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a statement made by Abram F. Meyers, president and general counsel of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, issued by authority of the board of directors of that association, dealing with the question of relief for the independent motion-picture theater owners who are being rapidly driven out of business by the exorbitant rentals now being charged for films and other unfair and oppressive tactics employed by the producers of such films.

There being no objection the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXTERMINATION OF INDEPENDENT MOTION-PICTURE HOUSES

(Statement by Abram F. Myers, president and general counsel of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, issued by authority of the board of directors of said association)

A special meeting of the board of directors of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors was held at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, June 17, to consider measures for the relief of the independent motion-picture theater owners, who are being rapidly driven out of business by the exorbitant rentals now being charged for films and other unfair and oppressive tactics employed by the producers of such films.

Until recently the relations of the producers and theater owners were those of seller and buyer, and the competition formerly existing between the producers served to protect the theater owners against extortion. The producers are now so extensively engaged in the exhibition of pictures through owned and affiliated houses that the independent theater owners are no longer treated as customers but as competitors. In such competition all advantages lie with the producers, and these advantages are now being pressed to the utmost in what appears to be an effort finally to exterminate the independent houses.

PRICE OF FILMS

The chief weapon being employed in this warfare of extermination is the price of film, more especially talking film. The public demand for talking films has been demonstrated, the theater owners are under pressure to meet this demand, and without such films they can not compete. The rentals demanded for talking films are, on an average, several hundred per cent above those formerly asked for the silent films, although there is no evidence that they cost more to produce. The argument that exorbitant rentals are necessary because of the limited distribution of these films (not all theaters being equipped to show them) is answered by the fact that distribution is now being retarded, even curtailed, by such rentals.

The unvarying testimony from all parts of the country is to the effect that the independent owners of small and medium-sized theaters are losing money due to the high overhead incident to displaying talking pictures and are being forced to sell out to the producers or close their doors. The consensus of opinion is that the overwhelming majority can not survive another season on the present basis, and that unless relief is promptly forthcoming, the producers will complete their conquest within a year.

Notwithstanding the admitted facts and the protests of the local and State associations, no producer has uttered a word of moderation and the situation is growing steadily worse.

BROOKHART BILL

It was the unanimous opinion of the directors present and represented that the exhibitors should support the bill introduced by Senator SMITH W. BROOKHART, of Iowa, to prevent the block booking, blind booking, and arbitrary allocation of films to producer-controlled theaters, and to make unlawful the system of compulsory arbitration imposed by the producers on the exhibitors as a condition to the leasing of films.

The exhibitors recognize the force of the argument that industry troubles should be settled within the industry without Government interference, but point out that there is no evidence of a willingness on the part of the producers to modify in any degree the conditions under which the exhibitors are now being forced out of business. As the exhibitors view it, there is nothing in the Brookhart bill that can possibly make matters worse as far as they are concerned; there is much that is calculated, to use the language of Senator BROOKHART, "to preserve for the American people the remaining vestige of competition in the motion-picture industry."

The directors have pledged themselves to a campaign to secure support for the measure and to defend it against the false and misleading propaganda issuing from producers' organizations. An analysis of the bill from the standpoint of the exhibitors will be prepared by counsel and distributed to all exhibitors as an offset to a brief recently circulated by counsel for the so-called Hays organization. Also a canvass will be made of the exhibitors to counteract the work now being done by the film board of trade secretaries, exchange management, and other producer agents.

The directors also took cognizance of the growing tendency toward mergers among the producers which is rapidly narrowing the field of competition. The industry now is controlled by but a few interests and rumors are constantly heard of projected mergers which will bring the industry under the control of one, or at most two, dominant interests. This the exhibitors believe would be ruinous to them and detrimental to the public as well, in that it would mean the elimination of the competition of genius and ideas as well as purely economic competition.

The board approved the action of the general counsel in protesting to responsible Government agencies against recent and prospective mergers, and authorized and directed him to use his best endeavors to secure protection against the further monopolizing of the industry.

PRICE DISCRIMINATION

A further subject of discussion was the price discrimination and other unfair and oppressive tactics practiced by producers in favor of owned and controlled theaters and against independents. It was asserted that the prices and percentages demanded of the independent theaters are proportionately much higher than those demanded of affiliated houses, and that prompt payment is demanded of the independent, whereas the controlled houses are allowed to pay when it is convenient or when they have the money. It is obvious that the independent houses can not long withstand such competition.

It was agreed that members of exhibitor organizations affiliated with the Allied States Association should forward evidence of all such discriminating practices to the chief counsel of the association in Washington, who was authorized to make such use of it by way of complaint to public authority, or the bringing of private action, as may be necessary to protect exhibitors' interests.

GENERAL INVESTIGATION

The general counsel of the association was directed to lay before the appropriate agencies of the Government, both executive and legislative, all facts and circumstances tending to establish a common purpose on the part of the producers of photoplays to drive the independent theaters out of business, with a view to obtaining a broad investigation of industry conditions.

Included among the facts which the exhibitors believe tend to prove the existence of such common purpose among the producers are the close affiliation of the latter through the Hays organization; the growing concentration of control resulting from systematic mergers; the imposition on the exhibitors of a one-sided uniform contract and a coercive system of arbitration as a condition to obtaining films; the extensive building operations and acquisitions of independent theaters; the espionage and propaganda activities of the film board secretaries, exchange managers, and other agents directed against exhibitors' interests and organizations; the exorbitant film rentals and oppressive and discriminatory practices.

WASHINGTON MEETING

It was agreed to hold a meeting in Washington on July 2, in the nature of a public protest against the present intolerable conditions in the industry. It will be the purpose of the exhibitors to focus attraction on the causes for the wholesale closing of independent motion-picture theaters, in the belief that the public will condemn the methods being employed.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I trust that Senators during the recess will give some thought to the efforts at enforcement of the prohibition law. I have been much disturbed about several killings which have taken place in my State. It so happens that several of the persons killed were perfectly innocent citizens. Among such was a boy just killed at Plattsburg and Mr. Hansen who was mutilated and died at Niagara Falls.

I believe this is a matter of such concern to the country that this body is called upon to express its sentiment regarding it and to make recommendations. Certainly in certain sections of the border, and my State happens to be a border State, we suffer perhaps more than in other sections.

As I view it, it is an outrageous thing that so many innocent persons should be killed by Government officials. I hope during the recess Senators will give thought to the matter, so that some recommendation may be made and action taken to prevent the recurrence of such inexcusable disasters.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, Calendar No. 37 is a joint resolution (S. J. Res. 53) to create a joint congressional committee relating to the reorganization and concentration of the agencies connected with prohibition enforcement, and for other purposes. Such a commission would act very much in line with the suggestions which the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND] has just made. It looks to the matter of transferring the prohibition agencies to the Department of Justice and provides for a joint committee to investigate and study the proposition. I should like to pass it, if possible, with as little delay as may be, because I understand it is expected to have a quorum in the House, and I am hoping that this joint resolution may be considered there if we pass it. Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 53) to create a joint congressional committee relating to the reorganization and concentration of the agencies connected with prohibition enforcement, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, as heretofore indicated I want to address myself briefly to the pending joint resolution with no thought especially of opposing, obstructing, or delaying its passage; but merely to call attention to the fact that, in my conception, it is an attempt by the executive department of the Government to shift to the Congress initial responsibility for the transfer of the Prohibition Unit from the Treasury to the Department of Justice.

The appointment of a joint congressional committee to investigate or inquire into the desirability of such a transfer simply will result in delay and in the transfer, not so much of the Prohibition Unit, but the transfer of responsibility from the executive to the legislative branch of the Government. There is not a fact to be ascertained, not one, relating to the proposed transfer, that is not now and has not for a long time been immediately available to the President through the heads of the three departments that may be affected by the transfer. The proposed joint committee can not ascertain one solitary detail that is not now available to the President of the United States. All the information that may be derived by such inquiry as that proposed must come from the Treasury, or the Department of Justice, or the Department of Labor, having jurisdiction of the immigration laws. They have now and have had, as I said, every bit of this information ever since the Prohibition Unit was established and placed, as it never should have been placed, in the Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department.

It is not a new proposition. When I was Secretary of the Treasury I appeared before the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives in the first instance and protested against confiding these prohibition functions to the Treasury Department. They had no relation to any activity of the Treasury, and there was nothing appropriate in confiding to that department the enforcement of the prohibition laws. My successor at the Treasury, Secretary Houston, in his report to Congress in 1920 even more urgently and in greater detail opposed having the Prohibition Unit in the Treasury Department, and recommended its transfer immediately to the Department of Justice, where all Federal laws are supposed to be considered and enforced.

I shall take leave to insert in the RECORD Secretary Houston's reasons for the proposed transfer.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, permission to do so will be granted.

The matter referred to is as follows:

SECRETARY HOUSTON'S RECOMMENDATION

In November, 1920, Secretary Houston repeated the recommendation that the Treasury should be relieved of the incongruous duty of enforcing the prohibition law and that the bureau should be transferred to the Department of Justice. From Secretary Houston's report is the following:

"The national prohibition act is a penal statute and relates only indirectly to taxes. When this responsibility was placed upon the Commissioner of Internal Revenue he already was carrying a heavy and unusual burden. This will be increased if the revenue act is revised. The duty of searching out and prosecuting offenders under the prohibition law should not be imposed upon an agency that should devote its attention exclusively, as far as possible, to the collection of taxes. If that part of the work which relates to the detection and prosecution of crime should be transferred to some other department, the features of the law which relate to taxes and penalties, as distinguished from fines and punishment which may be imposed through the courts, could be left with the Treasury.

"It is perhaps seldom that departments voluntarily suggest that they be relieved of large powers they are exercising and interesting and important duties they are performing. It is natural that they should cling to their responsibilities. It is hoped that this recommendation will have all the more force because it is unusual. Officials of the Treasury concerned with the supervision of the activities mentioned above are interested in the work and realize its tremendous value to the Nation; and the bureaus and offices themselves are strongly attached to this department. These are considerations of sentiment which I likewise entertain. Very grave problems, however, face the Treasury, and matters of this kind must be decided by the requirements of proper and logical organization. Burdens growing out of the war naturally have fallen principally upon this department. They will continue and will not end until the war debt has been redeemed. The growth of the fiscal work of the Treasury has been unprecedented. The department should be given the opportunity of centering its attention upon its primary functions and should not be encumbered with large activities unrelated to fiscal operations. That is the basis for these proposals. They are offered particularly in contemplation of the establishment of a budget system. If the Budget Bureau is placed in the Treasury, which

I believe is clearly the correct policy, it would seem to be extremely important that this department be relieved of administrative burdens involved in the supervision of the spending services herein discussed. It is hoped that the Congress will give the question serious consideration. If the transfers are made it will be possible to eliminate one Assistant Secretary from the Treasury organization suggested in this report."

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I am directly advised that, while the present Secretary of the Treasury has never made any formal official recommendation with respect to the matter, he also has advocated, from the very beginning of his term, the transfer of the Prohibition Unit from the Internal Revenue Bureau to the Department of Justice; but the late Mr. Wayne B. Wheeler, whom I greatly respected, and his associates in the Anti-Saloon League invariably opposed the transfer. Why, I have never been able even to conjecture, because it is something which so obviously should have long ago been done that I can conceive no reason for the opposition. It has been suggested that the officials of the Anti-Saloon League realized that they had their thumb upon the Prohibition Unit as organized and did not care to permit it to get from under their thumb; but as to that I am not advised.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Virginia permit an interruption?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the junior Senator from Utah?

Mr. GLASS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. KING. I hope the Senator from Virginia will forgive me for the interruption, but I desire to say that when the Volstead Act was before the Subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee—and I happened to be a member of that subcommittee—Wayne B. Wheeler and other representatives of the Anti-Saloon League appeared before the subcommittee. I then moved in the committee to transfer to the Department of Justice the enforcement of the prohibition act, but the Anti-Saloon League representatives opposed the transfer. I shall not pretend to state the reasons which prompted them to do so, but they did oppose it; and they have since relentlessly in the past, as I am advised, continued their opposition to the transfer to the Department of Justice of the enforcement of the act, which is a criminal act; and the Department of Justice should, of course, enforce all criminal statutes.

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President, will the Senator from Virginia yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. BROOKHART. I should like to ask if at the time the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] made the motion to which he has referred Harry M. Daugherty was Attorney General of the United States?

Mr. KING. I confess that I have forgotten the date of the occurrence to which I have referred. Former Senator Knute Nelson, of Minnesota, was then chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate.

Mr. BROOKHART. I think Mr. Daugherty was then Attorney General, and the Anti-Saloon League had good reason not to turn the enforcement of the Volstead Act over to Jess Smith.

Mr. KING. I have no right to trespass upon the time of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], but I was about to say that I agree with the Anti-Saloon League, if that was their view, that Mr. Daugherty, perhaps, was not worthy of the high position which he held, although I do not care to be drawn into that controversy. Obviously, however, the enforcement of criminal statutes belongs to the Department of Justice and not to some little bureau that may be set up somewhere.

Mr. BROOKHART. I concur in that statement.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, as a matter of fact Mr. Mitchell Palmer was Attorney General, I think, when the Volstead Act was enacted; but, be that as it may the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] and perhaps the Senator from Iowa [Mr. BROOKHART], will recall that several years thereafter, when the unfitness of Mr. Daugherty became apparent, that official's resignation was accepted with great regret by the then President of the United States; and, if my recollection is accurate, Mr. Daugherty now is a free man; he is not in jail.

Mr. BROOKHART. That is not my fault.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I do not undertake to say, because I do not know, why the Anti-Saloon League opposed the transfer of the Prohibition Unit from the Internal Revenue Bureau to the Department of Justice. Perhaps the proposed joint committee, if appointed, may be able to ascertain why they have changed their attitude, and apparently now offer no objection to the transfer, or if they have objection that very fact may explain why the President would like to shift the initial responsibility for the transfer from himself to the Congress. Of course, the transfer may not be made without action by Congress; but what Senator does not know it would have been the usual thing for the Attorney General and the law advisers of the Treasury Department and the Department of Labor to have conferred and prepared the necessary legislation to effect the transfer and to have sent the form of such proposed legislation to Congress, with a recommendation from the President that the transfer be made? That would have dispatched the matter and would no longer have delayed the transfer.

However, Mr. President, frankly, my chief purpose in addressing the Senate is to call attention to what I term a "submerged problem"—the problem of effectively enforcing the prohibition laws, regardless of antagonisms from whatsoever sources.

What Senator in this Chamber ever heard during the recent presidential campaign of enforcing any other than the prohibition law? Who heard anything about bank robberies, which were supposed, in the main, to be taken care of by safety vaults? Who ever during that campaign heard a word of enforcing the laws against murder or theft? Who ever heard of enforcing any law except that provision of the Federal Constitution known as the eighteenth amendment and the statutes passed in pursuance thereof?

The Republican National Convention at Kansas City did not concern itself with the enforcement of the laws against murder or robbery or embezzlement or of the other innumerable penal statutes that touch upon the punishment of crime. The Republican National Convention considered and declared for the enforcement of prohibition alone. I read from the platform, which was drafted by the distinguished Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH]. It says:

The people, through the method provided by the Constitution, have written the eighteenth amendment into the Constitution. The Republican Party pledges itself and its nominees to the observance and vigorous enforcement of this provision of the Constitution.

That was all. The Democratic National Convention at Houston considered no other violations of law, and in the law-enforcement clause of its platform, written by me, confined its declaration and its promise to observance of the eighteenth amendment and the enforcement of the statutes passed in pursuance thereof.

For some uncertain purpose—it may be to magnify their own prestige or to confirm certain simple people in the mistaken impression that we have a prohibition Executive—the officials of the Anti-Saloon League persist in calling attention to the President's "vigorous advocacy of the eighteenth amendment and of the Volstead Act." I challenge any man to point to a syllable uttered or a sentence written by the President during the last national campaign, or since, which commits him specifically to the advocacy of the eighteenth amendment or in any wise to unqualified advocacy of the Volstead Act. Point to a syllable uttered or a sentence written that would put him in that attitude! It can not be done. In the campaign the most that he ever said was that he did "not favor the repeal of the eighteenth amendment"; but he nowhere said, nor has he said anywhere since, that he might not, upon inquiry and investigation, advocate modification of the eighteenth amendment. Nowhere, explicitly or implicitly, has he ever said that he is an advocate of the Volstead Act.

Mr. President, when Congress convened in December last, mindful of the fact that the President, in his speech of acceptance as well as in the platform of his party, was obligated to the enforcement of the prohibition laws of the country specifically, I offered an amendment to the first deficiency appropriation bill under the subcaption of the "Bureau of Prohibition" to this effect:

For the purpose of a thorough inquiry into the problem of the enforcement of prohibition under the provisions of the eighteenth amendment of the Constitution and laws enacted in pursuance thereof, together with the enforcement of other laws, $250,000, or as much thereof as may be required, to be expended under authority and by direction of the President of the United States, who shall report the result of such investigation to the Congress, together with his recommendations with respect thereto, said sum to be available for the fiscal years of 1929 and 1930 for each and every object of expenditure connected with such purposes notwithstanding the provisions of any other act.

There is a little unrevealed history connected with that provision of the deficiency appropriation bill. The Republican conferees from the other branch of Congress sought to eliminate it altogether—to strike it out. One of them had the effrontery to suggest that it was "a gross discourtesy to the President elect" for a Senator to propose and the Senate to pass an amendment of the deficiency bill which afforded him the means to effectuate the promise that he made during the campaign. Being unable to strike out the provision altogether, attempts repeatedly were made to emasculate it and to make prohibition enforcement the least important item of the provision. That failed; and then, in an unguarded moment, I permitted myself to be persuaded to introduce, parenthetically, the words "together with other laws."

The Senate conferees will recall that I even resisted making the text conjunctive. I objected to having it said "prohibition and other laws." But we did get this parenthetical phrase in there, with no purpose on earth of making "other laws" the major item of investigation, but a mere incident to the "thorough investigation of prohibition under the eighteenth amendment and under statutes passed in pursuance thereof."

What has happened? The parenthesis has been made the main feature of that provision of the deficiency act and prohibition has been forgotten, has been submerged. The President appointed a commission, and the White House did not even know that provision had been made by Congress for paying the expenses of the commission. When the commission was appointed and first assembled at the White House, there was given out, through the Associated Press, this statement:

> Since Congress has provided no funds, the commissioners must serve without pay, at least at the start, and their expenses will have to be taken care of out of the White House contingent fund until Congress can appropriate the necessary money. This probably will be done at the present special session on the ground of an emergency situation requiring action.

That was not a random newspaper report. It was a statement authorized at the White House, where apparently it was not known that the Congress had appropriated $250,000 for the purpose of a thorough inquiry into the problem of enforcing prohibition, and had required the President to "report to Congress the result of such investigation, together with his recommendations." The White House persisted in that statement until 12 o'clock noon of the following day, when they were shown this provision of the deficiency act of the last Congress.

Now, take the address made by the President to his commission when first assembled. I challenge any Senator to read it through and say that he could know from that address that there was any such thing as a prohibition problem in America. The term was not mentioned by the President. Take the responsive address of Mr. Wickersham, chairman of the commission, and no one may tell from it that prohibition, or anything akin to prohibition, is a problem in this country. These omissions could not have been merely coincident. Obviously they must have been agreed on.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FESS in the chair). Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. GLASS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. NORRIS. Has the Senator those two addresses?

Mr. GLASS. I have.

Mr. NORRIS. Will the Senator put them in his remarks? I should be glad if the Senator would read them. They are not long.

Mr. GLASS. I will insert them in the RECORD. I would not detain the Senate by reading them; but the Senator may rely upon my statement that the word "prohibition" does not occur in either the President's address to his commission or the responsive speech of Mr. Wickersham, the chairman of the commission.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield further, I think those addresses are both very short. I do not think it would be uninteresting to the Senate, in fact I feel that the Senator could not put in his time better than to read those addresses and have them appear with his address in the RECORD.

Mr. GLASS. I thought I had them here, but I seem not to have them. I had them among my papers with the intention of reading them; but I will insert them in the RECORD, so that the Senator may see that I have stated the case with precision.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia ask for their insertion in the RECORD?.

Mr. GLASS. I ask leave to have them inserted at the end of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit A.)

Mr. GLASS. The thing I am stressing now is the fact that the prohibition problem, for the investigation of which primarily the $250,000 were appropriated, has been literally submerged; and the public press, in its commentaries upon the meeting at the White House—The New York Times, notably—said editorially that we might as well dismiss from our minds the idea that the President's commission is to bother a great deal with prohibition enforcement; and the President himself, in his address before the Associated Press in New York, minimized, if he did not actually vitiate, the importance of the major problem by declaring textually that it was a mere "segment" of the investigation to be had—a mere "segment" of the investigation to be had!

What is it that the President has proposed? What is the problem that he has confided to this commission? Why, the stupendous task of investigating all lawlessness in this country, and of a readjustment or a reorganization of judicial procedure in the United States—something that is just as impossible of accomplishment, I venture to say, in my lifetime or in the President's tenure of office, as anything of which I can think—the investigation and reorganization of judicial procedure; not merely Federal judicial procedure, which is the only thing that is within the jurisdiction of the Congress, but the reorganization and adjustment of judicial procedure in 48 States of the Union!

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. GLASS. Just a moment. And the information afforded me by the research bureau of Congress is to the effect that for every crime committed within the jurisdiction of the Federal Government there are 10 crimes committed within the jurisdiction of the State governments.

I am citing these facts to show the Senate how completely this major problem of effectively enforcing the prohibition laws has been ignored, has been literally submerged, in order—well, I will not say that; I will not say "in order" to shift responsibility for the determination of a perplexing question, but at least with that inevitable result.

I now yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. CARAWAY. The Senator has just discussed the matter about which I was going to ask him.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I am no fanatical prohibitionist. I am no unreasoning, vituperative zealot. I have always refrained from drink and always have voted, whenever opportunity presented, for the extermination of the liquor traffic; but I have never permitted any ecclesiastical despot, by threat or otherwise, to control either my thought or my conduct on this vital problem.

I am, honestly, for the enforcement of the prohibition laws, and for that thorough inquiry provided by the deficiency appropriation act into the problem. We should ascertain whether or not these laws may effectively be enforced, and, if not, what remedies the President proposes.

I had ascribed to the President of the United States, of course, both sincerity of purpose and the courage of his convictions on this question. I had believed that he meant what he said when he declared that "common sense required us to recognize that abuses had occurred under the existing statutes," and that inquiry must be made and the abuses corrected. I wanted to know, and I assumed that Congress wanted to know, or it would not have appropriated $250,000 to ascertain, what the President's commission thinks should be done with respect to existing laws, or the enactment of other laws, and what the President was willing to recommend with respect to those things. But his commission and the President himself appear to have gone as far afield as it is possible to do.

Reorganize judicial processes and procedure to stop embezzlements, and bank robberies; to punish murders swiftly and abate the activities of highwaymen; to amend immoralities generally? Reorganize the judicial systems of 48 States and of the United States, when for five years—I think that long—there has been before Congress one single suggestion, over and over again approved by the American Bar Association, led by the Chief Justice of the United States, to confide to the Supreme Court itself authority to adopt rules which it was thought would expedite justice and rid the court dockets of innumerable cases. For five years that simple suggestion has been resisted here and defeated. Yet here a commission has been incredibly embarked on the task, literally impossible of accomplishment within a reasonable time, of reorganizing the judicial procedure of the United States and the States of the Union!

If prohibition is never enforced until that shall have been done, those who quarrel with the law and extenuate its violation need distress themselves no further. If prohibition is never effectively enforced until this reorganization occurs there will be grave disappointment on the part of those who entertain the honest conviction that the laws should be enforced. If the laws as they exist are not enforceable, we should have the discernment upon inquiry so to ascertain, and the courage, within the limitations of the Constitution, to enact laws which may be enforced.

Let us see what is the attitude of the chairman of this law-enforcement commission. He did not mention prohibition in his responsive address, and whenever he has mentioned it he has put it aside, as the President did in his speech in New York, as a mere "segment" of the stupendous problems the commission must consider.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an inquiry.

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. WATSON. Does the Senator think it is the duty of the Treasury Department to enforce prohibition?

Mr. GLASS. To enforce it?

Mr. WATSON. That is to say, that the enforcement of prohibition should be intrusted to the Treasury Department?

Mr. GLASS. The Senator did not hear me when I stated at the very outset that as Secretary of the Treasury I had appeared before the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives and urged them not to confide this function to the Treasury Department but to confide it to the Department of Justice, where it properly belongs.

Mr. WATSON. And the Senator is now in favor of that transfer?

Mr. GLASS. I always have been.

Mr. WATSON. So have I.

Mr. GLASS. But if the President thinks it ought to be transferred, he ought to be willing to take the responsibility of saying so, and have his competent law advisers frame legislation that would enable us speedily to make the transfer, so that the laws might be more efficiently enforced. That is what I advocate.

To revert to the attitude of Mr. Wickersham——

Mr. WATSON. Will the Senator pardon me for another question?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. WATSON. If this resolution should be passed, would it be possible for the joint committee appointed to recommend that the President be given power to reallocate these departments having reference to prohibition enforcement?

Mr. GLASS. That could have been done six weeks ago. That could have been done a week after the Congress was called in extraordinary session. The President himself might have had his law officers prepare the proper bill, and sent it to the Congress, and have had it passed.

Mr. WATSON. I agree that the Senator is making a very wise suggestion, that this power should be lodged with the President, but this resolution does not so provide, and this is the only thing we have before us now to deal with on the subject.

Mr. GLASS. Yes.

Mr. WATSON. Let me ask the Senator again whether or not, if we pass this resolution, it will be possible for the committee thus appointed under this provision to suggest that the President have the power to make this allocation?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, may I ask, in that connection, why the President's commission has not already that authority? I am asking for information.

Mr. WATSON. I would like to have that answered, too.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee reporting the resolution whether or not this would result in a duplication of authority, whether the statute referred to by the Senator from Virginia does not give the most comprehensive powers over the whole subject to the President's commission. I ask the chairman of the committee that question, with the permission of the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. GLASS. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. JONES. The Senator from Arkansas seems to be looking at me. This resolution was reported by the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I ask the Senator in charge of the resolution.

Mr. JONES. I suppose that the commission would probably make recommendations.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. If there is a doubt about it I would like to have the Senator from Washington say so.

Mr. JONES. Let me tell the Senator what I had in mind, and I think it was what the President had in mind. We want to expedite this matter.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Just a moment.

Mr. GLASS. Right there, if the President really wanted to expedite the matter, the way to have expedited it was to have expedited it. The proper thing would have been for the President to have his capable officers of the law prepare a bill and send it to the Congress, and recommend it, and take the responsibility of recommending that it be enacted right away; we would have had it on the statute books, perhaps, by now.

Mr. JONES. I am not so sure we would have been able to do that in this extra session. There was quite a difference of opinion as to what should really be done. I think the President is earnestly and sincerely desirous of promoting expeditious action; and that from what he had learned, possibly, from different people, he thought this was the wise way to do it. I am inclined to think so myself.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Washington a further question?

Mr. GLASS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The statute authorizing the creation of a President's commission was just as broad as it could be made. I read from it:

> For the purposes of a thorough inquiry into the problem of the enforcement of prohibition under the provisions of the eighteenth amendment of the Constitution and laws enacted in pursuance thereof, together with the enforcement of other laws, $250,000, or as much thereof as may be required, to be expended under authority and by direction of the President of the United States, who shall report the result of such investigation to the Congress together with his recommendations with respect thereto.

That authority is just as broad as human language can make it. Is it not true that the President's commission has the power to report at any time on the subject matter of the Senator's resolution; and if that is true, why is it necessary to create an additional commission? The President's commission was given $250,000, and now we are asked to create another commission to inquire into the same subject matter. It is true that the jurisdiction of the commission provided for in the resolution under consideration would be narrower than is that of the President's commission, but the President's commission comprehends the whole subject. Why is it necessary to duplicate the authority and thus divide responsibility? I am asking for information.

I thought when we passed the statute embodying the provisions referred to by the Senator from Virginia, and just quoted, we were giving the President all the power Congress could give him, and an adequate fund, to investigate the whole subject of prohibition enforcement. Of course, the President at any time can submit to Congress a recommendation for the transfer of this enforcement authority from one department to another, or he might have authority to make the transfer even under existing law.

What I want to know from the Senator from Washington is whether the President asks this additional legislation and, if he does, in view of the broad authority he already has, why does he ask it? Has he lost confidence in his own commission, and has the President come back to Congress and asked for the creation of a new commission to do the very thing, among others, that his own commission is authorized to pass upon?

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

Mr. JONES. I did not intend to interrupt——

Mr. GLASS. Right on that point, I will ask the Senator from Arkansas whether he does not think that under that provision of the first deficiency act of the last Congress, passed in February of this year, the President would not have complete justification for sending up to Congress a proposed statute drafted by his Attorney General or his law advisers authorizing him to make the transfer from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Without doubt.

Mr. GLASS. That is what I said, and that would have expedited the matter.

Mr. KING and Mr. FLETCHER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. GLASS. I will yield first to the Senator from Utah, who has addressed the Chair previously.

Mr. KING. The Senator from Indiana [Mr. WATSON] a moment ago indicated that there was not anything before us upon which we could act; at least, I drew that conclusion from what he said. I want to say to the Senator that there is a bill pending now before the Judiciary Committee, and has been for some months, which was first introduced away back in 1922, to transfer to the Department of Justice the enforcement of the prohibition act, so that the Judiciary Committee has that measure before it. The Immigration Committee has from time to time had its attention challenged by the Secretary of Labor to some amendments necessary to aid in enforcing the immigration law along the borders. So that measures are now pending before the committees and there is no necessity of creating a special committee when we have the Judiciary Committee and the Immigration Committee, who can deal with the matters referred to in the resolution under consideration.

Mr. GLASS. I yield now to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. FLETCHER. It might throw a little light on the subject if I should read from the President's inaugural address. Under the head of national investigation he said:

I propose to appoint a national commission for a searching investigation of the whole structure of our Federal system of jurisprudence—

Mr. GLASS. I called attention to that impossible task.

Mr. FLETCHER. He continued:

To include the method of enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and the causes of abuse under it. Its purpose will be to make such recommendations for reorganization of the administration of Federal laws and court procedure as may be found desirable. In the meantime it is essential that a large part of the enforcement activities be transferred from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice as a beginning of more effective organization.

Mr. GLASS. That could have been done months ago had the President sent a bill to Congress to facilitate the matter. What I am trying to do now, if I may, as an earnest and straightforward prohibitionist, is to rescue the problem of prohibition from the precarious and obscure position in which the President, through his commission, has undertaken to place it. I do not want prohibition thrust aside. I do not want it to be regarded by the President nor by the presiding genius of his Commission on Crime as a mere "segment" of the law-enforcement problem.

Mr. Wickersham made an address at New Haven, Conn., very recently showing clearly that he agrees with the President that the commission is not to bother itself much about prohibition enforcement. He agrees with the President that prohibition is a mere "segment" of the problem, because he said:

Most people seem to believe that the commission will devote itself almost entirely to a consideration of the enforcement of prohibition.

That is all they talked about in the presidential campaign. All we talked about in the Senate when we appropriated the $250,000 to make a thorough inquiry into the problem of prohibition enforcement. But Mr. Wickersham asserts the people are deceived in that belief, because he said:

It is characteristic of the overemphasis on this question that the people should think so. * * * I am quite sure that prohibition adherents may have gone too far. They have become so obsessed with the one idea of enforcing the prohibition law that they have exaggerated its importance in their own minds out of all proportion to its actual significance.

That is a criticism of the President. The President had such an exaggerated notion of the desirability of enforcing prohibition that it was all he talked about during the campaign under the heading of Enforcing the Law. His national convention had such an exaggerated idea of the enforcement of prohibition that that is the only sort of law enforcement it declared for when talking about the problem. This statement by Mr. Wickersham at New Haven is a direct criticism of the President of the United States who made him chairman of the commission.

Mr. CARAWAY and Mr. NORRIS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. GLASS. I yield first to the Senator from Arkansas who, I believe, rose first.

Mr. CARAWAY. I should like to have heard Mr. Wickersham make that speech at Roanoke on yesterday. Would not the Senator have liked to have heard it made there?

Mr. GLASS. I do not think it would have affected the situation at Roanoke. Mr. Wickersham did say something that relates to the mass meeting at Roanoke, however.

I yield now to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Wickersham's speech from which the Senator quoted is a criticism not of the President's attitude since he has been elected, but I think could fairly be considered as a criticism of the President's attitude while he was a candidate. Mr. Wickersham criticized him before he took office, but his statement does not imply any criticism of the President's conduct since he has been elected.

Mr. GLASS. No; he agrees with the President now that prohibition is merely a "segment" of the problem.

The junior Senator from Arkansas suggested just now that Mr. Wickersham should not have delivered this address at Roanoke on yesterday. Mr. Wickersham was unkind to the Roanoke mass meeting because the newspaper reporting his address quoted him as follows:

Lamenting the lost power of the church over the people, Mr. Wickersham asserted that the sacerdotal office can no longer impose on or impress any but the unlettered and the intellectually indolent.

That is a rather unkind remark to have made on the eve of that mass meeting in Virginia. That meeting of former Democrats at Roanoke adopted a platform which is said to have been largely written by a Methodist bishop whose sacerdotal robe encompasses the whole bolting movement in the State. Yet Mr. Wickersham is unkind enough to suggest that these former Virginia Democrats, completely controlled by this political prelate, are "unlettered and intellectually indolent." Why, Mr. President, I would not dream of saying that of them.

Mr. President, I have performed as briefly as I could the task which I started out to perform, and that is to show that those in actual authority, charged by law with dealing with this important problem of prohibition enforcement, are apparently undertaking to shift responsibility. They would, it seems, shift initial responsibility to Congress for the simple transfer of the Prohibition Unit from the Treasury, where it never should have been, to the Department of Justice, where it always should have been.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, will my colleague yield for a question?

Mr. GLASS. Certainly.

Mr. SWANSON. As I understand it, the President made a positive and direct recommendation in his inaugural address for this transfer. I noticed at the time in the papers that there was some objection urged from some sources. I understand now he has modified that recommendation and makes another recommendation to the effect that a joint committee of the House and Senate shall be authorized to make investigation and submit a report. Has anyone told us by what authority and right the President desires to change his direct recommendation which went to the Judiciary Committee and on which they have a right to act, and now recommends to the Congress a method of procedure to supersede his own commission and to supersede the Judiciary Committee of the Senate to make a recommendation? Has any excuse been given for this change of front on the part of the President? Does my colleague know of any reason for the change of front?

Mr. GLASS. Only the reason I have suggested, that it may be the President himself does not want to encounter the hostility of certain persistent officials of the Anti-Saloon League, but would like Congress to do the job for him.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GLASS. Certainly.

Mr. BROUSSARD. The Senator from Virginia is the author of the amendment which created the commission appointed by the President.

Mr. GLASS. I was.

Mr. BROUSSARD. I would like to ask the Senator whether in his mind the fact that the commission is proceeding in executive sessions was ever intended by the Senator himself who offered the resolution, or does he think that such a course is justified?

Mr. GLASS. I will say to the Senator that that question did not present itself to my mind. The Senator knows I am a believer in executive sessions of the Senate; but whether it is a feasible thing or whether it is the appropriate thing for a commission charged with such an impossible task as the reorganization of the judicial processes of the United States and all the States thereof to hold open sessions I am not prepared to say, particularly as the prohibition problem has been reduced to a mere "segment." If they were going really to consider the problem of prohibition enforcement, as we supposed and intended, I would like them to have open sessions so that we might know what is going on; but if they are going to devote their time exclusively to this incredible technical task of reorganizing the judicial procedure in the United States and all the States, I do not think the average man would understand what was going on, even if the sessions of the commission should be open.

EXHIBIT A

ADDRESS OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES IN OPENING THE FIRST SESSION OF THE NATIONAL LAW ENFORCEMENT COMMISSION

I propose no extensive address in inducting this commission formally into its duties. Its members have large understanding and long service in the field whose problems it is assembled to study and consider. I have already expressed my views publicly upon its purpose and its necessity.

The American people are deeply concerned over the alarming disobedience of law, the abuses in law enforcement, and the growth of organized crime, which has spread in every field of evildoing and in every part of our country.

A nation does not fail from its growth of wealth or power. But no nation can for long survive the failure of its citizens to respect and obey the laws which they themselves make. Nor can it survive a decadence of the moral and spiritual concepts that are the basis of respect for law, nor from neglect to organize itself to defeat crime and the corruption that flows from it. Nor is this a problem confined to the enforcement and obedience of one law, or the laws of the Federal or State Governments separately. The problem is partly the attitude toward all law.

It is my hope that the commission shall secure an accurate determination of fact and cause, following them with constructive, courageous conclusions which will bring public understanding and command public support of its solutions. The general public approval of the necessity for the creation of this commission and the extraordinary universality of approval of its membership are in themselves evidences of the responsibility that lies upon you and of the great public concern in your task and of the hopes that you may succeed.

I do pray for the success of your endeavors, for by such success you will have performed one of the greatest services to our generation.

RESPONSE OF HON. GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM TO THE OPENING ADDRESS OF THE PRESIDENT

Mr. President, I am confident I express the feeling of all members of this commission when I say we are deeply sensible of the high compliment you have paid us in your invitation to serve as members of a body called to consider a problem the solution of which you regard as more vital to the preservation of our institutions than any other question before the American people.

Every one of us has had occasion, either from the standpoint of the bench, the bar, the office of public prosecutor, the teacher, or the student of public justice, to consider the fundamental questions of human conduct in its relation to law, the character of our laws, and the machinery for law enforcement.

In the light of that experience we realize the gravity of the situation we are called upon to consider. The opinions or conclusions we have formed as the result of such experience will constitute our initial contribution to the solution of the problem submitted to us.

POINTS TO TASK'S MAGNITUDE

But outside of the limits of our own experience—wholly or in part—we understand there is a vast accumulation of records, including statistics, reports, and other material bearing upon the administration of justice, assembled in departments of the National and State Governments which should be examined, analyzed, classified, and studied as bearing upon the matters before us.

There are also many public and private organizations which have been studying questions bearing upon matters involved in our inquiry, and we expect material assistance from them, as well as from other students of our social conditions.

We approach our task with a profound realization of its importance and with minds open to consider on their merits all intelligent suggestions from unprejudiced sources.

We are under no illusions as to the difficulty of our task. We know there is no short cut to the millenium. But we have confidence in the fundamental honesty and right-mindedness of the American people and their readiness to support sound methods of reform when the existence of evils is exposed and practical methods for their eradication submitted to popular judgment.

To the discharge of the undertaking you have devolved upon us we pledge our best endeavors, invoking Divine guidance in the performance of our task.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1537) to amend subdivision (a) of section 1 of the act entitled "An act making it a felony with penalty for certain aliens to enter the United States of America under certain conditions in violation of law," approved March 4, 1929, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

AMENDMENT OF IMMIGRATION LAW

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FESS in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1537) to amend subdivision (a) of section 1 of the act entitled "An act making it a felony with penalty for certain aliens to enter the United States of America under certain conditions in violation of law," approved March 4, 1929, which was, on page 2, line 15, after the word "States," to insert "and prior to March 4, 1929."

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, since this is a matter simply indorsing what has been done, I move that the amendment of the House be concurred in.

The motion was agreed to.

PROGRESS OF PEACE—ADDRESS BY CHARLES E. HUGHES (S. DOC. NO. 19)

Mr. McKELLAR obtained the floor.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee yield to me for one minute?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. MOSES. Out of order, I wish to report an original resolution from the Committee on Printing, and, if unanimous consent shall be granted for its reception, I wish further to ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution reported by the Senator from New Hampshire will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 99), as follows:

Resolved, That the manuscript of a speech entitled "The Year's Major Factors in the Progress of Peace," delivered by Charles Evans Hughes, be printed as a Senate document, and that 1,000 additional copies be printed for the use of the Senate document room.

Mr. MOSES. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and agreed to.

THE TARIFF—A TWO-EDGED SWORD

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I desire to have printed in the RECORD a very able article entitled "Tariff—A Two-Edged Sword," by Alfred Pearce Dennis, vice chairman of the Tariff Commission, which was published in The Saturday Evening Post of June 15, 1929. The article discusses many aspects of the proposed tariff legislation and I believe will be instructive and helpful to the Members of the Congress.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator if the publication will violate the copyright law?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I am not informed as to that. I do not believe that The Saturday Evening Post will object.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

[From the Saturday Evening Post, June 15, 1929]

Let it be understood that the tariff is not a sacred thing; not the Ark of the Covenant which the unfortunate Uzzah was struck dead for touching. The protective tariff represents an economic program to be carried out in the public interest. From the economic standpoint it is a matter of pure expediency whether the duty on a particular article be raised or lowered. If the American farmer can be benefited by raising duties on foreign competitive articles, by all means let the duties be raised. But first be sure that benefit will ensue. The tariff, like a two-edged sword, may cut both ways. Beware of the help that harms!

I can remember when we seriously debated the merits of free trade and protection. Later came the epoch when less was heard of free trade and more of a tariff for revenue. To-day the protective doctrine holds full sway. It has become the corner stone of our national economic policy. We have waxed prosperous under it and it may as well be accepted without debate unless our doctrinaires would substitute the idealisms of Sir Thomas More's Utopia for the realisms of living men and women painfully working out their life wrestle on this planet. In a state of nature the fundamental law of life is how to catch and eat and how to avoid being caught and eaten. If civilized society means anything it means protection for the weak—the thing we call justice. Nature knows no rule of justice.

By every canon of justice the farmer should obtain from our protective system every last atom of advantage that can be extracted from it. The writer was reared on a farm, owns two farms at the present time—though this is nothing to brag about—and is all for the farmer. It may be remarked in an aside that these two farms down on the Eastern Shore of Maryland are "farmed," after a manner of speaking, by tenants who for the past four years have paid no rent whatever. The writer pays the taxes and, in addition, makes all too frequent drafts on his pocketbook to keep the tenants in heart. No privileges, perquisites, cash, or other material emoluments whatsoever susceptible of statistical measurements are received. The rewards, if any, are immaterial. Bismarck's "imponderables," let us say. Farm ownership confers upon one as by letters patent enrollment among the landed gentry. The landed proprietor in all ages enjoys the unctuous satisfaction of looking down on the landless man. Confidentially, my two farms are for sale; no reasonable offer refused. They may be seen at any time not so many miles out from Princess Anne, Somerset County, Md.

Let it be understood that in my observations on the tariff I am speaking from the standpoint of an obscure individual who has had some training as an economist, and not from the standpoint of a petty official.

We are all agreed on the principle that the tariff should be made to confer the utmost capacity of benefit on the farmer. Certainly in the distribution of tariff benefit the farmer should be put on a parity with the tariff-nurtured manufacturer. In this ill-regulated world it is one thing to recognise what ought to be done and quite another thing to turn idealistic theories to practical account. I have foregathered with friends at three International Chamber of Commerce meetings in European cities and heard enough speech making on the evils of artificial trade barriers and the desirability of lowering tariff walls to fill a book the size of the Holy Scriptures. But it all came down to this in the end—everybody favors lower tariffs in principle and higher tariffs in practice; everybody is in favor of lowering everybody's tariff except his own. We live in a fluid world, and it has come about that a party label is no longer a clew to one's tariff sympathies or antipathies. I suppose no man in our history has ever used more words in publicly castigating high tariffs and publicly defending his favorite political cliché—"Equal opportunity for all, special privileges for none"—than the late Colonel Bryan. His daughter, Mrs. RUTH BRYAN OWEN, has just taken her seat in Congress as a Representative from the State of Florida.

"How do you feel, Mrs. OWEN," I queried the other day, "about the Republican program for revising the tariff upward?"

"It interests me keenly," she replied. "The one thing needful for the people down in my district is to get a higher duty on citrus fruits and early spring vegetables."

One of the newest fashions is the novel doctrine that certain robust domestic industries require protection from infinitesimal imports. Friends of the farmer, with the best of intentions, have been urging a higher tariff on Bermuda-grown celery. Our imports of Bermuda celery are only three one-hundredths of 1 per cent of our home production, with not more than 60 or 70 acres on the island devoted to celery growing. The entire island doesn't produce as much celery as a single celery plantation in Florida. The soil area of Bermuda is strictly limited. Our celery imports are a mere trickle. This new doctrine of infinitesimals leads straight to embargoes. If we need more protection against an import of three one-hundredths of 1 per cent, what is really asked for is not protection but exclusion.

But the new doctrine of excluding foreign infinitesimals from our market does not go so far as the novel substitutional doctrine that is being promulgated in these latter days. Old fogies have accepted the doctrine that trade competition is based on likeness or similarity as between the same species of commodity. We are now asked to accept the doctrine of substitutional competition based not on identity of species but upon identity of uses. We grow no bananas for commercial purposes in this country, but we do import some $30,000,000 worth of bananas from the Caribbean countries every year. We have no banana industry to protect, but we do grow apples. The apple, like the banana, is a fruit, and both are grown for edible purposes. Make the banana scarce and expensive enough by raising the tariff, and the banana-craving individual will be compelled to satisfy his taste for fruit by buying apples. "Yes; we have no bananas to-day, but we have something just as good in the form of Oregon apples." Some kill-joy may object that the banana has a field of its own, that it is eaten for its food value rather than its fruit value, that it is essentially a food of our city poor, that it contains more nutriment than the apple, that free-born citizens can not be dragooned into eating one product by making another product more expensive. If the substitutional theory is carried out logically the superfluous sassafras bushes which encumber our fields might be turned to profitable account. Make oriental tea by tariff manipulation scarce and expensive and we may be driven to sassafras-root tea as a substitute. Returning to the banana, we import $30,000,000 worth of bananas from the Caribbean countries, which in turn buy $187,000,000 worth of our agricultural products, such as flour, lard, and canned goods, thus helping our farmer to dispose of his surpluses in these commodities.

Jute is another tropical commodity we do not produce. Jute is the raw material out of which we manufacture cheap twine string and bagging material. We import about 900,000,000 pounds of the stuff annually. It is proposed, in the interest of our cotton growers, to raise the tariff so high that manufacturers of jute twine and bagging will be compelled to turn to cotton as a substitute for jute. Opponents of the proposed tariff on jute declare that the cost, even to the cotton planter, through the increased expense of his bagging material, would more than offset his augmented returns through a better demand for cotton. It is stated that the increased cost to the cotton growers of substituting cotton fiber for jute burlap in baling cotton would run to $7,000,000 yearly.

DESPERATE, DOUBTFUL, HOPEFUL

How would the substitutional theory be applied to olive oil, of which we import 10,000,000 gallons yearly? We produce in circumscribed districts in California and Arizona about 100,000 gallons annually, or approximately 1 per cent of our requirements. We can tax imported olive oil out of our market if it is expedient to do so and supplement our meager outturn of olive oil by other domestic edible oils extracted from peanuts, cotton seed, and corn. Perhaps the world would go on none the worse, but how far can we trifle with the human palate by tariff legislation? When Mehemet Ali raised the tax on Egyptian dates the palm growers of the Nile Valley responded by cutting down their trees.

Lawyers have a way of listing claims due the estate of a decedent in three classes, to wit, desperate, doubtful, hopeful. We may thus classify proposals that have been made to assist the farmer through tariff manipulation. Certain of these proposals may be classified as counsels of desperation, others of problematical merit, others are undoubtedly sound and helpful. The tariff is a 2-edged sword which may cut not only two ways but a dozen ways. To single out an individual item for rate readjustment is sometimes like pulling a thread out of a skein. It entangles a lot of other threads with it.

Take the case of alfalfa seed, which stands alphabetically at the head of the list of farm commodities. Why let an import business worth about $6,000,000 annually go to the foreigner when we are in the alfalfa-seed business ourselves? Of course the farmer who produces seed alfalfa for market would benefit by slowing down foreign competition, but looked at in the light of advantage to our entire agricultural establishment the matter is debatable. We are importing just about one-fifteenth of the alfalfa seed we need. It happens, however, that considerably less than 200,000 farms produce alfalfa and clover seed, while considerably more than 2,000,000 farms produce clover and alfalfa hay, and are under the necessity of purchasing alfalfa and clover seed. Would we benefit our national agriculture by helping the 1 man who sells at the expense of 10 men who must buy?

HELP THAT HARMS

The help that harms! It is proposed to take hides from the free list. How about a duty on hides? We can't begin to supply our own needs, and here lies a great unappropriated market in our own country which we might retain for ourselves. Many of our important farm commodities, such as wheat, corn, cotton, and tobacco, are produced in excess of our home-market requirements. It's hard to protect from foreign competition an industry that is on a heavy export basis. It is a piece of luck, therefore, that we produce a commodity—hides—for which a great latent and unappropriated market exists in our own country. Take hides from the free list and impose a moderately high tariff of, say, 30 per cent ad valorem, or 5 cents a pound green weight. What would follow? Hides are the raw material of which leather is the manufactured product. If a duty is imposed on hides, the existing duty on leather must be revised upward. The price of leather in turn affects the cost of making shoes. We can't stand up under the competition of Czechoslovakian shoes if the crafty Czechs are to enjoy the advantage of cheaper raw material. With dearer leather reflecting dearer hides, we must of necessity advance the duty on shoes. At all hazards avoid being checkmated by the Czechs! The price of shoes, of course, will be affected by the increased duty on leather. How would these increases all along the line affect the American farmer? Our farmers sell, on the average, two and a half hides a year. The maximum profit that would go into the farmer's pocket as a result of a 30 per cent duty on hides would approximate $5.60 per year, as spread over the entire number of farmers engaged in raising cattle and producing hides. But the higher price of hides would be reflected in the increased cost of leather. The average farm family contains three and a half people above 10 years of age. Each of these three and a half persons buys in the course of a year one and a half pairs of work shoes and not less than one pair of Sunday-go-to-meetin' shoes. The added cost to the farmer's family for leather in the shape of belting, harness, and shoes would run to something like $7 annually. Even if the farmer should extract 100 per cent advantage—he probably wouldn't get 90 per cent—from the tariff on hides, he would be debited at the end of the year with a $1.40 loss on the hide-tariff proposition.

Similarly the live-cattle tariff problem is one of those 2-edged-sword problems that are as hard to settle as a theological doctrine. Our cowmen can not agree among themselves as to whether their industry stands to profit or lose by raising the present duty on live steers. Canada ships lean steers across the border to the American farmer who finds it profitable to convert his corn, clover, and alfalfa into beef. This influx of Canadian steers represents about 1½ per cent of the 14,000,000 head of cattle we annually slaughter.

This small importation, profitable to both Canadian farmers and our Corn Belt cattle feeders, is considered an intrusion by cattle breeders of the ranges and they pray to have the existing duty doubled. Which side has the better of the argument. Who shall say? Taking a broad view of the situation, it is well to remember that the 200,000 lean cattle purchased annually of Canada means $13,000,000 of American money sent into Canada, but, against this outflow, $39,000,000 of Canadian money flows into this country for our agricultural machinery. Canada, by the way, is our best customer. Salesmen should have a care not to offend a customer to whom they sell their biggest bills of goods.

Friends of the farmer, with the best of intentions, have been asking a higher duty on eggs in the shell. The existing rate—eight cents a dozen—would seem to be rather effective, since we are importing annually—1927—only 286,000 dozen eggs—principally duck eggs from China—as against our domestic production of 2,162,000,000 dozen. This means one foreign egg to about 7,595 domestic eggs. The juxtaposition of one egg eater, one old woman, one basket of eggs, constitutes an egg market. But suppose the old woman brings to the market not a basket of eggs but 7,595 eggs, or a truck load, and suppose this truck load of fresh eggs is confronted in the market by a single, venerable, pickled duck egg from China. Must the person marketing 7,595 fresh eggs cower before the single intrusive duck egg from the Celestial Kingdom? Will the Chinese duck egg break his market? Will it have any more effect on the market than a lighted parlor match would have upon the polar ice cap?

EGGS TO STOP AN ARGUMENT

I put the case to one of our local intellectuals. "Toads and trollops!" he commented, from which I gathered that he opposed a raise in the egg duty. I asked an opinion of a good friend and wholesouled child of God, Senator BROOKHART, of Iowa.

"But we do raise ducks out in Iowa," commented the Senator, "and that Chinese duck egg is worth going after."

I gathered from this that the Senator approved of the proposed raise in duty. On occasion bad eggs may be used to stop an argument but not so in this case. A woman is a woman, but a good cigar is a smoke. A duck egg is a duck egg, but an egg in the market is good for an omelet. In the matter of foreign competition our egg market appears to be as vulnerable to intrusion as a soft-shell crab.

The proposal to increase the tariff on corn is another one of those 2-edged swords. The present tariff of 15 cents a bushel appears to be fairly adequate, judging by our relatively meager imports. The 2,000,000 bushels of corn we annually import from Argentina compare with a domestic production of nearly 3,000,000,000 bushels. We are the greatest corn-raising country in the world. In the 5-year period, 1923–1927, our output was 13,756,444,000 bushels. We exported during that period 109,807,276 bushels, or an average per year of 21,961,455 bushels; importing during the same period 11,204,146 bushels, or an annual average of 2,240,829 bushels, of which approximately 2,000,000 bushels came from Argentina. One hates to load up a narrative with a lot of figures, but cold statistics are worth any amount of soap-box oratory when it comes to reckoning profit or loss on a business transaction. The imports of foreign corn into the United States in 1926 were one twenty-fifth of 1 per cent, and for 1927 were less than one-fifth of 1 per cent of our national production.

Can this mere trickle of foreign corn be considered harmful competition? The driblets of corn that do seep into this country from Argentina are particularly adapted for feeding pigeons and other small fowl. Argentine corn does not penetrate far inland but is distributed in such coastal markets as San Francisco and New York. Some of our Middle West corn producers object to the enguzzlement of Argentine corn by our seacoast pigeons, and ask to have these driblets of Argentine corn shut off. This proposition does not appeal to the Argentine people, purchasing as they do animal and vegetable products from American farms to the extent of $17,000,000 a year. Our sales to Argentina amount to about $179,000,000 a year, of which $16,000,000 represents agricultural machinery, much of which is used in the cultivation of corn.

KEEPING OUR BUTTER BALANCE

In view of the agitation for increased duties on such Argentine products as corn, flaxseed, hides, the most powerful cooperative rural society in Argentina, and, indeed, in the entire Southern Hemisphere, has started a campaign for discriminatory duties against American automobiles and American machinery.

Oh, if we draw a circle premature,
Heedless of far gain,
Greedy for quick returns of profit, sure
Bad is our bargain.

We import about 8,000,000 pounds of butter and export about half as much. Our adverse trade balance in butter of 4,000,000 pounds is a mere drop in the bucket as contrasted with our domestic output of 2,097,712,000 pounds—1927. For every 2,000 pounds of domestic butter we are turning out we import 1 pound of Danish butter.

Our dairy organizations still complain that this is too much, particularly since the New Zealanders shipped us butter last year to the amount of 3,408,684 pounds. London is the world's great free butter market, and there was not a week last year—1928—in which the London price of Danish butter did not range higher than the price of Danish butter, duty paid, delivered in New York. The same observation holds true for New Zealand butter for 46 out of the 52 weeks of 1928. Our dairymen have been worrying for a good many years over the competition of Danish butter, but our takings of Danish butter in the last statistical year for which figures are available—1927—were 1,102,940 pounds, valued at $462,399. In the same year we sold to the Danes American farm products to the tune of $24,728,380, the largest items in the bill being corn and cottonseed cake, to be converted by that most wonderful of transforming stations—the cow—into butter.

Beset with dubieties and uncertainties as to whether an increase on a particular duty will really help American agriculture, we find our feet on fairly firm ground with respect to about 20 items. Some of these items are: Spices, such as hot red peppers and mustard seed; canned vegetables—tomatoes and pimientos; various nuts—almonds, walnuts, filberts, peanuts; winter vegetables—tomatoes, green peppers, fresh peas, string beans; dairy products—milk and cream—on recommendation of the Tariff Commission the duty has recently been raised on both butter and Swiss cheese; onions—on recommendation of the Tariff Commission the duty on onions has recently been raised. The increased duty on onions benefited onion growers in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Virginia, Texas, California, Utah, Idaho, Washington, and Colorado—farmers whose incomes had suffered through heavy imports of onions from Spain and the Nile Valley. Similarly, the President, after investigation by the Tariff Commission, raised the duty on wheat from 30 cents to 42 cents a bushel. Though the increased duty affected all wheat, it benefited mainly the hard spring wheat producer in North and South Dakota, Minnesota, and Montana.

Despite an annual wheat surplus of some 150,000,000 bushels, we have not been growing enough hard spring wheat and must import Canadian wheat for blending purposes. The higher duty has cut imports and increased our production of hard spring wheat correspondingly.

Our peanut crop is not to be sniffed at; it is by no means a picayune industry. Last year we turned out a crop of 867,000,000 pounds. With imports running in some years as high as 100,000,000 pounds, this means an unappropriated market margin of several million dollars for our tariff makers to play with. Recently the President substantially increased our peanut duty on recommendation of the Tariff Commission. The States that benefit from the increased duty are Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Texas.

ROBBING PETER TO PAY PAUL

Similarly the Tariff Commission has reported to the President a rate of duty that should equalize the cost of producing canned tomatoes. Our imports of canned tomatoes—principally from Italy—have risen from 11,500,000 pounds to 93,646,672 pounds last year—1928. One can readily understand that our tomato growers in New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Indiana, Ohio, Utah, and California stand to gain by putting a curb on imports.

Down in Louisiana we have some impoverished white folks locally known as Cajuns who have learned from bitter experience that growing cotton, corn, and sugar cane is no insurance against the poorhouse. These simple folks have turned their attention to growing tropical spices. In 1928 they produced 1,000,000 pounds of dried red peppers. But they will have a hard scrabble of it unless they are adequately protected from tropical peppers grown in Africa, India, and the Malay Peninsula.

One of the most picayune articles of commerce is a grain of mustard seed. But even the tiny mustard seed, according to the Scriptures, is capable of germinating and producing a tree sizable enough to provide a roost for the fowls of the earth. The infant mustard-seed industry, just emerging from its swaddling clothes, is being developed in California, Idaho, and Montana, but it must have adequate protection from foreign competition.

As to green winter vegetables, Florida and Texas stand to gain by having a curb put on the influx of winter vegetables from Mexico, Cuba, and the Bahama Islands. Despise not the day of small things. The tomato—love apple as it was whimsically called 50 years ago—has risen from the position of a wallflower freak to that of the belle of the vegetable ball. Its use is extending all over the world.

In England, where it can not be grown successfully out-of-doors, it is being propagated on a broad scale under glass. In 1923 we imported less than 50,000,000 pounds of winter-grown raw tomatoes. In 1927 the imports had risen to 132,000,000 pounds. Florida, Texas, and Louisiana would undoubtedly benefit from a higher tariff on fresh tomatoes and green peppers.

The soy bean offers wide possibilities on the side of farm relief. In portions of the Corn Belt infested by the borer the soy bean may be used as a substitute cash crop. As a leguminous plant its cultivation improves the soil. Great quantities of soy-bean oil can be used both in the paint industry and for food. Soy-bean cake is a valuable adjunct to our dairy industry. Each prospers by a firm and fast alliance.

The expansion of flaxseed growing offers wide opportunities for the diversification and enrichment of our national agriculture. Our flaxseed production is concentrated in the States of North and South Dakota, Minnesota, and Montana. We split about 50–50 with the foreigner in supplying our consumptive needs. That portion of our home market yet unappropriated by the farmer would amount, let us reckon, to about 20,000,000 bushels, which would mean a return to the industry of nearly $50,000,000 a year. Greater expansion of our flaxseed industry would serve to divert some of our farmers from wheat, of which we have an annual surplus of something like 150,000,000 bushels. We hear this season, for the first time, of flax plantings in the East. The two Eastern Shore counties of Virginia are trying it out experimentally. If the growing of flaxseed were made more profitable, flax culture would no longer be localized in the northwestern parts of the country. Under the evolution of the industry, mills have gone to flaxseed rather than flaxseed to the mills. Mill concentrations may be found in the Minneapolis-St. Paul district hard by domestic flaxseed farms, while other mills depending upon raw material from Argentina have sprung up on the Atlantic seaboard. The flaxseed farmer can be clearly benefited by increasing the present duty of 40 cents a bushel.

But again the flash of the 2-edged sword! How about the great mass of American farmers who are not interested in the production of flaxseed? Flaxseed is the source of linseed oil, which in turn goes into the paint that covers the farmer's frame buildings and the linoleum that goes on his kitchen floor.

George Sand remarks in one of her novels: "In this ill-regulated world of ours all happiness seems a theft, since we can not enjoy our peace and security but to the detriment of our fellow creatures."

By an ironical turn of fate it seems that we can't confer tariff benefit on a particular group of our farm population without risking injury to other groups of our population. The farmer's answer to this is that under our protective system special classes have benefited through tariff favors for years and years, and it is high time the farmers were getting a look-in.

CULTIVATED AND UNCULTIVATED LANDS

How about raising the duty on beef? Here's a deficiency article. With our population expanding fanwise our beef resources remain stationary or decline. This would seem to offer a pretty clear case for farm benefit through the tariff. Our cattle men are in a strong position. Up to 20 years ago we were on a heavy beef-export basis, but our herds have dwindled as our frontiers have receded. Cattle raised on cultivated lands can not compete in cost with cattle turned out to prog for their living on prairies and mountain slopes. With our disappearing frontiers we can not longer compete in the world market with frontier countries such as Brazil, Argentina, Australia, and New Zealand. Being on a deficiency basis, a higher duty on beef would be helpful at this time but for the fact that we do not need it. We have something more effective. Argentine beef is excluded from the country by our Department of Agriculture because of the presence of the foot-and-mouth disease in Argentina. So long as the foot-and-mouth disease exists in Argentina we are immune from competition from that country. We have been hearing much complaint of the competition of Argentine corn, but by an ironical turn of fortune, and much to the confusion of our enterprising entomologists, Argentina has suffered not at all from infestation of the corn borer, while the dratted insect has descended upon us in the most copiously offensive fashion.

Now as to the proposition of putting more money in the pockets of the American farmers through raising the wool duty: The thing can be done if we are willing to pay the price in an increased toll taken out of the purchasers of woolen clothing and woolen blankets. At present our farmers raising sheep number about 1,000,000. It would be a wonderful help to our national agriculture if we could double this number. Our sheep population has increased 9,000,000 since 1922. With better breeds and better attention, the wool clip has increased one-third over what it was seven years ago. On the general farm of, say, 160 acres a flock of about 50 ewes could be kept without interfering appreciably with any other farm enterprise. There is much roughage on every farm, much that goes to waste, much meadow and rough land, all of which could be turned to profitable account by sheep breeders.

TOO MANY DOGS

Returning from an excursion down Chesapeake Bay on the Mayflower, the writer settled himself comfortably on a settee to enjoy without intrusion the beauty of the soft May afternoon as the stately vessel slowly steamed up the Potomac River. Mr. Coolidge, then Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, approached quietly—he does everything quietly—seated himself by my side and remained silent in all languages. He had something on his mind.

"These hills along the river remind me somewhat of our country Down East. But I don't see any sheep on the farms," he rasped, with an injured droop to the corners of his mouth.

"Well, you wouldn't, because these farmers over in St. Marys County, Md., have never gone in for much except corn and tobacco since Colonial times."

"But why don't they have more enterprise," he queried, "and go in for sheep raising?"

"It's a matter of inertia and the presence of countless dogs. At least half the population are negroes. They find some compensation for the lack of liquid capital in the possession of numerous dogs. Dogs and sheep don't go together."

"Somebody ought to get them either to kill the worthless dogs or run dog-proof fences around their pasture lands. Now, my father kept a bunch of sheep on our Vermont farm and, taking it year in and year out, made a good thing out of sheep raising. There was hardly a year he didn't realize anywhere from fifty to seventy-five dollars clear profit on his sheep."

A good thing out of sheep raising! Let it be observed that our sheepmen are entering upon their ninth consecutive year of prosperity. It undoubtedly would be highly profitable for many small farmers to maintain small flocks of sheep on their farms.

We may confer through the tariff a huge benefit upon the beet and cane sugar producers of 20 States if we are willing to pay the price. The situation suggests Mussolini's proposal to make Italy independent of foreign wheat supplies. Italy fails by 40 per cent of producing enough wheat to satisfy its teeming population. Sufficient wheat can be grown at home if the Italians are willing to pay the price. Get the domestic price level up to, say, $3 a bushel by curbing imports and the Italian contadini will do the rest. But how about the 40,000,000 Italians who must pay two or three times more for their daily bread?

We have the widest unappropriated domestic market in sugar of any important farm commodity. We are barely producing one-sixth of our huge requirements. We import duty free from our colonial possessions—Porto Rico, the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines—about 1,700,000 tons. We import, in addition, 4,000,000 tons of foreign sugars. If, through tariff manipulation, we made beet and cane growing sufficiently profitable we could yearly put several hundred million dollars more in the pockets of the American farmer. The profits, too, would far outrun the cash returns, since beet culture enriches the soil and beet pulp feeds directly into our dairy industry. In brief, we could doubly diversify through expansion of our beet-sugar industry.

The Europeans appreciate the potentialities of beet growing in their agrarian policies, as all European countries with the exception of Greece, Turkey, and Norway cultivate sugar beets. It is vain to warn the American farmer against concentrating on such surplus crops as corn and cotton and practice diversification by growing beets, if beet growing can't stand up under the competition of cheaply produced tropical cane sugar. Beet growing in this country is associated with highly intensive agriculture and has made headway in such States as California, Utah, Colorado, and Idaho, where the crop is grown under irrigation. Indeed, the sugar beet, along with fruit, constitutes the sheet anchor of irrigated agriculture in the far West.

Now, as to the price we shall have to pay for conferring millions upon our raw-sugar industry through raising the tariff, say, to a point that will place the business of beet and cane growing on a stable base of prosperity. First, it will mean an increased charge laid upon every man, woman, and child in the United States. It would be hard to think of a living soul who doesn't use some sugar in some form. Let somebody else try to compute the amount in millions based on per capita consumption of about 108 pounds of sugar by the American people. If the tariff were raised 2 cents a pound, there's a bill of about $432,000,000 which the public would have to pay. This includes, of course, the present duty of 1.76 cents per pound on Cuban imports. This is a rather heavy bill to pay when it is remembered that the value of our entire farm production of sugar cane and sugar beets is less than $75,000,000. Aside from the consumers, the parties in adverse interest are legion. Think of our dollars invested in Cuba, running quite over a billion, with the big sugar refineries and the huge soft drink, ice cream, baking, and confectionery industries, heavily interested on the side of cheap sugar.

If beet growing could be made as profitable to our farmers as to growers in Belgium, Poland, and Czechoslovakia, it would be a huge benefit to American agriculture.

In contrast to our full duty on raw sugar—2.2 cents a pound—and the Cuban preferential duty—1.76 cents a pound—Poland imposes a raw-sugar duty of 4.57 cents, Czechoslovakia 4.53 cents, Belgium 5.72 cents. Brazil tolerates no nonsense about sugar imports, exacting a levy of more than 17 cents a pound on raw sugar of foreign origin. England taxes imported raw sugar nearly 2 cents a pound, and in addition subsidizes domestic beet growing. Sugar is the only important food commodity that is selling in this country below its pre-war index. Is it fair, asks the beet grower, to expect us to produce an essential food that fetches in the market less than the 1913 index—100—while we are compelled to buy our labor and our supplies on the general commodity price index of 147? Can't the farmer be put on at least a parity with the work animal and be entitled to his keep? Can he be asked to labor and sweat for the urban consumer for less than a decent wage any more than the factory worker should be asked to labor for less than a living wage?

As between conflicting interests, who shall judge? Well, Congress is judging as I write—April 30—and Congress will perhaps have enunciated its will before these words will have appeared in print. It will be interesting to see what Congress does about hides, butter, eggs, corn, wool, sugar—what will be the tariff resultant as between powerful forces pulling in different directions. The House Committee on Ways and Means has taken 12,000 closely printed pages of testimony. These men up on Capitol Hill know what they are about. They know that sick men can not be cured by bread pills and that hungry men can not be nourished by pious platitudes. It is safe to prophesy that the farmer will receive substantial help through increased duties on such deficiency products as wool, soy beans, sugar, flaxseed, and winter vegetables. One may also predict that certain enthusiastic spokesmen for the farmer will not be satisfied whatever tariff benefit is conferred upon the farmer by the bill that is now being written.

Quoting from memory, and no doubt with verbal inaccuracy, Herbert Spencer has observed: While admitting that the fanatic must have great immediate results as a stimulus to his hopes, the man of sense, knowing how much there is to be done and how difficult the means for its accomplishment, will be content to labor on with greatly moderated expectations, so uniting philanthropic energy with philosophic calm.

ESTATE OF C. C. SPILLER, DECEASED

Mr. BROOKHART. From the Committee on Claims I report back favorably with amendments the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 58) to repeal an act approved March 2, 1929, entitled "An act for the relief of C. C. Spiller, deceased," and to provide for the relief of the estate of C. C. Spiller, deceased, and I submit a report (No. 36) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I join in the request of the Senator from Iowa, for the reason that the joint resolution, which has passed the House and come over to the Senate, has been amended slightly by the Committee on Claims. It refers to a claims measure which has heretofore been passed. The House allowed attorney's fees of 5 per cent but the Senate committee has reported amendments to increase the fees which may be allowed to 20 per cent. I hope that the amendments of the committee will be adopted by the Senate and that the joint resolution may be passed and sent to the other House immediately, so that body may act on it before it takes a recess this afternoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The amendments of the Committee on Claims were, on page 2, line 15, before the words "per cent," to strike out "5" and insert "20"; and in line 21, before the words "per cent," to strike out "5" and insert "20," so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That the act approved March 2, 1929, entitled "An act for the relief of the estate of C. C. Spiller, deceased," being Private Act No. 532, Seventieth Congress, be, and the same is hereby, repealed: Be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the estate of C. C. Spiller, deceased, late of Hamilton County, Tenn., the sum of $8,000, found to be due him by the Court of Claims in congressional case No. 10549, as appears by Senate Document No. 173, Fifty-ninth Congress, second session, being his share of the reasonable charter value, together with the destruction thereof, of a small steamboat known as the Paint Rock taken and used by the United States, and while in their possession accidentally destroyed and never paid for, all while the said C. C. Spiller, deceased, was a loyal citizen of the United States, as evidenced by the findings or report dated June 27, 1864, of a board of claims designated by the commanding officer of the Department of the Cumberland by Special Field Orders No. 104, dated April 12, 1864, still of record in the War Department: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this joint resolution in excess of 20 per cent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered or advances made in connection with said claim: Provided further, That it shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum which in the aggregate exceeds 20 per cent of the amount appropriated in this joint resolution on account of services rendered or advances made in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this joint resolution shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $4,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the joint resolution to be read a third time.

The joint resolution was read the third time and passed.

NAVAL DISARMAMENT, REPARATIONS, AND FOREIGN DEBTS

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the proposed visit of Premier MacDonald to America, should it take place, will be a notable event. Ordinarily I take little interest in British elections. In the one which has just been held, however, I felt a very great interest. I rejoiced to see Mr. MacDonald and the Labor Party win. He has been the outstanding labor champion in Great Britain for many years. He is surely the people's representative. He is, in my opinion, an earnest and sincere advocate of peace among the nations of the world. His election brings about a new era in Great Britain, and, I believe, a better era. I was, indeed, happy to see him win.

Mr. President, the press gives us the news of the very great haste of Ambassador Dawes to see the new Premier, all of which is very fine. It is supposed that he delivered the invitation from our Government to Premier MacDonald to visit America soon in the interest of disarmament. And all this is very fine. We want to disarm. America for the last 15 or 20 years has done everything within her power to bring about disarmament, and especially naval disarmament. But, Mr. President, we must all remember—indeed, many of us can never forget—the so-called disarmament conference of 1922.

DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE OF 1922

Of all the disarmament fiascoes that ever happened in the history of the world the disarmament fiasco of 1922 was the greatest. I say it was a fiasco. It was a fiasco for America, for as a result of that so-called disarmament conference while America disarmed, while she sank her new and splendid ships, which would have made her the equal of Great Britain on the seas, Great Britain sank no ships the loss of which would have interfered with her mastery of the seas. So that, Mr. President, if the proposed visit of the Premier is for the purpose of entering into another such disarmament agreement I want to say that while I should be very happy personally to welcome the great Labor Premier of Great Britain I should be wholly unwilling to approve an agreement by which Great Britain would be permitted to control the seas in the future.

But it is claimed that Mr. MacDonald is the earnest advocate of freedom of the seas. If that be true, it will be wholly unnecessary for him to come to America, as glad as we would be to have him come, in order to obtain the freedom of the seas. His Government holds that matter in its own hands. His ministry can obtain the freedom of the seas almost in the twinkling of an eye. All his Government will have to do will be to reduce British naval armament to what we supposed it had been reduced in 1922 and the freedom of the seas will soon be an accomplished fact.

We must remember, Mr. President, that in 1922 the press of the world told us that we were going to have disarmament and that Great Britain's navy would be reduced and America's would be reduced until they were on a parity—5 and 5; that Japan's would be as 3 to 5; but that Great Britain's navy and our navy would be the same. That is what the newspapers told us, that is what propaganda told us, but when the agreement was signed it was found that Great Britain retained the greatest navy in the world, while the United States sank the greatest navy in the world, and probably placed herself on a 3 to 5 basis with England—not much, if any more, than that.

Now, Mr. President, in the utmost kindness, in the utmost good feeling, because the English people are our kinsmen, for whom we have the greatest respect, consideration, and even affection, let me say that we must not have a repetition of the disarmament treaty of 1922; and if Mr. MacDonald feels that he is going to obtain a continuation of that treaty beyond its present limitations, or that he is going to get a new treaty in which the United States agrees that Great Britain shall continue to control the seas, I am inclined to believe that he will be mistaken.

MUST BE AN OPEN COVENANT

Mr. President, any agreement with Great Britain on disarmament, after our experience in 1922, must be, in the words of the late President Wilson, "an open covenant, openly arrived at." It can not be reached by secret parleys. We must know exactly what Great Britain proposes before we agree to her version of the freedom of the seas. The so-called 5-5-3 agreement is too fresh in our minds to agree to a freedom-of-the-seas agreement "sight unseen."

Mind you, Mr. President, I am not blaming the statesmen of Great Britain for obtaining the disarmament conference agreement of 1922. They thought it to their interest to obtain it. It was manifestly to their interest to obtain it. If a nation such as the United States had built the greatest navy in the world, and the statesmen of Great Britain thought it was inimical to their interest, it was perfectly proper for them by agreement to have the United States sink the greatest navy in the world; but, in my judgment, the naval disarmament treaty of 1922 was not a peace treaty. It did not make for peace. It did not make for disarmament. Of course, any nation can disarm; but when a great nation such as America disarms, leaving her great commercial rival armed, I doubt whether it makes for peace at all. It is said that it is inconceivable that these two great English-speaking peoples should ever engage in war again. It is almost inconceivable, Mr. President; but if such is the fact, why can not these two great English-speaking peoples live together on terms of equality? Why should one desire to be armed to the teeth on the seas and at the same time desire that the other great English-speaking people sink all their war vessels on the seas? Frankly, Mr. President, the only way to keep peace in the world is for Great Britain and America to have navies of equal size and strength and agree that the seas shall be free both in time of war and in time of peace. Whenever Great Britain is willing to do this, if she will let America know her desire, America will accept the proposal instantly. But there must not be a newspaper agreement for the public and a treaty agreement giving one of the nations all the advantage. We must stand upon terms of absolute equality.

THE REPARATIONS AGREEMENT

Mr. President, remembering the 1922 disarmament agreement, I am rather inclined to believe that our English cousins have something more in mind than a new agreement for the freedom of the seas. A new reparations agreement has just been concluded between Germany and her former enemies. America is not a party to that agreement.

It is true that American financiers, acting in a private capacity, are supposed, by the American press at any rate, to have engineered that agreement. It may be a splendid agreement for the Allies and for Germany. I sincerely hope it is. I would not put anything in their way in such a matter for anything on earth; but, Mr. President, there is a provision in that agreement which the United States Government ought never to recognize, directly or indirectly, expressly or impliedly, and that is the paragraph which provides for the reduction of the reparations due from Germany when the United States shall cancel the debts of the Allies to her in whole or in part. It is also true that there is a provision in that agreement by which America remits a part of the cost of her army of occupation. That is immaterial. If we canceled it all, it would not be one-tenth as much as we have given to save the Allies. Possibly, there is no objection to that, but I am utterly opposed to any further cancellation of the allied debts to us. They borrowed that money in good faith. We loaned it in good faith. That money saved the allied nations. They would have been obliged to have surrendered if they had not received that money, and so there should be no cancellation. Take the case of France, for instance. She borrowed $2,000,000,000 from us during the war. That is her war debt. After the war was over, for the purpose of running her government and rebuilding her country, she borrowed, in round numbers, $2,000,000,000 more from us. The last two billions was not borrowed for war purposes. It was borrowed for peace purposes. She agreed to pay us 5 per cent interest on it, and she has never paid any principal or interest either on the war debt or on the postwar debt.

Incidentally, I may add here, Mr. President, that the treaty with us which her ambassador signed has never been ratified by France, although we cut the debt down to less than half its original amount.

Furthermore, France bought about $2,000,000,000 worth of goods and supplies from us after the war and gave us her notes for it, and has paid the interest on that, as I understand, amounting to $400,000,000. That is due in August, and there is a bill in here now to postpone this indebtedness. Not only that, but our Government, contrary to my view of what was right, entered into an agreement with representatives of France by which we accepted less than 50 cents on the dollar for the entire French debt; and France has never ratified that agreement, cancelling over $2,000,000,000 of indebtedness. She has made no effort to pay us; and, of course, the idea of our cancelling the debt, under these circumstances, is unbelievable. The Republican platform and the Democratic platform both declared against the cancellation of this debt. Why should these burdens be taken off the taxpayers of Europe and placed on the taxpayers of America? That is what it means; and, as one Senator, I want to say in advance of any negotiations to cancel the allied debts in whole or in part that I shall oppose it to the last limit.

I noticed in the papers a day or two ago that of the $1,300,000,000 that Germany had paid to the Allies since the war, $1,100,000,000 of it had been loaned by America to Germany for that purpose. It looks, Mr. President, as if by diplomacy our European friends are trying to unload the entire cost of the war on America.

The New York Times, on Sunday, June 9, published the entire reparations agreement. It is an agreement that ought to be studied by Congress and by the American people; and I ask that a copy of the agreement be published in the RECORD as a part of my remarks at the close of them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit A.)

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, America is not called upon to ratify the reparations agreement. Indeed, our Government should make it known both to Germany and to the Allies that we are not directly or indirectly bound by that agreement; that it imposes no moral obligation on us. The fact that certain excellent American financiers advised the agreement is no reason why America should be bound by it; and, under the circumstances, it seems to me it is the duty of our Government to inform those nations that America is not a party to it, and is in no sense responsible for it or to be bound by it.

I see that it has been suggested that our country enter into a private agreement with Germany with reference to it. There is no necessity for that, Mr. President. There should be no agreement with Germany and no agreement with the Allies with reference to these reparation matters. That has been our policy from the beginning. We ought to continue that policy. We in America ought not to be mixed up in this reparations fight. If they want the advice of our financiers, all well and good; we are happy to give it to them; but the American Government should not directly or indirectly make any contract in reference to it. Rather than be bound by an agreement with Germany or with the Allies in regard to it, Mr. President, I would infinitely rather agree to the cancellation of the debt of Germany to us for our war occupation. Comparatively speaking, it is small anyhow; and, as I have already said in this speech, if we forgave it all it would not be one-tenth of the amount that we have given to the various allies before this.

Again I say, Mr. President, that we will be extremely happy to have Mr. MacDonald visit our country; but I think it ought to be understood that there will be no more 5-5-3 naval disarmament agreements; there will be no signing by us of the German-Allies reparations agreement; and there will be no further cancellation of the debts of the Allies to us.

Mr. President, it is significant that on last Sunday Mr. Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the English Exchequer, gave out a long interview in which he pleads for the cancellation of all debts. A close scrutiny of that signed article, however, shows that he is greatly displeased with the agreement that Great Britain voluntarily made with America, canceling one-third of her indebtedness to America, and his article is really a plea to have America cancel the remainder of that debt. I ask that the statement of Mr. Snowden be inserted in the RECORD as a part of my remarks and put immediately after the reparations agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit B.)

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, let me say that it is all right to have a parley with Great Britain about reduction of arms and the freedom of the seas. America will welcome eagerly both proposals; but we must see that they mean exactly what they say this time and not trust to the press and propaganda. An agreement between Great Britain and America alone or collectively with other nations for British and American navies equal in size and strength, and an agreement for freedom of the seas, will be eagerly agreed to by America; but these agreements must say exactly what they mean, and mean what they say. There must be no repetition of the so-called disarmament agreement of 1922.

Mr. Snowden seems to think that the reparation agreement is inseparably connected with allied debts to America. Our Government has never so viewed the situation. We have taken the position at all times that debts and reparations were not connected. We must continue to take that position in the interest of America. We must not transfer these debts from the shoulders of European taxpayers to the shoulders of American taxpayers.

Mr. President, since I prepared the foregoing the Dawes and MacDonald speeches have been delivered, and an interview with the President has been published.

The four years of our association here in the Senate caused me to become a great admirer of General Dawes. I was delighted to see him appointed ambassador, and I believe that he will make a good one. He is an earnest advocate of peace, and he is an earnest advocate of reduction of naval armaments, and I hope he may succeed. He has made a good start.

I have read this morning the statement published this morning as coming from Ramsay MacDonald. His statement to me seems to be exceedingly general. He does not come out for the freedom of the seas nor for naval reductions. I suppose that is natural. But, Mr. President, being one of those who must finally pass upon any treaty, I am going to take the liberty of making some suggestions concerning these negotiations considered by Mr. MacDonald and General Dawes.

There must not be a repetition of the tragic disarmament agreement of 1922.

There should be no continuance of that agreement.

Reparations and allied debts should not be considered together.

The allied debt question should be regarded as closed.

All covenants should be open, and openly arrived at.

There should be no propaganda about these negotiations, as in 1922.

If we are going to have freedom of the seas, it must be a real freedom of the seas.

If we are going to have reduction of armaments—and I pray God that we may have such reductions—then the terms should be terms of absolute equality of the navies of the two peoples.

We want peace.

We want freedom of the seas.

We want naval reductions.

We want trade and commerce undisturbed and unlimited; but we should always remember that these things should be just as desirable to Great Britain as to America.

Mr. President, I was delighted to read the statement of President Hoover, published in this morning's paper, that the administration would not recommend our joining in the so-called Young reparations agreement. I commend him heartily for his action; and believe that if we are to make an agreement with Germany at all, we should provide in that agreement expressly that it in no sense ratifies or confirms, directly or indirectly, the reparations agreement. We must studiously avoid any express or implied ratification of that agreement.

EXHIBIT A

[From the New York Times of Sunday, June 9, 1929]

COMPLETE TEXT OF THE EXPERTS' REPORT ON REPARATIONS TO BE PAID BY GERMANY

PARIS, June 8.—The text of the report of the experts' committee for the settlement of the reparations problem is as follows:

We transmit herewith to the governments which took part in the Geneva decision and to the Reparation Commission our proposals for a complete and final settlement of the reparations problem, including the settlement of the obligations resulting from the existing treaties and agreemnts between Germany and the creditor powers; and we unanimously recommend the following plan to the governments concerned:

APPOINTMENT, TERMS OF REFERENCE, AND CONSTITUTION

Part I

This committee originated with the decision taken by the Belgian, British, French, German, Italian, and Japanese Governments to entrust to independent experts the task of drawing up proposals for a complete and final settlement of the reparation problem. Twelve experts were to be chosen among the nationals of countries which participated in this decision and two among the nationals of the United States of America. Each of the experts invited was empowered to appoint an alternate.

The appointments of the invited experts as members of the committee were made according to the following procedure:

The Belgian, British, French, Italian, and Japanese experts were appointed by the Reparation Commission upon the nomination of their respective governments.

The German experts were appointed by the German Government.

The experts being citizens of the United States of America were appointed by the Reparation Commission conjointly with the German Government.

TERMS OF REFERENCE

The mandate of the committee of experts thus formed is set forth in the following terms of reference:

The Belgian, British, French, German, Italian, and Japanese Governments, in pursuance of the decision reached at Geneva on September 16, 1928, whereby it was agreed to set up a committee of independent financial experts, hereby entrust to the committee the task of drawing up proposals for a complete and final settlement of the reparation problem:

These proposals shall include a settlement of the obligations resulting from the existing treaties and agreements between Germany and the creditor powers. The committee shall address its report to the governments which took part in the Geneva decision and also to the Reparation Commission.

The committee was constituted with the following membership:

Belgian experts: M. Emile Francqui, M. Camille Gutt; alternates, Baron Terlinden, M. H. Fabri.

French experts: M. Emile Moreau, M. Jean Parmentier; alternates, M. C. Moret, M. Edgar Allix.

German experts: Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Dr. A. Voegler; alternates, Dr. C. Melchior, Dr. L. Kastl.

British experts: Sir Josiah Stamp, G. B. E.; Lord Revelstoke, G. C. V. O.; alternates, Sir Charles Addis, K. C. M. G.; Sir Basil Blackett, K. C. B., K. C. S. I.

Italian experts: Dr. Alberto Pirelli, M. Fulvio Suvich; alternates, M. Giuseppe Bianchini, M. Bruno Dolcetta.

Japanese experts: Kengo Mori, Takashi Aoki; alternates, Saburo Sonoda, Yasumune Matsui.

American experts: Owen D. Young, J. P. Morgan; alternates, Thomas N. Perkins, T. W. Lamont.

We have to record our deep sense of regret at the death of Lord Revelstoke, which took place suddenly at an early hour on Friday, April 19. By his untimely removal from our counsels we suffered the loss of one whose unfailing tact and wisdom had gained the affection and respect of all of us and contributed greatly to our progress. In honor of his memory all meetings were suspended until Tuesday, April 23. On April 20 the Reparation Commission unanimously passed a resolution "deploring the death of Lord Revelstoke and instructing the general secretary to convey an expression of sympathy to the committee of experts on the loss of their distinguished colleague."

In a separate communication the Reparation Commission advised the committee that they had—

"Unanimously appointed, on the nomination of His Britannic Majesty's Government, Sir Charles Addis, K. C. M. G., to be a member of the experts committee in succession to the late Lord Revelstoke."

On May 23 the committee were advised that the German Government had appointed Herr L. Kastl to be a member in the place of Doctor Voegler, of whose resignation the committee had learned with regret on the previous day.

MEETINGS OF THE COMMITTEE

Part II

The experts met for the first time informally at the Bank of France on Saturday morning, February 9, to fix the date of the first meeting of the committee and to discuss matters of organization and procedure.

The first regular meeting of the committee was held on Monday, February 11, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, in the Hotel George V. At this meeting Mr. Owen D. Young was unanimously chosen chairman.

The committee has been in continuous session over a period of some 17 weeks. Subcommittees were set up as required for the study of particular questions and met frequently in the intervals between the plenary sessions.

Part III

ATTITUDE OF THE COMMITTEE

The report of the Dawes committee opened with the following words:

"We have approached our task as business men anxious to obtain effective results. We have been concerned with the technical and not the political aspects of the problem presented to us. We have recognized, indeed, that political considerations necessarily set certain limits within which a solution must be found if it is to have any chance of acceptance. To this extent, and to this extent only, we have borne them in mind."

It is in this spirit that the present committee have addressed themselves to the task of rounding off the work of their predecessors which was advisedly left incomplete. By determining the number and amount of the annuities and by providing for the conversion of the reparation debt from a political to a commercial obligation they have, to the best of their ability tried to perform the task committed to them of devising a scheme which might fairly be accepted by all parties concerned.

Throughout our deliberations and in our present proposals we have endeavored to reach our conclusions on economic and financial grounds. But we have realized, like our predecessors, that political factors necessarily set certain limits within which a solution had to be found if our proposals were to secure acceptance. We had, therefore, to base our decisions not only on economic but also to some extent on political considerations.

Many important juridical questions are also involved, and while as financial experts we are not specially qualified for going into details on them, their broader aspects have been always in our minds.

Indeed, it has been clear to us that close attention to them would have made our handling of the larger questions well-nigh impossible; but the committee is satisfied that the scheme it recommends is within its terms of reference.

The meeting of the present committee of experts marks the first occasion on which representatives of all these six nations chiefly concerned (together with American experts) have sat down together to work out on a large scale the common problems of reparations and to cooperate in exploring the various means by which Germany could be enabled to discharge her obligations.

The Dawes report made no attempt to establish the causes leading up to the situation which its provisions sought to ameliorate. In adhering to this precedent we have attempted to go farther and, through the proposed creation of the machinery which we recommend, to set up an institution whose direction from the start shall be cooperative and international in character; whose members shall engage themselves to banish the atmosphere of the war, to obliterate its animosities, its partisanships, its tendencious phases; and to work together for a common end in a spirt of mutual interest and good will.

STUDY OF GERMANY'S ECONOMIC CONDITIONS

Part IV

During the course of its deliberations the committee have given close consideration to the various aspects of Germany's present economic position and future potentialities, because of their material relation to her capacity to discharge obligations to foreign creditors.

The committee had among their number six members of the Dawes committee of 1924 whose contact with this aspect of the subject was obviously at that time close and responsible. Further, the committee includes several who have been associated with the practical working of the plan. These members have naturally had an unusual and continuous interest in the course of events unrolled during the past five years.

Furthermore, the periodical reports made by the agent general and trustees and commissioners upon the working of the Dawes plan and the reports of the Reichsbank itself have given comprehensive reviews of Germany's position and development. The body of knowledge so available and the public interest and discussion it has stimulated have been of the greatest assistance to the committee.

Moreover, they have been specially assisted by the able and lucid descriptions of the present economic condition of Germany and the possibilities of German development which have been made by the German experts who were well fitted by their respective positions in Germany to give in combination an impressive review of the subject.

Considerations put forward by them in our numerous discussions and in answer to the questions addressed to them have been a constant and powerful influence in leading us to our conclusions.

The German experts have given the committee complete information to the demands for foreign capital made by German economy during recent years and as to the items which in their opinion counteracted this: External assets of Germany, reconstitution of the stocks and of the machinery of the country. The productivity of capital thus invested has been discussed by the committee, who have also considered the comparison between the fiscal burdens and the burdens of public debt in Germany and in other countries.

The German experts have also made statements before the committee as to the present state of German industry and agriculture, the general level of wages, the budgetary situation, the balance of payments, the financial effect of compensation to her nationals, the influence upon her trade of customs barriers abroad, and the special situation of an industrial country such as Germany, which has had to reconstitute her working capital and at the same time assume the burden of heavy international obligations.

RESOURCES STRESSED BY GERMANS

The German experts laid stress on the question of natural resources available to Germany, whether within her borders or not, and on Germany's capacity to pay as affected thereby.

These statements have been present in the consideration of the experts and in a large measure their conclusions have been influenced by them.

It is unnecessary for us to set out the various considerations of an economic character which have led to our conclusions on the capacity of Germany to transfer. We believe that in the scale of annuities and the conditions recommended we have given proper regard to the potentialities of all the economic conditions and financial forces normally and naturally involved.

We believe further that in arranging for a part of the annuity to carry rights of postponement and for impartial inquiry we have provided for the possibility of meeting any abnormal or special difficulty arising which might seriously affect Germany's capacity for a time, despite all that might be done by Germany's good-will and ingenuity, to meet such difficulty without having recourse to an altogether exceptional but nevertheless very valuable expedient.

As a substitute for the present system of transfer protection with its semipolitical controls, its derogation from Germany's initiative, and its possible reactions upon credit, we are recommending a scheme of annuities appreciably smaller than the Dawes obligations and subject to new and elastic conditions which are described at length in the succeeding chapters of the present report.

As an internal burden to be borne by annual taxation the scheme we propose is materially less; it is closely assimilated to commercial and financial obligations; it carries with it welcome freedom from interference and supervision, and it is provided with adequate safeguards against any period so critical as to endanger Germany's economic life.

COURSE OF THE PROCEEDINGS

Part V

The committee addressed themselves at the outset to the essential task before them; namely, to determine the number and amount of the annuities to be paid by Germany; but they soon found the amounts were to a considerable extent contingent upon the machinery and form of payment and, therefore, that they were not at that stage ready to reach a conclusion either as to the amount of the annuities or the number of years during which they should continue.

Moreover, if Germany were to be given a definite task to perform on her own responsibility, and if the committee were to substitute for many of the features of the Dawes plan machinery of a nonpolitical character in the realm of general finance, it was clearly necessary to elaborate a system for handling the annuities in a way which, so far as it led to their commercialization, would remove them from the sphere of intergovernmental relations.

In the first instance some time was occupied by the committee in hearing the statements from the German experts on German economic conditions and the outlook for the future so far as they affected Germany's capacity to pay obligations in foreign currencies. It then became known that the German group felt that the ability of Germany to undertake a definite annuity obligation might vary, according to other provisions comprised in the committee's recommendations, and in particular, according to whether the annuity was entirely unconditional or whether some portion of it was payable under arrangements for postponement in the event of financial and exchange difficulties.

The idea was also put forward that if such a situation arose it was desirable for it to be immediately considered by an appropriate nonpolitical committee acting in an advisory capacity to the powers concerned and meeting unostentatiously without waiting to be constituted by the lengthy process of diplomatic action. It was quickly realized that since the amount of the burden which Germany could agree to accept was directly related to such concomitant conditions, these conditions must be first explored.

ANNUITIES DEPENDENT ON FLUIDITY

At the same time the possibility of accepting smaller annuities than those fixed under the Dawes plan was admittedly dependent upon the certitude and ease with which the creditors could commercialize the obligations under nonpolitical conditions.

The arrangements that have been in force under the Dawes scheme for liquidating a part of the annuity by means of deliveries in kind required consideration from two points of view:

(a) The substitution for the existing methods of a more elastic machinery which, as the Dawes committee recommended, should be nonpolitical; and

(b) The gradual termination of the system at the earliest moment consistent with existing relationships and with the interests of Germany, whose economic life has been during the past few years gradually adapted to them, and who would feel herself prejudiced in an economic sense by their too sudden termination.

The inquiries upon these subjects were found to be converging upon one central point, viz, the nature of the authority which should act as the chief medium for discharging the various functions under a new plan.

In the exploration of the problem of substituting authority of an external financial and nonpolitical character for the present machinery and controls of the Dawes plan, viz, the administration of the agent general and of the various commissioners in Berlin and those functions of the Reparation Commission which were involved, they immediately met with the necessity for a trustee to whom the payments in foreign currencies and reichsmarks should be made by Germany and by whom the distribution to the appropriate recipients should be managed.

In the second place, the problems of mobilization and commercialization demanded a common center of action and authority for the purpose of coordinating and controlling the arrangements, and there were obvious advantages in such an authority being of a continuous or permanent character.

In the third place, the continued existence of deliveries in kind necessitated special machinery of direction and control, at any rate, for a period of years.

They had already considered the desirability of an advisory committee which could take any necessary action in connection with the declaration of a postponement on the postponable part of the annuity. A permanent central authority might include among its functions the convening of such an advisory body, international in character and existing as a constituent part of this central authority, to consider the situation which had brought about the necessity for a postponement, or the situation which a postponement itself created.

Again the possibility that, either exceptionally or regularly as part of the plan, obligations would be discharged in marks within Germany necessitated a financial authority to arrange for the disposition of such funds or assets in the interests of the creditors by arrangement with the Reichsbank or other German authority.

Moreover, in so far as the task of transferring the payments into foreign currencies involved, besides a restriction of imports an extension of the German export trade, we envisaged the possibility of a financial institution that should be prepared to promote the increase of world trade by financing projects, particularly in undeveloped countries, which might otherwise not be attempted through the ordinary existing channels.

INTERNATIONAL BANK DECIDED UPON

These several considerations led the committee to the elaboration of a plan for a bank for international settlements which should, in its various functions, meet all of these points. The outline of this scheme is given in section 6 and annex 1.

It will be seen that the essential reparation functions of the bank were such as to form a solid reason for its existence; but the committee were led inevitably to add to those reasons the auxiliary, but none the less material, advantages that it might have in the general position of present international finance.

Just as it had been difficult at the outset to table and discuss a precise program of annuities under a new system until such a system were agreed in outline, because the amounts were themselves dependent upon that system, so at this point in the discussions it became difficult for the various members to form definite opinions and commit themselves on all details as they were elaborated in the new system until a clearer idea of the obligations that would be undertaken by Germany under that scheme had been obtained.

Without, therefore, having resolved all points of doubt on the new system or done more than sketch it in broad outline, they found that the moment had arrived when discussion of figures became possible and necessary.

At this stage the following broad principles were understood to be likely to find their way into any final settlement:

(1) A division of the annuity into an unconditional and a postponable part.

(2) The necessity for continuing deliveries in kind for a few years.

(3) The arrangement of suitable conditions for the postponable part in times of exceptional difficulty.

In order to put the question into concrete terms memoranda were tabled by the chairman, by the experts of the four chief creditor countries, and by the German experts. A considerable time was spent in discussing these proposals without agreement being reached.

Finally the chairman prepared a new and independent plan in which these divergent views were brought closer together. The main feature of his plan was an average annuity of 2,050,600,000 Reichsmarks, and subject to certain reserves as to the matters of detail this figure was accepted by the entire committee as the basis of further discussion and led to the unanimous recommendations now put forward.

Among those reserves is the question of the settlement of the Belgian marks claim, which the committee had continually in contemplation, and the unanimous agreement upon which is to be found in annex 6.

BANK TO TAKE ISSUE FROM POLITICS

Part VI

General reasons for the constitution of an institution with banking functions—a general plan for a complete and final settlement of the reparation problem, being primarily financial in character, involves the performance of certain banking functions at one or more points in the sequence between the initial payment of the annuities and the final distribution of the funds.

A banking institution designed to meet these requirements justifies and makes logical the liquidation of all political controls and provides instead machinery essentially commercial and financial in character which carries with it all the support and at the same time all the responsibilities that economic engagements imply.

The process of removing the reparation problem from the political to the financial sphere, which was begun in the Dawes plan, will thus be carried a step farther.

In general terms, the institution will take over such functions of the existing agencies as it may be necessary to continue and will perform the whole work of external administration, such as the receipt and distribution of payments and the commercialization of those parts of the annuities which are susceptible of being commercialized.

TO ACT LIKE ORDINARY BANK

The operations of the institution will be assimilated to ordinary commercial and financial practice. Its organization will be outside the field of political influences, and its powers and facilities will be sufficiently broad to enable it to deal freely and promptly with the problems involved in the settlement of Germany's obligations.

The institution will be equipped with machinery which will provide an elastic element between the payments to be made by Germany and their realization.

In consequence, the creditors will have further assurance that the effects of economic changes on the flow of payments will be minimized, and Germany, on her part, will have the possibility of assistance during temporarily unfavorable conditions.

It is obviously desirable in the interest of obtaining results with the greatest efficiency not to limit unduly the functions of the institution. The character of the annuities and the magnitude of the payments to be transferred over the exchanges provide at once the opportunity and the need for supplementing with additional facilities the existing machinery for carrying on international settlements and, within limitations, of the sound use of credit to contribute to the stability of international finance and the growth of world trade. We consider that, by judicious, noncompetitive financial development, the bank should prove a useful instrument for opening up new fields of commerce of supply and of demand, and will thus help to solve Germany's special problem without encroaching on the activities of existing institutions.

In designing the plan for the bank for international settlements, which is given in outline in Annex 1, we were therefore mindful of the fact that these new facilities should not supplant, but should augment and perfect existing arrangements for carrying through international settlements. The bank will have:

(a) As its essential or obligatory functions those which are inherent in the receipt, management, and distribution of the annuities, and (b) as its auxiliary or permissive functions those which evolve more indirectly from the character of the annuities.

There is no hard and fast line between the two sets of functions, because the first set leads naturally into the second.

ORGANIZATION OF THE BANK

In view of the part which the bank will have to play in the general interest, it is advisable to place the control of its management in the hands of the central banks, since these are the organizations responsible in each market for the convertibility of the national currencies and the control of credit.

At the time of the bank's constitution the capital will be geographically distributed in such a way as to associate in the bank's working and in its development all of the countries interested in the reparation settlement and all the financial markets which may subscribe to the bank's issues.

Provision is made for the utilization of the net profits of the bank, due allowance being made for the payment of cumulative dividends on the capital stock, to create suitable reserve funds.

Provision is also made in case governments or central banks make long-term deposits with the bank whereby they shall share proportionately in the remainder of the profits after the requirements on account of dividends and the reserve funds have been covered.

Inasmuch as its international basis is an essential feature which distinguishes the institution from all others, it has no single fiscal allegiance and it is desirable that in its movements in the various national markets it should not be hampered or restricted by considerations of relative fiscal burdens, it is therefore recommended that the governments of the countries concerned enter into a convention for the avoidance of double and triple taxation of the bank along the following lines:

(a) The funds and investments of the bank to be freed from national taxation at the point where they derive interest, income, and profit.

(b) All individuals and corporations receiving profit, interest, or income from the bank to be fully liable thereon to such taxation as such individuals and corporations would attract if the profit, interest, or income were derived from any other source.

1. Capital: On the formation of the bank its authorized capital will be in the equivalent of $100,000,000. The entire amount will be issued, but only 25 per cent of each share shall be called up until the board of directors decides on a further call. The allocation of shares by countries is provided for in section 2 of Annex 1. The shares will carry no voting rights; but voting rights corresponding to the number of shares first issued in each country will be exercised by the central bank of that country in the general meetings attended by representatives of those banks, taking the place of general meetings of shareholders.

2. Administration: The entire administrative control of the bank will be vested in the board of directors. The functions of a director of the bank are incompatible with those involving national political responsibilities and the statutes of the bank will make the necessary provision in order to avoid such conflict of functions. All the directors and candidates shall be ordinarily resident in Europe or shall be in a position to give regular attendance at meetings of the board.

The governor of the central bank of each of the seven countries to which members of the present experts committee belong, or his nominee, will be entitled to be a director of the bank ex officio. Each of these governors may also appoint one director, being a national of his country and representative either of finance or of industry or commerce. During the period of the German annuities, the governor of the Bank of France and the president of the Reischbank may each appoint, if they so desire, one additional director of his own nationality, being a representative of industry or commerce. These 14 (or as the case may be 16) directors will elect not more than nine additional directors from lists furnished by and which may include the governors of central banks in other participating countries.

If in the process of organizing the bank or in the performance of its functions after establishment, it is found that the central bank of any country or its governor is unable to act officially or unofficially in exercising the functions, authorities, or privileges accorded to central banks under the plan, or refrains from doing so, alternative arrangements not inconsistent with the laws of that country will be made. These alternative arrangements are outlined in section 12 of Annex 1.

3. Distribution of profits: The profits shall be divided in accordance with the provisions contained in Annex 1.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS ON THE BANK

The foregoing outline of the functions and organization of the bank for international settlements, together with the fuller presentation of the bank plan in Annex 1, largely speaks for itself. It remains, however, to point out certain advantages which the bank offers as against the existing reparation procedure and which advantages accrue both to Germany and to the creditor countries, because the bank, in putting the payments on a business basis, makes their receipt the more certain and facilitates their movement.

The new facilities introduced by the bank are in addition to the provisions given elsewhere in the plan whereby Germany is entitled to declare a postponement of transfer. They are, rather, in the nature of forestalling circumstances which might of themselves lead to a transfer postponement.

These measures of prevention are of two general sorts:

First. The bank may employ its power of giving credit to arrange temporary assistance in transferring the annuities.

Second. The bank will be in a position to invest in German marks currently accruing to its account at the Reichsbank.

This measure, to the extent to which it may be utilized, will return to the German economy a portion of the annuity and through the bank's credit mechanism provide the foreign exchange with which to pay the current allotments to the creditors on account of the annuity.

The application of either or both of these measures is prompt and decisive, and they operate in advance of the time when difficulties present themselves rather than afterwards, and serve to ease any strain until such time as the discount rate and other corrective measures have had opportunity to exert themselves.

It is not to be assumed that these two measures should be reserved for emergency use. The use of the bank's credit by central banks within moderate limits and over short periods may in time become a normal function scarcely different in its exercise from the use of central bank credit by banks and bankers.

All central banks for ordinary exchange operations or for other purposes would frequently find it advantageous to make use of the facility. The second measure, that of investing within Germany some portion of the annuity receipts, should also find its uses in normal times. Both measures are necessarily limited by the funds which the bank will have at its disposal and by the requirement that it maintains its liquidity at all times.

These are instances of the bank's utility to Germany. They also illustrate the flexibility which the bank's facilities give to the handling of the disbursements to the creditors. Further instances of joint benefit may be briefly indicated.

The bank will be able to give short-term and intermediate credit to purchasers of deliveries in kind, notably for the construction of public works on delivery-in-kind account.

Intermediate-credit operations need not be restricted, however, to any one country or to the purchase of any one country's goods. On the contrary it would be desirable to broaden such operations in the interest of world trade to the extent that the directors of the bank approve.

As a stabilizing factor in the foreign exchanges its advantages are obvious, and if in due time the arrangements provided for an international settlement fund are put into effective operation the bank should go far to eliminate the costs and risks now incurred in the shipping and reshipping of gold.

The bank excludes from its procedure all political influences, and business principles and practices intervene to facilitie the settlement of Germany's obligation without in any way qualifying her independent and sole responsibility.

The office for reparation payments and its associated organizations in Berlin will be retired and the reparation commission's relations with Germany will be terminated. Germany will assume the responsibility for raising and transferring the annuities and the bank takes over the work of their receipt and disbursement.

As already stated, the bank is so designed as not to interfere with the functions performed by existing institutions, but is to create for itself supplementary functions in a special field of its own. To this end every care should be exercised in the organization and administration of the institution.

In the natural course of development it is to be expected that the bank will, in time, become an organization, not simply, or even predominantly, concerned with the handling of reparations but also with furnishing to the world of international commerce and finance important facilities hitherto lacking.

Especially it is to be hoped that it will become an increasingly close and valuable link in the cooperation of central banking institutions generally—a cooperation essential to the continuing stability of the world's credit structure.

Influence of Form of Annuity on the Amount

Part VII

We are proposing a series of total annuities which should be paid with the regularity of the coupons of ordinary marketable bonds. But it is well recognized that to the economy of every country there may possibly come at some time or other a year of stress and difficulty. To make the economic scope of such a period the determinant of the maximum capacity in the ordinary course would be to fix a sum quite unacceptable to the creditors and an unreliable test of normal capacity to pay. It would be like fixing the standard of physical effort expected from a workman in his years of health and strength by what he is capable of doing in his occasional weeks of illness.

While our proposals have made full allowance for all normal and long-run consideration, it is possible that over exceptional and short periods the natural adjustment we contemplate might be insufficient. We have accepted the argument of the German experts that in undertaking a responsibility of this character, identical in its nature with the solemn covenants of a debtor on a commercial and financial basis, Germany is well advised to consider carefully what are the limits of the burden which are possible for her final acceptance. We have, therefore, fully respected their scruples as to the undertakings they are prepared unconditionally to sign and have introduced a feature which can act as a safety valve in time of difficulty, viz, a right of postponement on Germany's initiative of the transfer (and to a less degree of payment) of a portion of the annuity.

The range between the two figures (the unconditional portion and the total annuity) is not to be taken as evidence of doubt as to Germany's capacity of transfer (or of payment); it represents, rather, the concession that has been made to the honorable determination of the German experts not to make themselves unconditionally responsible for any obligation which they are not certain is within their power of performance in all circumstances.

It is, however, to be emphasized that the total amount of the annuity proposed, while being far from covering the claims set forth by the creditors, is one which they have every reason to believe can, in fact, be both paid and transferred by Germany.

Deliveries in Kind Reduced

The fact that part of it is postponable obviates the danger of being above Germany's capacity to transfer in a period of difficulty, and it was the recognition of this principle which was one of the factors enabling the German experts to accept this scheme as an alternative not inconsistent with their original ideas.

In recommending that the system of deliveries in kind should be continued for a limited period and in decreasing amounts we recognized, as is pointed out in section 8F of this report, the necessity for maintaining a transitional period so that all shock to existing economic conditions in Germany should be avoided.

Germany's power to transfer is thus maintained unimpeded by the friction of sudden changes in trade conditions.

Annuities

Part VIII

The committee recommends that:

(1) The governments shall fix the exact date of termination of the Dawes plan and the substitution therefor of the new plan.

In fixing such date the governments should bear in mind that this committee's calculations were made on the basis that the Dawes plan would cease on August 31, 1929, and the new plan commence on September 1, 1929.

In case the governments should fix a date later than September 1, 1929, it is recommended that financial adjustments shall be made so that the basis of payments provided for under the new plan shall nevertheless commence as of September 1, 1929, and the basis of payments provided for under the Dawes plan should cease as of August 31, 1929.

(2) Payments under the plan of the Dawes committee should continue until the end of the present scheduled year; that is to say, August 31, 1929.

(3) The new plan should go into effect September 1, 1929, with the value of the 37 annuities of 1,988,000,000 reichsmarks until March 31, 1966, the payments of the Dawes loan to be added.

Treatment of Payments

(4) Payments to be made under the Dawes plan during the 5-month period preceding September 1, 1929, after allowing for the Dawes loan, should be treated as payments necessary to cover the requirements of the creditor nations during this transition period, including outpayments for the year ending March 31, 1930.

Should there remain any surplus after meeting the foregoing requirements, the question of disposing of such surplus as well as all matters and expenses in connection with the transition from the operation of the existing arrangements to the new plan shall be settled and adjusted between the governments.

(5) In order that the new annuities shall coincide with the German fiscal years, the schedule of payments to be made by Germany on and from September 1, 1929, will be as follows (in reichsmarks):

Seven months, Sept. 1, 1929–Mar. 31, 1930	742,800,000
Apr. 1, 1930–Mar. 31, 1931	1,707,900,000
Apr. 1, 1931–Mar. 31, 1932	1,685,000,000
Apr. 1, 1932–Mar. 31, 1933	1,738,200,000
Apr. 1, 1933–Mar. 31, 1934	1,804,300,000
Apr. 1, 1934–Mar. 31, 1935	1,866,900,000
Apr. 1, 1935–Mar. 31, 1936	1,892,900,000
Apr. 1, 1936–Mar. 31, 1937	1,939,700,000
Apr. 1, 1937–Mar. 31, 1938	1,977,000,000
Apr. 1, 1938–Mar. 31, 1939	1,995,300,000
Apr. 1, 1939–Mar. 31, 1940	2,042,800,000
Apr. 1, 1940–Mar. 31, 1941	2,155,500,000
Apr. 1, 1941–Mar. 31, 1942	2,180,700,000
Apr. 1, 1942–Mar. 31, 1943	2,198,000,000
Apr. 1, 1943–Mar. 31, 1944	2,194,300,000
Apr. 1, 1944–Mar. 31, 1945	2,207,500,000
Apr. 1, 1945–Mar. 31, 1946	2,203,800,000
Apr. 1, 1946–Mar. 31, 1947	2,199,500,000
Apr. 1, 1947–Mar. 31, 1948	2,215,200,000
Apr. 1, 1948–Mar. 31, 1949	2,210,000,000
Apr. 1, 1949–Mar. 31, 1950	2,316,800,000
Apr. 1, 1950–Mar. 31, 1951	2,359,200,000
Apr. 1, 1951–Mar. 31, 1952	2,343,200,000
Apr. 1, 1952–Mar. 31, 1953	2,346,200,000
Apr. 1, 1953–Mar. 31, 1954	2,353,300,000
Apr. 1, 1954–Mar. 31, 1955	2,364,600,000
Apr. 1, 1955–Mar. 31, 1956	2,359,800,000
Apr. 1, 1956–Mar. 31, 1957	2,354,200,000
Apr. 1, 1957–Mar. 31, 1958	2,361,800,000
Apr. 1, 1958–Mar. 31, 1959	2,393,800,000

Apr. 1, 1959–Mar. 31, 1960	2,370,600,000
Apr. 1, 1960–Mar. 31, 1961	2,380,500,000
Apr. 1, 1961–Mar. 31, 1962	2,398,300,000
Apr. 1, 1962–Mar. 31, 1963	2,390,200,000
Apr. 1, 1963–Mar. 31, 1964	2,402,600,000
Apr. 1, 1964–Mar. 31, 1965	2,402,100,000
Apr. 1, 1965–Mar. 31, 1966	2,428,800,000

Constant annuity 37 years corresponding to 1,988,800,000 Dawes loan to be added.

There remains the following schedule of payments thereafter to be made by Germany subject to the special provisions dealing with these years:

1966–67	1,607,700,000
1967–68	1,006,900,000
1968–69	1,616,700,000
1969–70	1,630,000,000
1970–71	1,643,700,000
1971–72	1,653,900,000
1972–73	1,662,300,000
1973–74	1,665,700,000
1974–75	1,668,400,000
1975–76	1,675,000,000
1976–77	1,678,700,000
1977–78	1,685,400,000
1978–79	1,695,500,000
1979–80	1,700,400,000
1980–81	1,711,300,000
1981–82	1,687,600,000
1982–83	1,691,800,000
1983–84	1,703,300,000
1984–85	1,683,500,000
1985–86	825,100,000
1986–87	931,400,000
1987–88	897,800,000

Out of the above annuities the following amounts shall be unconditional, namely, payable without any right of postponement of any kind in foreign currencies by equal monthly installments, viz, 660,000,000 reichsmarks per annum, to include whatever amounts are required for the service of the German external loan of 1924.

PAYMENT OF ANNUITY

The remainder of the annuity shall be payable in foreign currencies by equal monthly installments, but subject to the conditions as regards postponement of transfer and of payment set out in Annex 4 of this plan.

The German Government undertakes for the purpose of the present provisions, as well as for the general purposes of the plan, that the reichsmark shall have and shall retain its convertibility into gold or devise as contemplated in section 31 of the present Reichsbank law and that for these purposes the reichsmarks shall have and shall retain a mint parity of 1/2790 kilogram of fine gold as defined in the German coinage law of August 30, 1924 (attention is called to the letter from the president of the Reichsbank given in Annex 2).

For the purpose of (4) above, the outpayments for the year ending March 31, 1930, are as follows in gold marks:

France	338,100,000
Great Britain	366,600,000
Italy	107,800,000
Belgium	23,400,000
Rumania	8,800,000
Serbia	5,900,000
Greece	5,300,000
Portugal	7,200,000
Total	863,100,000

STATES TO SET OCCUPATION COSTS

Provision is made in part 9 of Annex 1 whereby a percentage of the special reserve fund accumulated in the bank shall be placed at Germany's disposal, if required, toward meeting the last 22 annuities payable under the above scale.

In calculating the above annuities we have taken into account the expenditures devolving upon Germany during the period of the new plan, such as were covered by the Dawes plan. However, we have not included the costs of commissions and the current expenses of occupation, as they are to continue only until a date to be fixed by the governments. The necessary arrangements for their payment should be made by the governments in connection with the adoption of the new plan.

Apart from the foregoing we recommend that as from the date of the putting into force of this plan Germany's previous obligation shall be entirely replaced by the obligation laid down in this plan and that the payment in full of the proposed annuities in accordance with this plan should be accepted by the creditor powers as a final discharge of all the liabilities of Germany still remaining undischarged, referred to in section 11 of part 1 of the Dawes plan as interpreted by the decision already given by the interpretation tribunal set up under the London agreement of August 30, 1924.

That tribunal should be retained in existence, and any dispute that may arise between Germany, on the one side, and the creditor governments, or any one of them, or the bank, on the other side, as to the extent of these liabilities or as to any other question of the interpretation or application of this plan, should be referred to it for final decision.

In the course of their proceedings the experts of the principal creditor powers have also dealt with the question of the distribution of these annuities among the creditor powers. Their recommendations, drawn up after careful examination of the existing distribution arrangements and of other relevant considerations laid before them and with due regard to the rights and equities of the other countries (Greece, Portugal, Poland, Rumania, Serbia, Japan, and the United States of America), having a share in the Dawes annuities, are set out in Annex 7, which they consider an inseparable part of the present report.

COMPOSITION OF THE ANNUITIES

Part VIII (A)

1. Source and securities: The annuities are to be derived from two sources:

1. The German Railway Co.
2. The Budget of the Reich.

The committee, after a careful examination of the proposals put forward by the German experts, were of the opinion that the annuities recommended by them should not be drawn wholly from the German budget, but that one source of payment utilized by the Dawes plan, namely, the railway company, should be maintained. We desire to make it clear, however, that the retention of a contribution from the railway company is recommended, not only from the point of view of security, but also as a suitable method of raising the necessary revenue.

We have also considered the position with regard to the assigned revenues and, having regard to the fact that these revenues are pledged as collateral security for the service of the German external loan of 1924, we feel it is impossible to recommend the release thereof.

Nevertheless, we are of the opinion that it would be suitable for the German Government to discuss with the trustees for the bondholders of that loan the possibility of simplifying, as far as possible, the existing machinery and that the creditor governments for their part should accept a similar arrangement. The effective security of the creditor governments should be substantially that indicated in Annex 3, section 3.

Apart from these special questions, the committee desires to record its view that the basis of security for the payment of the annuities is the solemn undertaking of the German Government, to which no further guaranty can add anything whatsoever.

The committee accordingly recommends that the creditor governments should take steps to release all controls, special securities, pledges or charges which may remain in their hands other than those specifically referred to above, and should recognize that their acceptance of the solemn undertaking of the German Government replaces any securities, pledges, charges, or controls as may now exist.

2. The contribution from the German Railway Co.: Under the German railway law of August 30, 1924, enacted in accordance with the Dawes plan, the German Railway Co. is subject to a mortgage for 11 milliard G. M. in favor of the trustee for the German railway bonds and has issued to him a bond for 11 milliard G. M. This bond bears interest at 5 per cent per annum and carries a cumulative sinking fund of 1 per cent per annum, which first became operative on September 1, 1927, interest and sinking fund being guaranteed by the Government of the Reich.

This plan contemplates the abolition of the railway bonds, together with the attendant circumstances of foreign participation in the management of the railway, and substitutes a contribution from the railway company as set out in the following paragraphs:

The railway company shall be under an obligation to pay for 37 years a direct tax comprising, if necessary, the transport tax to an annual amount of 660,000,000 reichsmarks, being equal to the annual amount of the nonpostponable annuity. This tax shall be imposed by German legislation and the receipts therefrom guaranteed by the German Government. The railway company shall deposit with the Bank of International Settlements a certificate acknowledging its liability in respect of this obligation.

The amount payable shall be raised from the gross revenues of the company ranking after the expenditure on personnel and on the same footing with expenditure on material and consumable stores. It shall enjoy priority over any other tax now levied on the railway company or which may be levied in the future and shall rank prior to any other charge by way of mortgage or otherwise on the company. It shall be paid direct by the railway company to the account of the Bank of International Settlements at the Reichsbank in installments as laid down in part 8.

The foregoing conditions shall be incorporated in the law governing the railway company.

It shall be one of the duties of the organization committee proposed in Annex V of this report to make suitable provision whereby the private and independent character of the German railway company, including its autonomous administration in economic, financial, and personnel matters, shall continue for the period of the plan without interference from the German Government.

TRANSPORT TAX AND CHARGE ON INDUSTRIES

3. The transport tax: In addition to the 660,000,000 gold marks now payable directly by the railway company, the Dawes plan requires a contribution to the standard annuity of 290,000,000 gold marks out of the actual yield of the transport tax. This tax is imposed by the German Government and the German railway company collects it for the government. The total yield of the transport tax, now considerably in excess of 290,000,000 gold marks, appears among the receipts of the budget of the Reich and the contribution of 290,000,000 appears among its expenditures. Under this plan the direct tax on the railway company comprises, if necessary, the transport tax, which is otherwise relieved from any special charge on account of reparations.

4. The charge on German industries: Under the industrial charges law enacted in accordance with the Dawes plan, bonds aggregating 5,000,000,000 gold marks have been issued in respect of the German industries by the bank for German industrial debentures to the trustee for the German industrial debentures. These bonds bear interest at 5 per cent per annum and carry a cumulative sinking fund of 1 per cent per annum which first became operative September 1, 1927, principal, interest, and sinking fund being guaranteed by the government of the Reich. The present contribution to the annuity from the industrial debentures thus amounts to 300,000,000 gold marks.

This particular charge in no way differs from ordinary taxation save in the complications it involves in legislation and the machinery of collection.

We recommend that it be discontinued and that its disappearance be taken into account in distributing the relief from taxation which this plan will enable the German Government to bring into effect.

5. The charge on the budget of the Reich, under the original experts' plan the contribution from the budget of the Reich in the fifth or current annuity year amounts to 1,250,000,000 gold marks, of one-half of the total standard annuity. This contribution is a charge on the budget as a whole, specifically secured by the assignment of the revenues from customs, beer, tobacco, sugar, and alcohol to the commissioner of controlled revenues. These revenues are paid by the collecting offices directly into the account of the commissioner at the Reichsbank. As early as practicable in each month out of the funds accumulated in his account, the commissioner pays into the account of the agent general at the Reichsbank one-twelfth of the annual contribution from the budget, and thereafter in each month the revenues are automatically transferred by him to the account of the German Government at the Reichsbank. Under this plan the procedure to be followed will be worked out in detail by the appropriate organization committee proposed in Annex V, regard being had so far as necessary to the arrangements which may be accepted by the trustees of the 1924 loan.

As the amount contributed by the German Railway continues for 37 years at the fixed level of 660,000,000 reichsmarks a year, the charge on the budget of the Reich varies with the total amount of the annuity. In the second year it stands at the figure of 1,136,400,000 reichsmarks and rises to a maximum of 1,768,800,000 reichsmarks in the thirty-seventh year. Thereafter the contribution from the railway company ceases, the annuity falls sharply, and the budget contribution covers the whole of the German liability for the remainder of the plan.

The average increase in the budgetary contribution during the first 20 years is about 24,000,000 gold marks annually, or about 0.24 per cent of the total revenues of the budget of the Reich, which at present are just under 10,000,000,000. This moderate and gradual increase in the budgetary contribution under the definitive settlement plan ought to be met in ordinary years without recourse to additional taxation. Indeed, the substantial reduction of the budgetary contribution as compared with the Dawes plan makes possible an immediate resumption of the tax-reduction program which has been in progress since 1924. The committee hope that such further tax reductions, coupled with a definitive reparation settlement, will give a strong stimulus to saving and thereby materially assist in the internal formation of the new capital which Germany still requires.

HOW PAYMENTS WILL INCREASE UNTIL 1966

Part VIII (B)

Progression.—The authors of the Dawes plan believed that they could count upon a certain substantial and progressive increase in the prosperity of Germany arising not only from the employment of the rapidly increasing wealth of that country but also from the steady progress of world prosperity, and this belief found expression in the device of an index of prosperity. The plan contemplates that the amounts which Germany pays upon a fixed scale shall increase, generally speaking, year by year until 1966, reflecting in some small measure this anticipated increase in her prosperity. However, the annuities proposed are to start at a level which not only gives immediate and important relief to the German budget, to her exchange position, and to her need for additional internal formation of capital as compared with the standard Dawes annuity of 2,500,000,000 gold marks, but also provides the greatest possible assurance that the new scheme will function from the beginning without any hitch or disturbance.

Part VIII (C)

The nonpostponable annuities.—Not the least difficult part of the task was the determination of the figure which Germany could immediately undertake as a final and unconditional obligation. The point at which difficulties might begin to arise in making transfers into foreign currencies is not exactly definable in advance; but every care has been taken to be so far within this limit as to remove every possibility of the risk of error. We recognize that in fixing the figure payable by Germany in foreign currencies without any right of postponement whatever at 660,000,000 reichsmarks, we have taken a conservative amount. But we are satisfied that it is wiser deliberately to underestimate than to run the slightest risk of weakening German credit by proposing a figure which might not command instant acceptance by well-informed public opinion.

Part VIII (D)

The postponable annuities.—In addition to the unconditional part of the annuity we propose a postponable part, transfer of which may, in certain circumstances set out below, be postponed for a period not exceeding two years.

This postponable part of the annuity is designed to meet the situation which might arise in a period of special economic difficulty and distress. There will be other ways of meeting such a situation, and if they are applied our view is that recourse to this abnormal measure will not in fact prove to be necessary. Nevertheless, as an additional precaution it is valuable to Germany and provides by its very existence a safeguard against the dangers which to rigid a framework might have called into existence.

HOW GERMANY WILL BE PROTECTED ON TRANSFER

Part VIII (E)

Measures of safeguard: The essence of the aditional margin of safety given to a part of the annuities lies in the power to postpone transfer. We are recommending, in order to protect Germany against the possible consequence of a comparatively short period of depression which might for internal or external reasons put such a severe strain on the exchanges as would make the process of transfer abroad dangerous, that the German Government should have the right, on giving 90 days' notice, to postpone transfers for a period not exceeding two years under conditions set out in Annex IV. During the period of postponement the liability of the German Government with regard to the sums affected would in the first instance be limited to payment in reichsmarks to the account at the Reichsbank of the Bank for International Settlements. Under certain conditions part of this payment may also be withheld.

On the declaration of any postponement the Bank for International Settlements shall convene the special advisory committee. At any other time when the German Government declare to the creditor governments and to the Bank for International Settlements that they have come to the conclusion in good faith that Germany's exchange and economic life may be seriously endangered by the transfer in part or in full of the postponable portion of the annuities, the committee shall also be convened.

Upon being convened the special advisory committee shall forthwith consider the circumstances and conditions which have led up to the necessity for postponement or have created a situation in which Germany considers that her exchange and economic life may be seriously endangered by further transfers of the postponable portion of the annuity, and make a full investigation of Germany's position in regard to her obligations under this plan. In their report to the governments and to the bank, having (in case of a postponement of transfer) satisfied themselves that the German authorities have used every effort in their power to fulfill their obligations, they shall indicate for consideration by the governments and the bank what in their opinion are the measures that should be taken in regard to the application of the present plan.

It shall further be the duty of the bank, during a postponement of transfer, to direct in conjunction with the Reichsbank the employment of the reichsmarks paid to its account at the Reichsbank by the German Government. (See Section VI of Annex I to this report.)

The following paragraphs sketch the organization of the special advisory committee of the Bank for International Settlements referred to in the preceding paragraphs:

1. The committee should act in a purely consultative capacity. Its findings shall have no effective force unless confirmed and accepted by the bank as trustee of the creditors and, if necessary, by the governments concerned.

2. The committee shall play no part in connection with the unconditional annuity accepted by Germany and referred to in the plan as the "unconditional annuity."

3. The committee shall be convened by the bank according to the rules of its own constitution when notice shall be received from the German Government. It shall not be required to meet at any other time.

4. The committee shall consist of seven ordinary and four coopted members. The ordinary members shall be nominated one by each of the following: The governors of the Reichsbank, the Banque de France, the Bank of England, the Banque Nationale de Belgique, the Banca d'Italia, the Bank of Japan, a Federal reserve bank of the United States or some other agreed American financial institution.

GOVERNORS MAY NAME FOUR COLLEAGUES

In the last two cases, such nominee being ordinarily resident in Europe, or in a position to give prompt attendance on a meeting of the committee being called, these nominees of the governors of the banks shall not be officially connected with the banking institutions in question nor with the government departments of their respective countries. After being summoned they may, if they so desire, coopt not more than four additional members with the intent that special aspects, whether in finance, exchange, industry, etc., of the particular situation in question shall be represented. During the course of the proceedings and until the report is made the coopted members shall be equal in all other respects to the ordinary members, but they shall thereafter be discharged from office.

5. The committee may proceed by way of hearing evidence or asking for documents as it may desire, but the president of the Reichsbank, and/or any other person nominated by the German Government, may appear before or submit to the committee the reasons for which a postponement has been declared or measures are desirable as indicated above.

The committee shall neither grant nor refuse a postponement. After making inquiry it shall report to the governments and the bank as indicated above.

6. Unless otherwise arranged by consent, the expenses of the special advisory committee shall be borne by the German Government.

Part VIII (F)

Deliveries in kind: The system of deliveries in kind under the Dawes plan has come to play an important rôle in the economic life of Germany. We would not suggest the unlimited continuation of this system, which is open to many objections of a practical as well as a theoretical nature. We have felt, however, that its immediate cessation would not be in the interests of Germany nor of the creditor powers, and that it would impose difficulties upon the export trade of Germany which might be injurious to her capacity to transfer.

We, therefore, recommend that the principles of the Dawes plan, with reference to deliveries in kind, should continue in existence for a limited period, and that the creditor nations should agree for a period of 10 years to absorb by this means in respect of each year a limited and decreasing amount of the postponable portion of the annuity substantially in accordance with the following table:

First year	750,000,000
Second year	700,000,000
Third year	650,000,000
Fourth year	600,000,000
Fifth year	550,000,000
Sixth year	500,000,000
Seventh year	450,000,000
Eighth year	400,000,000
Ninth year	350,000,000
Tenth year	300,000,000

TOTAL NOT TO BE INCREASED

The foregoing table is to be adapted to the actual annuities of the new plan without increasing the total.

The creditor powers, by arrangements effected among themselves, will fix the proportions in the total of each year's volume of deliveries in kind (including deliveries under reparation recovery acts or any equivalent system substituted therefor, by agreement up to 23.05 per cent for Great Britain and 4.95 per cent for France of the total amount provided for each year) which each of them will receive.

The bank for international settlements shall manage the disbursements on deliveries-in-kind account, and in making distributions of cash to the creditor countries shall have due regard for those portions of the annuity which are restricted to payments for deliveries in kind.

The committee also recommends that new regulations be adopted by the governments modifying the Wallenberg regulation to conform to the new plan and, so far as practicable, simplifying and liberalizing them.

PROVISION FOR EXTERNAL DISPOSAL URGED

The committee recommends that provision be made in the new regulations permitting the several powers to dispose of some part of their respective quotas of deliveries outside of their own territories under suitable restrictions.

The proposed repartition of the deliveries in kind among the several creditor powers is contained in Annex VII, dealing with repartition of the annuities.

Part IX

LIQUIDATION OF THE PAST

In order to arrive as rapidly as possible at a general liquidation of the financial questions raised by the war and the subsequent treaty of peace, a liquidation which alone can insure the definite return of Europe to normal financial and economic conditions, the committee recommends the clearing up of these questions in a broad spirit of mutual concession.

We understand that a settlement on these lines will render obsolete the accounts between the reparation commission and Germany relating to transactions prior to the period of the Dawes plan, together with all accounts involving credits against the original capital debt. We are strongly of the opinion that these accounts should be closed at the earliest moment.

The creditor governments, under this plan, will be reducing the whole body of their claims arising out of the war or under the treaty of Versailles to a considerable extent. The experts of the creditor countries are aware that past transactions have given or may give rise to claims by Germany, some of which are still unsettled, and, while they are not able to go into the merits of these claims, they consider that the creditor governments are fully entitled to expect that Germany should waive them in consideration of the consolidation of the creditors' claims at a reduced figure. Any other course would be inconsistent with their intention that, just as the new annuities cover all the claims defined in Part XI of the Dawes plan, so they should be paid free of deduction in respect of any past transactions. The committee recognizes, however, that this is entirely a matter for the governments to deal with.

FURTHER SEIZURES FROWNED UPON

To assure the general confidence indispensable for the successful working of this plan, the committee recommends that the governments make no further use, from the date of the acceptance of this report, of their right to seize, retain, and liquidate property rights and interests of German nationals or companies controlled by them in so far as not already liquid or liquidated or finally disposed of, and that the outstanding questions concerning such property should be definitely cleared up within one year after the coming into force of this plan by arrangements between the governments concerned and Germany.

This recommendation, naturally, has no application in cases where special settlements have already been made.

The acceptance of this plan necessarily involves the dissolution of the joint liability of Germany on the one side with Austria-Hungary and Bulgaria on the other side for reparation, and therefore finally abolishes every obligation, present or future, in either direction which may result between these powers from this joint liability.

DROPPING OF FURTHER CREDITS ADVOCATED

The committee recommends in particular that the creditor powers should abstain from recovering the credits of Germany against her former allies referred to in Article 261 of the Treaty of Versailles, Germany for her part renouncing any net balance which might be due to her as a result of these credits.

In their unanimous desire that the remaining financial questions arising out of the war should be settled as soon as possible in order to promote the spirit of international harmony and collaboration the experts unanimously recommend to the creditor governments that they complete the work of the experts' committee by dealing with and disposing of, within the first year of operation of the new plan, the claims and debts for ceded properties, and liberation bonds held in the hands of the Reparations Commission against the so-called succession States. This question is referred to in Annex VII.

Part X

COMMERCIALIZATION AND MOBILIZATION

Having recommended the creation of the bank for international settlements in order to provide machinery for the removal of the reparation obligation from the political to the financial sphere, we have further considered what procedure is necessary in order to assimilate this obligation as clearly as possible to an ordinary commercial obligation ("Commercialization").

Further, certain governments are known to attach particular importance to the possibility of raising money by the issue to the public of bonds representing the capitalization of the unconditional portion of the annuity ("Mobilization").

It is of course not within our power to advise as to the time at which such issues can be made with advantage or as to the terms and conditions on which issues should be made. The arrangements to be made would no doubt vary according, as, for example, an issue is to be made for cash in the general interest of all the creditor governments or an internal issue is to be made in one single country by way of conversion of government debt.

It will be the province of the bank itself to advise upon such matters; but we have thought it necessary to advise a framework within which these operations may take place.

This framework is given in Annex III. It provides, first, that the annuities themselves shall be represented by a German Government certificate of indebtedness deposited with the bank, similar to those in use in ordinary commercial practice (a proper distinction being made in the coupons between the conditional and unconditional portions of the annuity). The provisions regarding security are given in the annex and the condition in which mobilizable bonds should be created and issued are defined.

BOTH BUYER AND ISSUER TO BE CONSIDERED

One of the most important provisions of this scheme is that annuity moneys should be distributed by the bank in strict proportion to the rights of each party—whether government or bondholder.

As far as, according to the conditions of the issue, reparation loans (general or conversion loans) are subject to an anticipated redemption, Germany should be entitled to redeem these loans; the part of the annuity destined for the service of the redeemed loan will then accrue to her.

The wish has been expressed that, so far as possible, reparation loans will not be issued without granting the debtor an appropriate right of anticipated redemption.

We recommend that Germany should also have the right to redeem all or any part of not yet mobilized annuities on a basis of 5.25 per cent discount.

Part XI

THE NEW PLAN CONTRASTED WITH THE DAWES PLAN

The Dawes plan, although drawn up at a time of intense crisis, has by a test lasting over nearly five years justified by facts the postulates on which is was based as regards both the restoration of the public finances of Germany and her economic recovery.

It may be well to summarize briefly the points of advantage—whether to Germany or her creditors—claimed for the new proposal which justify a departure from a scheme that has in the past rendered signal service.

The plan drawn up by the committee to afford a definite solution of the reparation question accompanies a reduction in the existing obligation of Germany by an essential modification in their financial and political status. In so far as the creditors are relinquishing substantial advantages in the face value of payments due under the present scheme, they are doing so only by reason of these improvements in intrinsic and available values which arise from the practicability and certainty of commercialization and mobilization within a reasonable period and in its attendant financial and economic psychology.

Among the modifications which are considered specially important are the following:

1. Fixation of the period and the debt: The Dawes plan imposes, in virtue of the index of prosperity, increasing annuities of which the number are not fixed. The new program indicates a definite number of fixed annuities.

2. Disappearance of the index of prosperity: Only estimates which vary very widely of the ultimate effect of the index of prosperity can at this date be made. But in no circumstances could Germany benefit therefrom, and the disappearance of this element of uncertainty is wholly to her benefit.

3. Attainment of financial autonomy: Under the Dawes plan Germany can only obtain the discharge of her obligations in marks by the existence of a system of transfer protection which involves a measure of external control. This brings attendant limiting effects on German credit and financial independence which render difficult, if not impossible, any mobilization of the German debt. The new plan would be abandoning the fundamental purposes for which it was intended if it did not cancel this clause and leave to Germany the obligation of facing her engagements on her own untrammeled responsibility.

4. Postponement safeguards: Nevertheless, if an exceptional emergency interrupts the normal course of economic life to which the scheme is adapted, Germany can, on her own initiative, resort to certain measures of temporary relief.

The annuity is divided into two parts, of which one is subject to postponement of transfer and payment.

Germany will thus be enabled, under certain circumstances, temporarily to relieve her balance of payments and will, in fact, enjoy the advantages of a form of transfer protection without its attendant limitations.

5. Deliveries: While the Dawes plan reluctantly accepted the expedient of deliveries in kind, the new plan, in spite of the desire of the creditor powers to dispose freely of their shares of the annuities, recognizes the undesirability of a sudden cessation of the system at present in force. The creditors are, therefore, to take deliveries in kind for 10 years but in decreasing amounts, beginning with 750,000,000.

6. Mobilization: From the point of view of the creditor powers an essential feature of the new plan which induces them to agree to reductions on their claims that leave them burdened with a considerable part of their expenditure for the damages caused by the war, is the fact that the annuity is paid in a form lending itself to mobilization.

7. Financial organization: The organization and machinery of the Dawes plan were based on the conviction that it must find its proper guaranty in the interest of all parties to carry it out in good faith. In aiming, as it did, at the transference of the reparation payments from the political to the economic and business sphere, it presumed constant cooperation of debtor and creditors alike.

The new system goes further along the same road, replacing the collaboration of separate administrative and governmental organization by common work in a purely financial institution in the management of which Germany is to have an appropriate part. The present administrative organizations can not have all the elasticity necessary for banking transactions of the magnitude of the payment and transfer of the annuities; but the new bank, in close association with the banks of issue and with the banking facilities at its command, will have all the necessary means of effecting these operations without disturbance to the German economy or to the economy of other countries.

In addition, it will be in a position to open up to trade new possibilities of development.

The operations which it is to undertake can not be disturbed or hampered without irreparable damage to the credit of the countries concerned. This assurance should make it possible to limit the guaranties established under the present system for the protection of the rights of the creditors to the minimum required for the prompt and facile commercialization of the mobilizable part of the annuity.

NEED OF GOOD WILL STRESSED

8. Summary: The proposed plan continues and completes the work begun by the Dawes plan, which the position alike of Germany and of the other countries made it impossible to do more than indicate in outline in 1924. By the final reduction and fixation of the German debt, by the establishment of a progressive scale of annuities and by the facilities which the new bank offers for lessening disturbance in the payment of the annuities, it sets the seal on the inclusion of the German debt in the list of international settlements.

If it involves appreciable reduction of payments to the creditor countries on what might have been anticipated under the continued operation of the Dawes plan, it at the same time eliminates the uncertainties which were inherent in that plan and were equally inimical to the interest of the debtor and to the creditors by substituting a definite settlement under which the debtor knows the exact extent of his obligations.

Part XII

Conclusions: It has been our object to make proposals for financial obligations which, with the conditions and safeguards that accompany them, shall be within Germany's capacity to pay, and we believe that we have achieved this purpose.

We realize the responsibility of this declaration and we recognize how much depends on the future attitude toward one another of the peoples which, by ratification of their respective governments, are to become parties to this agreement.

For the solution of the reparation problem is not only a German task but in the common interest of all the countries concerned; and it requires the cooperation of all parties. If their attitude should be tinged with antagonism, even with suspicion or a desire to create or continue one-sided economic discriminations, a settlement perfectly feasible with good will would sooner or later encounter difficulties, so that the long, slow, patient task of reconstruction in Europe would be definitely retarded. For without good faith and mutual confidence all agreements, all guaranties, are unavailing.

If, on the other hand, our proposals are adopted with good will by all concerned and the rest of the world has confidence in the constructive value of this mutual accord, then, indeed, there can be no reasonable doubt that the agreement will be capable of complete fulfillment and the nations it concerns will be brought to a higher level of economic stability and of mutual understanding than ever before.

Finally we would point out, like our predecessors on the Dawes committee, that

We regard our report as an indivisible whole. It is not possible, in our opinion, to achieve any success by selecting certain of our recommendations for adoption and rejecting the others, and we would desire to accept no responsibility for the results of such a procedure nor for undue delay in giving execution to our plan.

OUTLINE FOR INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENTS

Annex I

In section 3 of the following outline provision is made for an organization committee, which will have the duty of putting the bank project into effect. This outline has been drawn up for the benefit of the organization committee which will have power generally to modify its provisions or to make substitutions for any or all of them, provided always that such modifications or substitutions shall not be inconsistent with the essential functions of the bank with respect to the experts' plan as a whole.

1. Purpose, name, and location: The bank organized under this plan shall be known as the Bank for International Settlements.

The purpose of the bank is to provide additional facilities for the international movement of funds and to afford a ready instrument for promoting international financial relations. In connection with the German reparation annuities it shall perform, as trustee for the creditor countries, the entire work of external administration of this plan, shall act as the agency for the receipt and distribution of funds and shall supervise and assist in the commercialization and mobilization of certain portions of the annuities.

It shall be located in a financial center hereafter to be designated. In selecting the country of incorporation due consideration shall be given to obtaining powers sufficiently broad to enable it to perform its functions with requisite freedom and with suitable immunities from taxation.

2. Share capital: The authorized capital of the bank may be expressed in the currency of the country of domicile and shall amount to the round equivalent of $100,000,000. Upon the formation of the bank the whole authorized capital shall be issued, but only 25 per cent of each share shall be then paid in. The board of directors of the bank shall have power to call for the payment of further installments. It shall also have the power to authorize an increase or a reduction in the total capital stock of the bank.

In each country in which the shares of the bank may be offered for sale the shares shall be issued through the central bank of that country or other agency to which the central bank offers no objection.

In the seven countries to which members of the present committee belong, issues or allocations of shares shall always be made in equal amounts. The central banks of these countries, or banking groups not objected to by them, shall guarantee the subscription of the whole of the first issue in the round equivalent of $100,000,000. But they may agree with central banks or groups in other countries (particularly those interested in reparations) that an amount of the first issue not exceeding the round equivalent of $4,000,000 for each and not exceeding the round equivalent of $44,000,000 in all may be issued in other countries.

In the event of an increase in the authorized capital and a further issue of shares the distribution among countries shall be decided by a two-thirds majority of the directors of the bank on the above principles. In particular the percentage of the total shares issued in the seven countries first mentioned above shall not fall below 55.

Apart from countries interested in reparations, only countries which have at the time an offering of shares is made a currency stabilized on a gold or gold-exchange basis may participate.

The shares may be expressed in the currency of the country in which the bank is domiciled and shall state the amount of the share at the gold mint parity of the currency of the country in which they are issued. They shall be registered and continue to be registered, but may be freely negotiated. Transfers of the shares after issue shall not affect the voting power reserved to the central banks as described below.

Payments to the shareholders on account of dividends or at the liquidation of the bank shall be made in the currency of the country of domicile.

The shares shall carry no voting rights, but voting rights corresponding to the number of shares originally issued in each country shall be exercised by the central bank of that country in the general meetings of the bank (taking the place of the general meetings of shareholders), which the representatives of the participating central banks will attend.

The shares shall be entitled to participate in the profits of the bank as indicated in the section "Distribution of profits."

DUTIES OF THE ORGANIZATION COMMITTEE

3. For the purpose of taking the preliminary steps for putting the bank project into effect a temporary committee shall be created, which will be known as the organization committee. This committee shall be appointed by the governors of the central banks of the seven countries to which members of the present committee belong. The governor of each of these seven central banks shall be entitled to designate two members of the organization committee, with due regard for the necessity of including in its membership persons versed in banking, the issue of bonds, and the work of the present committee of experts.

If for any reason the governor of any of these central banks shall be unable officially or unofficially to designate members of the organization committee, or refrains from doing so, the governors of the remaining central banks shall invite two fellow nationals of the governor not participating to act as members of the committee.

The members thus selected shall have in all respects an equal vote in the work of the committee with the members otherwise chosen. The decisions of the organization committee shall be taken by a three-quarters vote.

As an essential part of its work the organization committee shall proceed with drawing up a charter for the bank, which shall be consistent with the provisions of the plan and shall take such steps as may be necessary to insure its timely granting or enactment by appropriate public authorities.

The organization committee shall, until such time as the board of directors of the bank is appointed and takes office, proceed with the physical organization of the bank. It shall arrange in accordance with the procedure prescribed in section 2 for the subscription of the capital stock, and in accordance with the procedure prescribed in section 4 for the appointment of the board of directors.

It shall call the first meeting of the board of directors and designate the temporary chairman to preside at that meeting pending the election of the regular chairman. It shall draw up the statutes for regulating the administration of the bank and submit them to the board of directors for consideration. These statutes shall make provision for such matters as are usual in banking organization and in particular provide for the following:

(1) The qualifications for membership on the board of directors.

(2) The nature and duties of the permanent committees of the board of directors, including the executive committee.

(3) The administrative departments to be created within the bank.

(4) The time and place of the meetings of the board of directors and of the executive committee.

(5) The form to be used for the convocation of the general meeting as well as the conditions and the methods for exercising voting rights on the part of representatives of central banks.

(6) The form of trust certificates which the bank shall issue to the creditor governments under the plan.

(7) Provisions with regard to liquidation of the bank.

The organization committee shall cooperate with the general organization committees provided for in this plan.

DIRECTORATE AND MANAGEMENT OF THE BANK

4. The entire administrative control of the bank shall be vested in the board of directors, whose duty it shall be to supervise and direct the operations of the bank and in general so to act as to carry out those purposes of the plan committed to the administration of the bank.

In particular the board of directors—

(1) Shall have the right to adopt, modify, limit, or extend the statutes of the bank in such a manner as shall not be inconsistent with the provisions of the plan.

(2) Shall have the power generally to modify the provisions contained in the outline of the bank's organization or to make substitutions for any or all of them, provided always that such modifications or substitutions shall not be inconsistent with the essential functions of the bank with respect to the experts' plan as a whole and with its existing engagements.

(3) Shall appoint the chief executive officer of the bank and fix his remuneration.

(4) May appoint an executive committee and delegate such powers to it as may be provided for in the statutes of the bank.

(5) May appoint advisory committees to deal with any questions upon which information or advice is desired.

The functions of a director are incompatible with those involving national political responsibilities. The statutes of the bank shall make the necessary provision in order to avoid such conflict of functions. All the directors shall be ordinarily resident in Europe or shall be in a position to give regular attendance at meetings of the board.

The board of directors shall be made up in the following manner:

(1) The governor (or, as the case may be, the chief executive officer) of the central bank of each of the seven countries to which members of the present committee belong, or his nominee, shall be a director of the bank ex officio. Each of these governors shall also appoint one director being a national of his country and representative either of finance or of industry and commerce.

In case the governor of any central bank shall be unable to act either officially or unofficially according to the provisions of this paragraph, or refrains from doing so, action shall then be taken in accordance with the alternative procedure given in section 12 of this outline.

(2) During the period of the German annuities the governor of the Bank of France and the president of the Reichsbank may each appoint, if they so desire, one additional director of his own nationality being a representative of industry or commerce.

(3) The governor of the central bank of each of the other countries participating in the share ownership of the bank, as provided in section 2 of this outline, shall furnish a list of four candidates of his own nationality for directorships.

Two of the candidates on each list shall be representative of finance, and the other two of industry or commerce. The governors in question may themselves be included in this list. From these lists the 14 or 16 directors mentioned in paragraphs 1 and 2 above shall elect not more than 9 other directors.

(4) From those first appointed, four groups of five directors shall be chosen by lot. Their terms, respectively, shall end at the close of each of the first, second, third, and fourth years from the establishment of the bank. Subject to this, the term of office of the directors shall be five years, but they may be reappointed.

(5) In case of vacancy in a position on the board of directors arising from death, resignation, or other causes, the vacancy shall be filled in the same manner as prescribed for the original appointments. If a vacancy occurs before the expiration of a term, it shall be filled for the remainder of the term only.

The directors shall elect a chairman annually from among their own number. The chairman's duties shall be to preside at meetings of the board of directors. At the first meeting, until the chairman shall have been elected, a member of the board, selected for the purpose by the organization committee, shall act as chairman.

The ordinary decisions of the board, including those involving elections, shall be made by a simple majority vote. In case of an even division the chairman shall have a deciding vote. For decisions involving the adoption or amendment of statutes of the bank, modifications or substitutions in the present project for the organization of the bank, the distribution among countries of additional issues of stock in the bank, or other matters for which the statutes of the bank make appropriate provision, a two-thirds majority shall be required. Should a member not be able to attend a meeting of the board, it will always be open to him to empower one of his colleagues, by registered letter or by telegram, to vote for him and on his behalf.

If decisions of the board are disputed on the ground that they are inconsistent with the provisions or intent of the plan, recourse may be had to arbitration under the procedures laid down in part 8 of the plan.

The chief executive officer of the bank shall select the officers and heads of the departments of the bank. For the latter the appointment shall be subject to the approval of the board of directors.

BANK HAS RIGHT TO RECEIVE DEPOSITS

5. Deposits: The bank, in carrying out its functions with respect to the facilitation of international settlements or in connection with the German annuities, shall have the right to receive deposits of a nature consistent therewith. The board of directors or, as it may decide, the executive committee shall consider applications to open deposit accounts with authority to determine whether such applications come within the scope of the bank's functions.

Deposits shall be received in only those currencies which satisfy in the opinion of the board of directors the practical requirements of the gold or gold-exchange standard.

Any classification of deposits which the board of directors may set up shall include—

(1) Deposits on annuity account: These deposits the bank receives in its capacity as trustee for the creditor governments. They shall be managed according to the procedure given in section 8 of this outline.

(2) Deposits from central banks: These may be either current-account deposits or investment-account deposits.

(3) Deposits on clearing account: The bank shall have the right, subject to such terms and conditions as the board of directors may set down, to accept deposits from central banks for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a fund for settling accounts among them. Such deposits may take the form of gold deliveries at the counters of the bank or of gold held for its account under earmark by any central bank participating in the fund for clearing accounts. The terms under which central banks may enter the clearing system, the rules and regulations for its operation, and the rates of exchange at which gold is to be accepted as deposits in the clearing fund or to be withdrawn from it shall be determined by the board of directors of the bank.

(4) Deposits originating in the exercise of the bank's functions in connection with the German annuities and tending to facilitate such functions: No such account shall be opened without the assent of the central bank of the country of which the prospective depositor is a national. If the governor of the central bank in question (or his nominee) is present and voting at the time the board of directors (or the executive committee) of the bank authorizes the opening of the account, his favorable vote shall be taken as giving the required assent.

(5) Deposits constituting guaranty funds as provided in Annex 8 and relative to the mobilization of the unconditional annuity: The interest and the share in the profits which will apply to these deposits are provided for in Annex 8 and in the section on profits in this outline.

(6) Special deposit of the German Government: During the first 37 years the German Government shall maintain at the bank a non-interest-bearing deposit equivalent to 50 per cent of the average deposit remaining in the annuity trust account as described in section 8 of this outline. This German Government deposit will not exceed 100,000,000 reichsmarks.

The bank shall have the right to pay interest on deposits, but only on deposits not susceptible of withdrawal until at least one month from the time of deposit.

The rate of interest to be paid will be determined by the board of directors or, as the case may be, by the executive committee. In allowing interest on deposits the board of directors shall give due consideration to the value of the services performed for the depositor and the size of the depositor's balance.

6. Loans, discounts, and investments: The board of directors shall determine the nature of the operations to be undertaken by the bank. Such operations shall be consistent with the policies of the central banks of the countries concerned. The bank may in particular have the right (a) to deal directly with central banks, or (b) to deal through central banks which have agreed to act as its agent and correspondent, or (c) to deal with banks, bankers' corporations, and individuals of any country in performing any authorized function, provided that the central bank of that country does not enter objection. Whenever any proposed credit operation affecting any particular market comes up for decision the favorable vote of the governor of the central bank concerned (or his nominees if the governor is not present) sitting as a member of the board of directors or the executive committee shall be taken as giving the assent of his central bank. If he declines to give his assent the proposed credit operation shall not be undertaken in his market.

FUNCTIONS OF BANK ARE OUTLINED

Thus the bank may perform such functions as the following:

(1) To buy and to sell gold coin and bullion, to earmark gold for the account of central banks, and to make advances to central banks on gold as security.

(2) To buy and to sell for its own account, either with or without its indorsement, bills of exchange and other short-term obligations of prime liquidity, including checks drawn or indorsed by central banks or in respect of which three obligees are responsible.

(3) To open and maintain deposit accounts with central banks.

(4) To rediscount for central banks bills taken from their portfolios, to make loans to them on the security of such bills, or to make advances to them against the pledge of other securities up to such amounts and for such period as may be approved by the board of directors.

(5) To buy and to sell for its own account intermediate or long-term securities (other than shares) of a character approved by the board of directors. Its holdings of such securities at any one time shall not exceed the total of its paid-in capital and reserve funds.

TO INVEST IN GERMANY

(6) To invest in Germany, with the assent of the Reichsbank, reichsmark funds standing to the credit of the bank at the Reichsbank which are not transferable owing to a declaration of transfer postponement.

The bank may realize upon any such investments, at its discretion, unless at the time the investment was agreed to by the Reichsbank some stipulation or arrangement affecting the possible sale was made a condition of such agreement.

The income from any such investments and the proceeds of such investments, if sold, shall be deposited to the credit of the bank at the Reichsbank. Such funds may be held as deposits under the conditions set out in Annex 8 of the plan of the reinvested consistently with the provisions of that annex.

If, in the opinion of the board of directors of the bank, counter-obligations issued against its investments in Germany as collateral can be advantageously sold on non-German markets, their net proceeds shall be distributed to the creditor countries in such proportions and under the same conditions as would have applied in the case of normal transfer.

The accounts of the creditor powers shall be charged with the reichsmark cost of the securities alienated or pledged in the course of any such transaction.

If the board of directors of the bank decides that counterobligations can not be sold advantageously the income and net proceeds of the investment, when finally disposed of, shall be distributed to the creditors.

AN ADDITIONAL POWER

The foregoing power is in addition to the general powers of the bank to make and realize upon investments for its own account at any time, subject to the provision that such investments are to be made with the assent of the central bank concerned.

(7) To issue its own obligations at long or short term, secured or unsecured, for the purpose of relending to any central bank, in each case upon the specific decision of the board of directors by a two-thirds vote.

The investment powers of the bank shall never be used in such a way as to exercise a predominant influence over business interests in any country.

The board of directors shall guide the investment undertakings of the bank accordingly and shall be entitled, if necessary, to make special regulations in this respect.

BANK RÔLE AS A TRUSTEE

7. Trustee functions, general provisions: The bank shall be trustee of the creditor governments in dealing with the German annuities and shall have such general powers of administration consistent with the plan as are necessary to the prompt and complete exercise of its duties in that respect. The organization committee shall draw up appropriate forms of trust agreement between the creditor Governments and the bank.

The trust functions of the bank shall include the following:

(1) Receiving and disbursing to the paying agents the service on the German external loan, 1924. If arrangements can legally be made, the bank shall also act in the capacity of one of the trustees for that loan.

(2) Receiving from Germany the various certificates and obligations provided for in the plan.

The bank shall hold these certificates and obligations in safekeeping and shall issue to the creditors its trust receipts for such certificates and obligations upon the completion of the payments called for under these certificates and obligations for any one year. The respective creditor Governments shall give their quittance to the bank, which, in turn, shall give its quittance to the German Government, canceling and returning any coupons representing the payments made.

(3) Receiving and distributing the service of the German annuities. The specifications of this function are given in section 8 of this outline below:

(4) Performing as regards deliveries in kind such functions as may be intrusted to it by the Governments in connection with the acceptance of the new plan.

DEALING WITH SAFEGUARDS

(5) Dealing with the measures of safeguard provided in the plan. Upon receiving notification from the German Government, consistently with the provisions of the plan, the bank shall convene the special advisory committee whose composition procedure and action are provided for in section 8 (E) of the plan.

(6) Acting as trustee under trust agreements. The bank shall have the power to act as trustee under trust agreements entered into by it with the approval or on the initiative of its board of directors, which has as its purpose the issue by the bank of trust certificates or other obligations against investments in securities pledged as collateral therefor.

This power may be exercised in addition to the powers with respect to investments provided for in section 6, above.

(7) Acting as trustee under special agreements. The bank shall be authorized to act as trustee under any special agreements among the creditor countries covering the reparation of the annuities or the guaranty of any parts of them.

In particular the bank shall have power to act as trustee under the agreement specified in Annex 8 of the plan. The bank shall be authorized to pay interest on any guaranty fund deposited with the bank in connection with any such trust and to arrange the terms on which the deposit is to be received and the fund managed, all in accordance with the plan.

(8) Acting as trustee at the request of a creditor government, the German Government or the central bank of any one of those countries. The bank shall have the right, upon the approval of the board of directors, to undertake any trust functions which any creditor government or the German Government or any of their respective central banks proposes that it shall undertake, provided such functions are generally consistent with the purpose of the plan.

DEPOSITORY FOR REICH PAYMENTS

The bank, in its capacity as trustee for the creditor government, shall receive and distribute the funds represented in the service of the German annuities.

In fulfilling these functions the bank shall work in cooperation with the central banks of the countries concerned. The relations thus established shall be the ordinary relationships obtaining between a bank and its correspondent banks.

The procedure for conducting these operations, subject to the right of the board of directors of the bank to make modifications, provided the general purposes of the plan are observed, shall be as follows:

(1) The bank shall maintain on its books as general deposit account to be known as the annuity trust account.

(2) The German Government shall be responsible for the payment to the bank in installments, as provided in the plant of all sums applicable to the service of the annuity.

These payments shall be credited to the annuity trust account.

The organization committee shall make the necessary provision whereby the reichsmark payments to the account of the bank at the Reichsbank in respect to the railway contribution shall be immediately released to the German Government against equivalent payment in foreign currencies to the annuity trust account.

PAYMENTS SUBJECT TO PLAN

3. Subject to the operation of the clauses of the plan relating to transfer postponement and except as the bank may request that payments be made in reichsmarks to the credit of its account at the Reichsbank described in paragraph 4 below, the German Government shall make all payments on account of the annuity in foreign currencies.

Payments in foreign currencies, not on a gold or a gold exchange standard, shall be made only with the consent of the bank.

As a matter of business practice, the bank, acting in advance of the payment dates, may notify the German Government or its agent of the bank's preferences with respect to the currencies in which the payment may be made. In case the bank's preferences are not complied with payment shall be made to the bank in the currencies of the seven countries whose nationals are members of the present experts committee, divided as nearly as may be in proportion to their respective shares in that portion of the annuity accruing to them.

4. All reichsmark payments for credit to the annuity trust account shall be paid into an account of the bank at the Reichsbank.

The bank shall be entitled to draw upon it in making all reichsmark payments necessary for the operation of the plan, including payments for administrative expenses incurred in Germany, payments for deliveries in kind, and any other disbursements on annuity account.

The bank shall also be entitled to withdraw reichsmarks from this account or to deposit reichsmarks in it in the course of conducting operations referred to in paragraph 14 below, and it may open other accounts at the Reichsbank for use in connection therewith.

Such additional accounts shall be operated according to ordinary business principles.

The bank shall have available at all times sufficient funds in reichsmarks to cover current requirements on account of payments for deliveries in kind.

BANK TO GIVE RECEIPT

5. The bank shall give its receipt to the German Government for all sums which it pays or causes to be paid into the annuity trust account in the course of carrying out its obligations under the plan.

The receipt of the bank shall make note of the currencies received, but credit shall be given in the reichsmark equivalent of those currencies. The German Government undertakes for the purpose of the present provision, as well as for the general purposes of the plan, that the reichsmark shall have and shall retain its convertibility into gold or devisen as contemplated in section 31 of the present Reichsbank law and that for these purposes the reichsmark shall have and shall retain a mint parity of one two thousand seven hundred and ninetieth kilogram of fine gold as defined in the German coinage law of August 30, 1924.

Sums paid in foreign currencies into the annuity trust account shall be calculated in terms of reichsmarks at the average of the middle rate (mittelkurs) prevailing on the Berlin Bourse during the half-monthly period preceding the date of payment. (See the letter from the president of the Reichsbank given in Annex 2.)

BANK'S RECEIPT NORMALLY IS DISCHARGE

6. The bank's receipt giving credit in reichsmarks for payments made into the annuity trust account by the German Government, or on its behalf shall, under normal operation of the plan, constitute a complete and sufficient discharge of the obligations of the German Government with respect to such payments.

If, however, transfer postponement should be in whole or partial effect, the bank's receipt giving credit in reichsmarks shall constitute a complete and sufficient discharge of the obligations of the German Government with respect to all payments into the annuity trust account made in foreign exchange and with respect to such portion of the payments made in reichsmarks as in the opinion of the bank provide current funds for deliveries in kind or services. As to the remainder, the receipt of the bank shall be in the nature of a temporary acknowledgment only.

7. Withdrawals from the annuity trust account shall be made in accordance with provisions to be made by the organization committee. The bank shall pay no interest on funds deposited in the annuity trust account.

(8) All disbursements for reparation purposes shall be charged against the annuity-trust account. A first charge against that account shall be the service currently due on the German external loan of 1924. The board of directors shall be entitled also to charge against the account such sums as they deem to be fair compensation for the services performed by the bank and such out-of-pocket expenses as it incurs in administering the plan. If, in the opinion of the directors, such service charges or costs can not be equitably charged to the account as a whole, they shall be entitled to allocate them in such proportions as they see fit to the individual shares of any of the creditor countries.

(9) After charging against the annuity-trust account the items referred to in the preceding paragraph and such other items as may be properly chargeable to the annuity as a whole, the bank shall proceed in the following manner with the distribution of the remainder of the available funds to the accounts of the several creditors in accordance with the provisions of the plan:

(10) During such period of time as payments for deliveries in kind and payments under reparation recovery act and similar procedures continue to be made, the bank shall make available to the several creditor countries reichsmark credits which shall be utilized subject to the applicable provisions of the plan.

(11) The bank, out of each installment paid into the annuity-trust account, shall set aside and accumulate funds for the payment of service on any bonds issued and outstanding which represent commercialized and mobilized shares in the annuity. Funds required for this purpose shall be charged against the accounts of the creditor countries in proportion to their respective interests in the bonds for which service is being accumulated.

At a suitable time in advance of the dates fixed for the payment of interest to the bondholders the bank shall pay to the paying agents the amounts due in interest and shall make disposition according to the terms of the bond of funds required for purposes of amortization.

(12) Out of the sums remaining in currencies other than reichsmarks, and after providing for any other charges called for under the plan, the directors of the bank shall distribute such aggregate amounts as they may determine to the creditor countries divided according to the propositions agreed upon among the respective governments. In withholding any sums from distribution and in fixing the dates at which distribution is effected the directors of the bank shall be guided on the one hand by the need for prompt action in the interest of the creditor countries and on the other by the interests of the plan as a whole, including due consideration to the bank by way of compensation for its services in managing the annuity.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR DISTRIBUTING CASH

(13) The bank shall make distribution of cash by crediting the accounts which the central banks of the several creditor countries maintain with it, notifying them simultaneously that such credits are for the accounts of their respective governments. The bank shall notify the proper financial authorities of the creditor countries when such credits have been made, and shall obtain receipts from them accordingly.

(14) The bank shall have the right to buy for its own account or for other trust accounts any reichsmarks held in the annuity trust account, giving foreign currencies in return. The foreign currencies thus acquired by the annuity trust account shall be available for distribution to the creditor countries under the conditions specified in the preceding paragraphs. The reichsmarks which the bank acquires shall be used only as the plan provides.

(15) The bank at the close of each business year, or more frequently if requested, shall give to the financial authorities of each creditor country a full accounting showing the disposition of its share in the annuity. As soon as any country has received its full share in the annuity for any one year its proper financial authority shall give to the bank his acknowledgment and shall enter the same upon the trust receipt provided for in paragraph 2 of section 7 of this outline. Such acknowledgment shall constitute a full and sufficient discharge to the bank with respect to the annuity covered by it.

9. Agency functions: The bank shall be qualified, on terms to be mutually agreed upon, to act as agent and correspondent of any central bank and to appoint any central bank to act as its agent and correspondent. The services to be performed by either or both parties under such agreements shall be subject, so far as the bank's interest is concerned, to the approval of its board of directors, and may include the purchase and sale of gold, of bills of exchange, and other securities, the earmarking of gold, the exchange of information and advice, and the transaction of any business consistent with the functions of the bank under the plan, on the one hand, and within the lawful functions of the central bank, on the other.

The bank shall act as agent of any creditor government in mobilizing any parts of the annuities and in managing the service of bonds issued in connection with any such mobilization. The procedure for conducting the bank's share in such operations, subject to the right of the organization committee or the board of directors of the bank to make modifications, provided the general purposes of the plan are observed, shall be as follows:

(1) Upon the request of the creditor governments, or any of them, the bank shall initiate operations for marketing bonds if, after examination, it considers market conditions warrant such operations. Such operations may take place in the international markets or may be restricted to the domestic market or markets of the countries concerned in the proposed mobilization, as the board of directors may decide. In determining the markets where offerings are to be made, the bank shall make inquiries from the central banks concerned, and if any central bank offers explicit objection to an offering being made in its own market the directors shall decide accordingly.

(2) The bank shall proceed to carry out requests from any creditor government for the creation of bonds to be issued on its domestic market in connection with conversion operations up to an amount represented in its share in the annuities. Each state shall be free to offer such bonds on its own market on whatever conditions it can obtain.

(3) If, in the opinion of the bank, the time is opportune for an issue of bonds even if no request for mobilization has been received, the bank may inform the creditor governments accordingly.

(4) If the creditor governments so request, the bank shall arrange with issuing bankers the conditions upon which bonds are to be issued on the open markets, either of one or of several countries as the case may be. The bank shall fix the minimum price at which such issues shall be made and it shall supervise the execution of the loan contracts.

(5) If bonds are issued against the annuity shares of more than one country, the proceeds shall be deposited with the bank, which shall then distribute the proceeds to the creditors according to their participation. The handling of the service of issued bonds shall be carried out as provided in the preceding section of this outline and in Annex 3.

(6) Apart from the operations described above, the bank may conduct any other operations (such, for instance, as contango operations on bonds issued against the annuities, advanced on coupons, etc.) as are involved in the supervision of transactions relating to these bonds and their service.

SPECIAL REGARD TO BANK'S LIQUIDITY

10. Reserve requirements: The bank, since its deposits in part will be derived from central banks, shall be administered with particular regard to maintaining its liquidity. For this purpose the bank shall observe the following reserve requirements:

(1) Deposits on clearing account: All funds held by the bank on clearing account, whether gold in vault or gold under earmark for the bank's account in central banks, shall be reserved for exclusive use in effecting settlements among the depositaries in the account.

(2) Deposits payable on demand: Against such deposits the bank shall hold a minimum of 40 per cent in gold or in devisen at their gold value. Devisen eligible as reserve against demand deposits shall consist of bank notes, prime bills of exchange having not more than 90 days to run of a character which central banks ordinarily buy for their own account, and checks payable on demand, drawn or indorsed by central banks or in respect of which three obligees, including a bank of known solvency, are responsible. All devisen included in the foregoing classifications shall be denominated in currencies which satisfy, in the opinion of the board of directors, all the practical requirements of the gold or gold exchange standard. Gold in transit or devisen satisfying the foregoing requirements which are in process of collection may be counted as reserve.

(3) Deposits on investment account (time deposits): Deposits payable in 15 days or less shall be classified as demand deposits and be subject to the reserve requirements specified in the preceding paragraph. Against investment-account deposits of longer maturity the bank shall hold a minimum of 25 per cent in gold or in devisen at their gold value. Devisen eligible as reserve against investment-account deposits shall meet the same requirements as those eligible as reserve against demand deposits.

If the board of directors is of opinion that these reserve requirements should be altered, they shall have the right, by a two-thirds vote, to increase, diminish, or otherwise modify them consistently with sound banking principles.

11. Distribution of profits: The yearly net profits of the bank shall be applied as follows:

(1) Five per cent of the yearly net profits shall be paid to the legal reserve fund of the bank until that fund reaches an amount equal to 10 per cent of the paid-in capital stock of the bank as it may stand from time to time. The legal reserve fund on the liquidation of the bank shall be merged with the general reserve fund.

(2) After making the foregoing provision for the legal reserve fund the yearly net profits shall be applied to the payment of an annual dividend up to 6 per cent on the paid-in share capital. This dividend shall be cumulative.

(3) Twenty per cent of the remainder shall be paid to the share holders until a total maximum dividend of 12 per cent is reached. The board of directors of the bank shall have the right in any year to withhold all or any part of this addition to the regular dividend and to place it to the credit of a special dividend reserve fund for use in maintaining the cumulative dividend provided for in the preceding paragraph, or for subsequent distribution to the shareholders.

HOW RESERVE FUND WILL BE BUILT UP

(4) After making provision for the foregoing, one-half of the yearly net profits then remaining shall be paid into the general reserve fund of the bank until it equals the paid-in capital. Thereafter 40 per cent shall be so applied until the general reserve fund equals twice the paid-in capital, 30 per cent until it equals three times the paid-in capital, 20 per cent until it equals four times the paid-in capital, 10 per cent until it equals five times the paid-in capital, and from that point onward 5 per cent.

The general reserve fund shall be available for meeting any losses incurred by the bank. In case it is not adequate for this purpose recourse may be had to the legal reserve fund provided for under paragraph 1. In case the general reserve fund by reason of losses or by reason of an increase in the paid-in capital falls below the amounts provided for above after having once attained them, the appropriate proportion of the yearly net profits shall again be applied until the position is restored. Upon the liquidation of the bank the balance in the general reserve fund shall be divided among the shareholders.

(5) The remainder of the yearly net profits, after meeting the foregoing requirements, shall be paid in to special funds, as follows:

(a) Seventy-five per cent to the governments or central banks of the creditor countries or of Germany which maintain time deposits at the bank, withdrawable in not less than five years from the time of deposit and, after four years, on not less than one year's notice. The fund shall be disbursed annually in amounts proportionate to the size of the deposits maintained by the respective governments or central banks aforesaid. The directors of the bank shall have power to determine the volume of each of these deposits which would justify the distribution provided for.

(b) Twenty-five per cent to be used to aid Germany in paying the last 22 annuities, provided the German Government elects to make a long-term deposit with the bank, withdrawable only on the terms specified under subparagraph (a) above and amounting to the minimum sum of 400,000,000 reichsmarks. If the German Government elects to make such long-term deposit amounting to a sum below 400,000,000 reichsmarks the participation of the German Government shall be reduced in proportion, and the balance shall be added to the 75 per cent in subparagraph (a). The fund shall carry compound interest at the maximum current rate paid by the bank on time deposits. If the fund should exceed the amount required to pay the 22 last annuities the balance shall be distributed among the creditor governments in proportion to their outpayments during that period. In case the German Government elects not to make any such long-term deposit, the fund shall be distributed as provided in subparagraph (a).

REPARATION COMMISSION'S DUTIES ENDED

12. General provisions: Any balances remaining in the hands of the agent general for reparation payments on the winding up of his accounts shall be transferred to the bank for credit to the annuity trust account, subject, of course, to the respective interests of the creditor countries therein and to any claims and commitments which may be outstanding at the time.

The relations of the Reparation Commission with Germany will be terminated. The bank shall take over as promptly as possible such functions of the Reparation Commission with respect to Germany as are required under the provisions of the plan and also such functions of the agent general for reparation payments, the trustees and commissioners holding office under the experts' plan of 1924, or any of them, as may be required under the provisions of the plan, all according to the general scheme given in Part 6 of the plan and Annex V.

If in any country there is more than one bank of issue, the terms "central bank" as used in this outline shall be interpreted to mean the bank of issue situated and operating in the principal financial market of that country.

If in the process of organizing the bank or in the performance of its functions after establishment it is found that the central bank of any country or its governor is unable to act officially or unofficially in any or all of the capacities provided for in this outline, or refrains from so acting, alternative arrangements not inconsistent with the laws of that country shall be made.

In particular, the governors of the central banks of the countries whose nationals are members of the present committee or as many of them as are qualified to act, may invite to become members of the board of directors of the bank two nationals of any country, the central bank of which is eligible under this outline to take part in forming the board of the bank but does not do so. The two nationals of that country upon acceptance of the invitation, shall be qualified to act in the full capacity of directors of the bank as provided in this outline.

Further, the directors of the bank shall be authorized to appoint in lieu of any central bank not exercising any or all of the functions, authorities or privileges which this outline provides that central banks make or shall exercise, any bank or banking house of widely recognized standing and of the same nationality.

Such bank or banking house upon appointment and acceptance shall be entitled to act in the place of the central bank in any or all capacities appropriate to central banks under this outline, provided only that such action is not inconsistent with the laws of the country in question.

The balance sheet and accounts of the bank shall be audited each year by independent auditors of recognized standing who shall be appointed by and report to the board of directors.

In case the measures proposed in the plan with respect to the avoidance of double and triple taxation of the bank are not fully in effect when the bank begins operations the board of directors shall deal with the matter within its discretion.

If any administrative act of the bank or any decision of the board of directors is disputed on the ground that it is inconsistent with the provisions or intent of the plan, recourse may be had to arbitration under the general provisions for arbitration.

Annex II

PARIS, JUNE 6, 1929.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I understand that certain of the creditor groups have raised the question as to the interpretation to be given to the word "reichsmarks" in which the obligations of Germany under the new plan are expressed. In my opinion the question is a purely formal one as the reichsmark is de facto on a gold basis and has proved itself since its creation as stable a currency as any other in the world.

Nevertheless, in order that there should be no possibility of question as to the exact definition of Germany's liability, I am of opinion that the provisions of section 31 of the bank law of August 30, 1924, should be put into effect and I am therefore prepared to introduce the necessary resolutions with the managing board and the general council of the Reichsbank at the latest in connection with the putting into force of the present plan by the Governments.

Believe me, dear Mr. Chairman.

Yours sincerely,

HJALMAR SCHACHT.

OWEN D. YOUNG, Esq.,
Chairman of the Committee of Experts,
Paris, Hotel George V.

MOBILIZATION OF DEBT FOR BOND ISSUE

Annex III

1. Form of indebtedness: Germany's debt shall be fixed in the form of annuities. A certificate of indebtedness representative of these annuities shall be delivered by Germany to the bank as trustee of the creditor powers.

To this certificate of indebtedness shall be attached coupons representative of each annuity payable by Germany. Each annuity coupon shall be divided into two parts: The first, representative of that portion of the annuity not subject to postponement and corresponding to the portion of Germany's indebtedness which is mobilizable; the second, representative of that portion of the annuity which is subject to transfer postponement and corresponding to the portion of Germany's indebtedness which is not mobilizable.

Each part of the annuity coupon enjoys equal rights throughout except with respect to the agreed privilege of postponement.

2. Bond issues: Upon the request of all or of any one of the creditor Governments the bank as trustee, if it considers such a course opportune, has the right to require the creation of, and the German Government is obligated to create, issuable bonds representing the capitalization of any part of the portion of the annuity coupons not subject to postponement.

The bank, however, is obliged under the provisions set forth in paragraph 7 (D) to accede to requests for the creation of bonds made to it by governments which are desirous to undertaking internal issues of German bonds in connection with conversion operations.

The certificate of indebtedness, the coupons attached thereto, and such bonds as shall be issued in capitalization of any parts of the annuities not subject to postponement shall be made out in the name of the German Reich and shall represent the obligation of the Reich guaranteed by its general revenues.

3. Collateral guaranties: A. The railway company shall deposit with the Bank for International Settlements a certificate acknowledging its liability in respect of the obligations laid down in part 8 (a) of this plan.

B. The Reich, furthermore, shall undertake to assign certain revenues (customs and certain taxes on consumption) for the service of the certificates and as far as they may be exchanged into negotiable bonds for the service of such bonds. This assignment will constitute a negative pledge and will be ruled by the following conditions:

(a) The assigned revenues as estimated for the budget 1929 must have a total yield of not less than 150 per cent of the highest budgetary contribution payable by Germany under this plan.

(b) The Reich will not pledge the assigned revenues for any other loan or credit except with the consent of the bank. If the assigned revenues should be pledged with the consent of the bank for any other loan or credit, the charge for reparation payment will rank ahead of the charge for such other loan or credit.

(c) If at any time the total yield of the assigned revenues should fall below 150 per cent of the highest budgetary contribution payable by Germany under this plan, the bank may require that additional revenues sufficient to assure the immediate restoration of the yield to the above percentage be assigned.

RULES GOVERNING BOND ISSUANCE

4. General form of the bonds: The value of the issuable bonds may, according to circumstances, be expressed in dollars equivalent to so many pounds, reichsmarks, francs, etc., or inversely in pounds, in reichsmarks, in francs, etc., always provided that the principal of any bond issued in a particular market shall be payable only in the currency of that market at the equivalent of its gold value.

The coupons shall be expressed in dollars, pounds, francs, etc., and shall be payable at the rate of the pay on all markets on which the bonds are quoted.

In the event of an issue, the amount and form of bonds to be created, as well as the specification of the currency in which they shall be issued, shall be fixed by the bank in accordance with the requests which it receives from the creditor governments taking into account the residerata of the issuing bankers.

After a period of 10 years the bank, in agreement with the issuing bankers and the creditor governments, may consider the issue of bonds the service of which may be paid in different currencies at par at the bearers' option.

5. Status of mobilizable portions of annuity coupons: The service of interest and amortization of the mobilizable or mobilized portions of the annuity coupons shall be paid to the bank in foreign currencies by the German Reich without any reservation, if on its own responsibility; the financial service of these mobilizable or mobilized portions of the annuities shall constitute a final, absolute, and unconditional international obligation in the ordinary financial sense of the word.

6. Status of nonmobilizable portions of the annuity coupons: The payment of the nonmobilizable portion of the annuity coupons shall be made to the bank by the German Government in the same conditions as that of the mobilized or mobilizable portion of the annuity coupons. Nevertheless:

1. Bonds representing the nonmobilizable portion of the annuity coupons can not be created except with the consent of the German Government.

2. It is in respect of the nonmobilizable portion of the annuity coupons that the German Government may avail itself of the right of postponing transfer or payment granted elsewhere in this plan.

7. Functions of the bank; supervision of agreements: It shall supervise both on behalf of the creditor governments and the bondholders and on behalf of the debtor governments the strict execution of the agreements concluded between them on the established basis.

B. Distribution without priority: The bank shall distribute moneys in payment of the mobilized or mobilizable portions of the annuity coupon among the whole of the bondholders and the creditor government in proportion to the rights of each to share in the portion of the annuity coupons not subject to postponement without allowing a priority of any kind to any tranche or to any claim. It will distribute the moneys relating to the nonmobilizable portions of the annuity coupons amongst the creditor governments, the transfer of these moneys taking place only after the transfer of the moneys relating to the mobilized or mobilizable portion of the annuity coupon.

C. Issue of bonds on the markets: The bank shall inform the creditor governments whenever the issue of bonds representing the capitalization of some part of the mobilizable portion of the annuity coupon is practicable in its opinion.

It will be the function of the bank to fix the minimum price of issue.

Each of the creditor governments shall be entitled, but not obliged, to issue its share of the bonds in its own country. It may come to an understanding with the bankers of another country to cede to them all or part of this share; but these bankers shall be obliged to proceed to this issue only on the minimum conditions fixed by the bank. Any of these governments may also refuse to allow its quota to be created; in that event the portion of the annuity corresponding to this quota shall continue to be paid to the governments in question as before.

D. Issue of conversion bonds: Creditor governments desiring to proceed to internal issues of German bonds in connection with operations for the conversion of national debt shall have the option of asking the bank to create bonds representing all or part of their quota of the mobilizable portion of the annuity coupons.

These bonds shall constitute national branches which each Government shall be free to offer on its own market on whatever conditions it can obtain. These bonds shall be quoted only on their market or issue.

The service of these bonds shall, however, be effected pari passu with that of the other bonds. The coupons of these bonds shall be expressed in pounds, dollars, French francs, etc., and shall be payable at the rate of the day on all the markets on which the mobilizable bonds are quoted.

Conditions of Delayed Transfers

Annex IV

Conditions of postponement of transfer and of payment:

1. Postponement of transfer: The German Government by giving at least 90 days' previous notice shall have the right to suspend for a maximum period of two years from its due date all or part of the transfer of that part of the annuity described as postponable. Transfer postponement thus declared shall affect the postponable annuity as and from that date only on which transfer postponement becomes effective.

If during any annuity year the German Government shall avail itself of this power, the transfers falling due during any second year can not be postponed for more than one year from their respective due dates unless and until the transfers due during the first year shall have been effected in full, in which case the transfers due during such second year may be postponed two years from their respective due dates, and the transfers due during any third year can not be postponed at all until the transfers due during the first year have been effected in full.

2. Liability: The liability of the German Government with regard to the annuities contemplated in this plan is not fulfilled until all sums, the transfer or payment of which may be from time to time postponed, have actually been transferred in full to the Bank of International Settlements in approved foreign currencies or utilized for deliveries in kind.

3. Postponement of payment: At any time when postponement of transfer is in effect, but not until one year after it has become effective, the German Government shall have the right to postpone payment for one year of 50 per cent of any sum the transfer of which shall then be susceptible of postponement under paragraph 1 of this annex. This percentage may be increased upon the recommendation of the advisory committee provided for in part 8 (e) of this report.

Proposed Bond Issues and the Rules Which Govern Them

Marks: Any sum in reichsmarks the transfer of which is postponed shall (save as provided for in par. 3 above) be deposited to the account of the bank of international settlements at the Reichsbank for eventual release of balances, not absorbed by deliveries in kind, against payment in foreign currencies by the German Government. At all times the employment, whether for investment or as indicated below, of reichsmarks so deposited shall be subject to agreement between the Reichsbank and the Bank of International Settlements. In determining the manner in which these sums shall be employed regard shall be had to the possibilities that special programs of deliveries in kind can be arranged with the German Government.

(a) During the first 10 years by restricting or extending the program of deliveries in kind laid down for those years.

(b) After the first 10 years by arranging a special program of deliveries in kind where the interests of particular industries in Germany and of particular creditor countries which would otherwise suffer may be met without prejudice to the general situation.

Provided, however, That any special arrangement which may be made between any creditor country and Germany with a view to reserving to the said creditor the right to receive certain deliveries in kind in case of moratorium shall be carried through subject to a copy of the agreement therefor being communicated to the Bank of International Settlements.

5. Interest: Interest at the rate of 1 per cent per annum above the prevailing Reichsbank discount rate or at 5½ per cent, whichever is lower, shall be paid half yearly by the German Government on the daily amount of the sums the transfer or payment of which has been postponed and which have not been invested or utilized for deliveries in kind.

This interest shall be treated in all respects similarly to the principal sum upon which it accrues, and the return upon that portion of the funds actually invested shall be for the account of the creditor powers.

Organization Committees Recommended

Annex V

1. Just as the Dawes plan was put into force by the agreement of the governments concerned laid down in the London protocol, the new plan will have to be put into force by agreements of the governments.

Once the governments have accepted in principle the new plan, it seems advisable that in addition to any preparatory measures necessary for the conference of the government steps should be taken for the elaboration of detailed schemes about certain technical questions.

Generally speaking, it seems advisable to have these schemes elaborated by special organization committees, which should be composed substantially in the same way as the organization committees of the Dawes plan; i. e., by the same number of representatives of the creditors as of the debtor, with a neutral chairman to be called in case of disagreement. The organization committee for the new bank would, however, be differently composed.

We recommend such organization committees for the following questions:

(1) Organization committee for the new bank as provided for in Annex 1 of the report.

(2) Organization committee for the adoption of the German loans set up under the Dawes plan, composed of members of the subcommittees next mentioned, with one neutral chairman.

This committee should have three subcommittes, to be composed each of two creditor members nominated by the Reparation Commission and two German members nominated by the German Government—

(a) For the adaptation, in agreement with the trustees, of the system under which the securities assigned to the Dawes loan are managed and of the machinery of the assigned revenues referred to in Annex III.

(b) Adaptation of the bank law (independence of the Reichsbank).

(c) Adaptation of the German railway law (independence of the German Railway Co.).

2. After the governments have concluded a comprehensive arrangement for putting into force the new plan it will be necessary to provide some special organization which will undertake the administrative work of setting up the organizations provided for by the new plan and of handing over to them the functions of the existing organizations.

As there is only one new organization in which is going to centralize all the various functions concerning the execution of the new plan, viz, the Bank of International Settlements, it is necessary to provide one special body only for the setting up of this organization, this body to be the organization committee for the new bank referred to above, as provided for in Annex I.

The task of transferring the functions of the existing organizations to the Bank of International Settlements should be conferred upon a small special committee composed of two members of the organization committee for the Bank of International Settlements, as well as of representatives of the German Government, the agent general, and the Reparation Commission, an equitable representation being assured to the powers represented upon the present committee.

Recommendation on Belgian Marks

Annex VI

The Belgian mark claim: The experts recognize that though the settlement of the so-called Belgian mark claim is not within the terms of reference to this committee, their Belgian colleagues can not reasonably be expected, in view of the discussions which preceded the call of the committee, to join in the report except on the understanding that an agreement for the settlement of the mark claim will be reached by direct negotiations between the Belgian and German Governments. The experts understand that negotiations for the purpose are about to open as between the two governments and they recognize that the new plan can not become operative until the Belgian and German Governments have come to an internationally binding agreement on the mark claim; and in view of the German Government's undertakings as stated in the correspondence annexed (letters from Doctor Schacht of June 3 and from Doctor Kast of June 4) they recommend to their respective governments accordingly:

If the settlement of the marks claim takes the form of an annuity and if the Belgian and German Governments so request, the experts are ready to recommend to their governments to offer no objection to the annuity taking the identical form of the annuities covered in this report and to its being administered in the same way by the Bank of International Settlements.

Annex VI (A)

JUNE 3, 1929.

MR. OWEN D. YOUNG,
Hotel George V, Paris.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Supplementing my talk with you of last Saturday on the Belgian mark matter I have the honor to inform you that the German Government is prepared to proceed along the following lines:

(1) Immediately to enter into a pactum de contrahendo with the Belgian Government (either by exchange of notes or by signed protocol) whereby the two Governments will agree to enter into negotiations on a new basis looking to a definite settlement of the mark controversy.

(2) To commence such negotiations promptly and to agree that these negotiations should be concluded before the new reparation plan has been put into force by the Governments.

(3) The German Government has appointed Herr Ministerial Direktor Ritter as its special representative to handle the above matters, and he is prepared to open discussions promptly.

The substance of the foregoing has been communicated to the Belgian minister in Berlin, whose reply the German Government now awaits.

The foregoing proposal has been made by the German Government in a conciliatory spirit and in an effort in good faith to remove this impediment to the normal development of friendly relations between the two countries concerned.

I hope that the foregoing statements may remove any misunderstandings which exist as to the position of the German Government with respect to the Belgian mark matter; and in view of such misunderstandings heretofore I would appreciate your advising the other members of the committee of the position of the German Government as stated herein.

With assurances of my personal esteem, I am,
Sincerely yours,

DR. HJALMAR SCHACHT.

Annex VI (B)

PARIS, June 4, 1929.

MR. THOMAS W. LAMONT,
Hotel Ritz, Paris.

DEAR MR. LAMONT: Confirming my conversation of this morning with you and Mr. Perkins, I desire to make clear the following:

(1) The position of the German Government as stated in Doctor Schacht's letter to the chairman, of June 3, 1929, is in no way changed.

(2) Doctor Ritter, of the German Foreign Office, representative for the settlement of the mark question, has again declared to us on behalf of the German Government that:

(a) He is prepared to start negotiations immediately. He suggests that such negotiations should take place in Brussels or Berlin.

(b) No territorial questions will be raised in these negotiations.

Sincerely yours,

KASTL.

Annex VI (C)

PARIS, June 4, 1929.

MY DEAR PRESIDENT: You have been so good as to communicate to me the letters which were sent to you by Doctor Schacht and Doctor Kastl in the name of their Government on June 3 and 4, respectively.

In the first of these letters Doctor Schacht stated that his Government is ready to accept an engagement to negotiate with the Belgian Government upon a new basis in order to arrive at a definitive settlement of the mark question.

He adds that the German Government is willing to begin these negotiations rapidly and to agree that they should be terminated before the new reparation plan has been put into force by the Governments.

In the second, Doctor Kastl declares that no territorial question will be raised in these negotiations.

You are aware of the reasons because of which the Belgian delegation up to the present has refused to sign the report before a settlement of the mark question had been realized, not desiring to find itself later in a position which it knew to be without issue, and, on the other hand, standing out for reparation of the serious damage which Belgium has suffered.

Considering the engagement of the German Government and considering also the recommendation which the experts unanimously decided to-day to address to their respective Governments and which will be incorporated in the report, the Belgian experts agree to sign the report before the mark negotiations have been terminated.

I reserve the right to communicate to the German Government the different memoranda which have been exchanged during the course of the work of the experts.

Believe me, etc.

E. FRANCQUI.

HOW THE ANNUITIES ARE DISTRIBUTED

Annex VII

We recommend that the annuities set out in Part VIII of this report should be distributed among the creditor powers as follows (in millions of reichsmarks):

German financial year	France	British Empire	Italy	Belgium	Rumania	Serbia	Greece	Portugal	Japan	Poland	United States	Total
1929-30	A418.8	53.1	42.5	A70.7	----------	72.1	----------	6.0	A13.2	0.5	65.9	742.8
1930-31	900.7	366.8	156.0	98.2	10.0	79.4	3.6	13.2	13.2	.5	66.3	1,707.9
1931-32	838.4	362.0	190.8	102.6	12.0	79.3	6.7	13.2	13.2	.5	66.1	1,685.0
1932-33	879.8	364.5	196.3	105.9	13.0	79.4	6.9	13.2	13.2	.5	66.1	1,730.2
1933-34	879.1	454.8	192.4	100.3	13.9	72.4	7.2	12.6	11.9	.4	59.4	1,804.3
1934-35	941.8	450.1	193.6	102.8	14.7	72.5	7.2	12.6	11.9	.4	59.4	1,866.9
1935-36	962.8	444.9	195.2	110.0	16.1	72.6	7.2	12.6	11.9	.4	59.4	1,892.9
1936-37	1,004.1	438.1	197.2	116.9	17.2	73.8	8.2	12.6	11.9	.4	59.4	1,939.7
1937-38	1,031.8	452.6	198.6	114.7	18.3	71.5	8.3	12.4	11.4	.4	57.2	1,977.0
1938-39	1,052.4	447.1	200.2	114.8	19.1	71.8	8.5	12.4	11.4	.4	57.2	1,995.3
1939-40	1,087.3	442.5	204.1	117.0	23.7	74.5	8.4	13.6	11.9	.4	59.4	2,042.8
1940-41	1,179.9	457.1	211.5	117.1	20.1	76.1	8.4	13.6	11.9	.4	59.4	2,155.5
1941-42	1,171.2	456.3	223.1	123.9	20.0	83.9	8.3	14.2	13.2	.5	66.1	2,180.7
1942-43	1,191.4	446.0	225.5	124.1	20.6	88.2	8.3	14.2	13.2	.5	66.1	2,190.0
1943-44	1,190.8	439.8	227.8	124.2	21.1	88.3	8.3	14.2	13.2	.5	66.1	2,194.3
1944-45	1,190.7	450.5	230.5	123.9	21.1	88.5	8.3	14.2	13.2	.5	66.1	2,207.5
1945-46	1,190.8	439.1	233.3	124.0	25.7	88.7	8.3	14.2	13.2	.5	66.1	2,203.8
1946-47	1,188.1	432.4	235.6	124.1	28.4	88.7	8.3	14.2	13.2	.5	66.1	2,199.5
1947-48	1,185.2	446.6	237.1	124.1	31.2	88.8	8.3	14.2	13.2	.5	66.1	2,215.2
1948-49	1,185.7	439.1	239.4	134.2	31.2	88.8	8.3	14.2	13.2	.5	66.1	2,210.0
1949-50	1,248.6	439.6	248.1	134.6	31.1	99.8	8.1	15.1	15.2	.5	70.1	2,316.8
1950-51	1,277.9	440.5	260.1	134.7	31.1	99.9	8.1	15.1	15.2	.5	70.1	2,359.2
1951-52	1,248.5	441.1	272.8	134.7	31.1	100.0	8.1	15.1	15.2	.5	70.1	2,343.2
1952-53	1,248.3	441.4	275.6	134.7	31.1	100.0	8.1	15.1	15.2	.6	76.0	2,346.2
1953-54	1,248.2	445.6	278.5	134.7	31.1	100.1	8.1	15.1	15.2	.6	76.1	2,353.3
1954-55	1,248.1	453.6	281.3	134.7	31.1	100.7	8.1	15.1	15.2	.6	76.1	2,364.6
1955-56	1,248.2	444.2	285.4	134.7	31.1	101.2	8.1	15.1	15.2	.6	76.1	2,359.8
1956-57	1,248.1	434.7	289.0	134.9	31.1	101.2	8.1	15.1	15.2	.6	76.1	2,354.2
1957-58	1,278.6	407.3	292.6	134.0	31.1	102.2	8.1	15.1	15.2	.6	76.1	2,361.8
1958-59	1,302.8	419.2	296.7	134.8	31.1	103.1	8.1	15.1	15.2	.6	76.1	2,393.8
1959-60	1,278.4	408.3	299.8	134.8	31.1	103.1	8.1	15.1	15.2	.6	76.1	2,370.6
1960-61	1,278.2	406.1	310.8	134.7	31.1	104.5	8.1	15.1	15.2	.6	76.1	2,380.5
1961-62	1,278.2	412.0	321.5	134.5	31.1	105.9	8.1	15.1	----------	.6	76.1	2,398.3
1962-63	1,278.1	400.5	324.8	134.8	31.1	105.9	8.1	15.1	----------	.6	76.1	2,390.2
1963-64	1,278.0	410.1	327.8	134.6	31.1	106.0	8.1	15.1	----------	.6	76.1	2,402.6
1964-65	1,277.9	406.3	331.0	134.9	31.1	106.0	8.1	15.1	15.2	.6	76.1	2,402.1
1965-66	1,297.5	410.6	334.0	134.5	31.1	106.0	8.1	15.1	----------	----------	76.1	2,428.8
1966-67	794.2	357.2	290.1	53.1	31.7	22.7	9.7	6.2	----------	----------	40.8	1,607.7
1967-68	794.1	346.7	295.1	52.8	36.8	22.7	9.7	8.2	----------	----------	40.8	1,605.9
1968-69	790.9	349.4	302.3	53.0	39.8	22.7	9.7	8.2	----------	----------	40.8	1,616.7
1969-70	787.7	355.7	309.3	53.1	42.9	22.7	9.7	8.2	----------	----------	40.8	1,630.0
1970-71	787.5	361.2	317.6	53.2	42.9	22.7	9.7	8.2	----------	----------	40.8	1,643.7

HOW THE ANNUITIES ARE DISTRIBUTED—Continued

German financial year	France	British Empire	Italy	Belgium	Rumania	Serbia	Greece	Portugal	Japan	Poland	United States	Total
1971-72	787.3	361.8	327.7	52.8	42.9	22.7	9.7	8.2			40.8	1,653.9
1972-73	787.1	366.1	332.0	52.8	42.9	22.7	9.7	8.2			40.8	1,662.3
1973-74	786.9	365.4	336.3	52.8	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2			40.8	1,665.7
1974-75	786.8	364.1	340.5	52.8	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2			40.8	1,668.4
1975-76	786.6	366.4	344.6	53.2	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2			40.8	1,675.0
1976-77	786.3	363.8	350.8	53.5	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2			40.8	1,678.7
1977-78	786.1	364.8	356.9	53.3	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2			40.8	1,685.4
1978-79	785.9	365.1	367.1	53.2	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2			40.8	1,695.5
1979-80	785.7	364.7	372.9	52.9	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2			40.8	1,700.4
1980-81	785.5	363.5	385.1	53.1	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2			40.8	1,711.3
1981-82	785.2	365.7	400.1	53.3	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2				1,687.6
1982-83	785.0	362.9	407.2	53.4	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2				1,691.8
1983-84	784.7	372.0	409.8	53.4	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2				1,703.3
1984-85	784.4	346.2	416.5	53.0	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2				1,683.5
1985-86	784.1	414.1	†418.8	53.0	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2				925.1
1986-87	783.9	414.1	†425.0	53.3	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2				931.4
1987-88	753.3	372.1	†382.6	50.6	42.9	22.6	9.7	8.2				897.8
AVERAGE PAYMENTS FOR PERIOD 1929 TO 1965
1929-1965	1,046.5	409.0	213.7	115.5	20.1	84.0	7.0	13.2	15.2	0.5	66.1	1,988.8

FIRST PERIOD A HALF YEAR

(A) The year 1929–30 comprises only the seven months from September, 1929, to March, 1930. Those sums correspond to the excess war-debt receipts of Great Britain over war-debt payments during those three years. We recommend that out of the unconditional annuity of 660,000,000 reichsmarks the amount of 500,000,000 reichsmarks should be allocated to France, subject to the provision of a guaranty fund by the French Government in accordance with the arrangements set out in Annex VIII.

So far as concerns the balance of the unconditional annuity and the amounts by which it is increased as the requirements for the service of the Dawes loan become less and cease, Italy will have no claim until so much of the balance as may be required for an equitable apportionment shall have been allotted by agreement of all the governments to the remaining powers entitled to share in the annuities provided for by this plan.

3. The schedule of deliveries in kind set out in Part VIII (F) shall be allocated among the creditor governments as follows (in millions of marks):

Years	France (54.45 per cent)	Britain (23.05 per cent)	Italy (10 per cent)	Belgium (4.5 per cent)	Japan (0.75 per cent)	Serbia (5 per cent)	Portugal (0.75 per cent)	Rumania (1.10 per cent)	Greece (0.40 per cent)	Total
First	408.4	172.9	75.0	33.7	5.6	37.5	5.6	8.8	3.0
Second	381.2	161.4	70.0	31.5	5.2	35.0	5.2	7.7	2.8	700
Third	353.9	149.8	65.0	29.2	4.9	32.5	4.9	7.2	2.6	650
Fourth	326.7	138.3	60.0	27.0	4.5	30.0	4.5	6.6	2.4	600
Fifth	299.5	126.8	55.0	24.7	4.1	27.5	4.1	6.1	2.2	550
Sixth	272.3	115.3	50.0	22.5	3.7	25.0	3.7	5.5	2.0	500
Seventh	245.0	103.7	45.0	20.2	3.4	22.5	3.4	5.0	1.8	450
Eighth	217.8	82.2	40.0	18.0	3.0	20.0	3.0	4.4	1.6	400
Ninth	190.6	80.7	35.0	15.7	2.6	17.5	2.6	3.9	1.4	350
Tenth	163.4	69.2	30.0	12.5	2.3	15.0	2.3	3.3	1.2	300

Proceeds of reparation recovery acts already in force or of systems substituted therefor by agreement with the German Government shall be reckoned as deliveries in kind for this purpose.

4. The sums received under the Dawes plan in respect of the period 1st April to 31st August, 1929, shall, after allowing for expenses in respect of administration of the Dawes plan and armies of occupation, be redistributed to the extent necessary to provide each of the creditor powers with cover for its net debt outgoings during the year ending 31st March, 1930 (these outgoings are as stated in part of the report). The necessary adjustments for this purpose could be made against the payments during the last seven months of that year.

5. It is suggested that the division between the creditor governments proposed in the present annex should be accepted as a definite settlement of all questions relating to the distribution of German payments and should not be affected by any existing arrangements or by the result of accounts relating to past transactions.

On the other hand, it is not suggested that the present plan should affect or disturb in any way any existing interallied agreements relating to payments, cessions, or deliveries on the part of the powers formerly allied with Germany. It may, however, prove necessary to examine any provisions of these agreements under which receipts by the creditor powers could be accounted for as between themselves in terms of German C bonds in order that they may be given an application consistent with their original practical purpose.

6. The approval of the report by the experts of the principal creditor countries is made formally contingent on this distribution.

GUARANTY FUND IN RESPECT OF UNCONDITIONAL ANNUITIES

Annex VIII

1. The experts of the principal creditor governments have agreed that there shall be assigned to France out of the unconditional annuity 500,000,000 reichsmarks in order to allow her to mobilize a substantial part of her share in the total annuity.

The aforesaid experts consider that this assignment should be final and in no case subject to diminution, but should continue to be included in the total assigned to France, subject only to the alteration contemplated in the special memorandum signed concurrently with the report of this committee.

2. In order to equalize the short payments to other creditors which would arise from a postponement of the postponable portion of the annuity it was agreed that France should deposit a special guaranty fund with the Bank of International Settlements.

3. On the coming into force of this plan France will give to the Bank of International Settlements an undertaking to deposit in a trust fund on the demand of the Bank of International Settlements foreign currencies to a total value of 500,000,000 reichsmarks. It is understood that this demand will not be made until action has been taken leading to the calling of the advisory committee referred to in section 8 (c) of the report. The amount of 500,000,000 reichsmarks will be reduced by the amount of any payments made by France under paragraph 4 below.

The Bank of International Settlements may retain this deposit as long as it deems necessary, but shall pay interest on it at its maximum current rate for long-term deposits. This deposit, if it is agreed that it shall remain for more than five years, shall be entitled to participate in the profits of the bank divisible under part 5 of Annex I.

4. As soon as mobilization of any part of the French annuity has been effected, France will deduct from the proceeds 10 per cent thereof, or 500,000,000 reichsmarks, whichever is the less, and will deposit it to the credit of the trust account of the Bank of International Settlements referred to in the preceding paragraph.

5. Upon postponement of transfer of any payment due from Germany, the Bank of International Settlements shall take the following steps:

(a) Offer to the creditors other than France devisen up to the amount necessary (but not exceeding 500,000,000 reichsmarks divided, if necessary, proportionately) to insure to each of them receipts in devisen equal to the amounts they would have received had the nonpostponable annuity been distributed in the same proportions as the total annuity.

(b) Debit the trust fund set up under paragraph 2 above with the amount of devisen actually utilized under paragraph (a).

(c) Receive from each creditor in exchange for devisen accepted under paragraph (a) an assignment in favor of the trust fund of an equivalent amount of the annuity transfer of which has been postponed.

6. As and when Germany effectively transfers the postponed amounts, the bank will credit to the trust fund its share thereof in accordance with the assignment in paragraph 5 (c) above.

Special memorandum of the experts of the principal creditor powers and of Germany regarding outpayments.

Concurrent memorandum, but not part of the report.

(Signed concurrently with the report of the committee of experts.)

1. In the annuities provided in the report, the following amounts are required to cover outpayments:

(In millions of reichsmarks)

2— 965.1	17—1,460.9	32—1,525.4	47—1,634.2
3— 942.3	18—1,456.9	33—1,543.2	48—1,637.9
4— 955.4	19—1,472.3	34—1,535.0	49—1,644.6
5—1,136.4	20—1,467.1	35—1,547.4	50—1,654.7
6—1,199.0	21—1,461.5	36—1,546.8	51—1,659.6
7—1,224.9	22—1,503.9	37—1,573.7	52—1,670.5
8—1,271.8	23—1,487.9	38—1,566.9	53—1,687.6
9—1,334.0	24—1,498.1	39—1,566.1	54—1,691.8
10—1,352.5	25—1,498.1	40—1,575.9	55—1,703.3
11—1,375.0	26—1,509.4	41—1,589.2	56—1,683.5
12—1,487.6	27—1,504.5	42—1,602.9	57— 925.1
13—1,437.9	28—1,499.1	43—1,613.1	58— 931.4
14—1,455.1	29—1,506.7	44—1,621.5	59— 897.8
15—1,451.5	30—1,538.6	45—1,624.9
16—1,464.7	31—1,515.4	46—1,627.6

MITIGATION OF ANNUITIES CONTEMPLATED

It is represented that in the event of modifications of those obligations for outpayments by which the creditors benefit there should be some corresponding mitigation of the German annuities. The experts of the four chief creditor countries and of Germany, therefore, recommend that Germany and all the creditor governments having obligations for outpayments should undertake between themselves an arrangement on the following basis:

2. Any relief which any creditor power may effectively receive in respect of its net outward payments on account of war debts after making due allowance for any material or financial counter considerations and after taking into account any remissions on account of war debt receipts, which it may itself make, shall be dealt with as follows:

As regards the first 37 years:

(a) Germany shall benefit to the extent of two-thirds of the net relief available by way of a reduction in her annuity obligations thereafter.

(b) One-third of the net relief shall be retained by the creditor concerned in addition to the amounts otherwise receivable from Germany.

CONCERNING OVERDUE CREDITS

(c) Nevertheless, so long as any liability of Germany persists in respect of the period after March 31, 1966, the creditor concerned will retain annually only one-fourth part of the net relief, the balance being paid to the Bank of International Settlements.

(d) These payments to the Bank of International Settlements shall accumulate to assist Germany toward meeting her liabilities in respect of the period after March 31, 1966; any sums found after application of the funds provided in Annex I not to be required for this purpose (together with the accumulations thereon) shall be returned to the creditor by whom they were provided.

As regards the last 22 years:

The whole of such relief shall be applied to the reduction of Germany's liabilities.

3. We recommended that the creditor governments should agree that if the operation of the relief to Germany envisaged in respect of a possible reduction of net outpayments is such as to change materially the proportions in which the total annuities provided for in the present plan are divided among them, they meet to consider a revision tending toward the restoration of the present proportions but having regard to the following conditions set out below and any other relevant factors then existing:

SERVICE MUST BE MET

(a) The service of any bonds mobilized by the creditor country, and the balance of its net outward payments in respect of war debts remaining to be covered must continue to be met out of the share falling to it in the annuities thereafter to be paid by Germany.

(b) Due allowance shall be made for any material or financial counter-considerations accepted by the creditor country in connection with the relief accorded to it in respect of war debts payments.

4. It was originally suggested that the postponable annuities should be regulated by reference to the net amounts which the various creditors were themselves able to postpone in respect of interallied war debts, the general conditions therein governing postponements to be applied.

For various reasons this method of calculation could not be adopted, but endeavor was made to adapt the moratorium provisions in such a way that the rights granted to Germany should not be greater than those of the creditor powers. The unconditional part of the annuity has, therefore, been fixed, while guaranties have been provided for the remainder.

EXHIBIT B

[From the Washington Post of Sunday, June 16, 1929]

SNOWDEN ASKS ALLIES TO WIPE OUT WAR DEBTS—REPARATIONS AND CREDIT ISSUES POISON EUROPE, SAYS CHANCELLOR—BALFOUR NOTE OFFER IS HELD STILL OPEN—BRITAIN IS READY TO AGREE TO CANCELLATION IF ALL OTHERS DO SO—AMERICAN ATTITUDE HELD KEEN CONTRAST—PROBLEM CAN BE PATCHED UP, BUT WILL REMAIN IF SLATE IS NOT CLEARED

(Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer in Premier James Ramsay MacDonald's Labor cabinet, wrote the following comment on the efforts of the committee of experts at Paris to solve the reparations problem before the British general election of May 30, and therefore more than a week before the Paris conference triumphantly concluded with acceptance by all delegations of the Young plan. Mr. Snowden could not have written the article after the general election, as cabinet ministers are not allowed to write for the press.)

By Philip Snowden

LONDON, June 15.—The deliberations of the reparations conference in Paris showed once more the inherent difficulties of settling this problem on terms which will be mutually satisfactory to all parties and which at the same time will prove in operation to be a workable scheme.

All the subsequent trouble about reparations and interallied debts has been due to failure of the peace conference in 1919 to face this question in a spirit of reconciliation and with an understanding of the serious economic consequences which would result from any attempt to transfer huge sums across economic and financial frontiers.

EUROPE'S LIFE POISONED

If the statesmanlike policy of wiping off all debts and all claims to reparations had been adopted in 1919, Europe would have been saved from the economic chaos in which she was involved for years after the end of the war; but that policy was not adopted and this problem of reparations and debts has ever since poisoned the economic life of Europe and embittered relations between all countries, debtor and creditor alike.

The two questions of German reparations and interallied debts are inseparably connected. Although it was announced when the present experts' committee was set up that it was not to consider the two questions, but to confine itself to assessing Germany's capacity to pay reparations it was soon found that the two problems could not be separated.

European countries which are large debtors to America and Great Britain look to German reparations to get the money needed to pay their creditors. It is true they have not expressed any willingness to limit their claims on German reparations to the sums they owe their British and American creditors under debt agreements which have been made. But it is reasonable to suppose they might agree to a pari passu reduction of their claims on German reparations in the event of further reduction of the claims of their creditors.

BULK GOES TO AMERICA

It would indeed be an indefensible attitude for France, Italy, and Belgium to share in German reparations if Great Britain and America had forgiven them their debts and had themselves abandoned all claims for German reparations. The problem baffling the experts' committee in Paris is therefore fundamentally that of interallied debts.

America declined to do so. She has secured from Great Britain funding of the British debt to her, which will exact total payments, spread over 62 years. America also has agreements with France and Italy, the former not having been ratified, which will ultimately require about $24,000,000 of annuities. America has claims against her allies in the war for which she is demanding annuities which will ultimately rise to about $64,000,000 a year.

It follows, therefore, that if German reparations continue to be paid the great bulk of the proceeds will go to America. It is a strange outcome of the profession with which America entered the war—"no indemnities and no annexations"—that she should now be maintaining the position which gives her first and largest claim on German reparations.

UNITED STATES AND BRITAIN CONTRASTED

The Balfour note suggested an all-around cancellation of debts, but failing general acceptance of that proposal, it declared that in no circumstances would Great Britain accept from her debtors more than was needed to pay her debt to America. Acting on the latter declaration, Great Britain has made debt agreements with France, Italy, Rumania, Portugal, and one or two others of her debtors by which she has agreed to scale down their debts to comparatively small amounts.

Great Britain is to receive from her debtors under these agreements on original loans of £1,300,000,000, a total sum spread over 62 years, which is far less than half the amount of the debt. Contrast this with the terms of the Anglo-American debt agreement, which, as had been mentioned already, exacts from Great Britain the whole of the sum originally borrowed and £1,300,000,000 of interest in addition.

There is an understood, but not explicit, condition in the debt settlements which Britain has made with her debtors that, if they conclude agreements with their other creditors on terms more generous than with Great Britain, then their payments to us may be proportionately raised. There is not, however, any likelihood of this understanding coming into effect, although French and Italian agreements with America require larger repayments of the original debt when spread over the whole period.

The settlements which Great Britain has made are very unfavorable to her. In making these settlements Great Britain has been hampered by the obligation of the Balfour note. This note was a beau geste, offered in hope that its generosity would appeal to the magnanimity of the American Government. It failed, but the obligation remained, and Great Britain has had to make sacrifices and her debtors have reaped the benefit.

The British debt to America was incurred solely for her allies. In addition to sums she borrowed from America to hand over to these allies, she borrowed from British nationals a further billion pounds; and on this part of her internal war debt she is paying £50,000,000 a year interest.

The amount which Great Britain has to pay America reaches £38,000,000 a year. Under Great Britain's agreements with her debtors, they have to pay about £20,000,000 a year, so that if all debt agreements stand, Great Britain will be burdened for 60 years with an excess payment on her internal debt of £30,000,000 a year.

But the first proposal of the Balfour note—namely, all-around cancellation of debts—still stands and Great Britain will accept it when all other debtor and creditor countries are ready to do the same.

GLAD TO MAKE SACRIFICE

The British nation would be glad to make that sacrifice for the good of the world. But there is a widespread feeling in Great Britain that it is not fair that she should make all the sacrifices for the benefit of others.

Some remarks I made recently in the British House of Commons on this question have attracted considerable international notice, and, of course, the usual amount of misrepresentation. I held by that part of Balfour's note which suggested all-around cancellation, but failing that being done, I protested against the alternative part of that note—namely, that Great Britain alone should abandon all claims upon her debtors beyond what she needed to pay America.

France has not ratified any of her debt agreements and they remain open for further consideration.

The reparations question is not likely to be settled by the experts in Paris. They may patch up a temporary agreement, but this problem will be insistent until it is permanently settled by wiping off all claims and counterclaims, for it is inconceivable that two generations more will submit to this burdensome legacy of the war.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 53) to create a joint congressional committee relating to the reorganization and concentration of the agencies connected with prohibition enforcement, and for other purposes.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, we have before us the joint resolution of the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES], proposing to create a joint congressional committee relating to the reorganization and concentration of the agencies connected with prohibition enforcement.

I am inclined to vote for this measure. Perhaps the first reason for my inclination is because no matter what report may be presented to the Senate as a result of this investigation there will be an opportunity to discuss the evils which are now so common in connection with the present efforts at enforcement.

If this investigation is honestly and thoroughly conducted, as I have no doubt it will be, it will reveal that the murderous acts of the past few months have been quite unjustified.

Mr. President, no law can be enforced unless it has back of it an enlightened public sentiment. No matter what may have been that sentiment when the law was passed, there is no question that we have now much bitterness and violent protests against the methods of enforcement.

What I have had to say must not be considered as any attack on the principle of prohibition. It is directed against the violent and life-destroying methods that are used to enforce what personally I regard to be an unenforceable law.

It is too bad—I regret it exceedingly—that whenever a public man offers any sort of criticism of the law or its method of enforcement he is immediately attacked as a "wet," as a "dangerous" public official, and perhaps as an "unprincipled" citizen of the Republic.

I admit the criticism is not wholly one-sided. I have taken occasion to criticize certain officials of my own church about the methods they have used in dealing with this problem.

I have intimated to them that it is not at all fair to any man in public life that he should be reviled because he questions the methods they use. I am sure that no Member of this body would for a moment criticize another Member who looked askance upon the methods used in the attempts at enforcing prohibition.

How can any kind-hearted, straight-thinking citizen of America approve the actions of Government officials who beset innocent citizens and strike them down in cold blood? You have but to read the press any day to find that attacks have been made by public officials upon innocent private citizens.

Of course, the answer to that always is that attacks are made upon the public officials. There is not any doubt that such attacks are made upon public officials who are striving to enforce this law; but that does not change or excuse them for wrong acts, as I view it. It is one thing for a peace officer to die a noble death in a fight for law and order with a criminal. It is quite another thing for a peace officer without cause to kill innocent persons. Anybody wearing the uniform of the United States, anybody on the pay roll of our Government, any employee of the United States Government, has placed upon him a tremendous responsibility, above that of the ordinary citizen, to observe the laws; not alone to enforce the prohibition law, but also to observe all of the laws. Certainly violent assaults upon the persons of innocent people—guilty ones, too, for that matter—are always open to criticism; and, as I see it, our Government is very blamable in permitting this situation to continue. There must be found some means of relief.

In the New York Times to-day, in its leading editorial, headed "The Systematic War," I find this language:

> President Hoover could not be indifferent to the protests and appeals which have poured in upon the White House in connection with the many recent prohibition killings. There has been nothing artificial about this excitement. Citizens have justly felt that their safety and lives were imperiled by the reckless and ruffianly methods of prohibition agents and the customs patrols on the borders.

Who can question that?

Mr. BROUSSARD (from his seat). Does the Senator want a quorum called?

Mr. COPELAND. No; I would not want to disturb Senators at their lunches.

The VICE PRESIDENT rapped with his gavel.

Mr. COPELAND. I was simply saying, Mr. President, when I was properly called to order by the Chair, that I would not want to disturb any Senator who is at lunch. His good health depends upon regularity in eating; so I would not have the roll called and have Senators disturbed!

Seriously, my State, a border State, has a great, long frontier. The Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River form the boundary between Canada and New York State. There can be no doubt—and I think no one doubts it—that a great deal of rum is coming over that border and all our national borders.

Two weeks ago I was in Buffalo, and my friend, Hon. Norman Mack, took me on a little drive in the afternoon. We went out over the Peace Bridge into Canada. We drove to Port Colborne, at the western end of the Welland Canal. From there we went back to Port Erie, on the Niagara River. In both those places there was evidence of the methods used by the rum runners. I saw chutes built on the docks at Port Colborne and Port Erie down which are shot the cases of whisky into little boats, 20 or 25 feet long. These cargoes are consigned to China or Japan! My experience with the sea is such that I would not want to take a trip to China or Japan in one of those little shells. They cross the river to Buffalo or some other point in the United States, the liquor is landed, and then, in one way or another, it is transported to persons in many States who desire to have it.

Last fall during my campaign I had occasion to drive along the St. Lawrence River to Ogdensburg, N. Y. It was just at dusk. The chairman of the local committee who was with me in my car said, "Watch the other shore." Just across the river, about half a mile, was the Canadian shore. He said, "Watch the other shore. What do you see?" I said, "I see little flashes of light." He said, "Those are signals, and to-night there will be half a million dollars' worth of rum taken across the river."

Mr. President, in my opinion, if there were an army of men stationed along the frontier, a man every 10 feet, and then another army back of the first army, and then a third army, there would be conspiracies in certain sections so that the liquor would be brought in just the same. I do not believe that there are men enough or guns enough to stop the entrance into the United States of the great quantities of liquor being brought in over our borders; not alone into New York, but everywhere.

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. BROOKHART. I want to ask the Senator if he does not think that if the State of New York would pass a decent enforcement law and honestly try to enforce it, that would help a little?

Mr. COPELAND. The answer to that is that they have such a law in the State of Michigan, and the Federal officials have just killed a man over there. It makes no difference what the laws are or what division of government makes them; so long as human appetite is what it is there will be found some form of alcoholic beverage which is either brought in from another country or manufactured within our own borders.

Mr. BROOKHART. Is the Senator in favor of abandoning the enforcement of laws? Is that his argument?

Mr. COPELAND. I am not.

Mr. BROOKHART. Then what is the use of all this criticism of attempts to enforce the law?

Mr. COPELAND. I am critical, and every other citizen who thinks in terms understandable by the ordinary individual, is in protest against these murderous efforts at enforcement.

Mr. BROOKHART. If the Senator wanted to, I think he could make a good deal louder speech against the 55 murders of prohibition agents, which he does not mention at all.

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator was not listening——

Mr. BROOKHART. Those were actual murders. Some of these others were accidents, and in some cases the people ought to have been killed.

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator was not listening to the early part of my statement. I said that is the usual answer, that some of the enforcement men were killed. I do not excuse that at all.

Mr. BROOKHART. I know, but the Senator talks for an hour here criticizing these other killings, and just barely mentions these 55 prohibition agents who have been murdered. There is no doubt that there was murder in their cases.

Mr. COPELAND. I suppose the Senator expects me to say that I approve of those murders. Of course, I do not approve of them. Does the Senator approve of murders on the part of enforcement officers of innocent citizens?

Mr. BROOKHART. I am not aware of any murders. There may be some case where there was a murder in as big a mill as this, but I do not know of any, and none has ever been proven in the courts. This "murder" is in the headlines of wet newspapers, which do not want to tell the truth about prohibition or about a good many other things.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I would like to say to the Senator from Iowa that Lawrence Wengler was a farmer in Harford County, Md., and while on his own farm was driving home the cows near a clump of woods. The prohibition agents from Baltimore were in that section hunting a still. Some one had tipped off the people who were operating a still near there as to the approach of the prohibition agents, and when they arrived at the still they saw no one of the men they were after, but they did see Wengler some distance away driving in his cows. They opened fire on him and shot him.

Then, realizing that they had perhaps made a mistake, they loaded him into an automobile and drove him for an hour to the county seat in Belair, Md. They passed two or three villages and any number of homes where they could have stopped and summoned the nearest doctor, but they did not take him out of the automobile, under the actual testimony, their own testimony, until he was practically dead. He was dying all the time he was in the machine. Finally, when he was taken into the doctor's office at the county seat, within two or three moments he expired. The people of my county were greatly incensed over this unwarranted killing of an innocent citizen on his own land, who was not violating any law.

Mr. BROOKHART. The Senator himself——

Mr. TYDINGS. Let me finish. The Senator asked for something, and I am going to give it to him.

These men were indicted for murder in the Harford County court. The United States then stepped into the matter and transferred the case from the Harford County court to the United States district court in Baltimore City. The United States district attorney defended those men charged with murder in that court, and we had to take our own State enforcement officers, our own State's attorneys, to prosecute them in the United States court.

It was brought out in the trial that the men had not intended to kill anybody who was not operating a still. There was no evidence whatsoever that Wengler knew there was a still there, that he had ever been near the still, but the evidence was that he was in fact driving his cows home only. The officers admitted that. But they said there had been men at the still, and as those men had run away, they thought, in the haste of the thing, that Wengler was one of them, and had opened fire because they might be shot themselves if they did not shoot this man they saw there. But they said they were very, very sorry. They issued long interviews absolutely exonerating Wengler of any implication in the violation of the law.

Mr. COPELAND. They said he had a "perfect defense."

Mr. TYDINGS. They said he had a perfect defense. The judge himself said that there was no evidence to show that Wengler had anything to do with the still, and the jury, knowing that these men had not intended to shoot Wengler down in cold blood, but had mistaken him for a violator of the law, brought in a verdict, in a court that was under the protection of the United States Government, with a United States judge on the bench, with a United States district attorney defending the prohibition officers, of not guilty; and had I been on the jury, perhaps I would have brought in a similar verdict. But the point remains that the Government has never had a thing done for the dependents of Wengler, who was shot down in cold blood on his own farm.

Mr. BROOKHART. I think the Senator has acquitted the prohibition agents on his own statement. If he will bring in a bill to remunerate the people who suffered because of that mistake, I will vote for his bill, but I refuse to criticize the men who made that mistake.

I had six years' experience in enforcing the law against this bootlegger outfit. It is the most despisable outfit in the world. I would not let my men go out and risk their lives in the hands of those fellows. I do not want to see any innocent people hurt, but in as big a thing as this, incidents such as that the Senator has related will occur once in a while. But let the Senator bring in his bill and we will remunerate those people.

Mr. TYDINGS. I will give the Senator another illustration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield further?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. Let me ask the Senator this question, so that I may see if he will agree with me. Suppose I were driving through Washington at the rate of 50 miles an hour, and an officer yelled to me to halt, and I would not halt, but would keep on at that fast pace, and finally he would take out his gun and kill me. Would the Senator feel that the officer was justified in taking my life under those circumstances?

Mr. BROOKHART. There might be enough circumstances to warrant him in halting you going at 50 miles an hour.

Mr. TYDINGS. Under the circumstances I have narrated, would the Senator feel that the officer was justified in taking my life for merely breaking the speed law?

Mr. BROOKHART. I would say, not for breaking the speed law, but there is a different class of people violating the liquor laws from those violating the speed laws.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator has tried to evade the question——

Mr. BROOKHART. The Senator brings in the most ridiculous comparisons imaginable. Let us confine ourselves to the bootlegging business, the most despisable business in this world.

Mr. TYDINGS. I want to get the Senator on record, because I want to tell him that in my county, again, a certain citizen was guilty of selling to a prohibition agent a pint of gin, and when he had made the sale, they said, "You are under arrest." He was a boy 18 years old; he was scared, and instead of submitting to arrest for selling the pint of gin, he turned and, at 11 o'clock in the day, in my native city, he ran through the whole town, with these officers after him, yelling to him to halt. He would not halt, and one of them shot at him five times, and finally struck him and killed him stone dead.

The point is that what he had done was only a misdemeanor; it was not a felony under the Federal law. That was a case where they actually took a man's life for doing no more than selling a mere pint of gin, while crooks, bank thieves, murderers, and hold-up men get off in the courts every day with two or three years, yet for selling a pint of gin this man was killed. The Senator would say that while he would not think I should be shot for committing a misdemeanor, for exceeding the speed limit; but for selling a pint of gin, it is all right.

Mr. BROOKHART. The Senator is again clear out of all proportion.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I think I shall have to continue my speech.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York declines to yield further. The Senator from New York has the floor.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Iowa a question?

Mr. BROOKHART. I will submit to the question if I am permitted to answer the suggestions made by the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. HAWES. I want to ask the Senator a question, because he is our expert on firearms.

Mr. BROOKHART. Yes; and I have had some expert instruction about the use of them in reference to bootlegging.

Mr. HAWES. I want to ask the Senator a very practical question, and I would like for him to take his mind off the subject of prohibition. Just as an expert, a man who has trained the Army in the use of firearms, is it practicable for a man in a moving automobile to hit a tire on another moving automobile traveling 40 or 50 miles an hour, each machine bumping and moving about with the unevenness of the road? How many men in the Senator's opinion can do that?

Mr. BROOKHART. A good many.

Mr. HAWES. Would there be one out of 5,000?

Mr. BROOKHART. No; but there is not one out of 5,000 of the prohibition agents.

Mr. HAWES. I am not talking about prohibition agents. I am talking about a man riding on a moving automobile traveling at the rate of 50 miles an hour and claiming that he is shooting at the tire of a car in front of him. Can 1 man in 5,000 hit that tire under such circumstances?

Mr. BROOKHART. Yes; I think so.

Mr. HAWES. What percentage would the Senator think—getting away from the question of prohibition for the moment?

Mr. BROOKHART. Of course, the markmanship we have had on that matter was mostly against bootleggers, and the records are meager and there have been only some 150 or so mistakes made in the whole United States.

Mr. COPELAND. They are getting more skillful now.

Mr. HAWES. I would like to have the Senator from Iowa answer my question.

Mr. BROOKHART. I have not any sympathy with the bootlegger's attitude. They have to stop what they are doing, so far as I am concerned, and they have to submit to the law of the United States. But when we get Senators in this Chamber talking sense, instead of all this gush stuff about murders by men who make mistakes once in a while, we will have a better attitude toward the bootlegging question and the bootleggers will be leading a different life.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I think I had better proceed with my own speech.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York has the floor and declines to yield further.

Mr. BROOKHART. Will not the Senator yield just a moment further?

Mr. COPELAND. Oh, very well.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, I am very serious about my question. I am not talking about prohibition. Every once in a while we read in the papers of some man's defense for shooting firearms and killing some one to the effect that he was not shooting at the man, but was shooting at the tire of an automobile.

Mr. BROOKHART. Does the Senator believe he was really shooting at the man himself?

Mr. HAWES. No; I do not.

Mr. BROOKHART. No; of course the Senator does not.

Mr. HAWES. I am asking the Senator as an expert. He could not stand on the running board of an automobile or fire through the windshield of the automobile and hit the tire of an automobile ahead of him if he aimed at it once out of, I would say—I would be willing to wager he could not do it once in 500 times.

Mr. BROOKHART. I think I could prove differently to the Senator on that matter.

Mr. HAWES. And the Senator is an expert, and yet day after day the excuse for using firearms is that they were not shooting at the man, but were shooting at his tire. There is not one man in this Chamber who, standing in one automobile and shooting at the tire of another moving automobile, has a chance in a thousand of hitting that tire.

Mr. BROOKHART. My expert opinion would be vastly different from that.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I must decline to yield further.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York declines to yield further. The Senator from New York has the floor.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I was much entertained by the colloquy between the Senator from Iowa [Mr. BROOKHART], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. HAWES]. I want to put in the RECORD one other case which bears on the discussion.

There was a young man in Niagara Falls who went to a party one evening. His sweetheart lived in the suburbs of the city. When he took her home from that party and then was returning to his own home in the city of Niagara Falls at early dawn, a man with a sheepskin jacket, a gun in one hand, and a dark lantern in the other—it developed later that he was a coast guard—jumped out and took a shot or two at this man in his automobile. The man in his turn did exactly what any Senator here would have done—he stepped on the gas and sent his car forward just as fast as it could go. Then another officer of the Government, another coast guard, took up the fire. It afterwards developed that he did not intend to shoot into the car. I do not think any one of these men we are talking about really intended to commit murder or manslaughter——

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. Very well.

Mr. BROOKHART. There is no murder except it is a premeditated incident. That is the law, and yet the Senator talks about murder when he knows or should know that there is no murder in any of these cases.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, if the Senator from Iowa had studied law, he would know that there is murder——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York has the floor. Does the Senator from New York yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield to everybody. [Laughter.]

Mr. TYDINGS. Without premeditation it is possible to commit murder in the first degree in practically every State in the Union where the facts are tantamount to showing such a degree of negligence that premeditation is presumed.

Mr. COPELAND. I do not care what name we give it; I do not care whether we call it "murder" or "manslaughter," the fact is that so far as Hanson was concerned this official of the Government fired a shot which it afterwards developed struck the pavement, ricocheted, and killed Mr. Hanson. I do not have to determine whether that is murder or manslaughter. The family of poor Hanson are suffering just the same by reason of his death, caused by a United States official, and I do not think they are much interested in whether it was murder or manslaughter or what. Poor Hanson is dead just the same.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. KING. I was shocked to read a recent report by a Government official respecting this tragic occurrence. The report indicated that Hanson was accosted and ran and was thereupon killed, the implication being that he was guilty of some offense and that the Government was justified in the homicide which was committed. That statement was put out to the public apparently for the purpose of creating the impression that Hanson, if not a criminal, was at least attempting to commit a crime; and that he deserved the death which came to him. I think the man that wrote that statement and gave it out ought to be forced to resign. It was a cruel assault upon the memory of Hanson and his family.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, Mr. Hanson was not a bootlegger. There was no liquor in his car. He had nothing whatever to do with this nefarious business, but he was killed by an officer of the Government. He was defended by the United States district attorney. I have no fault to find with the district attorney.

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President——

Mr. COPELAND. Let not the Senator from Iowa [Mr. BROOKHART] get excited now. He will have time in his own hour to discuss this matter.

The man who fired at Hanson was defended by the United States district attorney, and I have no fault to find with that. The district attorney was acting under orders. But the fact is in an effort to enforce an unenforceable law innocent citizens are being killed.

The Senator from Iowa is giving an example of the narrow-minded attitude of the good people of America. I believe the Senator from Iowa is a good man. I would trust him with my pocketbook [laughter] and even go farther than that. But his attitude is one of fanaticism.

To-morrow, Mr. President, some of the officials of my own church will lambast me for what I am saying here to-day. They will say I am not a good church member, perhaps that I am not worthy to be a member, that I am a "wet," that I am for Tammany—whatever that has to do with it—and that I am everything that is bad!

I want to say to the Senator from Iowa and to the officials of my church that I hate the saloon, I have always hated it, and I expect to hate it always. I speak as I do not because I want liquor sold in the country; it is not because I want to defend this nefarious business; it is not because I want to defend the liquor business, because I do not. I hate alcohol for what it has done to the men of the Nation and the sorrow it has caused the women. I take second place to no man in my hatred for this nefarious business.

When I rise in my place and speak as I am speaking to-day, no man who knows my heart has a right to say that I am defending King Alcohol or seeking to protect the bootleggers. If I had my way, I would take every one of these men in the bootlegging business out of it and end the whole alcoholic performance. But I truly believe that we can not do it in this way.

The trouble with the fanatics——

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President——

Mr. COPELAND. I decline to yield just at this moment. The Senator may reply to me at length in his own time, or I will give him a little time later on, but not now.

The trouble with the fanatics is that they want to end the whole business this week or this year. We can not end the liquor business until we have an enlightened public sentiment and a public willing to help in the matter. These violent attacks upon the persons and the lives of our people will not bring that happy day when alcohol is removed from the face of the earth.

I had a training which taught me that the human appetites are almost impossible of control. If a man has formed a habit it takes a long time for him to overcome it. Millions of our citizens have been in the habit of taking alcohol in one form or another. That habit and that tendency can not be overcome in half a generation; it takes a long time to do so.

I believe, Mr. President, that if sane efforts at enforcement shall be made, if the fanatics will stop overworking this "game" of enforcement—because they appear to have no other object in life—if they will apply common sense in their efforts at enforcement and to enlighten and educate the public, it will be only a question of a generation when the business will be wiped out and disappear from the earth; but it can not be done under the present methods.

Every time an innocent man is killed by a Government official, every time a man is shot down by a Government officer armed with a sawed-off shotgun or by an official who has been trained in the use of the pistol, as has the Senator from Iowa [Mr. BROOKHART], every time he applies his scientific knowledge of how to use a gun and kills an innocent man or an innocent child the cause of ultimate prohibition has been set back. It is the attitude of men like the Senator from Iowa and officials of some of the churches who are stressing so much the necessity of enforcing this law if it shall take the Army and the Navy and the marines and the police to the exclusion of the enforcement of every other law that is interfering with proper enforcement.

If sanity shall be used, if the sane methods are applied to the control of the liquor business that are applied with reference to other evils it will disappear. By brutality, by assault, by killing, there can not be aroused in this country a sentiment which will aid those who are so enthusiastic for the immediate disappearance of liquor.

Mr. President, I did not rise to say all the things which I have said. I am glad, however, I have had an opportunity to say them. If there is any influence at all in any poor words of mine, I desire to say to members of my own church and to the advocates of radical prohibition that the violent methods now being used are offsetting and destroying the natural operation of the law and the natural operation of common sense, which ultimately will cause the destruction of the liquor business.

Mr. President, I read the first paragraph of an editorial from the New York Times, which I hold in my hand, which goes on to say:

> Mr. Hoover had before expressed concern at the lawless lengths to which the alleged law enforcers were going, and now has called a distinct halt upon their activities.

I congratulate the President. He is right in that; he is taking the right stand, as I see it, because, as I have said, these violent methods must fail. They create in the minds of people who never in their lives took liquor resentment against the method of enforcement of the law. I continue to quote the editorial:

> Through Secretary Lowman, orders have been issued taking away from the force under the Treasury their favorite sawed-off shotguns, rifles, and riot guns, and limiting them to the use merely of service revolvers. Even these they must not employ except in self-defense. They are forbidden hereafter to fire upon any suspected person trying to escape from them. In short, the ruthless "war" which the extreme prohibitionists had tried to start against the violators of the Volstead Act has been, if not called off, at least seriously modified. It will hereafter be, so far as the President can make it so, a civilized warfare.

And that is what it should be—not a violent, barbaric, caveman kind of warfare, but a civilized and decent attack against this nefarious business. The editorial continues:

> While deploring what has been done, and seeking to make sure that it shall not occur again, the President, in the same breath, refers to what he calls the "systematic war" along our borders conducted by "international criminals." This is an expression which requires a little analysis or explanation. Perhaps the President's crime commission could do something with it. What most people will say is that there could be no international criminal in this matter of smuggling liquor, unless there were a lot of national criminals to cooperate with him and make his business profitable. In a word, if the people who run beer and whisky across the Canadian border did not find in Detroit and elsewhere thousands of Americans to buy the illegal stuff, and either drink it or sell it to others, there would be no occasion at all for any kind of war on the smugglers. They would be exterminated at the source. So that the matter to which the President addressed himself is of much wider and deeper scope than he seemed to intimate. These border problems are simply a part of a great national question which can not be dealt with piecemeal, but must be studied as a whole and in all its implications.

Mr. President, I think the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] is sincere in his desire to ascertain how properly to deal with this problem, as he is sincere in everything he undertakes. How much the proposed joint committee may be able to accomplish, I do not know, but, as I said in the beginning, it will bring a report to the Congress; it will give us an opportunity to discuss the conclusions reached by the committee; it will once more permit an airing of the problem, and, perhaps, the committee may be able to suggest some wise way of controlling the liquor traffic.

Let no man think, so far as I am concerned, that I do not want to see the traffic ended, because I do; but I utterly disapprove of the methods now employed. If, however, the proposed committee can bring to us some wise suggestion for the solution of this vexed problem, so far as I am concerned, I shall be glad. Therefore, Mr. President, I shall vote for the resolution.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I wish to take just a minute or two. There are a good many things I should like to discuss, but I am not going to do so now.

I have the very highest opinion of the ability of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], and I have the utmost confidence in his honesty and in his sincerity and in his devotion to prohibition. I know that he knows much about the details of the operations of the Treasury Department and its various functions and the manner in which it handles the business intrusted to it. I want also to say that I have the utmost confidence in the sincerity and honesty of the President of the United States. While the President may not have said on some occasion what I might like to have heard him say, yet I have lost no confidence in him because of that. The President may not have said to the commission which he appointed what I would like to have had him say, but I know that on two previous occasions he declared himself very clearly and very plainly, and, of course, it is not necessary for a man like the President of the United States to reiterate again and again his position every time he makes an address, in order that the people of the country may know that he still adheres to his belief, especially with reference to prohibition. So I do not think any suggestions with reference to any change in his attitude are justified. The President must have more time and more opportunity before I think any of us will be justified in believing that he has forsaken the principles which he has announced or that he has abandoned the conviction which the people of the country are satisfied he holds. The American people have confidence in the President, I think, and, in my opinion, very properly and very justly so, and it will take a long time and different action upon his part to destroy that confidence.

There was, however, one question asked by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] to which I wish to refer. The Senator from Arkansas wanted to know why this joint resolution is presented. We have not forgotten that early in the present extra session there were intimations that the President was opposed to the transfer of the Prohibition Unit to the Department of Justice. There arose in the public press because of interviews, and so on, quite a controversy with reference to the wisdom or desirability of it, but the transfer was not made. No recommendation was sent to Congress for legislation looking to that end. I do not think I violate any confidence when

I say that this joint resolution was introduced in the hope of expediting matters in connection with the transfer of the Prohibition Unit and such other activities as might be desirable to the Department of Justice. I think it was generally known that the President believed that the Prohibition Unit should be transferred to the Department of Justice. Of course, he may have authority to do all that is necessary in that regard, but he may not have such authority.

Furthermore, when one gets in close touch with the various activities of the Government and acquires more intimate knowledge of the details, he may find it necessary to modify a general opinion or impression which he may have theretofore entertained. I do not say that that has been true of the President, but I will say that I derived the impression from the President that he was interested in expediting the transfer of such of the prohibition activities as were possible and proper to the Department of Justice. However, several questions had arisen, one, for instance, with reference to what should be done in regard to druggists' permits; whether that phase of the subject should be left with the Treasury or whether it should be transferred along with the Prohibition Unit to the Department of Justice, or what should be done with it. That is merely one of the questions involved. There were other controverted propositions as to which there seemed to be very serious doubt about what should be done.

Furthermore, as it appeared, no action would be taken during the extra session if nothing of this kind were done. Suppose that the departments prepared a bill. It would be sent to Congress and to the respective committees of the two bodies. Hearings would be had. How long those hearings would last no one could tell. A joint committee created by Congress, composed of Senators and Representatives, under the terms of the joint resolution, after studying the whole proposition, counseling with the various departments, obtaining information in regard to the various activities, might frame a bill and report it and recommend its passage to the Congress and thereby avoid extensive hearings and delay.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. JONES. In just a moment.

I was satisfied from what the President said that if such a joint committee were provided for, he proposed to appoint a committee of departmental officials to act with the joint committee—a departmental committee composed of representatives of the Department of Justice and the Prohibition Unit and the various bureaus interested—to see just how far, in its judgment, we should go, and just what transfers should be made; and then this departmental committee would submit its recommendation to the joint congressional committee, and, in discussion with it and consideration with it, work out a bill that the joint committee could recommend to Congress, and probably avoid the delay of congressional hearings that otherwise we would have to have.

That in brief, I think, is the idea the President had. In other words, he thought under the circumstances that action along these lines would expedite action in Congress.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I take it, the Senator knows that I am in sympathy with the good-faith enforcement of the prohibition law.

Mr. JONES. I know that.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I supported the provision in the urgent deficiency appropriation act, giving the President $250,000 and a free hand in the selection of a commission to look into this subject. What is in my mind is this:

How many commissions does the Executive desire to assist him in formulating a program for prohibition enforcement? Why is it necessary to have so many commissions? If the first commission—the President's commission—functions effectively, it can send in a report and recommendation on the subject matter of this joint resolution at any time it reaches a conclusion concerning it. I shall support any movement which the Executive finds essential to the proper performance of his duty as Chief Executive, intrusted with the enforcement of the law; but it does seem to me that there ought to be some conclusion of the matter.

This controversy about the transfer of the Prohibition Unit has been pending ever since the passage of the prohibition law. It is a very simple matter. What facts are there now that are to be inquired into by the proposed joint committee that are not easily obtainable either by the President's commission or by any other old commission that he may from time to time create? Why is it necessary to have a joint congressional committee, the Congress having created an Executive commission?

The President first asked for an executive commission, and we gave him an enormous amount of money. I should think $250,000 would be adequate for any reasonable purpose. Then, after that commission has been in existence for some months, we are asked to create a joint congressional committee. In other words, Congress first says, "Here it is, Mr. President. Here is the commission that you want, and here is all the money you need. Now, work it out." Then the President says, "All right; transfer the Prohibition Unit to the Department of Justice." Nothing is done about it. Bills are pending in the Congress on the subject. No action is taken. Then the suggestion is made, at the instance of the President, I take it from the statement of the Senator from Washington, that a joint congressional committee be created largely to inquire into the simple question as to whether the enforcement unit should be transferred from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice.

The point I make is this: We seem to be getting nowhere. Months and months after the administration assumes responsibility for working out a plan and developing a program for prohibition enforcement, after the Congress has given full authority and provided ample funds, the matter is pitched back here on to the lap of the Congress within an hour or two of the recess, and we are asked to create a joint congressional committee; so apparently no progress is being made. Nothing is being done. We are just moving back and forth over the same ground.

It is a simple thing. One ought not to have to go into any great study of the question to determine whether prohibition can be better enforced by the Treasury Department or by the Department of Justice. The details of the measure could be quickly worked out. What I should like to do is to reach a conclusion regarding it, and get something done, if anything is to be done.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I know that the Senator from Arkansas is a very intelligent man, and I think he understands this situation. The purpose of this joint resolution is to expedite matters.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. How will it expedite matters when the authority that the joint resolution confers already exists, and has existed for months?

Mr. JONES. Wait just a moment. The authority sought to be conferred by this joint resolution does not now exist. It has not been conferred. It may be true that the general commission that the President has can investigate this matter and take up this particular proposition, because it must be remembered that this is a definite, concrete proposal to transfer certain agencies from one department to another.

While it is true that this general commission could investigate that matter, and study it, and submit a report and recommendation to the President, I take it that it was not for that specific purpose that that commission was created; but it could do it. This, however, would be the effect: When the report and recommendation of that commission came to Congress we would have hearings before the committee, because no Senator or Representative would have had anything to do with it or have any special knowledge in regard to it; so it would have to go in the regular, normal way to a committee, and Senators know how congressional committees would do. They would have hearings.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. If the sole object is to expedite the matter, why have we waited so long to take action in regard to it? Why have we waited for months after the extra session convened?

Mr. JONES. I am not prepared to answer that question.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. So far as I am concerned, I shall support any action which the Executive says is necessary to assist him in the enforcement of the prohibition laws; but I should like to understand, as I go along, why it is necessary to have two commissions or committees to consider the same subject matter. It looks as though the President has lost confidence in the commission that he appointed to inquire into this subject.

Mr. JONES. No; I do not think we have any right to assume that, nor do I think we have any right to assume what has been suggested——

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. We can not get any information—will the Senator yield?

Mr. JONES. Just a moment, until I complete my sentence. I do not think we have any right to assume that the President is trying to shift responsibility from himself upon Congress. The President is not doing anything of that kind. The President simply believes that it would expedite things to have this joint congressional committee.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, now will the Senator yield?

Mr. JONES. In just a moment. The President realizes that he could now appoint a departmental committee to investigate and study this subject, and recommend to him, and possibly through the Attorney General submit a bill providing for the transfer that this departmental committee would recommend. He can do that, and if we do not pass the joint resolution providing for this joint committee I have no doubt that he will do it. But he believes and I believe that if we have, acting in conjunction with such a departmental committee, a joint committee of Senators and Representatives, Members of the two legislative bodies, and they come to a conclusion that they can recommend to Congress, we will get earlier action in Congress than otherwise.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. What I can not understand is why the President has been so long in reaching that conclusion.

Mr. JONES. The President was inaugurated on the 4th of March. He has a great deal to do; and I do not believe we ought to condemn him here because he has not taken as prompt action in some matter as we might think he should have taken.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I am not condemning him; but the Senator will remember that he first asked for an Executive commission, and the Congress gave him everything that he asked and all the money that was thought necessary to carry out the purposes of the commission. Then, after that commission had proceeded for a considerable time in the performance of its duties, we are told that a joint congressional committee is necessary. If it is necessary, I am perfectly willing to have it; but I should like to have some information about it.

Mr. JONES. The President has not said that this joint congressional committee is necessary. He has recommended to Congress that it be created, and I think, for the reasons I have told the Senator, that he believes, and I believe, that it will expedite matters; that we will get earlier action in Congress upon a report by a joint congressional committee recommending a certain piece of legislation than we will if we have legislation introduced independently of any such joint committee and taken up by the respective committees of the two bodies, with hearings and all that sort of thing.

That, in brief, is the way I understand the situation.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. FESS. I am under the impression that there is some confusion about the transfer, largely because the present prohibition head has feared that the transfer might create considerable confusion in the departments.

I read a very informing address that was made by Doctor Doran in February, after this subject had been thoroughly discussed, and after it had been reported that the President elect was in favor of the transfer; and in that address Doctor Doran makes it very specific that enforcement is only a very small item of their work. The Senator mentioned a while ago the permit element, which represents about 90 per cent of the bureau's work. Doctor Doran also speaks about the efforts of the Coast Guard and of the Customs Service, both of which are under the Treasury Department; and while some of us have felt that there is scarcely a question of doubt as to whether this work should not go from the Treasury Department to the Attorney General's office, those who are in charge of it say that some problems are involved that we do not realize. I have been ready to vote for this transfer at any time; but Doctor Doran's statement has left me in a state of mind in which I should like to have a little further investigation of the matter.

Mr. JONES. It seems to me it is very wise to have a joint committee of the House and Senate, acting in cooperation with a committee that the President no doubt will appoint of department men who are thoroughly familiar with the situation, give it careful study, and then submit its recommendation to the Congress. I believe Congress would accept practically without question the report of such a joint committee, just as we did with reference to the matter involving the Northern Pacific Railroad land grants. It was not referred to the standing committees of the House and Senate, but we got a report from a joint committee composed of Senators and Representatives who had studied the situation very carefully and joined in a recommendation; and so, without referring the matter to the standing committees of the House and Senate, the House and Senate acted promptly.

That is the idea in this case—that a joint committee composed of Senators and of Representatives, acting in conjunction with a departmental committee or such a committee as the President may appoint, shall get all the facts and the relations existing between the various prohibition agencies and incorporate in a bill their opinion as to what should be done, and recommend it to their respective Houses. The President believes and I believe that that will expedite matters instead of delaying matters.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. JONES. I do.

Mr. HARRISON. Does the Senator believe that such a joint committee should have jurisdiction to report a bill, and that it would not have to be referred, under the Senate rules or the House rules, to the appropriate committee?

Mr. JONES. That was what was held, and that was the procedure under this joint committee to which I have referred.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator cites an instance where a bill was reported and it was passed by the Congress. I want to cite the Senator to an instance where the report of a committee was not adopted by the Congress. The Senator will recall that in 1921, when President Harding came into office, he delivered a message recommending that a joint committee from the Senate and the House be appointed to go into an investigation of all the departments of the Government, to make their findings, and so forth. That committee, of which I happened to be one of the members of the Senate, after some months of very diligent work, made a report.

The heads of the various departments, as well as the President of the United States, came before the committee. The question at that time was raised, and was considered, of transferring the Prohibition Unit out of the Treasury Department into the Department of Justice. At that time I never found any member of the Cabinet who had the courage to make a recommendation straight out. They squealed and they hemmed and hawed on that proposition. The question was raised at that time by the Coast Guard, for instance, that the Coast Guard was formed originally for the purpose of saving human life; that the opportunity to render a great service along that line was an inducement for men to get into it. The organization was built up with that purpose in view, but it was suddenly transformed into an organization for catching bootleggers, and they resented it to some extent. So there has been no unanimity on that matter.

May I say to the Senator having the resolution in charge that it seems to me that if the administration wants to get results, they should get the heads of the various departments and other experts together and present a plan to the Congress, and it can go before the appropriate committee, and can be heard in the ordinary way, and then Congress can legislate on the subject.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the Senator think the course he has outlined will do a particle of good unless Mr. Andrew W. Mellon, the Secretary of the Treasury, ratifies the proposal? Everybody knows that until the administration gets Mr. Mellon's ratification of the matter, and until the Congress gets Mr. Mellon's ratification of the matter, nothing will be done about it. We all know that.

Mr. HARRISON. The President of the United States no doubt has enough influence with Mr. Mellon to get him to agree to some proposition.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am exceedingly doubtful whether he has sufficient influence with Mr. Mellon to get his ratification of this proposal.

Mr. JONES. Under this resolution, the joint committee would not have to have the approval of Mr. Mellon?

Mr. McKELLAR. Well, it will not get very far unless it does get Mr. Mellon's approval, because as long as Mr. Mellon wants the liquor business under the Treasury Department, we all know it is going to be kept there.

Mr. JONES. This committee can submit its report to Congress.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; but Congress is not going to take that jurisdiction out of Mr. Mellon's hands unless he approves it.

Mr. JONES. I am not arguing with reference to that at all. Here is the resolution:

The committee is authorized and directed—

That is, this joint committee to be composed of Senators and Representatives—

The committee is authorized and directed to conduct an investigation and make a study of the reorganization and concentration of responsibility in the administration of the Federal bureaus connected with prohibition enforcement—

Of course, the committee is to be confined to a particular line of activity—together with the unification and strengthening of our border patrols, both in connection with prohibition and the illegal entry of aliens, and to formulate recommendations and submit proposed legislation to carry out the foregoing for consideration at the next regular session of the Congress.

Mr. President, it is simply a question as to whether or not the Senate desires to create this joint committee to do what the resolution specifically sets out. I have tried to make it just as plain as possible. If the Senate does not desire to have that done, well and good.

Mr. HAWES obtained the floor.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Missouri yield for that purpose?

Mr. HAWES. I yield for that purpose, but I want to retain the floor.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his point of no quorum for the present?

Mr. COUZENS. I prefer to have a quorum called.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen	Fletcher	King	Shortridge
Ashurst	Frazier	La Follette	Simmons
Barkley	George	McKellar	Smith
Bingham	Gillett	McNary	Smoot
Borah	Glass	Metcalf	Steck
Brookhart	Goff	Moses	Steiwer
Broussard	Goldsborough	Norbeck	Swanson
Burton	Greene	Norris	Thomas, Idaho
Capper	Harris	Nye	Thomas, Okla.
Caraway	Harrison	Overman	Trammell
Connally	Hastings	Ransdell	Tydings
Copeland	Hatfield	Reed	Tyson
Cousens	Hawes	Robinson, Ark.	Walsh, Mass.
Cutting	Hayden	Robinson, Ind.	Walsh, Mont.
Dale	Howell	Sackett	Warren
Deneen	Johnson	Schall	Watson
Fess	Jones	Sheppard	Wheeler

Mr. SCHALL. My colleague [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] is detained from the Senate on account of illness.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague [Mr. BLAINE].

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-eight Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 1535. An act to extend the time for the construction of a bridge across the Chesapeake Bay;

S. 1537. An act to amend subdivision (a) of section 1 of the act entitled "An act making it a felony, with penalty, for certain aliens to enter the United States of America under certain conditions in violation of law," approved March 4, 1929;

H. J. Res. 2. Joint resolution to authorize the President to accept the invitation of the Kingdom of Iceland to participate in the celebration of the one thousandth anniversary of the Althing and in connection therewith to present to the people of Iceland a statue of Leif Ericsson;

H. J. Res. 102. Joint resolution making an appropriation for expenses of participation by the United States in the meeting of the International Technical Consulting Committee on Radio Communications, to be held at The Hague in September, 1929; and

H. J. Res. 109. Joint resolution authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., to begin October 5, 1929.

SHOOTING OF HENRY WIRKKULA

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a certified copy of the stenographic report of the coroner's inquest held at International Falls, with reference to the shooting of a law-abiding citizen of my State by a customs officer.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

(Stenographic report of coroner's inquest held on June 10, 1929, at International Falls, Minn., in connection with the death of Henry Wirkkula. O. W. Fagen, deputy coroner; David Hurlburt, county attorney.)

Emil V. Servine, having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) What is your name?—A. Emil V. Servine.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Servine?—A. In Holler's Addition.

Q. How long have you lived in Holler's Addition?—A. Almost continually for eight years.

Q. What is your present occupation?—A. Customs patrol inspector.

Q. How long have you been customs patrol inspector?—A. This time I have been in since the first part of April, although I had a previous appointment in 1927, when I served eight months.

Mr. HURLBURT. Would your honor permit to withdraw this witness for a moment to explain the charge?—A. Yes.

Roy Martin, having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) What is your name?—A. Roy Martin.

Q. Where do you live?—A. International Falls.

Q. What official position do you occupy?—A. County surveyor.

Q. As such, have you had experience in making drawings of different locations and territories and platting of lands?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would designate what that plat represents?—A. That represents a portion of Trunk Highway No. 4.

Q. What part represents No. 4?—A. That part between the two heavy black lines. The black lines represent the ditch. This line represents the M. & I. Railroad. This is the entrance way to Mr. Sahr's residence.

Q. Is that map drawn on a scale?—A. Yes.

Q. What is indicated by those heavy, dark lines by Highway No. 4?—A. Ditches.

Q. How deep?—A. They vary. Some places 18 inches and other places 3 or 4 feet.

Q. How deep are the ditches at the entrance of Mr. Sahr's place?—A. Two feet.

Q. What does this represent?—A. It represents not trees but large brush.

Q. What does this represent?—A. Open field.

Q. What is the nature of this area?—A. Open field.

Q. This area?—A. Pulp.

Q. This area?—A. Open.

Q. What is the general direction of the road going north?—A. Thirty-two degrees.

Q. For what distance?—A. About 2 miles.

Q. Where is this point located with respect to Little Fork?—A. Two miles south and west of Little Fork.

Q. What is the nature of the highway going south and west—straight or crooked?—A. Straight.

Q. Is this highway from this point to this point on a level?—A. No. It goes up here as you go south.

Q. In this direction you look up hill?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you determine the grade in the terms of percentage?—A. It is not a steep grade—1 or 2 per cent.

Q. How far would you have to go here before a car would be out of sight?—A. Well, it goes up hill for probably 300 or 400 feet.

Q. At this point the grade goes up?—A. Yes; 300 or 400 feet. One thousand feet before a car is out of sight.

Q. This is north?—A. Yes.

Q. This is?—A. South.

Q. That is?—A. East.

Q. This is?—A. West.

Emil V. Servine, having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) Were you in that employ on the 8th of June, 1929?—A. Yes.

Q. This is continuing your previous examination. Where were you located that evening?—A. We were located at the entrance to Sahr's place.

Q. Who was with you?—A. Mr. White.

Q. What is Mr. White's first name?—A. Emmett.

Q. What time of the day or night were you there?—A. I didn't have my watch with me. We left town at 8 o'clock. We were there at 8.30.

Q. Did you go with a car?—A. We did.

Q. Where did you park that car?—A. We backed into the entrance.

Q. For what purpose were you there?—A. We were stopping cars coming from the north.

Q. Were you checking cars coming from the south at all?—A. No.

Q. About what hour were you located there?—A. 8.30 until about midnight. Well, perhaps, half past 11.

Q. Was the work divided between you?—A. Yes.

Q. What was your work?—A. I flagged the cars, using the stop sign.

Q. How long and wide is it, and what does it say?—A. About 6 feet long.

Q. Mounted on a board?—A. So it can be folded.

Q. What color?—A. White with red lettering.

Q. What is the lettering?—A. The large letters at the top say "Stop," and underneath "U. S. Officers."

Q. Did you stop any cars that night?—A. Yes; I believe four cars before this last one.

Q. Mr. Wirkkula's car?—A. Yes.

Q. Then you searched the car for liquor?—A. All of the cars.

Q. When Mr. Wirkkula's car came along, what was done?—A. The usual procedure, as far as flagging the car. We could see him come.

Q. Do you leave the flag standing across the center of the road?—A. I hold it.

Q. You hold it in front of you?—A. Yes.

Q. When Mr. Wirkkula came along that night, how far did you go from the entrance of Mr. Sahr's place?—A. About 150 feet.

Q. When you were about 150 feet north, where was your partner?—A. At the entrance of Mr. Sahr's place.

Q. When Mr. Wirkkula's car came up was anything said by you?—A. You mean as it was approaching?

Q. Yes.—A. No; I don't think so.

Q. Were you holding the sign all the time in your hand?—A. When they got close enough.

Q. You stand behind it?—A. Yes.

Q. How long is that sign?—A. Six feet.

Q. How high?—A. 2½ or 3 feet.

Q. When Mr. Wirkkula came up last Saturday what was done by you?—A. I walked up the road and the car was coming slowly, and when he came to perhaps 500 feet I opened up my sign and flashed my light up and down and sideways. As he came closer he slowed down, and I usually stand right in front of the car so they can see the sign if they happen to be blinded or in doubt as to what it is; and as he came up close I noticed that I would have to move out or he would run over me.

Q. What side of the street?—A. Facing north to the right.

Q. Toward Mr. Sahr's house?—A. No; the other way.

Q. When you started across the street and allowed this car to go past where was your partner?—A. Standing about 10 feet from the entrance to Mr. Sahr's place. [Witness indicates a point 10 feet up the road from Mr. Sahr's place.]

Q. What was done by you?—A. As soon as he passed me he accelerated, and I said, "Stop."

Q. How many times?—A. Once.

Q. Anything else besides "Stop"?—A. No.

Q. What was done by your partner after the car had passed you?—A. As he approached Mr. White I shouted, "Let him have it; shoot his tires." Mr. White had to step aside, and as he passed I noticed when he shot the first time he was shooting down.

Q. Where was the car located with respect to the entrance to Mr. Sahr's place when the first shooting was done?—A. Right at the entrance.

Q. How far away was your partner at the time of the first shot?—A. Ten feet from the entrance.

Q. Fifteen feet from the car?—A. Yes.

Q. How many times did he shoot?—A. Supposedly four times.

Q. Where were you during this time?—A. I was standing there until this shooting began. Then I started to walk toward our car. I didn't have my pistol with me.

Q. What became of the car?—A. It continued on its way.

Q. In a direct line?—A. Yes.

Q. How far did it continue?—A. About 100 yards from the entrance to Sahr's place.

Q. Would you indicate that on the map?—A. It would be about here.

Q. The car went up to this point 100 feet beyond the entrance to Sahr's place?—A. Yes; until it went into the ditch.

Q. One hundred feet from Sahr's place it went into the ditch?—A. One hundred yards.

Q. At this point the car went into the ditch.—A. Yes.

Q. As the car went into the ditch, what did you do?—A. Mr. White was the first there. I ran down there and I threw my light in there and saw Mr. Wirkkula in the arms of his wife, bleeding, and I knew that something had happened. I ran back to Sahr's place and asked if they had a telephone. The didn't, and I asked them to come out and help me. I took some water down.

Q. You applied it to the man, did you?—A. Yes

Q. Was he remaining in the car?—A. Yes.

Q. What next did you do? Did Mr. Sahr come out?—A. Yes; he came out.

Q. You mean this gentleman?—A. Yes.

Q. Then what did you do?—A. We decided to bring the man to the hospital. Mrs. Wirkkula wanted him brought to the hospital. I thought it would be better to take him in the house. I believed him dead. We loaded him in our official car and took his wife and children with us.

Q. When your official car left this point what persons were in the car?—A. Myself, Mr. Wirkkula, Mrs. Wirkkula and two children, and Mr. White.

Q. To what hospital did you go?—A. Northern Minnesota.

Q. What did you do then?—A. There were two men outside on the sidewalk at the entrance of the hospital. One of them was Dave Vadness. I don't know who the other man was. I discovered he was bringing a man to the hospital. I ran into the hospital then and the night nurse met me at the door. I told her, "I have a man that may be killed." I asked Vadness to help us bring the body into the hospital, which he did. We brought the body into the hospital. By that time the nurse that works at Osborne's office, Dora Zimmerman, said it looks like a case for the coroner. We laid the body down in a small room to the left. She felt of his breast and she said he was dead. She tried to get Cantwell, the coroner.

Q. When you brought this body up from below Little Fork, how was it carried? You got into the car?—A. Yes. He was sitting upright with his head on his wife's bosom. The rest of the night had to do with details of getting the sheriff.

Q. Is it your orders from the department that when a car does not stop you are justified in firing at the car?—A. Yes.

Q. Are they printed?—A. I don't know.

Q. Where did you get the orders?—A. I have never received them.

Q. The firing of a gun at an automobile is a matter assumed by the patrolmen themselves?—A. The other patrolmen have received those verbal orders.

Q. Will you give me an instance where a verbal order has been given?—A. Both of the new men, Mr. White and Mr. Ammerman, have received them.

Q. From whom?—A. The deputy collector of customs.

Q. Who is the deputy?—A. N. A. Lindberg.

Q. Where is he located?—A. Duluth.

Q. Have you ever received such orders?—A. No.

Q. Have you ever carried a gun in connection with your patrol work?—A. Yes.

Q. Would it be your opinion that in a case similar to this you would be justified in shooting at a car?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you trained in any way in connection with firearms in connection with your work?—A. One of the requirements for the service is that a man shall have had six months' experience in a combat unit in the Army or experience in police work either as sheriff or policeman or the Texas Rangers or the State constabulary of Pennsylvania.

Q. A member of the State constabulary of Pennsylvania could get into the patrol?—A. Providing he could pass the mental test.

Q. That would be the only hindrance?—A. Yes.

Q. Is the department or the officials of your department instructed relative to the method of shooting at cars?—A. Yes.

Q. What are the general instructions that are given you?—A. A car refusing to stop when the signal has been given, we are to shoot with an effort to dismantle the car—tires or gas tank or radiator. We are authorized to shoot to injure a person in case he is attempting to injure us, if we assume that he is trying to injure us.

Q. Was there any injury attempted by Mr. Wirkkula?—A. Well, he attempted to run over us. At least I would interpret it that way.

Q. At the time you were holding the flag and he ran past you, how many feet were you apart?—A. I imagine that when I was fully clear of his car I was about 4 feet away.

Q. He had slowed it down somewhat?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you estimate the speed?—A. From 8 to 10 miles an hour.

Q. Are there any other instructions given you in connection with firing upon cars?—A. No.

Q. Aside from what you have already testified to?—A. No; there aren't.

Q. Do I understand you correctly when you say that you are instructed to fire upon individuals when they offer resistance to arrest?—A. The word resistance—what do you mean by that?

Q. Running over you.—A. Yes.

Q. You would prevent them from passing by firing upon them if necessary?—A. Yes.

Q. Are there any questions by the jury? (None.)

Q. This car subsequently went down 100 yards and then into the ditch? What did you do relative to searching the car?—A. Nothing until I went back with the sheriff.

Q. What time was that?—A. Half past 1.

Q. Did you take any baggage from the car?—A. Yes; a hand bag and a suit case.

Q. Did you search those?—A. Yes.

Q. What did you find in those bags?—A. Mostly personal effects.

Q. Did you find any liquor?—A. No.

Q. Of any kind?—A. We found some empty beer bottles.

Q. Was there any liquor in them?—A. No.

Q. Did you search the car otherwise than by merely examining those two parcels?—A. Yes.

Q. What did you find?—A. We found some children's shoes in the pockets of the doors and a paper sack with a pair of socks and two wine glasses. There was a bottle of tincture of iodine in one pocket. I think that was all.

Q. Mr. and Mrs. Wirkkula were sitting in the front seat?—A. Yes.

Q. Were there any persons occupying the back seat?—A. Two children.

Q. Do you recall their names?—A. No.

Q. Were they small children?—A. Yes.

Q. Any other questions by the jury? (None.)

Q. Could you estimate the ages of these children?—A. Probably 5 to 7 or 9. The next morning I went back to guard the car after daylight, and I found in the ditch a pint bottle one-fourth full of moonshine. That was right across from where the car was in the ditch.

Q. What did you do with that?—A. We have that in the customs office.

Q. Have you any further statement you want to make relative to this matter?—A. No; I don't believe there is.

Q. Has the coroner any questions? (None.)

Doctor Cantwell having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) What is your name?—A. W. F. Cantwell.

Q. Where do you live?—A. International Falls.

Q. Are you licensed to practice medicine under the laws of the State of Minnesota?—A. Yes.

Q. And a regular practitioner under those laws?—A. Yes.

Q. (By Deputy Coroner Fagen.) How long have you been so registered?—A. Eight years.

Q. Are you authorized, Doctor, to make an autopsy?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you hold any official position in this county?—A. Yes; coroner of Koochiching County.

Q. How long have you been coroner?—A. About three years.

Q. Do you hold any other official position?—A. No.

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) What did you find?—A. I performed an autopsy at the Green undertaking parlor in the presence of F. B. Green and James Roe. A male, about 5 feet 11 inches tall, about 185 pounds in weight, about 35 years old, was identified to me by F. B. Green. The external sign of injuries was: 1. A bullet wound to the right of the fourth cervical vertebra. 2. A bullet wound in the mid line between the fourth and fifth cervical vertebræ. 3. A bullet wound through the left rhombo-hedrous, a muscle to the left of the spinal column. 4. A cut on the right side of the nose. 5. A hemorrhagic area in the left pectoral region. There was a perforation in this area and another in the mid line and in this area, and a large hemorrhagic area in this region about that big. The bullet wounds in the neck were probed and found the first one to the right passed through the left side of the third cervical vertebra, fracturing each and also lacerating and perforating the spinal cord. The third bullet, which passed through the back, had passed through the upper portion of the lower left lobe, cutting one of the arteries, and the left chest cavity was filled with a number of blood clots. The heart was normal, and the stomach was opened. There was no evidence of alcohol. The other organs were all essentially negative. There was a flattened buckshot removed from the left pectoral area under the skin. The cause of death in my opinion was a fracture of the third cervical vertebra and also the fourth and fifth cervical vertebræ; lacerations of the spinal cord at the third cervical vertebra; perforation of the left lower lobe of the lung; and a pulmonary hemorrhage.

Q. Have you an opinion as to whether these various wounds were administered at the same time?—A. I have no means of telling.

Q. Was there any evidence in connection with blood clots that would lead you to believe that they were administered at different intervals?—A. No.

Q. What was the nature of the analysis you made in regard to the stomach?—A. The stomach was empty.

Q. How long did this man live?—A. Death was instantaneous.

Q. Within a half a minute?—A. Within a period of seconds.

Q. You didn't know the man during his lifetime?—A. No, sir; never saw him before.

Q. Are there any questions by any member of the jury? (None.)

Q. Doctor, would you leave the battered buckshot here?—A. Yes.

Q. How many did you find?—A. This is the one that was removed. Two were lodged in the neck, which I did not remove.

Q. (To the deputy coroner.) May we have this buckshot marked "State's Exhibit A"?—A. Yes.

Hugh Reidy, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. (Deputy Coroner Fagen.) What is your name?—A. Hugh Reidy.

Q. Have you an official position in this county?—A. Yes; sheriff.

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) What is your name?—A. Hugh Reidy.

Q. Where do you live?—A. International Falls.

Q. What, if any, official position do you occupy in Koochiching County?—A. Sheriff.

Q. Were you in the neighborhood of the accident which occurrred on Saturday night about 2 miles south of Little Fork?—A. After the accident.

Q. What time did you go there?—A. Some time after 1 o'clock.

Q. With whom did you go?—A. Art Nelson and Walter Nelson and Servine.

Q. Art Nelson is one of your deputies?—A. Yes.

Q. And the other Nelson?—A. He is the head of the customs.

Q. Mr. Servine is the gentleman who just testified?—A. Yes.

Q. And yourself?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did you find the car that is referred to?—A. In the ditch on Highway No. 4.

Q. What kind of a car was it?—A. I believe it was a Cadillac.

Q. Did you find the car in the ditch at the position already indicated here?—A. I believe so.

Q. Did you make any examination of the car at the time?—A. I helped Mr. Nelson. I had a flashlight, and the other patrolman, and the other Nelson.

Q. That was about 1 o'clock?—A. About 1.30.

Q. Did you leave the car in the ditch?—A. Yes.

Q. Had you been talking anything about this accident?—A. Yes; Walter Nelson came to the house.

Q. Did you walk about this area?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you make any examination as to footprints and tracks?—A. Yes.

Q. State to the jury what you found.—A. I picked up five empty shotgun shells and Mr. Servine told me where he had his flag.

Q. Where was that?—A. One hundred and twenty feet north of the crossing.

Q. That would be about 5 inches [referring to map] in here somewhere?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he have it clear across the road?—A. That is about where he told me. I paced from there to where the car was spotted.

Q. That is the entrance to Mr. Sahr's place?—A. Yes.

Q. How many——A. One hundred and twenty feet to the first shell.

Q. Would this be the location of the first shell?—A. Yes; I believe the first shell was immediately before you got there.

Q. This was an empty shell, was it?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did you find the next shell?—A. Six feet farther on. About 6 feet farther on we found three almost alongside of each other.

Q. Together?—A. Yes. This pace wasn't just accurate. Then we looked around to see where the car started for the ditch, and it was 9 paces toward Little Fork.

Q. You mean this car?—A. Yes. It was in the ditch here, 9 paces this way.

Q. That would mean the course of the car?—A. Yes.

Q. Was it lying across?—A. No; lengthwise.

Q. How did the car stand with respect to the other side of the ditch—it leaned against it?—A. Yes.

Q. Right there?—A. Yes; just about.

Q. Tipped to an angle?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you examine the car?—A. Yes; with the rest of the boys.

Q. What did you find that was unusual?—A. We found a lot of gunshot marks.

Q. On the car?—A. Yes. I think 26 we counted and 3 holes through the top and the rear window was shot out and in front of the driver there was a hole about that long and that high (indicates a hole a foot long and 6 inches wide).

Q. (By Deputy Coroner Fagen.) Do you mean through the roof?—A. No; through the windshield.

Q. (By Mr. Hurlbutt.) Do you know where this car is?—A. At Grant's garage.

Mr. HURLBURT. I would like to have the jury view this car, in the custody of the sheriff, and have them make a personal examination of this car. In this connection I would like to ask for a recess until they return from this examination.

Deputy Coroner FAGEN. Do you think that is necessary, Mr. Hurlburt?

Mr. HURLBURT. I think it is very necessary. Looking at the car is real evidence. What somebody says about the car is hearsay. You look at the car and you have a different idea than you would have from a description. It would only take a few minutes to go and look at this car.

Deputy Coroner FAGEN. Granted. [Jury leaves courtroom for a period of 10 minutes.]

Mr. HURLBURT. Mr. Deputy Coroner, I ask for the entry of an order whereby this car is to be ensconsed and placed in the custody of the sheriff and remain in his custody until released by the coroner.

Deputy Coroner FAGEN. Granted.

Mr. HURLBURT. The State would like to have this car as Exhibit "B."

Mr. Nelson, have you the card that goes with this car?—A. No.

Q. Have you the number of the car?—A. No.

Deputy Coroner FAGEN. Mr. Hurlburt, that card is in Green's undertaking rooms.

Mr. SERVINE. Minnesota license No. B 318270, Motor No. 4395A, Serial No. U 43056.

Mr. HURLBURT. Packard, 1924 model, touring car, with winter top.

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt to Hugh Reidy.) The last of your testimony was relative to the examination of this car in the ditch on the roadside. Did you make any further examination of the car?—A. Well, I helped to a certain extent—helped Walter Nelson and the patrolman.

Q. Have you seen the car recently?—A. Yes.

Q. In the same condition now as when you examined it on June 8, Saturday?—A. I believe it was.

Q. Have the jury any questions to ask? (None.)

Q. Have you any further statement to make in connection with this that have not been drawn out?—A. No.

Q. (By a juror.) How many shells were picked up?—A. Five. One first, and 2 paces farther on another, and 2 paces farther three in a circle of 1 foot and a half.

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) Have you those shells?—A. Yes; down in the office.

Q. Can you produce those shells and turn them over to the court?—A. Yes.

Q. Five empty shells?—A. Yes.

Q. May we have those empty shells marked "Exhibit C-1, C-2, C-3, C-4, and C-5"?—A. (By Deputy Coroner Fagen.) Yes.

Q. (To Mr. Reidy.) In connection with your examination of this car, Mr. Reidy, could you state the approximate height of the dents that were made in the car, referring to the lowest one?—A. No; I didn't measure them.

Q. Is this style of a car considered of a high build or a low build?—A. I would consider it of a high build. It is an old model.

Q. When you examined this car, were there any spare tires?—A. Yes.

Q. Is that true at the time you saw the car in the ditch?—A. Yes.

Q. Is that true at the last time you examined the car in the garage?—A. Yes.

Q. Were there any bullets in the spare tire?—A. No.

Q. Were there any bullet holes with respect to the top of the spare tire?—A. Some about that. Quite a few to the left of it with a level of the top of the car.

Q. On the left side of the car as you stand back of the car?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did you find the largest number of bullets?—A. Quite a bunch on the left-hand side of the back window, in the upper portion, and under and on the edges.

Q. Standing back of the car, were there any bullets near the light?—A. No.

Q. Any marks of bullets on the steel part of the car near the light?—A. No.

Q. When you examined this car in the ditch, was there any light in the back part of the car?—A. I couldn't say.

Q. Was there any light in the front part of the car?—A. Yes; but I don't know whether they were out.

Q. I am referring to the light in the front of the car—the windshield—what was the condition of the windshield?—A. There was a big hole.

Q. Was the entire windshield out?—A. No.

Q. What portion of the windshield was out, standing at the back of the car?—A. Right in line with the window.

Q With respect to the wheel?—A Right over the wheel, and to the right.

Q. The light—back light—was out?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you notice around the car in the steel work, any indications in the neighborhood of the light or of the glass?—A. Yes; around the edge.

Q. Standing back of the car, where were these bullets—to the right or to the left?—A. Some to the left and some to the right, and there was some on both edges of the window.

Q. With respect to the top of the car?—A. There were three bullet holes in the top of the car.

Q. Did they appear to have come out of the car or into the car?—A. It would appear out, or they might have glanced.

Q. Do you remember how many?—A. Three.

Q. Did you pick up any bullets?—A. No.

Q. Are you familiar with the kind of cartridge that was used?—A. Twelve-gage shell.

Q. As sheriff, you are more or less familiar with cartridges and guns and the kind of arms carried by officers?—A. Yes.

Q. How do you describe this shell?—A. Twelve gage; I wouldn't say whether they were Winchester or Remington.

Q. Were the shells all the same kind?—A. They looked to me like the same kind. I didn't examine them carefully. They were all the same caliber.

Q. Was there anything that would indicate the material with which they were loaded?—A. No.

Q. Do you remember the writing on the shell?—A. No.

Q. Would it be possible for you to send to your office and have those shells brought here?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall, in your examination of these bullet dents, whether there was any cluster near the top of the car?—A. Yes.

Q. How many were standing at the rear of the car?—A. Well, I would say between the steel part of the top, an area about midway.

Q. How near the top were the highest bullets?—A. I couldn't say exactly.

Q. Would you have an opinion?—A. Some I should judge within probably 18 inches of the top. Maybe some higher, there was some right through the top. There was three.

Q. Did you have any talk or conversation with any of the parties there?—A. No; not to amount to anything.

Q. (By Deputy Coroner Fagen.) Who was with you, Mr. Reidy?—A. Mr. Walter Nelson, Servine, and Art Nelson.

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) Mr. Coroner, have you any further questions to ask this witness?—A. No.

Ermina Pelland, having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) What is your full name?—A. Ermina Pelland.

Q. Where do you live?—A. International Falls.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Photographer.

Q. Have you been called upon in your profession to take any pictures of the scenes that occurred on the evening of June 8?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you go to that place?—A. Yes.

Q. Who accompanied you there?—A. Mr. Walter Nelson and——

Q. Have you with you now any of the pictures?—A. No.

Q. (By Deputy Coroner Fagen.) Was anybody else with you?—A. A patrolman.

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) Have you the pictures?—A. No; I didn't finish them yet. They are not ready.

Depufy Coroner FAGEN. I don't think that is necessary Mr. Hurlburt. The jury saw the car and we have the testimony.

Mr. HURLBURT. Only in this, your honor, I was under the impression that the pictures were ready for presentation this morning.

Q. Will they be prepared later in the day?—A. No; not until to-morrow.

Q. How many pictures have you?—A. Three different exposures.

Q. From what points?—A. One at a distance. I took one from here [indicates on map]. I took one from in front of the entrance to Sahr's place looking down the highway.

Q. South or west?—A. South. One a little farther, 8 feet from the car, and one close to the car.

Q. Does the first picture show the car?—A. Yes.

Q. Located in the ditch?—A. Yes; I think it would.

Q. The second picture was taken nearer the car?—A. Eight feet.

Q. What portion of the car was taken?—A. The bullet holes.

Q. The rear of the car?—A. Yes.

Q. It shows the bullet holes?—A. Yes.

Q. Where was the third picture taken?—A. Close from the rear of the car.

Q. Would that show the bullet indentations?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you make these pictures yourself?—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been in the photography business?—A. Thirteen years.

Q. Are you developing these negatives now?—A. Yes.

Q. By you or some assistant?—A. Myself.

Q. These pictures when produced will be the product of your work only?—A. My work only.

Mr. HURLBURT. I ask liberty to introduce these pictures and have them marked "State's Exhibit D-1, D-2, and D-3."

Q. Have the jury any questions to ask? (None.)

Walter Nelson having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) What is your name?—A. Walter N. Nelson.

Q. Where do you live?—A. International Falls.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Customs officer.

Q. How long have you been customs officer?—A. Eight years.

Q. Have you had anything to do in connection with the accident?—A. I was out after the accident.

Q. What time?—A. 1.30. We left here 1 o'clock.

Q. With whom did you go?—A. Mr. Reidy and Art Nelson and Emil Servine.

Q. Four of you?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you make any examination of the car while you were there?

A. We did. It was sitting in the ditch 2 miles from Little Fork.

Q. How far from Mr. Sahr's house?—A. Reidy paced it out and seems to me like 79 or 80 paces—250 feet.

Q. Do you agree as to the distance testified by Mr. Reidy?—A. Yes.

Q. How did you find the car sitting?—A. In the ditch leaning to the right.

Q. Did you make any search of the car?—A. I did.

Q. Will you state what you found?—A. We found nothing other than usual personal baggage.

Q. Wearing apparel?—A. Clothing of the occupants of the car. Several empty flasks.

Q. Did you make a report of this to headquarters?—A. I have not, but the officers have that stopped the car.

Q. What was the purpose of your going out there?—A. To make a report, and as the car hadn't been searched, I thought it advisable to have it searched.

Q. Did you come in with the parties from the scene of this accident to the hospital?—A. I did not.

Q. The examination occurred after that?—A. Yes.

Q. Have the jury any questions to ask Mr. Nelson? (None.)

Q. The court? (None.)

Q. Have you any statement you would like to make that has not been drawn out by the questioning——A. I have not.

Arthur Nelson, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) What is your name?—A. A. L. Nelson.

Q. Where do you live?—A. International Falls.

Q. Do you hold any official position in Koochiching County?—A. Yes; deputy sheriff.

Q. How long have you held that position?—A. Four years.

Q. Did you visit the scene of the accident referred to south of Little Fork the evening of June 8, 1929?—A. Yes.

Q. Who was with you?—A. Mr. Reidy, Walter Nelson, Mr. Servine, and myself.

Q. Where did you find this car referred to?—A. About 79 paces southwest of Sahr's roadway, in the ditch.

Q. Did you make any close observation with respect to the car?—A. Yes; some.

Q. Have you heard the testimony of Mr. Reidy with regard to the dents and the glass?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you agree with his testimony?—A. Yes.

Q. Have the jury any questions to ask? (None.)

Q. Your honor? (None.)

Q. Have you any other statement to make relative to this matter?—A. No.

Virgil George Sahr, having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. What is your name?—A. Virgil George Sahr.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Sahr?—A. At Little Fork.

Q. Do you live in the city——A. Out of town.

Q. About how far?—A. Two and one-half miles.

Mr. HURLBURT. We would like to introduce this chart as Exhibit E.

Deputy Coroner FAGEN. Granted.

Q. Does this represent the location of your house?—A. Yes.

Q. On what highway is it located?—A. No. 4.

Q. How far is your house from the highway?—A. I should judge about 60 feet.

Q. Were you at home on the evening of June 8, last Saturday evening, 1929?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you home all evening?—A. Not all of the time.

Q. Where were you during the early part of the evening?—A. In town.

Q. In Little Fork?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you come back home?—A. Around 10 o'clock.

Q. When you came home did not notice any obstruction in the road?—A. Above the footbridge.

Q. Where is that located with respect to the general trail?—A. Thirty feet north of the main automobile trail.

Q. What is the nature of this here?—A. A couple of planks.

Q. Railroad ties?—A. Yes.

Q. You may state what obstructions you met while going home at the place where you have indicated about 30 feet above.—A. A sign was across the road with a painted stop on it. That's what I saw.

Q. What did you do when you saw it?—A. I started to stop the car.

Q. Did you stop?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see anyone there?—A. Yes.

Q. Whom did you see—A. Two customs officers.

Q. What were their names, do you recall?—A. I have heard their names—Servine and White.

Q. One has already testified to-day?—A. Yes.

Q. What did they say?—A. They came to the car and asked where I was from and questions like that and started looking in the car.

Q. Did they say anything?—A. No.

Q. Then what happened?—A. I told them I lived here and was right at home. They said they would get their car out of the way.

Q. Where was it?—A. In the entrance.

Q. Did they drive out?—A. Yes.

Q. And you drove in?—A. Yes; and they drove back in.

Q. Who lives there with you?—A. My father.

Q. What time was it?—A. Around 10 o'clock.

Q. Did you look at the clock—A. No; I didn't.

Q. Did you hear any noise subsequently?—A. No; I didn't.

Q. After you went to bed, did you hear any noise?—A. A car from the south went by.

Q. Went past?—A. Yes.

Q. Was there any noise connected with it other than noise ordinarily made by the car?—A. No.

Q. Were there any other cars that went past?—A. I don't think there was.

Q. Did you hear any shooting at that point?—A. Not then.

Q. Did you hear any shooting later?—A. Yes; I did.

Q. What did you do?—A. I got up. Got out of bed.

Q. Did you go out?—A. When the officer come right away I went out.

Q. Prior to the shooting did you hear any noise—was there anything said?—A. I heard them speak to the man in the car and say stop.

Q. You heard somebody say stop, did you?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know definitely who said that?—A. No.

Q. From what direction did it come?—A. From the road.

Q. In front of the house?—A. Yes.

Q. Following that you heard the shooting?—A. Yes; shortly afterward.

Q. After that some one came to your house?—A. Yes.

Q. Who came to your house?—A. Mr. Servine.

Q. The gentleman who has already testified?—A. Yes.

Q. What did he say to you?—He said that his man had killed a man.

Q. Who did he mean by his man?—A. His partner. He wanted to telephone and we had none. He asked me to help and we took some water out.

Q. You went out with Mr. Servine?—A. Yes.

Q. Did your father go?—A. Yes; a little after.

Q. What did you and Mr. Servine do?—A. We went to the car.

Q. Where was the car located, the point indicated?—A. Yes.

Q. What did you do?—A. Why, we put water on the man and tried to do what we could for him.

Q. Then what did you do?—A. Well, they thought they ought to take him to a doctor. We put him in the other car.

Q. What car did you use?—A. The officers' car.

Q. Did you help lift this man into the officers' car?—A. Yes.

Q. What was his condition at the time you were transferring him from the car in the ditch to the other car?—A. He was——

Q. Limp, was he?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you go down to the hospital with the men?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have the jury any questions to ask this witness? (None.)

Q. What is the condition of the road leading from your house to this road here with respect to being level?—A. It is upgrade.

Q. A very steep grade or very modest grade?—A. Modest.

Q. What is the nature of the grade of the road toward Little Fork?—A. Down.

Q. Starting from a point a mile from your house, the general tendency of the road for a mile past your house is what—up hill or down?—A. South from the house it's upgrade a little ways and then on the level again.

Q. The grade is up from your house southwest?—A. Yes.

Q. (By Deputy Coroner Fagen). You had been stopped by the customs men that way?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you alone?—A. Yes.

Q. About 10 o'clock, was it?—A. Yes.

Q. How far do you estimate you could see the stop sign ahead of your car?—A. Two hundred feet.

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) Did you examine this car with respect to any bullet indentations in the rear?—A. I saw the marks on the car.

Q. Have you heard the other witnesses' testimony relative to these marks?—A. Yes.

Q. Your testimony would agree relative to this testimony?—A. Yes.

A. H. Sahr, having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) What is your name, please?—A. A. H. Sahr.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Sahr?—A. South of Little Fork.

Q. What relationship are you to the Mr. Sahr who just testified?—A. Father.

Q. You and your son live together?—A. Yes.

Q. On the evening of June 8, did you witness any commotion around the neighborhood of your home?—A. Yes.

Q. What did you hear or see?—A. The dog was making quite a racket and I looked out of the window and a car come along about that time and I saw somebody run out with something in his hand and he stopped the car, and then I made up my mind it was some customs officers, so I paid no attention to them any longer, until the boy come home and they come up and talked with him. We found out they were officers. That was about all the commotion until later.

Q. Had you gone to bed?—A. Yes.

Q. But not gone to sleep yet?—A. No; I didn't sleep any that night. The dog was barking when the cars came up. I could always hear them, so I didn't sleep in the forepart of the evening at all. Didn't sleep any all night that night. After a while the cars came along and they stopped a few of them, and I was looking through the window and they let them go. I heard somebody holler "Stop!" That was pretty plain. Immediately after that the shooting began—five shots fired in succession as near as I can tell. Well, then I heard some kind of screaming, too; seems to be, but what it was I don't know. And the officer come to the door after a while and come in. We had got up.

Q. What person was that—the man that testified?—A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Servine?—A. Yes. He looks a little different.

Q. Did he have on a uniform then?—A. Yes; he come to the door and said, "My man has killed a man."

Q. What did you understand by "my man"?—A. I suppose that was his partner that was with him.

Q. Acting in the same capacity that he was acting?—A. Yes. That was all that was said by him. We got dressed and went out there and the man was kind of leaning over in the car. I think he was dead.

Q. Where was the car?—A. It was about in the place, as near as I can tell, where they got it marked.

Q. This point here?—A. Yes.

Q. What else happened?—A. They decided to take him to the doctor as quick as they could, and the boy took a hold of him and carried him. They brought the other car.

Q. It belonged to whom?—A. The officers. They backed it in here and put him into the car, took the family and took them to International Falls.

Q. They left the car here?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you go back home?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the car the next morning?—A. We put the front lights out on the car; turned the switch key off.

Q. When did you next see the car?—A. Next morning.

Q. What time?—A. Half past 7.

Q. Before anyone else had come there?—A. No; during the night they had been there. I seen them through the window looking over the road there with a flashlight about 1 o'clock, and they left again. In the morning when I come out two officers were there. A different one, though.

Q. Mr. Servine and two other officers?—A. No; one.

Q. Did you examine the car?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see anything peculiar?—A. Yes; it was shot up.

Q. Have you heard the other witnesses' testimony relative to the car? Would your testimony be what they have said?—A. Yes.

Q. Are there any questions by the jury? (None.)

Q. Have you any questions, your honor?—A. No.

Q. This man does not look exactly like he did?—A. He hasn't got a uniform on.

Q. What kind of a uniform did he have?—A. Cap and different clothes; that is all. The same as these customs officers have.

Q. Did you pay attention to brass buttons?—A. No.

Q. Could you distinguish this man from other men?—A. If it was light I could; yes. In the dark you couldn't tell much.

Q. What kind of a blouse did he have on?—A. Kind of reddish or brown.

Q. It wasn't a coat?—A. No; something like a sweater.

Q. Did you notice his shoes at the time?—A. No.

Q. Or his puttees?—A. No.

Q. Do you know of any other name for this garment he had on?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever hear of a jumper or stag shirt?—A. Yes.

Q. This was red, was it?—A. A kind of brown, pretty dark.

Q. (By Deputy Corner Fagen) That jumper that you spoke of, was it woven from yarn?—A. I couldn't tell.

Q. Was it tight fitting?—A. Not so awful tight.

Q. Closed at the neck?—A. I don't think it was.

Q. Did he wear pants like you and I?—A. I couldn't tell. I think he had on a different kind of pants. I wouldn't know what to call it an officer's outfit.

Q. What kind of a cap?—A. A cap with a sign.

Q. Did the coat match up with the trousers?—A. No. I don't think it did.

Q. Did he wear leggings?—A. It seems to me he did.

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt) Did you see the other man, Mr. White, at that time?—A. Yes; at the car but I didn't pay any attention to him.

Q. Did you see him with a gun in his hand?—A. No.

Q. How was he dressed? The same as this man?—A. The same cap, but I don't know about the clothes.

Q. I suppose if you had known you were going to testify you would have looked him over a little more closely?—A. Well, there was quite a commotion then and I didn't look closely at his clothes.

Inquest adjourned at 12 noon until 1.30 p. m.

Victor Johnson having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt) What is your name please?—A. Victor Johnson.

Q. Where do you live?—A. On Third Street, International Falls.

Q. What is your business?—A. I run the City Hotel and Arrowhead Fuel Co.

Q. How long have you been in International Falls?—A. Since January 3, 1921.

Q. Were you acquainted with Henry Wirkkula, the man killed on Saturday night?—A. Yes.

Q. How long?—A. I can't exactly remember, but practically since childhood.

Q. Have you ever been in business with him?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you seen the dead body at the morgue?—A. Yes.

Q. Is that dead body at the morgue the same person as Henry Wirkkula, that we have been talking about in this case?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever been associated with him in business?—A. Yes.

Q. In what business?—A. We have the City Hotel.

Q. Did you dissolve partnership?—A. Yes.

Q. Amicably?—A. He sold out to a different party.

Q. Agreeable to yourself?—A. Yes. He called on us frequently—every time he comes this way.

Q. When did he call on you last?—A. 9 o'clock last Saturday evening, and stayed until a quarter to 10.

Q. Was he at your home?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he have anything to drink while he was there?—A. No.

Q. Anything to eat?—A. No.

Q. Where did he come from?—A. He told me they were on their way from Duluth.

Q. And stopped at your place for a while?—A. Yes.

Q. Have the jury any questions? (None.)

Q. Your honor? (None.)

Q. Have you any further statements to make?—A. Only this: Thinking that while he was there we wanted him to stay long enough to have lunch with us; and they were anxious to get on; Mrs. Wirkkula and the children said, "Let's go on home."

Q. How many children are there?—A. Two.

Q. Boys or girls?—A. Girls.

Q. What are their ages?—A. Eight and ten.

Q. What are their names?—A. Bernice Elaine and Alice Marie.

Selma Wirkkula, having first been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) What is your full name?—A. Selma; my name is Senelma, but they call me Selma.

Q. Selma Wirkkula?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you the surviving spouse of Henry Wirkkula, who was killed on Saturday night?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you come to International Falls?—A. Around 9 o'clock.

Q. Where did you come from?—A. Duluth.

Q. Had you been visiting in Duluth?—A. Not very much visiting. We went there and went to the stores.

Q. Did Mr. Wirkkula go there on business?—A. No.

Q. A kind of a little trip?—A. Yes.

Q. A little pleasure trip?—A. Yes.

Q. You took the children with you?—A. Yes.

Q. Two girls?—A. Yes.

Q. When did you leave International Falls?—A. Around a quarter to 10; our clock in the car was 20 minutes to 10.

Q. Did you go through Little Fork?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you stop at Little Fork?—A. No. About a mile just before the crossing he stopped and lighted a cigarette.

Q. Along about what time was it when you arrived at this point where the entrance to this farm is?—A. It was 11 o'clock when he was on the other side of the crossing.

Q. The crossing is in this neighborhood here [referring to map]?—A. Yes.

Q. When you came along here did you see anything across the street?—A. Yes; we saw the sign.

Q. Was there a light, too?—A. I suppose there was a light. It was probably behind the sign.

Q. Was anything said to you when you approached this sign?—A. I didn't hear nothing. The engine made so much noise we didn't hear anything.

Q. Did you say anything to your husband as you approached this sign here?—A. No.

Q. And do you remember when you passed the sign here?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember how many men were here?—A. No.

Q. You didn't——A. Well, I see the man there when we passed the sign; I didn't see the man before that.

Q. Did they say anything to you?—A. No; I didn't hear anything.

Q. After you had passed the sign, what happened then?—A. Before we passed the flag—I figured that the hind wheels were by the flag—I heard the shooting.

Q. Did you say anything to your husband after the first shot?—A. No; I got excited.

Q. Was there more than one shot fired?—A. I couldn't tell how many.

Q. More than one?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you say anything to your husband?—A. When we got to the edge I said, "Don't drive in the ditch." He didn't answer me and just then he fell. He wasn't leaning across the seat and he fell behind me.

Q. Before the car went in the ditch?—A. Yes.

Q. He didn't make any response?—A. No.

Q. When you went into the ditch, what did you do then?—A. I kind of hollered first. I turned around and they came up. I lifted him up and I got blood on my hand. I was holding him.

Q. Did anyone come to you?—A. Yes; one of the men that did the shooting.

Q. Did he have a revolver in his hand?—A. I didn't see but he said, "I don't mean to do that." He said, "Don't be afraid." He said, "I have a wife and children myself."

Q. What was done then?—A. A couple of men came and asked if I wanted to go to the hospital.

Q. Were you holding your husband?—A. Yes.

Q. Was he leaning on you?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he say anything?—A. No.

Q. What happened after those two men came?—A. Then they said if I wanted to take him to the doctor and I said International Falls.

Q. Then what happened?—A. They got the car and carried him in there.

Q. In their car?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you go along?—A. Yes; they asked me if I wanted to go. I said "Yes."

Q. Were you sitting in the back seat?—A. Yes; holding him.

Q. You had your arm around him?—A. Under his head.

Q. Against your breast?—A. No his head was on my arm.

Q. He said nothing to you?—A. Not a word.

Q. When you got to the hospital, what happened?—A. They said he was gone. There was a car there and a man in front of the hospital on the street.

Q. Did he assist you?—A. They come and asked what happened. This fellow that done the shooting said, "Don't say anything because they are going to ask you all kinds of questions."

Q. That is the man that done the shooting?—A. Yes; he said, "He is going to ask you all kinds of questions." I don't know who it was.

Q. Did he caution you to say nothing?—A. Yes; not to say anything. This fellow that done the shooting.

Q. What reason did he give?—A. I don't know. He said, "He is going to ask all kinds of questions. Don't say anything."

Q. Then what happened?—A. Carried him to the hospital and he asked this fellow to carry my husband.

Q. Did you leave the hospital?—A. No; not right away. They said he is gone. They asked me what undertaker I wanted. I said, "I don't know." I was going to call up Victor Johnson.

Q. Is Victor Johnson a friend of yours in town?—A. That is his cousin.

Q. Victor Johnson is the man who just testified?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you leave the hospital then?—A. Not right away, until they came.

Q. You mean——A. Victor Johnson and his wife.

Q. Then what took place?—A. I was sitting in the other room a little while. Then they called a taxi and told me to go to my husband's home. I went in a taxi.

Q. Have you seen your husband since?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. In the undertaker's.

Q. That was your husband?—A. Yes.

Q. The same person we have been talking about in this case?—A. Yes.

Q. Have the jury any questions to ask? (None.)

Q. Has your honor any questions?

Q. (By the deputy coroner.) Mrs. Wirkkula, how far had your car gone after you approached that sign before you heard any shots?—A. The hind wheel of the car was at the sign when the shooting started.

Mrs. Victor Johnson, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt). What is your name?—A. Mrs. Victor Johnson.

Q. Are you the wife of the gentleman who just testified?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you acquainted with Mrs. Wirkkula?—A. Yes.

Q. With the whole family?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long?—A. Since 1916.

Q. Have they been frequent callers at your house?—A. Yes.

Q. When was the last time they called there?—A. Nine o'clock Saturday night.

Q. Where were they going?—A. Home to Big Falls.

Q. Where had they been?—A. To Duluth.

Q. The whole family?—A. Yes.

Q. Did they have anything to drink while at your place?—A. No.

Q. Did they have anything to eat?—A. We fixed lunch, but they wouldn't eat anything.

Q. They didn't stop for lunch?—A. No.

Q. Has the jury any questions to ask? (None.)

Q. Has the court any questions? (None.)

Q. Have you anything further to add?—A. No.

Emil V. Servine.

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt). What is your first name?—A. Emil.

Q. Where is the gun used by Mr. White on Friday evening?—A. At the customs office.

Q. Would it be possible for you to get that gun and bring it here?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you do that, please?—A. Yes.

Emmett J. White duly sworn.

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt). Mr. White, it is not my intention to call you to the witness stand to-day. You know that you have been arrested under a warrant charging manslaughter in the second degree. I have no business to ask you any questions. The proper procedure would be for you to employ an attorney. Knowing that you are not obliged to testify, do you still wish to make a statement?—A. I will answer questions.

Q. I don't wish to ask you questions. You are not under obligations to answer questions.—A. I have no statement to make.

Q. You have no general statement to make?—A. No.

Note.—Mr. Servine recalled to stand.

Mr. HURLBURT. This witness exhibits the sign held by him in the roadway June 8, this being referred to in his testimony. Across the top, printed in red is "Stop," underneath, "U. S. officers."

Q. On that night you held this sign in front of the car of the deceased person?—A. Yes.

Q. And when he passed you he was 3 feet from the end of this sign?—A. Yes.

Q. Have the jury any questions to ask? (None.)

Q. Now, will you exhibit the gun used in connection with this affair?—A. Yes.

Q. That is what style?—A. Remington pump gun, riot type.

Q. Is the barrel as long as usual?—A. No.

Q. How much has been sawed off?—A. They are made that long.

Q. Is this the gun used by your partner on June 8, 1929?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you have a gun with you that night?—A. I had a .45 Colts.

Q. On your person?—A. No.

Q. Did you shoot that gun that evening?—A. No.

Q. Is that the same gun you carry with you now?—A. Yes.

Q. You carry that all the time?—A. Yes; when I am on duty.

Q. Have the jury any further questions to ask? (None.)

Q. Has the court any further questions? (None.)

Mr. HURLBURT. Gentlemen of the jury, you have heard the evidence presented by the witnesses. Will you now repair to the jury room to determine how, when, and by what means the person whose body you viewed come to his death—how, when, and by what means. Mr. Franzen is the foreman of the jury.

I will call one more witness.

Hiram R. Clark duly sworn:

Q. (By Mr. Hurlburt.) What is your name?—A. H. R. Clark.

Q. Do you live in International Falls?—A. Yes.

Q. Where are you employed?—A. Customs patrol.

Q. I show you a gun used by the customs patrol and ask you to identify the gun as to make, number, etc.—A. Remington riot shotgun, serial No. U 151230.

Q. What gage—12 repeating?—A. Yes.

Q. Carrying how many shells?—A. Five in the magazine and one in the barrel.

Q. Making all together?—A. Six.

Q. Is it a knockdown gun?—A. Yes; it is.

Q. Is there any model number on that gun? [Witness illustrates taking down of gun.]—A. Model No. 10A.

Mr. HURLBURT. Gentlemen of the jury, are those identifications satisfactory? A. (By a juryman.) Yes.

WITNESS. The gun can be obtained any time for identification, but must remain in our custody.

Q. This was the gun used by the officer on June 8?—A. I couldn't make a statement as to that, because I wasn't there, but it is the gun issued to Mr. Servine and the one he carries.

Q. This is the one that was in the car?—A. I couldn't make a statement because I wasn't present at the time.

Q. What kind of ammunition do you use?—A. Ammunition issued by the United States Government, 12 gage, loaded with 00 buck.

Q. How many buckshots are there in one charge?—A. Nine.

Q. Was the gun used by Mr. White on June 8 a gun similar to this one?—A. I couldn't make a statement.

Q. It is your opinion that it was?—A. My opinion after seeing the car was that it was shot with a riot type of gun loaded with buckshot.

Q. Similar to this type?—A. Yes.

I hereby certify on oath that the above and foregoing is a true and correct transcript of the shorthand notes taken by me in this matter on the 10th day of June, 1929.

CARL MOLANDER.

[SEAL.] NORDAHL OLSON,
Notary Public, Koochiching County, Minn.

My commission expires February 8, 1931.

I hereby certify that the above is a true and correct transcript of testimony at the inquest of Gust H. Wirkkula.

W. F. CANTWELL, M. D.,
Coroner Koochiching County, Minn.

THE TARIFF

Mr. DENEEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address by Mr. Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, before a labor congress at Worcester, Mass., May 29, 1929.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Every person in the United States has an interest in tariff legislation, in that such legislation affects the conditions, growth, and increasing prosperity of every person, redistributing sooner or later among all peoples in the form of better prices for what they sell, increasing opportunities for production and enlarging markets, better wages, and more steady conditions of employment. You will note that practically covers every strata of society.

Tariffs, whether termed "tariff for revenue," "protective tariff," or, as in England, "safeguarding of industry," are now in existence in almost every civilized country; so that not alone the United States, but practically every country more or less seeks to protect its own industries by tariff legislation of one kind or another.

Tariff legislation is enacted for two primary purposes: To provide revenue for the purpose of defraying part of the Government's expense and to equalize the difference in labor costs in producing the commodities or articles of trade imported from countries where costs of production are lower. We, of course, are concerned more particularly with the purposes to be served in the second classification.

American labor favors that form of tariff legislation intended to equalize the cost of production at home and abroad. In its application this means to adjust the differences in competitive conditions at home and abroad. It means that the American market belongs to the American people. It was created by their labor, industry, and ability; and I think it is well to bear in mind that the American market belongs to the American people and should be protected for the American people. The American market is a prosperous and active market. It absorbs goods and commodities in excess of $90,000,000,000 per year, distributed among the various classes of production: Agriculture, over $17,000,000,000; industry, in excess of $63,000,000,000; mining, approximately $6,000,000,000; other products in less quantities. That gives you the extent of the value of the American market.

Against this home market of $90,000,000,000 we have a foreign market of $9,000,000,000, or one-tenth of our domestic transactions. American labor holds that it is of greater importance to protect and to advance our home markets and home industries, our conditions of home production, than to look to foreign markets at the expense of our home markets.

We hear a great deal about foreign markets and the importance of the development of foreign markets for the employment of American labor, and those who would seek to impress upon us the importance of foreign markets never stress the great value of the home markets. We hold that it is of greater importance to protect this home market of $90,000,000,000, to remove the dangers of losing that market to the advantage of foreign labor, than merely concentrate our thought and attention on holding and extending the foreign market which has but one-tenth the value. And upon that thought much of our attitude with reference to tariff legislation is bound to follow.

Foreign producers, who in many instances can obtain raw materials at lower prices than American producers, and who pay for labor less than 40 per cent, on the average, of what is paid in the United States, look longingly toward our home market and desire to enter it upon the best possible terms. However, we regard the protection of the American market and of our producers and workers as our own problem and the conditions on which outsiders may enter in trade. Likewise, we consider that those who merchandise articles of foreign trade and commodities should be required to do so upon a basis that will give full and adequate protection to American producers and maintain and perpetuate American standards of life and living and of work.

Quite naturally all European industry is anxious to invade the American market, and organized labor does not seek to preclude that hope. Since we are seeking to invade the markets of other countries, we do not wish to curtail or prohibit European industry from seeking to promulgate its opportunities in our home markets. We do hold, however, that in entering into competition with the domestic production and domestic labor it be upon a basis where American investors, American producers, and American wage earners can maintain their standards of production.

American labor is vitally concerned with tariff legislation akin to immigration legislation. We have come to recognize the wisdom of our policy of restricting the flow of immigration from European countries because of the dangers involved in permitting millions to enter our land and in the struggle to provide for themselves, to undermine and destroy our American social and economic standards, and perhaps to weaken the Nation itself. American labor holds it is equally important that we regulate the inflow of the commodities and articles of trade coming from foreign shores where much lower standards of life and living prevail.

The report of the Ways and Means Committee just submitted to Congress emphasizes the fact that foreign workers receive less than 40 per cent of the wages paid for similar work to wage earners in this country. Attention is further directed to the fact that we in this country have 27,000,000 persons who are subject to wage-income conditions of life and living. These are startling facts. Here we have in this country 27,000,000 of people depending upon their wage-earning capacity in their conditions of life and work, with wage standards 60 per cent higher than those generally prevailing in European countries—yes, I dare say, 90 per cent higher than in some foreign countries.

With those conditions prevailing, and finding it a good national policy to regulate the inflow of immigration, what purpose would it serve merely to prevent persons from coming to our shores if at the same time we maintain an open door by which purchases may enter from foreign countries under wage levels and conditions of production so much inferior to those maintained here in America? Hence our interest in protective-tariff legislation equal with our interest as to immigration legislation.

With these undisputed facts we could well nigh insist upon a tariff of 150 per cent if we were equalizing the wages paid in foreign countries with those paid in the United States. In other words, if we were to have tariff protection as it ought to be—equalizing the wage standards and conditions abroad compared with our own country—the schedules upon commodities ought to carry tariff rates at least 150 per cent higher than the moderately low rates in the schedules to-day. This differentiation in labor cost does not embrace the standard of working hours, working days, nor conditions of employment observed abroad and here. In other words, the hours of work in European countries, unlike the hours of work here, are considerably longer. While, of course, progress has been made in European countries with reference to the prohibition of child labor in factories, nevertheless in home production child labor is extensively employed and is to-day in competition with American adult labor.

Organized labor's interest in tariff legislation is not a new development, nor is the wage earner's direct participation in it to be regarded as a radical departure. When the American Federation of Labor was first formed, in 1881, it adopted unanimously a declaration for protective tariff legislation. While the need for protective tariff legislation was permitted to remain more or less dormant for many years, in 1917 the convention of the American Federation of Labor unanimously called upon Congress to enact protection to American labor from the inflow of foreign goods. This resolution was not hastily put forward; it was amended both in committee and convention. This position was urged as a means of industrial necessity and has been not weakened but strengthened by subsequent conventions.

Might I say at this moment that within the council of American labor there has been that conflict of thought and opinion, that differentiation of judgment, which is experienced practically in every other group within civilized society where men consider their interests both in their capacity as producers and as consumers. So, usually we find that we are all protectionists in that which we produce and sell; and usually we are inclined to be free traders in that which we purchase or which is produced by some one else. That conflict of judgment also prevailed within the councils of organized labor for many years, despite declarations on the tariff matter. But, in more recent years, it has become recognized by all that we can not endanger the opportunities of one industry and calling without endangering all. We have come to realize that industry as a whole is interdependent and what may affect adversely one industry to-day reflects alike upon every other industry. So, the influence of protection that advances the interest of one industry likewise tends to help the prosperous condition of all others related thereto.

Might I also say that while American labor, through the American Federation of Labor, has expressed itself—particularly more in recent years—as to the necessity of industrial preparedness in protecting the American industrial market for both American employer and labor, as such the American Federation of Labor has been handicapped in pushing forward its claims even to the extent of expecting those organizations of labor more directly and immediately confronted with foreign competition, to undertake the formation of their own organization, to carry into effect the declaration of the American Federation of Labor as well as to render immediate protection to their particular trades industrially.

It was before the beginning of the last national political campaign, and before ever the Democratic Party reversed its lifelong attitude on tariff, from a tariff for revenue to a tariff for protection, that these several organizations directly and immediately concerned with foreign competition organized as the American Wage Earners' Protective Conference. Their purpose was to press upon the Congress, upon the Tariff Commission, as well as upon the President of the United States, the need for remedial legislation and decisions protecting their industries against foreign invasion. Representatives within that group are of different political faiths, and you may well wonder how such an organizing committee formed prior to the beginning of a national political campaign in which tariff might be a great political issue joined with one another in furthering legislation of that kind. Yet that has been done by organized labor, and, throughout the entire national campaign, labor withheld entry into that campaign, but nevertheless prepared itself in order to present its plans to Congress now in session for remedial legislation. It has been heard before the Ways and Means Committee and before the Congress. Although the report of the Ways and Means Committee is disappointing in many respects, I am confident labor, as never heretofore, has made a greater impression as to its claims in regard to industry and the need for tariff legislation than ever before.

The reason is readily understood. Never before in the history of America was there a time when tariff legislation was of such great importance as now. Never before was the need for protective legislation so imperative as at this moment. Years ago there were comparatively few American industries in competition in our home market with products of European labor. With time and experience, European competition increased. For a time practically all manufacturers favored the protection of American industries.

Since the ending of the World War a new and strange situation has been developing. Captains of American industry and finance—at least a number, and which number is now on the increase—have come to the point of view that greater profits are to be made by investing their capital abroad and employing foreign labor and, by lower costs of production enable them to fill the needs of the American market or compete successfully with American producers for the American market. We find millions of American dollars invested in France, Germany, Italy, and Czechoslovakia. A few years ago a small number of American manufacturers owned or controlled industrial plants outside of America. To-day this has changed—American manufacturers are more and more manufacturing abroad. As a consequence, they are more and more opposing protective tariff legislation in order to develop more readily and facilitate the transporting of commodities and articles of trade manufactured by them abroad to fill requirements of our domestic markets. They find it more profitable to fill their requirements from foreign markets, and to that extent seriously impair our whole domestic system of industrialism.

What is going on in industry to-day? As stated here, there was a time when American manufacturers practically owned no factories abroad. To-day a number of manufacturers own factories abroad and still a larger number are considering the establishing of factories abroad. That means that we are not only going to suffer a reduction in our exports, but it likewise means that American capital and American skill will be used as a competitive factor against American industry and American skill within our home markets.

To illustrate what I have just said: The Singer Sewing Machine Co. a few years ago closed down its two factories in America, established a factory abroad, and shipped all of their parts to the United States, assembling them here, to fill their American market. It was only through the protests of American labor that that situation was stopped. Since then the General Electric Co. has established its agencies in almost every land. General Motors, too, is contemplating opening its plants in England, Germany, and other countries; first, for the purpose of filling the requirements of their foreign markets and, no doubt, with the establishing of successful factories abroad, with lower wage levels, lower material costs, they will undoubtedly ship foreign-made articles and automobiles back to America to fill the American requirements. So the Ford automobile concern is likewise considering opening foreign plants. Other industries are doing the same thing. So that we are on the verge now of reaching the point where American capital is, first, going out to establish these foreign plants, to fill their foreign-market requirements, and in turn shutting down American factories and supplying goods to the American market by labor from abroad, and that on American skill and American-made machines!

You see, we are heading toward an extremely dangerous situation, and the prosperity of the United States may be more and more jeopardized, and this reflects itself not alone on labor but also on capital invested in the United States.

In addition, we find the use of new and improved machinery abroad, manned by foreigners trained in our factories or American trained. Foreign labor is materially increasing in efficiency, and with no corresponding increase in the standards of living. This increased efficiency with lower standards of living makes a distinctly new effect and is of especial importance to American labor. Thus, great amounts of American capital and skill are being invested abroad, presumably to take advantage of the conditions and opportunities in Europe; hence, all the more urgent and pressing need for adequate protective legislation.

It is now frequently urged that preference be given foreign products produced by American capital and skill invested abroad, when imported into this country. But since they buy their materials abroad, use lower-paid foreign labor, such products should not be given consideration. They are foreign competitors, and can and do become the most dangerous of such competitors.

To the foregoing might well be added the growing tendency of our great and ever-growing merchandising or sales agencies—the development of chain stores, the organizing of the purchasing power of department stores, and their tendency to favor more and more the cheaper foreign markets, makes our industrial problems more difficult and the necessity for protecting our American market more urgent. Outside of manufacturers investing American capital and skill abroad to fill their foreign requirements and undermine and fill the American market with foreign-produced things, we find this great development of chain stores and department stores, holding great purchasing power, purchasing in localities where the lower-cost product prevails and then placing it in our home market, underselling American-made products—but only sufficiently to stifle the American production and not with saving to the general community.

Our problem is becoming more and more complex, severe, and dangerous, and all the more urgent is the need for a full and adequate protective legislation even against American capitalists and merchants.

There are those who would hold that competition with foreign industries and lower standards abroad will tend to lower prices and thus increase the purchasing power of the masses. This, too, was the economic assumption a few years ago regarding low wages. Experience has demonstrated the fallacy of this argument. If additional evidence be required, then reference to the records disclosing the landing costs of foreign-made commodities and their relation to prices in the United States will dispel all further doubt. It is fair to say the American consuming public does not benefit directly or indirectly by reduced prices on the imports of foreign commodities. To the contrary, the loss of wages to capital and labor, without benefit to purchasers, is felt, for both and all interests are interdependent and they have mutual concern in this matter.

A study of our records, a reflection upon every investigation made, prices on the imports of foreign commodities and the American selling price, evidences a strange finding—that the selling price is about four times greater than the landed price. When I speak of the "landed" price I speak of the foreign price plus transportation, plus export duties. Taken as a whole in most instances, the landed price of certain articles runs from about 300 per cent to 500 per cent underneath the actual selling price within the United States, indicating clearly that even the public is not given the advantage of lower labor costs and lower material costs abroad, but that it is imported entirely for the selfish and exploited purposes of those interested in importing rather than manufacturing in the United States. This is of concern not alone to American labor but likewise to American industry, American capital, and American employers as well.

I say, too, that the record is easily available. The Treasury Department, in cooperation with the Finance Committee, in 1922 made an estimation of the landed cost as compared with the selling cost. A revelation was had at that time, and I think it would be more so if made to-day, showing that the argument of those who would urge free trade as against protection does not hold good.

As stated, the old argument that low wages make for prosperity is to-day accepted as a fallacy. To-day we find very few American economists or industrialists who will argue against the necessity of high wages, constantly enlarging purchasing opportunities and powers of the great masses, for the protection of industrial activities.

American organized labor first and foremost believes that any protective legislation worthy of that purpose should accept as its basis for the computation and fixation of import duties the principle of American valuation. To accept any principle of foreign valuation places ultimately the conditions of entry into our home market in the hands of foreign producers. In addition, our past experience in determining foreign values has presented many opportunities for manipulation, both as to undervaluation as well as overvaluation. All attempts made thus far to prevent these abuses have failed. Indeed, the effort made by the United States Government to ascertain foreign costs of production has resulted in serious international complications, some of the European countries having resented what has been considered undue interference in matters considered by them to be domestic in character. Then, too, the principle of foreign valuation gives consideration to that nation having standards of work and life that are the lowest. It is because of these and other reasons that American labor prefers the principle of American valuation as a fixation of import duties.

Now, what is meant by "foreign" valuation as compared with "American"? By "foreign" valuation is meant the acceptance of the wholesale price of foreign-made commodities as listed on invoices filed with the customs and duties officials, the percentage of the tariff, or tariff duty, being placed upon that foreign value. You can readily see under that system the foreign manufacturer and importer may, however low the foreign value is, manipulate those values either by overvaluation or undervaluation, the American Government being wholly at the mercy of the foreign manufacturers and importers as to the value of goods being imported.

Under the existing law it was intended that if the customs authorities could not ascertain or were doubtful as to foreign valuations placed upon goods or contained in invoices, they might make a study of costs of production abroad. But, lo and behold, when the American authorities attempted to do that in foreign countries, the foreign governments resented that as an interference with what they considered an exclusive domestic problem, and for a time relations—particularly those between France and the United States—were strained on that subject, resulting ultimately in that part of the law becoming a dead letter. And that is the condition we are in to-day. While we may fix the rates upon schedules upon the basis of accepting foreign valuation, we are left wholly at the mercy of foreign manufacturers and importers as to ultimately determining the duties to be paid.

We hold that since we have the American market here for all those who seek to come into our market to compete with American manufacturers and American labor, that duty should be imposed upon the American valuation on such articles of trade imported. In other words, if the foreign value of, say, something manufactured that is worth $1 under the foreign value and it is worth $10 for a like commodity in America, that then the duty imposed should be on the basis of $10 rather than on the basis of $1—thus more fairly and justly equalizing and standardizing the competitive factors within the American market.

Then, too, the unfairness of the foreign valuation to-day is this: That, for instance, crockery and other light merchandise imported from China and Japan where wage standards are even less than 10 per cent of the wage standards prevailing in America, you might find a 50 per cent standard in England and yet, under foreign valuation, China and Japan will have the advantage of the more advanced countries on entering into the American market, and thus compete with American capital. Hence, our insisting upon the American valuation as the basis for fixation of import duties, thus controlling both the fixation and the application of duties of import.

Realizing the difficulties presented in bringing about such an immediate change and responsive to the apparent desire of Congress not to offend foreign nations, we, organized labor, suggest the modification of a basis of determining rates. For the purpose of assessing tariff duties the foreign value could not be considered to be less than 60 per cent of the American selling price, and, as in the bill proposed by the Ways and Means Committee, "provided no duty, ad valorem or specific, or both, shall exceed 60 per cent of the American selling price." Labor has suggested that because of the apparent irresponsiveness of Congress to truly protect American labor and avoid the dangers of international complications, this—from our point of view—would enable the distributor of foreign merchandise in America to receive pay for his commodities and retain 40 per cent of the wholesale price with which to pay the costs, etc. To permit the distributor to retain 40 per cent of the wholesale price, or 66⅔ per cent on his investment, does seem to be an extremely liberal provision and requirement for the privilege of competing in the American market and against American manufacturers, producers, and wage earners.

As a whole, we are sadly disappointed with the principles of valuation and rates reported to Congress by the Ways and Means Committee. You can readily see why this is a disappointment, because of the ever-greater urge—greater to-day than ever before—for more adequate protection, for the application of the American valuation in levying duties. We feel greater consideration has been manifested in behalf of foreign producers and workers rather than toward American producers and workers. We complain specifically against the fact that greater protection has been accorded to those articles in which but slight labor values are involved and that in a number of schedules labor values have been almost entirely ignored. May I speak just briefly on that? What do I mean by "labor values"? In other words, a specific illustration. Take the case of a print roller used for making wall papers. It is composed of wood in great proportion, but upon which skilled labor has been applied.

The real value of the commodity is in the labor value attached, the value of the material used being a minor factor. The import duty, under the present law, is placed purely upon the material value, ignoring entirely the labor values involved. Might I cite another example? For instance: Print paper in its raw state is protected, and yet when used in connection with printing, with all of the allied crafts involved—the setting of the type, press work, the skill put into engraving, the bookbinding—the values of labor applied to paper are almost entirely ignored and the duties are placed more upon the material rather than the labor value. That is true in any number of schedules, indicating clearly that while Congress, in its preface to its bill states this legislation is likewise "to protect American labor," yet when we analyze the various schedules in the bill we find labor values almost entirely ignored and in many other schedules greatly minimized.

In addition to that we protest against unfair discrimination accorded to several industries, and particularly the coal-tar products industry. This industry has been accorded protection under the principle of the American valuation. As a result it has been successful. The securities of these concerns quoted on the stock market are selling 200 to 1,000 per cent higher than they sold when the present law was enacted. Yet this industry, according to Government reports, employs less than 9,000 workers and is paying to its employees less than a living wage. We consider this is a special privilege. We demand that all industries receive like protection or that no single industry be favored in that way. In other words, here is indicated clearly what one industry, employing less than 9,000 wage earners, is receiving, and the prosperity which has come to it as a result of that. And that is the only industry so recognized in the bill now submitted by the Ways and Means Committee, while all other industries are discriminated against by the application of the foreign-valuation principles.

We are not alone interested in the principle of valuations to govern the rates or duties. We are concerned with other administrative features. We know the schedules may mean much or little protection, depending upon the methods of administration and means employed in classification. A few competing imports, subject to duties, undervalued will make the highest duties impotent. So can overvaluation destroy the efficacy. Decisions regarding classification may involve changes from protected to unprotected categories and vice versa. Let me give you an illustration in customs affairs as to questions of classification:

Take imports of hats. We find if an importer or foreign manufacturer will take the hat, have all the trimmings complete, but not attached in completed form, and sort them and ship them, the hat not being in finished form, but so that a few minutes' service on the hat will complete it, that hat is no longer subject to the schedule fixed for the importation of hats, but comes in as a material part of a finished commodity, and everything in this category carries much lower duties. So with furniture. We may take a chair. Instead of presenting it in the assembled form, a finished thing in every way, but not completely assembled, tying all the parts together as one, it immediately leaves the category of furniture and the category intended for the fixation of the duties involved; it comes in under "wood" and comes in as raw material, with no labor values. So, the whole system of protection has been evaluated and evaded. So with valuations.

Wrong classifications and undervaluations both contribute to lessen and evade the protection intended by tariff legislation. So, we are deeply concerned in the administrative features of the law and desire to avoid these practices and abuses which have been going on.

The report of the Ways and Means Committee does offer improvement in classifications, and to that extent is favored by organized labor. Like the present law, however, it does not accord to workers alike right and opportunity of appeal in the event of complaint against the rate levied or classification made as is accorded the importer or manufacturer. In other words, if this law is intended, as a legislative declaration would have us believe, for the protection of wage earners, then we ought to have a right and a standing before the Customs Court or the General Appraisers as is contemplated in the new proposed bill of entering a complaint against the undervaluation, overvaluation, or a wrongful classification of a commodity in order that we may have some right to see that the law as intended is fully enforced. At the present time we have no such standing. Indeed, in one instance of a complaint before the Customs Court we were deliberately misinformed that we might be heard, only to find the appraisers of the court had acted; thus all protection intended for the wage earners was absolutely denied and even precluded from a hearing.

At this time we demand an equal right with the manufacturers and importers to question valuations and classifications as they may be determined from time to time, if under the new system or if the old system is continued before the Customs Court. I dare to make this statement: Up to this time our Customs Court has been largely an importers' court, not a court for the protection of American industry and American wage earners.

Then, too, it retains the present inequitable and unjustified right of monopoly that is accorded the holder of an American trade-mark—regardless of whether that monopolistic privilege is used to advance America's prosperity or to destroy American standards of life and living.

In other words, society accords to American manufacturers a monopolistic right in which the manufacturers with a trade-mark always protect themselves, we expect, even against the foreign invasion, and which at the same time permits the holder of an American trade-mark to close the American factories to manufacture abroad and still accords to him full protection in the use of the trade-mark, even if by that work abroad he is destroying and undermining conditions of work in America. It should be clearly understood that American organized labor is prompted in its attitude solely by the desire to protect and advance American industry and to protect and extend the employment opportunities of America's wage earners under American standards of life and living. To that degree, it is national in character, in purpose, and deed. It has no desire or intention of excluding foreign products from the markets of the United States, but it does propose to admit them only under such conditions and in such quantities as will not throttle our industries, imperil our wage and work standards, lower our standards, and impair our further development.

I have tried to touch only upon the more salient and important features in connection with tariff legislation not to relate to you intricacies involved in legislation of this character, and to evidence the importance of the attitude of labor in this. I am quite sure, whether you are of the employing interests or of the labor element, you will readily understand that labor's position on this character of legislation is not merely to advance its peculiar interests; rather, it is intended to protect American industry as a whole and safeguard and promote the welfare and well-being of all wage earners and of the investment of capital in American industry.

This subject is of the utmost importance. It is a question now before Congress. What Congress will do with it no one can prophesy. But may I ask all who are interested and, certainly, the question is one in which every one of you ought to be interested, if you truly wish to protect the American market for American labor and American capital, if you seek to maintain the prosperity of our Nation, then all of us ought to arouse ourselves and bring home our message to those within Congress and demand that they protect American industry and give less consideration to foreign industry.

You in New England are particularly interested in this subject. I do not touch upon any particular schedules; it would be highly interesting if I did. For example, the silk schedule would be highly important for you; likewise, here in Worcester, where you have a great metal and machine industry, the metal schedule and all related to that would be of great importance. I do not want to burden you by any further consideration of the subject.

Allow me to say this: As far as New England is concerned, particularly as to the manufacture and sale of shoes, that unless some protection is granted to that industry for capital and labor employed, then it will have a very unfortunate future before it. It is to be regretted that those in the industry, and particularly those manufacturing shoes made entirely with leather, are not in accord with one another, an unfortunate condition because of differing interests. It behooves industry as a whole to overlook its selfishness prompted by competition within itself and to look to the welfare of the whole, realizing that all engaged will be protected, and both capital and labor shall prosper under it.

I might stop to say a word upon the compensating phase of taxation of imports. In other words, where the materials that enter into a finished commodity are protected, a protective tariff might be provided as a resort or necessity for giving an added protection to those engaged in the finishing commodities in order that their present condition may be maintained and, if possible, improved. You can realize if the raw materials entering into a finished commodity are increased and no compensating rate upon the finished commodity fixed, there will be a further incentive for manufacturing the article in its finished state abroad, thus avoiding the duty upon the raw material and giving them an added advantage in the home market.

There are many problems in this tariff legislation. I have tried to dwell merely upon the more important of that great and ever-increasing number; to lay before you labor's attitude and labor's study upon some phases; to place before you labor's point of view and demands in this character of legislation, firmly, with the conviction that it is by and under the attitude of organized labor in America that organized labor is a protective force in our industrial life; that it is an organization of progress not bent upon destroying industry but rather to build up and be constructive in industry, not intending to take profits from employers but rather to enlarge its usefulness to industry as a whole in order that we may have a greater share of the joint service rendered; that all may go on progressing and advancing to higher standards of living and of life, thereby creating greater contentment and happiness to the community as a whole.

Thus, in the character of legislation and in the congress to be called by labor organizations within New England to study economic conditions within our borders, we hope much is to be accomplished; to study both the principle and development within New England of the markets upon which the manufacturers and producers and workers must depend—all this must clearly evidence the fact that the American trade-union movement is not an organization to be frowned upon, its work to be regarded lightly or to be judged by the temporary errors or weakness that may be displayed by organized labor here, there, and sometimes everywhere. For, after all, we represent the human element, with all its frailties and weaknesses and yet with all its power and strength for constructive helpfulness. Thus, to all interested in the further advancement and protection of American industry, we hope for the support of all, not only in matters of this character, but all constructive efforts of American labor intended to improve the tariff situation.

EXECUTIVE BUSINESS BEFORE THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, while there is a quorum present I would like to say, since we are going to adjourn in a very short time, that there is a nomination from my State pending before the Committee on the Judiciary, and that committee has not been able to get a quorum, I express the hope that the Judiciary Committee will have a meeting, if they are going to invoke the rule that we can not poll the committee in order to get a favorable report, so that before we do adjourn at least that nomination may be confirmed.

USE OF ARMY EQUIPMENT BY STATE POLICE

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, there has just appeared in the Washington Post an article in which I think every Senator will be greatly interested. It alarmed and amazed me. I saw a statement that the Secretary of War has ruled that the governors of the States may not call out the National Guard to suppress riots in the States. If that is to be the ruling of the department, it will break up the National Guard and the State will have to organize its own guard.

I asked the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs if that report was true. He has a letter from the Secretary of War, which I think should be put in the RECORD in order that the governor of every State in the Union may know what the policy of the War Department is.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, like the Senator from North Carolina, I was very much concerned at the report of this order from the War Department, so I sent to the department to get a copy of whatever order had actually been issued.

The rumors have proved to be incorrect. There has been no effort at all by the War Department to restrict or interfere with the use of the State Guards for preserving peace within the several States. All the department did was to issue an order forbidding the use of Federal arms and equipment by members of State police, not National Guard, but members of State police, in the various States.

The letter to which reference has been made was a copy of a letter addressed to Governor Horton, of Tennessee. The copy does not give the date, but I believe it was sent within the last two or three days. It reads as follows:

The Hon. HENRY H. HORTON,
Governor of Tennessee, Nashville, Tenn.

DEAR GOVERNOR HORTON: I am informed that certain members of the Tennessee National Guard, who were also members of the Tennessee State police, while recently engaged under your orders on active duty in the latter capacity, were allowed to wear United States Army uniforms and to carry and employ arms and equipment belonging to the United States and issued to the State for the equipment and training of the National Guard. If so, this involved an infraction of Federal laws and regulations prohibiting the loan of such property to any other activity, or its use for any purpose other than those for which it has been issued to the State.

It is therefore my duty to bring the matter to your attention and to request that you take such action as may be necessary to prevent the unlawful use of Federal arms and equipment in the hands of the Tennessee National Guard.

Nothing in this letter is intended to restrict the authorities of the State of Tennessee to employ the National Guard in any manner contemplated by the national defense act or State laws when legally called out by the State authorities.

Sincerely yours,

JAMES W. GOOD,
Secretary of War.

I am glad to have this opportunity to correct the erroneous report that was spread.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

The Senate as in Committee of the Whole resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 53) to create a joint congressional committee relating to the reorganization and concentration of the agencies connected with prohibition enforcement.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, early this year the Senate discussed matters in relation to prohibition. This body appropriated $24,000,000 for law enforcement and to aid prohibition. I voted for the appropriation. At the same time upon motion of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] $250,000 was appropriated for the purpose of investigating prohibition. There was no other matter discussed but that in connection with the appropriation. Now for some reason that I can not understand, prohibition seems to have been purposely dropped out of consideration by the commission created under that resolution. The commission has been given a strange name. When men write a bill it is given a title and sometimes because of an improper title it is declared to be unconstitutional. But no sooner had we made this appropriation for $250,000 than we find the whole original thought of the use of the $250,000 put aside. No one here can say that the intent of Congress was any other than to investigate prohibition enforcement and if anybody was entitled to give the commission a special designation it should be a commission to investigate and report upon the subject of prohibition.

On yesterday the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] introduced a resolution asking for open sessions of the Senate in discussing business sent to the Senate by the President of the United States. I believe that all but five or six Senators voted for that theory of parliamentary procedure in the Senate. This commission, however, originated not by the President of the United States, but by the Congress, is meeting behind closed doors and if it chooses to do so it may continue for two years behind closed doors and then give the people a report upon its deliberations. With a subject so important as the subject involved in the measure now before the Senate it seems the American people are entitled to hear each day what every witness has testified before the commission on the subject of law enforcement and prohibition. The American people should have the opportunity to weigh the evidence as it comes. They are entitled to judge of the character of the commission by the kind of witnesses the commission may summon and the character of the questions the commission may propound.

Yet this commission, created by Congress and appointed by the President to discuss this subject, is now to be supplanted by a special committee, a joint committee of the Senate and the House and such Federal appointees as the President of the United States may add to the joint committee. There is nothing said as to how many men the President may select.

The subject of whether prohibition enforcement should remain in the Treasury Department or placed under the Department of Justice has long been before our people. I will say now that I think it should go to the Department of Justice. If the President believes that that is the place it should go I can not understand why he does not say so. Nor can I understand why a measure of this kind can not be submitted to the Judiciary Committee of the Senate for its investigation and recommendation.

At this point I would like to place in the RECORD a resolution which I shall not take the time of the Senate now to discuss, but I would like to have it read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SACKETT in the chair). The clerk will read, as requested.

The legislative clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 100), as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that the hearing of testimony of witnesses by the commission appointed by the President for the purpose of making an inquiry into the problem of prohibition and law enforcement shall be open to the public.

Mr. HAWES. I ask that the resolution may lie on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAWES. Certainly.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Has it occurred to the Senator to offer the substance of his resolution as an amendment to the pending joint resolution?

Mr. HAWES. I do not care to bring it up in that form.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, may I suggest to the Senator that probably his resolution should go to a committee?

Mr. HAWES. Very well. I ask that it be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, I have no partisan feeling about this matter. I am quite sure that I do not know the opinion of the President of the United States on the matter of prohibition. I know that in the State of Missouri men voted for him because they thought he was dry and men voted for him because they thought he was wet. He has declared himself with regard to the eighteenth amendment, but I have never heard the President say that he would oppose an amendment to the Volstead Act. If any Senator has heard that the President has said at any time or any place that he would oppose a reasonable amendment to the Volstead Act, that statement has escaped my notice. What the President did say in his speech was this:

> Our country has deliberately undertaken a great social and economic experiment.

That word "experiment" was used in my State and other States to indicate the thought that the candidate had that the Volstead Act was an experiment, that it was not a certain fixed thing, that it had not demonstrated itself, that it was still an experiment. Then comes the rest of the sentence:

> Noble in motive and far-reaching in its purpose.

The words "noble and far-reaching" were indeed far-reaching in their political effect. We find the President of the United States represented now as being dry and as being opposed to any amendment of the Volstead Act. But let us come to the last portion of his statement:

> It must be worked out constructively.

It is upon that sentence that Congress appropriated $250,000 that the facts might be known and that there might be constructive legislation. Congress either know what it was doing when it asked for an investigation of prohibition and appropriated $250,000 or it did not understand it. If Congress knew what it was doing, there is no necessity for a special joint committee of the House and Senate to go farther into the subject.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAWES. In just a moment. So far as I am personally concerned I have voted and will continue to vote for bills and measures that will enforce the laws upon our statute books. I would not have it said by anyone that a vote of mine, even by indirection, would prevent any committee of the House of Representatives or the Senate from investigating this debatable subject. I am sure those who believe that the Volstead Act is as sacred as the eighteenth amendment are not afraid of an investigation; I am sure that those who believe that the Volstead Act, in the interest of law enforcement, might be amended are not afraid of investigation.

Mr. President, the subject of law and the changes of the law necessarily involve the question of the enforcement of law. I decry as strongly as does any other man in the Senate or the House of Representatives the spirit of lawlessness that has grown up in our country. We have a method which can be lawfully employed to punish violators of the law; but there is a new crime, unusual in America, that is attracting the attention of our people; it is the crime of official lawlessness. When men on the public highway have the effrontery to stand upon a running automobile and use a revolver, shooting at another running automobile and then claim they were shooting at the tires of that machine, such men are too stupid and too arrogant to be officers of the law. There is not a Senator in this Chamber, on either side, who can stand in a moving automobile and with his revolver hit the tire of an automobile in front; and yet every bullet that goes on its way hits the pavement or hits a piece of steel and puts into jeopardy the lives of the peaceful citizens upon that highway. Hunters to-day admit that it is not a decent thing even to shoot a deer with buckshot. Yet upon the highways of a State men claiming to represent the Government of the United States use buckshot in a shotgun. A decent man who has to kill his own dog which has gone mad will use a rifle or a revolver. He would be ashamed of the mess he would make by killing a dog with buckshot.

Mr. President, I voted for the commission to investigate prohibition, and I shall insist with what power I have in the Senate that that investigation shall not be conducted behind closed doors. I shall vote for the joint resolution of the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES], if the proposed joint committee, in reporting upon the lawful methods of enforcement and changes to be made in the official management of prohibition affairs, may also be required to report to the Senate of the United States acts of lawless officials in the United States. If the average man who is a criminal should be punished, what must be said of an officer of our Government who commits a crime? I submit the amendment to the joint resolution which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri will be printed.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, may the amendment be reported, please?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 2, after the word "enforcement," it is proposed to insert the following:

> To investigate official lawlessness and to report the number of men, women, and children killed and wounded upon land and sea in connection with prohibition enforcement.

During the delivery of the speech of Mr. HAWES—

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. HAWES. I yield.

Mr. BINGHAM. In connection with the very interesting remarks that the Senator from Missouri is making in regard to law enforcement, I have been asked by the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS]——

Mr. HAWES. I ask the Senator from Connecticut, please, not to interrupt me at this time, in the middle of my argument.

Mr. BINGHAM. I ask unanimous consent that at the end of the Senator's argument there may be inserted the article which the Senator from Maryland has asked to have included in the RECORD.

Mr. HAWES. I do not want to have it put into the body of my remarks.

Mr. BINGHAM. I have asked that it be inserted at the end of the Senator's remarks.

Mr. BORAH. I think after the Senator from Missouri shall have looked over the article he will not want it to appear in his remarks.

Mr. HAWES. I do not know the nature of the article.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the article will be inserted at the end of the Senator's remarks.

The article ordered to be printed at the end of the speech of Mr. HAWES is as follows:

[From the Washington Post, June 16, 1929]

PROHIBITION LAW IN 10 YEARS HAS COST UNITED STATES $300,000,000 TO ENFORCE, $3,000,000,000 REVENUE—STATES HAVE EXPENDED MORE AND HUNDREDS OF LIVES HAVE BEEN LOST—JAILS ARE CROWDED, COURTS ARE CONGESTED, AND DISREGARD OF LAW IS A FAD

Now, in its tenth year, national prohibition has cost the Federal Government more than $300,000,000 for enforcement and $3,000,000,000 loss in revenue, crowded jails to capacity, congested court dockets to the limit, taken a toll of 200 lives outright, and before reaching adolescence has kicked over the traces so much as to become the Government's chief problem.

Other millions have been expended by States on enforcement, and other untold hundreds have been killed and wounded in the process. International complications have piled up. Disregard for law has become a fad.

National prohibition came into existence under the postwar conditions of January 16, 1920, while the Nation was still under the spell of strife abroad, and as the first decade of theoretical and legal aridness draws to a close there is no master mind to prophesy whether it will eventually be written into history as a success or a failure.

The drys proudly point to rapid strides of the Nation in industry, in commerce, in science, and education as the fruits of prohibition. The wets, equally as emphatic, point to smuggling, gang wars, hypocrisy in politics, bootleg rings, increased use of intoxicants by the younger generation, and loudly decry its failure.

President Hoover, believing that prohibition does not belong in politics, was forced to accept it as a major issue. He started his appraisal of the problem by calling it a "noble experiment," and promised a presidential commission to study the problem of its enforcement along with that of other laws.

He struck a snag at the outset. Men of the caliber he wanted for a searching investigation have balked at the nobility of looking into the experiment. Wets have become so confident of the impossibility of enforcing the law that they have voted for increased millions for enforcement in an attempt to show that it can not be enforced at any cost.

In the last month, in the overlapping shadows of the Capitol, Washington Monument, and the White House, the Jones law, with its most drastic penalties and a Hoover order behind it to make the National Capital a model of enforcement, has served only to double liquor prices and actually increase the local liquor supply by attracting outside bootleg personnel with supplies in an attempt to undersell the local boom market.

The problem is the Nation's chief issue. Men or women in any community who can be said to take no sides in the controversy just simply aren't.

ENFORCEMENT COST MOUNTING

The history of the 10 years writes a new epoch in government. When the Congress wrote prohibition into the Constitution it appropriated $2,200,000 for enforcement of the law from January 17 to June 30, 1920, and members openly scoffed at predictions that the cost would eventually run to $50,000,000 a year. It is near that amount to-day, and all indications point to steady increases rather than a decline in the cost.

In fact, Dr. J. M. Doran, Director of Prohibition, has told Congress that to enforce the law properly will cost $300,000,000 a year. At the same time the Coast Guard says to keep out all smugglers of liquor it will be necessary to have vessels stationed every 500 yards along the coasts.

The Federal Government started out to enforce prohibition through the medium of the Prohibition Unit of the Treasury, with the aid of State and local authorities. Only a few years had passed, however, until the Customs Bureau and the Coast Guard found their major activities devoted to the prevention of liquor smuggling. It was in 1924 that the Coast Guard became enmeshed in the situation.

Roughly the debit side of the ledger for the 10 years will show the following Federal cost:

Prohibition Unit	$110,000,000
Coast Guard	97,000,000
Department of Justice	75,000,000
Customs Service	24,000,000
Total	306,000,000

The steady rise in the cost of enforcement in this branch of the Government may be seen, as follows:

Fiscal year:
1921	$7,100,000
1922	7,500,000
1923	9,250,000
1924	9,000,000
1925	11,341,770
1926	11,000,000
1927	13,322,445
1928	Approximately same.
1929	Approximately same.
1930	Approximately same.

When the Coast Guard took over the problem of preventing smuggling in 1924, the work was classed as additional activities, and the cost of this job follows:

1924	$13,850,622
1925	9,189,600
1926	15,529,427
1927	14,560,011
1928	15,426,540
1929	15,110,530
1930 (estimate)	14,686,798

Not included in the Coast Guard total or the total cost of enforcement is the capital charge for 25 destroyers, which has been estimated at $1,500,000 each, or $37,500,000.

BILLIONS IN TAXES LOST

In the Department of Justice and the Customs Service the additional funds allowed for prohibition activities is included in the general amount. It is estimated that one-third of the money appropriated for the Justice Department goes to the work of prohibition enforcement, while at least $4,000,000 a year of the appropriations for the Customs Service is used to this end. On the present Justice budget approximately $8,000,000 is in connection with prohibition.

On top of this tremendous cost is the loss in revenue from distilled spirits and fermented liquors. These amounted to $483,050,854 in 1918 and $443,839,544 in 1919, but they were admittedly abnormal years.

In the eight years preceding 1918 the internal-revenue receipts from these sources were:

1910	$201,008,670
1911	211,804,579
1912	212,042,389
1913	223,314,452
1914	226,179,689
1915	223,948,646
1916	247,453,548
1917	284,008,512

This was an increase from 1910 to 1917 of more than $80,000,000 in annual receipts. Discounting the two abnormal years of taxes collected and assuming that the 10 years from 1920 to 1930 would have seen a like increase in these revenues, the total that might now be expected if prohibition had not come would be in the vicinity of $350,000,000 or more a year.

The year-by-year tally of killings, according to the latest official record, is as follows:

	Agents	Civilians
1920	6	5
1921	8	14
1922	12	13
1923	4	17
1924	2	22
1925	5	20
1926	6	17
1927	5	16
1928	7	10

The Prohibition Unit has taken steps within the last 12 months to decrease the firing upon automobiles, and the result has been to lessen the number of fatalities in connection with enforcement of the law. There are no figures available on the hundreds killed and injured by State and municipal authorities.

COURTS CROWDED

On November 1, 1928, 4,476 persons were employed in the Prohibition Unit alone. There were 1,236 prohibition agents, 317 prohibition inspectors, 50 investigators, 1,081 clerks and chemists, messengers, attorneys, deputies, and even laborers.

A glimpse into the expenditures of the Prohibition Bureau, based on data furnished by Congress in the estimates for 1930 reveals: Communications, $1,238,300, of which $14,000 is for the telegraph service and $75,000 for telephones; traveling expenses, $1,939,615; transportation, $1,195,616; hire of automobiles, $85,000; transportation of seized liquor by freight, $7,900; hauling of seized liquor, $125,000; advertising, $3,000; rent of buildings and structures, $366,000, and storage of goods not incident to transportation, $105,000. The above figures represent expenditures for the period of one year.

Let's look into the Federal convictions under the national prohibition act.

Year—	Number of convictions	Total sentences (years)
1922	22,749	1,552
1923	34,069	2,003
1924	37,181	3,497
1925	39,072	4,569
1926	41,154	4,884
1927	36,546	4,477
1928	58,813	5,631

An indication of the crowded court dockets can be seen from the number of cases pending in Federal courts at the end of each year. These follow:

1921	10,365
1922	16,713
1923	28,052
1924	22,380
1925	25,334
1926	20,434
1927	20,173
1928	18,005

The total of arrests for dry law violation up to June 30, 1928, according to the Prohibition Department reports, was 483,474.

FINES INCREASING

The steady increase in the number can be seen from the following figures:

1920	10,548
1921	34,175
1922	42,223
1923	66,936
1924	68,161
1925	62,747
1926	58,391
1927	64,986
1928	75,307

The only revenue the Federal Government receives to offset the rising cost of prohibition is from fines and damages. A statement of collections deposited in the Federal Treasury as a result of fines, costs, bond forfeitures, sale of seized property, etc., for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1928, totaled $4,997,491. To this may be added the amount of money collected by prohibition administrators through the sale of Government-owned cars and unclaimed seized cars, $76,934, making a total of $5,074,423. The amount of compromises accepted during the 1928 fiscal year totaled $1,109,518, which brought the total to $6,183,942 collected incident to the enforcement of the prohibition law for one year.

Fines in Federal courts over a period of years prior to the above are shown as follows:

1920	$1,148,512
1921	4,570,505
1922	4,355,892
1923	5,095,300
1924	6,538,115
1925	5,873,226
1926	5,647,348
1927	5,162,000

In connection with the seizures of distilling apparatus and illicit liquor the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment has compiled the figures in the table above from reports of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The alarming increase in seizures of liquor materials have influenced Doctor Doran to order an investigation of the raising and marketing of all raw material that can go into liquor, wine, or beer. The investigation has started in California, where the grape output has doubled since prohibition went into effect. It will continue into malts, rye, corn, and possibly even cactus, from which the Mexicans get one of their favorite drinks.

After the conclusion of the speech of Mr. HAWES—

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, everyone knows that the question of law enforcement is one of our paramount national problems. It is significant that President Hoover should have chosen law enforcement as one of the few subjects discussed in his inaugural address and as the sole topic at his first public address in New York before the convention of the Associated Press. At that time the President pleaded for better law enforcement and expressed alarm over "the possibility that respect for law as law is fading from the sensibilities of our people."

I absolutely agree with the President that to instill greater respect for the law is one of our foremost duties, but I want to point out that if law is to be respected it must deal out even-handed justice. No government can long endure if any considerable proportion of its people have reason to feel that the courts are corrupt, that decisions are dispensed according to class distinction, or that the humblest or most despised of citizens can be wrongfully deprived of property or personal liberty. The whole fabric of orderly society depends upon the will for absolute integrity of our courts and the impartial dispensation of justice.

Nothing will destroy public confidence in our judicial system more swiftly or more surely than the belief that men can be convicted on framed-up evidence and then be denied redress because they may subscribe to unpopular political opinions. Such a belief strikes at the very foundations of good government, because there can be no respect for the law so long as there is reason for believing that the law is not administered with absolute impartiality.

Mr. President, I am making these remarks because there exists to-day in President Hoover's own State of California a situation which admittedly is casting disrepute on our entire judicial system, not only throughout the United States but in foreign nations as well.

I refer to the case of Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings, who have been kept in prison for nearly 13 years by the State of California for alleged complicity in the explosion of a bomb during a Preparedness Day parade in San Francisco on July 22, 1916. I admit it was a heinous crime; and if either of these men were in truth implicated, hanging would have been too good for them. Also, I want to say in this connection that I always have been a steadfast believer in ample preparedness, and I in nowise indorse some of the radical opinions which Mooney and Billings are alleged to have entertained. But that is beside the question. The facts are that it has been demonstrated that Mooney and Billings were entirely innocent of the crime for which they were convicted, and so well has this fact been established by the confession of some witnesses and the complete discrediting of others that the judge who sentenced Mooney, all 10 of the surviving jurors who originally declared him guilty, the two assistant district attorneys who helped to conduct their trials, the two captains of police who prepared the evidence, and the attorney general of the State of California have all vainly petitioned for their pardon on the ground that both men were convicted on testimony afterwards conclusively proved to have been perjurious.

This is not the place to rehearse the history of the trial, but it is sufficient to say—and I am quoting in substance the language of the presiding judge—that in the trial of Mooney there were four witnesses, and four only, who connected him with the explosion. One of these witnesses afterwards confessed that he perjured himself; another not only perjured himself but attempted to suborn perjury in another, and afterwards was proved not to have been in the city when the explosion occurred. The other two witnesses, in the language of the presiding judge again, have been entirely discredited by the former chief of police of Oakland, one of his inspectors, and a lieutenant in the San Francisco Police Department, who all later testified that the witnesses admitted they were not even at the spot where they testified they had seen the defendants. Within the last two months Estelle Smith, the witness chiefly responsible for the conviction of Billings, has made a detailed confession admitting that she falsely identified the defendants because the police threatened to jail her because of her record as a woman of the underworld. With these witnesses discredited there is not one scintilla of evidence which in any way connects either Mooney or Billings with the Preparedness Day bombing outrage.

These men were convicted, I believe, as a result of a corrupt conspiracy involving certain public-utility interests of San Francisco, which hated Mooney and Billings because they had been active in leading strikes. There is plenty of evidence from the record which shows the whole deal was engineered by a detective, Martin Swanson, employed by the Pacific Gas & Electric Co., and that Swanson previously had attempted to frame up Mooney on at least two occasions. When the explosion took place Swanson resigned from the public utility employ and went to work for the district attorney, and was instrumental in engineering the whole dastardly frame-up.

Billings and Mooney were convicted when the public was still outraged, and properly so, by the wanton explosion, which, of course, can not be defended. Public prejudice was skillfully played upon by the prosecutor and public passion was enflamed by the press. Perjured evidence was made to order by an unscrupulous State's attorney, and under these conditions it is not at all surprising that Mooney and Billings were convicted.

The Hon. Franklin A. Griffin, still judge of the superior court in San Francisco, and who presided over the trial of Mooney, was one of the first to realize that Mooney had been framed up on perjured testimony, and ever since Judge Griffin has been foremost in demanding his pardon. On February 25, 1929, the twelfth anniversary of his sentencing of Tom Mooney to die on the gallows, Judge Griffin addressed a mass meeting in San Francisco and used the following language:

I am old-fashioned enough to believe that a court of justice should be a court of justice, and when I know a wrong has been done it is my duty and your duty to see that wrong righted. That's why I am here to-night to testify to what I have repeatedly said, that Tom Mooney is innocent and ought to be pardoned.

The Mooney case is one of the dirtiest jobs ever put over, and I resent the fact that my court was used for such a contemptible piece of work. I regret that the governor takes so long a time to act; but, then, it is his conscience that has to decide the case, and if he does the right thing when he gets around to it, it will be all right.

Judge Griffin also has written four letters to three successive Governors of California, asking that Mooney be pardoned; and on November 14, 1928, in the letter to Gov. C. C. Young, he made the following statements:

The thing that happened on Preparedness Day 12 years ago was a terrible crime, but I am sure that you will also consider it a terrible crime to keep in prison two human beings who were most unfairly, even criminally, convicted—and that you will wish to give those who believe there has been a miscarriage of justice every opportunity to meet any doubt of their innocence that you may have.

Any fair-minded man who reads only the transcripts of the trials of Mooney and Billings would believe them guilty. If the testimony in these cases was honest and true, then their guilt was conclusive. But subsequent revelations damned every witness who testified before me against them as perjurers or mistaken. Estelle Smith has admitted her testimony was false. The Edeaus were completely discredited. Oxman is completely out of the case as a perjurer who also tried to suborn perjury in another witness. John McDonald has since sworn to an affidavit that he knew nothing about the crime. The transcript evidence upon which Mooney and Billings were convicted no longer exists.

And because it does not exist, the trial judge (myself), the foreman of the Mooney jury, 11 members of the jury, the present district attorney, Captain Matheson, who had charge of the case, and every other official—except former District Attorney Fickert—now believe the convicted men innocent and are earnest advocates of their pardon.

Mr. President, it is amazing, in view of the foregoing facts, that there is any question about pardoning Mooney and Billings. They should have been pardoned years ago. Only a few months after Mooney's conviction, and while he was still under sentence of death, it was discovered that Oxman, the chief witness for the prosecution, had written three letters to a certain Edward Rigall, in Grayville, Ill., asking Rigall to come to San Francisco and testify. These letters can bear only one possible construction; that is, that Oxman wanted Rigall to support his own perjured testimony. At that time Judge Griffin refused a motion for a new trial; but when the Oxman letters were brought to his attention he addressed a letter to U. S. Webb, attorney general of the State of California, asking him to see that the case was returned for retrial; and the attorney general thereupon addressed the supreme court and gave consent that judgment and order be reversed and the case be remanded for a new trial.

Despite this action by the judge and the attorney general, the California Supreme Court denied a new trial; and its opinion is summed up in the following concluding paragraph of the court's opinion:

> But manifestly the court has no authority to consider such matters as those presented; they are no part of the record sent to us from the court below; and there is no provision of law by which newly discovered evidence may be presented to this court in the first instance. The remedy in such cases rests with the executive. He alone can afford relief.

At that time every witness for the prosecution was available, and there were still nine indictments pending against Mooney and Billings. Both men waived the question of double jeopardy, and were willing and anxious to stand trial. It would have been a simple matter for the governor to have pardoned the men with the stipulation that they should be properly retried. It is a sad commentary on the state of affairs in California that this action was not taken.

The case was then fresh in the public mind; and there were such vigorous protests both at home and abroad, that in the interests of allied harmony President Wilson sent a Federal mediation commission to California to investigate the case. Members of this Federal mediation board were Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson; John F. Spangler, of Pennsylvania; Verner Z. Reed, of Colorado; John H. Walker, of Illinois; E. P. Marsh, of Washington; and Felix Frankfurter, of Massachusetts. All of them are reputable men, presumably without prejudice; and after a careful investigation they flatly declared that "the verdict against Mooney was discredited."

As a result of this report, President Wilson wrote to Governor Stephens asking that the execution of Mooney be postponed until he could be tried on one of the other indictments against him, in order that he could give more weighty consideration to the important changes which had taken place in the evidence against him. Governor Stephens still stubbornly declined to take action which would give Mooney a new trial; but he did commute the death sentence to life imprisonment, and Mooney and Billings are now starting on their thirteenth year in jail.

For a number of years the agitation on behalf of Mooney and Billings died down, and they were allowed to languish in jail in comparative obscurity; but recently renewed efforts have been made to correct this most damnable miscarriage of justice. The Tom Mooney Molders Defense committee is working among members of organized labor; and a National Mooney-Billings committee, of which Henry T. Hunt, former mayor of Cincinnati, is chairman, and consisting of many prominent and high-minded men and women from all parts of the country has been organized to appeal to the conscience of the American people.

There is no question at all as to the complete innocence of Mooney and Billings; and it is a grave reflection upon our judicial system that this injustice can be corrected only by an appeal to executive clemency. It is becoming apparent that the same public utilities which conspired to put Mooney and Billings in jail desire to keep them there; and apparently these public utilities exercise a great deal of political power in the State of California. There is evidence that the Pacific Gas & Electric Co., whose detective engineered the frame-up against Mooney and Billings, has in the past few years spent huge sums of money in California politics. Apparently three successive governors have not dared to go contrary to the wishes of these campaign contributors.

It seems to me that the case of Mooney and Billings is no longer the sole concern of the State of California. There are hundreds of thousands of people in the United States whose respect for law is justifiably weakened as the result of this flagrant miscarriage of justice. To be respected, the law must be worthy of respect; and no right-thinking man can yield unquestionable obedience to the law when the law thus frankly expresses its failure to free innocent men.

The continued imprisonment of Mooney and Billings is casting discredit on our judicial processes in many countries abroad. Recently the London Times and the Manchester Guardian carried articles on the case, and resolutions have been adopted by many European labor organizations. In his campaign to compel greater respect for the law, it seems to me that President Hoover may properly use his influence to see that some action is taken in correcting this shameful injustice now existing in the State of California. I realize, of course, that the President has no official authority to tell a State how to administer its criminal laws; but President Wilson saw fit to intervene in this case in the interest of justice, and I believe that a word from President Hoover in the right quarter might facilitate matters.

I realize, too, that the Congress of the United States is probably powerless to take any positive action in this matter; but I believe that the continued incarceration of these men is a challenge to our institutions and a reflection on our whole judicial system, and I believe that the time has come to hear all the facts, and to appeal to the conscience of the American people. If we can not look for fair play on the part of successive California executives, then it is only by arousing widespread protest that sufficient public pressure can be brought to bear to see that these two innocent men are finally freed.

Mr. President, I have prepared a summary of the testimony and facts in the case of Thomas J. Mooney, and I ask unanimous consent that it may be incorporated in and made a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to is as follows:

SUMMARY OF TESTIMONY AND FACTS IN THE CASE OF THOMAS J. MOONEY

Although the prosecution produced 86 witnesses in the trial of Thomas J. Mooney, who was charged with setting off a bomb that killed 10 persons and wounded 40 during a Preparedness Day parade in San Francisco on July 22, 1916, only 4 witnesses gave testimony which in any way connected Mooney with the crime.

The other witnesses—physicians, policemen, "experts," paraders, and others—merely testified that the explosion occurred at a certain time; that certain persons were killed or wounded; and that especially described bits of débris were picked up on the streets after the explosion.

Judge Franklin A. Griffin, who presided over the trial of Mooney, pointed this out in a letter to Gov. William D. Stephens, of California, on November 19, 1918, when he declared:

"In the trial of Mooney there were four witnesses, and four only, who connected him with the explosion which occurred at Steuart and Market Streets. They were John McDonald, Frank C. Oxman, Mrs. Mellie Edeau, and her daughter, Sadie. Of these, Oxman and McDonald placed Mooney at the scene of the crime, and the Edeaus testified to his presence at 721 Market Street, from which point, the prosecution avers, Billings, Weinberg, Mooney, and his wife drove in Weinberg's jitney with an unidentified man to the scene of the crime."

It is the purpose of this memorandum to cite the testimony of the four witnesses who falsely swore away Mooney's liberty and then to prove beyond any reasonable doubt that all four of these State's witnesses willfully committed perjury.

The unreliability of the essential State witnesses can be summarized as follows:

John McDonald, at the Mooney trial, flatly contradicted testimony formerly given before the grand jury and at the trial of Billings. McDonald also contradicted the testimony given by Oxman. Later, in February 7, 1921, McDonald voluntarily made an affidavit confessing that he committed perjury.

Frank C. Oxman wrote three letters to Edward Rigall, of Grayville, Ill., asking him to come to San Francisco to testify and these letters plainly indicate that Oxman not only perjured himself but tried to suborn perjury in Rigall. After the trial, Policeman Draper Hand stated that Oxman admitted to him he had not seen the defendants at the scene of the crime, and in 1921 Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Hatcher made affidavits that on the day of the preparedness parade, Oxman was at their home at Woodland, some 90 miles from San Francisco, and did not board the train until after the explosion had occurred.

The Edeau women were later impeached by two Oakland police officials and one of the San Francisco detectives in charge of the investigation who declared that the mother and daughter first claimed to have been at the scene of the explosion and refused to identify either Mooney or Billings. Later these women changed their testimony, claiming they were some 4,000 feet from the explosion, and swearing they saw the defendants at that point. In the words of Judge Griffin, "The testimony of the Edeaus has now been entirely discredited."

Now, in parallel columns, the testimony of the four witnesses who alone are responsible for Mooney's conviction, will be compared with the indisputable facts:

THE TESTIMONY

Frank C. Oxman testified that about 1.40 p. m. he was standing at Steuart and Market Streets when a Ford automobile containing Mooney, Billings, Mrs. Mooney, Weinberg, and an unidentified man came down Market Street in the face of the parade, while Mooney held a suit case on the running board; that Mooney, Billings, and the unidentified man got out and placed the suit case where the explosion later occurred; that the unidentified man walked away in the crowd, and that Mooney and Billings then reentered the automobile and drove up Steuart Street.

Oxman said he paid particular attention to them because Billings brushed against him and their actions made him think they were thieves. Oxman said he wrote down the number of the auto on a scrap of paper. The number was that of Weinberg's auto.

Oxman swore he arrived at San Francisco shortly before noon on the day of the preparedness parade and immediately registered at the Terminal Hotel.

THE FACTS

Four photographs were taken of the parade from the roof of the Ellers Building—6,000 feet from the scene of the explosion—which plainly show a street clock in the background, and this proves beyond any dispute that Mr. and Mrs. Mooney were on the roof of this building, more than a mile from where Oxman said he saw them, between 1.58 and 2.04 p. m.

Eight witnesses, all reputable, testified that the Mooneys were on the roof of the Ellers Building from about 1.40 or 1.50 p. m. until late in the afternoon; and eight other witnesses—all reputable—testified that both Mr. and Mrs. Mooney were in Mrs. Mooney's musical studio in the Ellers Building continuously from 11.30 a. m. until they went on the roof sometime between 1.30 and 1.45 p. m. to view the preparedness parade.

At the trial of Mrs. Mooney and Weinberg—both of whom were acquitted—no less than 18 policemen testified that no automobile could have passed down Market Street in the face of the oncoming parade as Oxman testified.

In November, 1920, Police Officer Draper Hand, who had helped work up the bomb cases, voluntarily stated to Mayor Rolph, of San Francisco, that the police had given Oxman the number of Weinberg's auto, which Oxman swore he wrote down at the scene of the explosion. Hand said that Oxman was taken to the garage where the auto was kept and conducted tests to see if a suitcase could be held on the running board as he later testified Mooney held it. Hand stated that by manner and implication Oxman admitted he had not seen the defendants at the scene of the bombing.

In May, 1921, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Hatcher, of Woodland, Yolo County, Calif., some 90 miles north of San Francisco, testified before the San Francisco grand jury that on July 22, 1916, the day of the explosion, Oxman arrived at their home at Woodland in the morning, had lunch with them, and did not take the train for San Francisco until 2.15 p. m.—nine minutes after the fatal blast went off. Oxman did not reach San Francisco until after 5 p. m., according to the testimony of the Thatchers, and this is verified by the fact that Oxman did not register at the Terminal Hotel until 5.30 p. m., although he swore he reached the hotel before noon. The Thatchers said the date was fixed in their mind, because Oxman called them up by long-distance telephone that night and told them about the explosion. Of course, at that time he made no claim to having been an eyewitness.

Mooney was convicted—largely as a result of Oxman's testimony—and sentenced to hang on February 17, 1917. In April of the same year the defense attorneys obtained possession of the original letters written by Oxman a few weeks before the opening of Mooney's trial to F. E. Rigall, owner of a pool hall at Grayville, Ill. The letters follow in full:

THE TESTIMONY—continued

THE FACTS—continued

Mr. ED RIGALL,
Grayville, Ill.

DEAR ED: has been a long time since I hurd from you. I have a chance for you to cum to San frico as expurt wittness in a very important case. You only hafto answer 3 & 4 questions and I will Post you on them. You will get mileage and all that a witness can draw. Probably 100 in clears so if you will come ans me quick, in care of this Hotel and I will mange the Balance. It is all ok but I need a witness Let me no if you can come Jan 3 is the dait set for trile. Pleas keep this confidential.

Ans hear.

Yours truly

F. C. OXMAN

The second letter, under postmark December 18, 1916, is as follows:

Mr. F. E. RIGALL,
Grayville, Ill.

DEAR ED: Your telegram received. I will wire you transportation in plenty of time; also expense money. Will route you by Chicago, Omaha, Union Pacific, Ogden Southern Pacific to San Francisco. I thought you can make the trip and see California and save a little money. As you will be allowed to collect 10 cents per mile from the State which will be about $200, besides I can get your expenses and you will only have to say you seen me on July 22 in San Francisco, and that will be easy done. I will try and meet you on the way out and talk it over. The State of California will pay you but I will attend to the expenses. The case won't come up until January 3 or 4, 1917, so start about 29th of this month. You know that the silent road is the one and say nothing to anybody. The fewer people know it the better. When you arrive, register as Evansville, Ind., little more mileage.

Yours truly,

F. C. OXMAN.

On December 25, 1916, Oxman wrote to Mrs. J. D. Rigall, mother of F. E. Rigall, as follows:

Mrs. J. D. RIGALL,
Grayville.

DEAR MRS. RIGALL: As I am sending Ed transportation to-morrow, 26th, it might be that I can use you also about the 10th. If so, can obtain you ticket that you can see California. If you would like the trip address me care Hotel. Tell F. E. Say nothing until he sees me. Can probably use an extra witness. Been a long time I don't see you.

Yours truly,

F. C. OXMAN.

Rigall had come to San Francisco and had been in that city during the time when Mooney was on trial. He swore later, at Oxman's trial for subornation of perjury that Oxman had escorted him to the scene of the explosion and

THE TESTIMONY—continued

John McDonald testified at Mooney's trial that he was standing at Steuart and Market Streets when he saw Billings coming down Steuart Street carrying a suit case; that he put down the suit case on the spot where the explosion subsequently occurred; that Mooney and Billings then met and stood talking for a short time; that Billings then walked away and that after waiting a few moments Mooney also "turned around and went through the crowd." McDonald testified that this was about 1.45 p. m.

THE FACTS—continued

rehearsed the testimony that he, Oxman, was to give a few days after, against Mooney: That Oxman urged him to take the stand and corroborate him, and when he refused and reminded Oxman that he had never been in San Francisco before in his life, Oxman replied: "Hell, you were here as much as I was!" that he was entertained about town by members of the police department and of the district attorney's staff; that he finally got "cold feet" and told Cunha, assistant district attorney, that he had never been in the city before, whereupon Cunha dismissed him as a prospective witness and he returned to Grayville. There he told several persons of his experience, and through the good offices of Edward N. Nockles, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, the original letters from Oxman were turned over to attorneys for the defendants.

To show Oxman's utter unreliability, it is only necessary to add that he had deserted his first wife and contracted a bigamous marriage; that he had been indicted for fraud and a judgment for fraud entered against him; that his neighbors at Grayville, Ill., and Durkee, Oreg., almost uniformly testified his reputation for veracity was bad; and that B. C. Wilson, claim agent for the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Co., on April 2, 1924, made an affidavit that in 1914 Oxman offered to produce the same Edward Rigall who figured in the Mooney case as a witness in a damage suit against the railroad, when, investigation proved, Rigall at that time never had been in Oregon.

So much for Oxman, and it is conceded by Judge Griffin, the 10 surviving jurors, 2 assistant prosecuting attorneys, and the 2 police officials who worked up the evidence that without Oxman's testimony Mooney could not have been convicted.

McDonald's testimony flatly contradicts the testimony of Oxman, the only other witness who placed Mooney at the scene of the crime.

Oxman says Mooney and Billings drove down Market Street in an auto, set down the suit case, reentered the auto, and then drove away. McDonald has Billings walking down Steuart Street, meeting Mooney at the corner, and then both men walking away.

As McDonald and Oxman both fixed these alleged occurrences at approximately the same time, it is obvious that at least one of them was lying.

McDonald's testimony in the Mooney trial also was widely at variance with his previous testimony before the grand jury and again at the Billings trial.

On those two occasions McDonald said he saw Billings set down the suit case and meet Mooney "at about 2 o'clock."

McDonald also fixed the time by stating that after he saw Mooney

THE TESTIMONY—continued

Mrs. Mellie Edeau and her daughter, Sadie, testified that they had been standing on the sidewalk in front of 721 Market Street (4,000 feet from the scene of the explosion) at 1.30 p. m. and saw Billings on the roof talking to some one on the sidewalk below. Then they saw Mooney and his wife on the sidewalk. Presently Billings joined them, the Edeaus alleged, and the Mooneys and Billings walked off toward the scene of the explosion.

The Edeaus also said they saw Weinberg get into his Ford jitney with another man and the car drove off down Market Street. It was the assumption of the prosecution that Weinberg picked up the Mooneys and Billings farther down the street and drove them to Steuart and Market.

The testimony of the Edeaus dovetailed with that of Oxman and was an important factor in obtaining Mooney's conviction.

THE FACTS—continued

go into the crowd, he, McDonald, walked down Market Street to the Alameda Café when the explosion occurred (the Alameda Café is only 135 feet from the scene of the explosion) and therefore the twice-repeated testimony of McDonald has Mooney at the scene only a few seconds before the bomb went off at exactly 2.06 o'clock.

This was before the defense had the photographs showing Mooney on the roof of the Eilers Building (more than a mile away) at 1.58, 2.01, and 2.04 p. m. When the defense obtained these photographs McDonald materially changed his previous testimony.

On February 7, 1921, McDonald made an affidavit before Frank P. Walsh, formerly chairman of the War Labor Board, in which he confessed that he committed perjury when he identified Mooney and Billings as the men whom he had seen set down a suit case at Steuart and Market Streets.

McDonald, a former circus acrobat, was a tramp waiter and during the trial boasted that the police would send him "back East on the cushions." He also was a drug addict.

Whether true or not, his affidavit brands him as wholly untrustworthy and his evidence itself is contradictory and plainly false.

Judge Griffin summarized McDonald's testimony in a letter to Governor Stephens, of California, as follows:

"I do not hesitate to say, however, that in my judgment McDonald is unworthy of belief, and in view of two indisputable facts which are established beyond all peradventure of a doubt, his testimony is worthless. These are, first, the time of the explosion, 2.06 p. m.; and, second, the time Mooney is shown on the roof of the Eilers Building, 1.58 p. m. Bearing these facts in mind the testimony of McDonald demonstrates its own falsity and is itself unanswerable evidence that what he claimed to have seen could not have occurred."

After the trial of Mooney his attorneys obtained complete proof that the Edeau women had perjured themselves and this evidence was presented at the trial of Mrs. Mooney and Weinberg—some months later—and resulted in their speedy acquittal.

Walter J. Peterson, then captain, United States Army, formerly chief of police of Oakland, testified that Mrs. Edeau had come to him after the explosion and said that she and her daughter were at Steuart and Market Streets (4,000 feet from 721 Market Street) when the bomb went off.

Mrs. Edeau said she had seen two men set down a suit case and believed she could identify them.

Chief Peterson assigned Inspector William Smith to accompany the mother and daughter to the San Francisco city prison.

Peterson swore that Inspector Smith reported to him the same day that the Edeaus had said

THE TESTIMONY—continued

THE FACTS—continued

Mooney and Billings were not the men they had seen.

Inspector Smith took the stand and said the Edeaus had told him they were at Steuart and Market instead of at 721 Market Street, (where they later swore they saw the defendants) and Smith also put in evidence his diary which showed the Edeaus had been unable to identify Mooney or Billings.

Lieutenant Goff, of the San Francisco Police Department, who was present when the Edeaus confronted Mooney and Billings, also admitted they had not identified the defendants.

Chief Peterson said that when he taxed Mrs. Edeau with making conflicting statements as to her whereabouts on the day of the explosion, she replied that while she had been at Steuart and Market Streets her "astral body" had been at 721 Market Street.

Inspector Smith also said she admitted to him she had changed her testimony.

The Edeaus were further impeached by William Burgess, Thomas Stout, and Muriel Stewart, who worked with Mrs. Edeau at a dressmaking establishment at Oakland. They testified that Mrs. Edeau told them she had been at the scene of the blast; had seen two middle-aged men plant the suitcase; and after returning from the San Francisco jail had said that Mooney and Billings were not the men she had seen put down the suitcase.

It was the above testimony entirely conclusive, and partly given by police officials whose sympathies were not with the defendants, which led Judge Griffin to declare some months after the trial that "the testimony of the Edeaus has now been completely discredited."

Mooney was convicted by Oxman, McDonald, and the Edeau women. There was not a scrap of any other evidence connecting him with the crime, and no man ever had a more unshakable alibi. Not only the photographs taken from the roof of the Eilers Building but the testimony of 16 witnesses show him to have been more than a mile away from the scene of the explosion, where he was perjuriously placed by Oxman and McDonald.

The testimony of 18 policemen proves that no auto went down Market Street in the face of the oncoming parade, as testified to by the Edeaus and Oxman.

President Wilson's mediation commission appointed by William B. Wilson, Secretary of Labor, made a careful investigation and declared that "the verdict against Mooney is discredited."

John B. Densmore, director of the Federal Employment Service, who made a later investigation, said, "There is little left of the district attorney's case against the Mooney defendants, save an unsavory record of manipulation and perjury."

The trial judge, all 10 of the surviving jurors, the two assistant district attorneys who tried the case, a former attorney general of California, and the two police captains who had charge of preparing the evidence have all petitioned for Mooney's pardon on the grounds that he was convicted on testimony afterwards proved to have been perjured and that he is wholly innocent of the crime for which he is serving a life sentence.

The case against Billings is equally flimsy. Outside of McDonald, who confessed his perjury, the only witness to place Billings at the scene of the explosion was John Crowley, a wife deserter and a pervert who was afflicted with syphilis. His record was so rotten that he was not used in the trial of Mooney.

So recently as March 19, 1929, Estelle Smith, who with the Edeau women testified that Billings had been at 721 Market Street, made a long and detailed affidavit stating that she was forced to falsely identify Billings after being threatened with prison. She had been a woman of the underworld with a police record. Also, her uncle, then in the California State penitentiary under sentence for murder, was pardoned shortly after she testified.

Estelle Smith stated she was a morphine addict and was taking dope at intervals while on the witness stand. Her affidavit makes a complete and voluntary admission that she committed perjury at the instigation of Prosecuting Attorney Fickert and her employer.

Her confession completes the collapse of the frame-up against Mooney and Billings and conclusively proves that the conviction of these two men was obtained by bare-faced perjury and fraud.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. NYE. I yield the floor.

Mr. SCHALL. I do not want the floor. I merely desire to make the statement that I indorse what the Senator has said. I have had read to me the transcripts in this case and I want to say that I think Tom Mooney is as innocent of the crime of which he was convicted as any man in the Senate.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, may I put a question to the Senator from North Dakota just to elicit the fact, if it be a fact?

I understand that a petition for the pardon of both Mooney and Billings is now pending, and presumably under consideration by the present Governor of California, Hon. C. C. Young. Am I correct in that?

Mr. NYE. I understand that that is the case, and that that is to be determined some time this month—the 23d or 24th of this month.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. There is just one fact which perhaps might interest the Senate. That fact is quite apart from the question of the gilt or innocence of Mooney and Billings.

The Senator in his statement referred to certain witnesses who testified against those defendants, and made the comments to which we have just listened. One of those witnesses was a man from Oregon. His name was Frank Oxman. He was a witness on the trial, as I recall, of Mooney. In any event, he was afterwards arrested and prosecuted in the courts at San Francisco. I defended him, and the jury very promptly acquitted him.

I make no comment touching the guilt or innocence of Billings or Mooney. I make no comment touching Oxman's guilt or innocence; but, to repeat myself, I merely recall the fact that when Mr. Oxman came down from Oregon and was prosecuted, I defended him, and the jury acquitted him.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, is it not also true that since the trial of Mr. Oxman there has been disclosed evidence that was not then available with relation to Mr. Oxman's personal case?

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I really do not know.

Mr. NYE. I think that is the fact.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I have not heard of any such development. There may be such; I do not know.

Mr. NYE. I think that upon that further evidence the presiding judge now bases his contention that Oxman was guilty of perjury.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, along the lines of the speech that has just been made by the Senator from North Dakota, I will state that I have on my desk letters written by Judge Griffin (who was the trial judge), the district attorney, the captain of police, and, I think, all of the jurors who tried the case against these men. These letters were written to the Governor of the State of California asking the release of Mooney because they felt he had been convicted upon perjured testimony.

I ask unanimous consent that these letters which were written to the governor by the judge who tried the case and by the jurors and the district attorney be inserted in the RECORD.

Likewise I desire to have inserted in the RECORD a petition which was just sent to me, signed by a large group of citizens of Montana, with reference to the same matter.

I am satisfied, after reading the statement by Mr. Densmore, which he wrote to Secretary of Labor Wilson with reference to this trial, and particularly with reference to the statements made concerning Mr. Oxman, that the reason, undoubtedly, why Mr. Oxman was acquitted was the fact that he had as his attorney probably one of the ablest trial lawyers in the United States, the present distinguished junior Senator from California [Mr. SHORTRIDGE]. It was not because of the fact that he was innocent at all, in my humble judgment—at least I could not come to that conclusion after reading what the Department of Labor during the Wilson administration said about it after they had made a careful investigation of the case.

It must be borne in mind that when President Wilson was in office he asked the Secretary of Labor to investigate the matter, and they sent out to California an investigator, and likewise sent out a solicitor, who investigated these cases. They reported to President Wilson that undoubtedly these men were innocent and that they had been convicted upon perjured testimony. So I repeat what I said before—it was not on account of the innocence of Oxman that he was acquitted, but because of the cleverness of his counsel.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I thank the Senator very much.

Mr. WHEELER. No one can read the documentary proof which I have before me and not feel that Tom Mooney is the victim of one of the foulest conspiracies ever perpetrated in this country, and it was done because he was active in labor circles in California. I renew my request that the documents to which I have referred be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DALE in the chair). Is there objection?

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., November 19, 1918.

Hon. WILLIAM D. STEPHENS,
Governor of California, Sacramento, Calif.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: You may recall, and the record is now before you, that subsequent to the trial of Thomas J. Mooney, and after an appeal from my order denying his motion for a new trial, I addressed a letter to the attorney general, in which I requested him to take such action as would send the Mooney case back to my court to be tried anew.

I believed then that simple justice and fair play demanded such action, and from that position I have never for a moment receded. On the contrary, that stand has been by later developments greatly strengthened, and, if I may, I would trespass upon your valuable time to put before you, as briefly as the circumstances will permit, the reasons why I so firmly believe a new trial of the Mooney case should be had.

In the trial of Mooney there were four witnesses, and four only, who connected him with the explosion which occurred at Steuart Street and Market. They were John McDonald, Frank C. Oxman, Mrs. Mellie Edeau and her daughter Sadie. Of these, Oxman and McDonald placed Mooney at the scene of the crime, and the Edeaus testified to his presence at 721 Market Street, from which point the prosecution avers, Billings, Weinberg, Mooney and his wife drove in Weinberg's jitney with an unidentified man to the place of the crime.

Oxman was by far the most important of these witnesses. His testimony was unshaken on cross-examination, and his very appearance bore out his statements that he was a reputable and prosperous cattle dealer and landowner from the State of Oregon. There is no question but that he made a profound impression on the jury and upon all those who listened to his story on the witness stand, and there is not the slightest doubt in my mind that the testimony of Oxman was the turning point in the Mooney case and that he is the pivot around which all other evidence in the case revolves. It was because of the extreme importance of this witness and his naïve simplicity on the witness stand that when the disclosures of the letters he had written to Rigali and his mother, which are before you, was made, I deemed it my duty to address the attorney general as I did.

The testimony of Mrs. Mellie Edeau and her daughter Sadie Edeau, was, that on the day of the preparedness parade, Mooney, Mrs. Mooney, Billings, and Weinberg were together at 721 Market Street, from which point they drove away in the direction of the ferry in Weinberg's automobile jitney. They were the only witnesses who claimed to have seen the Mooneys at that point, and their testimony is important in that it corroborates Oxman's statement that the same four people arrived at Steuart and Market Streets in the same conveyance a short time after its departure from the Edeaus's observation.

At the trial of Billings the Edeaus did not disclose in their testimony then given that they had seen Mooney and his wife. This in itself was a suspicious circumstance, but as it was developed at Mooney's trial and thus was before the jury for consideration, I do not comment upon it. But the testimony of the Edeaus has now been entirely discredited by Inspector Smith of the Oakland Police Department, Captain Peterson of the United States Army, former chief of police of Oakland, and Lieutenant Goff of the San Francisco Police Department. The sworn testimony of these police officials adduced at the trials of the defendants Rena Mooney and Israel Weinberg, before Judge Seawell, of Sonoma, County, who presided for Judge Dunne, discloses that immediately after the tragedy at Steuart and Market Streets the mother called on the Oakland officials, claimed then that she and her daughter were not at 721 Market Street, but at the scene of the crime, and saw the perpetrators thereof, was brought by Inspector Smith to San Francisco, where she was shown the defendants, who were then under arrest, and in the presence of Smith and Goff was not only unable to identify any of them, but stated that they were not the guilty parties. It is important to bear in mind that this is the testimony of police officials, whose natural sympathies are not with the defendants charged with the commission of such an offense as this, and that because of the very nature of the case, its tremendous importance to the community, and the reputed character of the defendants they would be unwilling to testify to a single fact or occurrence of which they were not absolutely certain.

I do not intend to state the testimony of John McDonald. It is brief and doubtless will receive the careful analysis of yourself or your secretary. I do not hesitate to say, however, that in my judgment McDonald is unworthy of belief, and in view of two indisputable facts which are established beyond all peradventure of a doubt, his testimony is worthless. There are, first, the time of the explosion, 2.06 p. m.; and, second, the time Mooney is first shown on the roof of the Eilers Building, 1.58 p. m. The first of these facts is established by Capt. Duncan Matheson, in charge of the bomb case; the second, by the photograph, subsequently enlarged, taken by the young man employed by the Eilers Music Co. Bearing those facts in mind, the testimony of McDonald demonstrates its own falsity and is itself unanswerable evidence that what he claimed to have seen could not have occurred.

Since the trial of Mooney, two other of the bomb defendants have been tried in another department of this court and each has been acquitted of the charge. In these trials McDonald and Mrs. Edeau and her daughter have been witnesses. Oxman has never been produced. There were submitted to each of the juries in these cases all the matters which have been developed since the trial of Thomas J. Mooney, except, of course, the Oxman letters, with the result above indicated.

The situation of Mooney is that he stands condemned to death upon evidence concerning the truth of which, to say the least, there has arisen a very grave doubt. Since his trial facts and circumstances have come to light which seriously reflect upon the credibility of three or four witnesses who link him with the crime of the Preparedness Day and which shake the very foundation of the case upon which the people rely for his conviction.

The highest courts in the State and Nation have declared themselves to be without power to relieve him. Upon the shoulders of the Chief Executive thereof rests this great responsibility.

It was my judgment and opinion that Mooney should receive a new trial upon the Oxman letters alone. In that judgment and opinion I was not alone, for upon examination of the records the attorney general concurred therein and stipulated in open court that the case should be reversed. The supreme court of the State held, however, that it was without power to act upon such a stipulation in a criminal case.

I have no personal interest in Thomas J. Mooney, but I have a deep personal interest in the case of The People v. Thomas J. Mooney, not because I was the judge who presided at its trial and pronounced the judgment but because, firstly, there is a human life involved; and, secondly, inseparable from the case, there is the great principle upon which this Government rests, that no man, whatsoever his condition, position, conviction, or belief may be, shall be denied justice.

In conclusion let me apologize for the extreme length of this letter. The gravity of the case is alone my excuse for burdening you. I have not touched upon the many circumstances which to-day are matters of common knowledge and public notoriety, and which add enormously to the total of doubt and uncertainty now surrounding the result of Mooney's trial, but have merely dwelt upon these indisputable, outstanding facts, themselves now matters of public record, and I can only say, as I said to General Webb, that right and justice demand a new trial for Thomas J. Mooney in order that these facts, so material and of such importance to the issue of his guilt or innocence and unavailable to him at the time of his trial, may be presented to a jury for consideration and determination.

Yours very respectfully,

FRANKLIN A. GRIFFIN.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., November 14, 1923.

Hon. C. C. YOUNG,
Governor of California, Sacramento, Calif.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR: When you discussed the Mooney case some weeks ago with a group of citizens at Berkeley you told us that until then you had believed Mooney and Billings guilty of the preparedness crime. Some days afterwards, when you sent a message to the State Federation of Labor at Sacramento, you said again that you believed them guilty.

I believe that you are as anxious as any other citizen of California to see justice done to these two men, and will give serious attention to the documents in behalf of their pardon. Because I believe that, Governor Young, I am asking you—before you make your final decision—to let me know what evidence has led you to believe that Mooney and Billings really committed the crime for which they were tried and convicted and are now in prison.

The thing that happened on Preparedness Day, 12 years ago, was a terrible crime, but I am sure that you will also consider it a terrible crime to keep in prison two human beings who were most unfairly, even criminally convicted, and that you will wish to give those who believe there has been a miscarriage of justice every opportunity to meet any doubt of their innocence that you may have.

Any fair-minded man who reads only the transcripts of the trials of Mooney and Billings would believe them guilty. If the testimony in these cases was honest and true, then their guilt was conclusive. But subsequent revelations damned every witness who testified before me against them as perjurious or mistaken. Estelle Smith has admitted her testimony was false. The Edeaus were completely discredited.

Oxman is completely out of the case as a perjurer who also tried to suborn perjury in another witness. John McDonald has since sworn to an affidavit that he knew nothing about the crime. The transcript evidence upon which Mooney and Billings were convicted no longer exists.

And because it does not exist, the trial judge (myself), the foreman of the Mooney jury, 11 members of the jury, the present district attorney, Captain Matheson, who had charge of the case, and every other official—except District Attorney Fickert—now believe the convicted men innocent and are earnest advocates of their pardon.

About these facts, Governor Young, there can be no two opinions, and I believe you must base your belief in the guilt of Mooney and Billings upon other evidence not known to me. At your earliest convenience will you let me know what that evidence is? I would like the privilege of considering it, because I feel a deep sense of responsibility in this case, and I may be able to help in this profoundly important matter. I urgently request you to give me whatever added information you may have in an early reply. I am,

Very truly yours,

FRANKLIN A. GRIFFIN,
Judge Superior Court, Department No. 5.

I have asked these citizens who attended the Berkeley meeting, as well as a number of others who are intensely interested in the Mooney case, to sign this letter with me. Their names follow: Jacob Nieto, rabbi of Temple Sherith Israel; Edward J. Hanna, archbishop of San Francisco; Edward L. Parsons, Episcopal bishop of California; W. N. Burkhardt, editor the News; William V. MacNevin, foreman of the Mooney jury; Fremont Older; Max Stern; Fredick W. Clampett; Franklin Hichborn; Mildred J. Pollock.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., September 18, 1926.

His Excellency FRIEND W. RICHARDSON,
Governor of California.

SIR: Although the trials of Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings were concluded before I took office as district attorney, I have become familiar with the evidence introduced and with the further evidence developed since the conclusion of the trials. As applications for pardon have been made, I consider it my duty to submit to you the conclusions I have reached.

Before the Hatchers gave their statements to the grand jury, there was, to say the least, considerable doubt of the truth of Oxman's statement that he was in San Francisco at the time of the explosion. Since the Hatchers gave their testimony, I believe there can be no doubt that Oxman's testimony was false. Some months ago, McDonald came to San Francisco and stated that the testimony he had given was false, and he offered to so state to the grand jury provided that he would not be indicted for perjury. Whether McDonald's last statement is true or false, it leaves him in the position of being entirely untrustworthy. There have been other developments that still further weaken the case of the prosecution.

If these matters that have developed since the trials could be called to the attention of a court that had jurisdiction to grant a new trial, undoubtedly a new trial would be granted. Furthermore, if a new trial were granted, there would be no possibility of convicting Mooney or Billings. The passage of time has deprived the courts of any jurisdiction to grant relief and, under our legal system, the only person that can take cognizance of these circumstances and act upon them is the governor.

The situation is one that comes clearly within the purpose of the provision granting the governor power to pardon. I believe no person that permits himself to analyze the situation entertains any doubt that Mooney and Billings were convicted on false testimony. The only reason for keeping them in prison is that they are undesirable citizens and, if they have not committed the offenses charged, they have been guilty of other activities that justify restraining them. I am convinced that such reasoning is most insidious and, ultimately, most destructive of the very institutions that the law-abiding people prize. It certainly should not be employed by the officials charged with enforcing the laws.

I believe the imprisonment of men convicted on testimony generally regarded as false is highly destructive to the institutions so dear to the heart of every American. The same respect for our laws that leads to the disapproval of the actions of those who break them leads me to the conviction that those convicted upon false and perjured testimony should be pardoned.

Very respectfully yours,

MATHEW BRADY,
District Attorney.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., September 25, 1926.

Hon. FRIEND W. RICHARDSON,
Governor of the State of California, Sacramento, Calif.

DEAR GOVERNOR: I am informed that Thomas Mooney and Warren K. Billings, convicted in connection with the Preparedness Day parade bomb cases, are about to apply to you for a pardon, and I have been asked to express my attitude with reference to the same.

I was one of the prosecuting attorneys in these cases and presented the evidence in the case against W. K. Billings, which was the first case to be tried and which resulted in his conviction. I did not appear active in the court in the prosecuting of the Mooney case, but know that the evidence against Mooney was the same as that against Billings, with the exception that Frank Oxman, who appeared in the Mooney case, did not appear in the Billings case.

Since the conviction of Billings and Mooney Captain of Detectives Matheson, who procured the evidence against them, the judge who presided over the Mooney case, the attorney general of the State of California, and the foreman of the jury and all of the jurors except one now living, who found Mooney guilty, for reasons advanced, have recommended pardons for both Billings and Mooney.

Since the conviction of Billings and Mooney my attention has been called to statements made to the public press by witnesses whose testimony was very important for the prosecution in the trial of those cases, and also to the subsequent attitude and conduct of those witnesses, all of which tended to cast suspicion on said cases and tended to impeach said witnesses and show their unreliability. As a result thereof a serious doubt exists in the minds of a vast number of well-meaning citizens as to the justice of these convictions, and, regardless of my own personal feelings in the matter, because of the attitude of the foresaid parties who had to do with the conviction of these defendants and because of the division of well-meaning public opinion as to the justice of those convictions, it is my opinion, under all the circumstances, that the public interest would be best subserved by granting pardons to both Billings and Mooney, and I therefore recommend that pardons be granted.

Respectfully yours,

JAS. P. BRENNAN.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., September 25, 1929.

Hon. FRIEND W. RICHARDSON,
Governor of California, Sacramento, Calif.

DEAR SIR: I am informed that Thomas Mooney, now an inmate of San Quentin Penitentiary, serving a life sentence because of his conviction on a charge of murder growing out of the Preparedness Day parade outrage committed in San Francisco in 1916, is about to make application to you for an executive order releasing him from his imprisonment.

The writer was foreman of the jury that convicted Mooney of this charge, and, of course, I voted for the verdict.

I am frank to say that in face of all the evidence before the jury in that trial a verdict of guilty was justified. No fair-minded juror, conscious of his responsibility to society as well as the defendant, when confronted with the evidence there presented, could have voted otherwise.

However, since the conviction of Mooney, a great many matters have come to light having to do with the manner of his trial and seriously reflecting on the character of the evidence there presented against him, all of which, I am informed, have been submitted to you and to your predecessor in office.

Any lengthy discussion of these matters at this time would seem, therefore, to be unnecessary.

Because of the situation which has developed in this case since the verdict of the jurors was rendered, and after a mature reflection of many years, I feel it my duty to join with the other jurors in this case, in asking you to exercise your prerogative and grant Thomas Mooney's petition for executive clemency.

With the kindest personal regards and best wishes, I remain,

Sincerely,

WM. V. MACNEVIN.

HOTEL HOLLYWOOD,
Hollywood, Calif., March 8, 1929.

Hon. FRIEND W. RICHARDSON,
Governor of the State of California, Sacramento, Calif.

DEAR SIR: As one of the jurors who sat at the trial of Thomas Mooney and had presented to him all of the evidence, I feel privileged to send this communication to you concerning him.

From investigations that I have intimately made in the past few months, I feel constrained to express the belief that had I been at the time of the trial in possession of the facts that have come to my knowledge since I would not have voted for Mooney's conviction. It is my belief at this time that the ends of justice could best be served by granting a pardon to Thomas J. Mooney, and I therefore respectfully urge that his petition for a pardon be granted by you.

Very respectfully,

LOUISE NEUSTADTER.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., September 14, 1924.

Hon. FRIEND W. RICHARDSON,
Governor of California.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: I am of the same opinion as the trial judge, Franklin K. Griffin, in regards to the innocence of Thomas J. Mooney, and as one of the jurors I ask you to pardon Thomas J. Mooney.

Very respectfully,

R. H. STETTIN.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., September 7, 1923.

Hon. FRIEND W. RICHARDSON,
Governor of California, Sacramento, Calif.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: In view of the many elements which have been brought out in the Mooney case in recent years, as one of the jurors who convicted Mooney, I wish to state that I would not have brought in a verdict of guilty without the testimony of Frank C. Oxman. Now, that Oxman's testimony has been completely discredited, I ask you to grant Mr. Mooney's petition for pardon.

Yours very truly,

WILLIAM A. JACOBS,
352 Post Street, San Francisco, Calif.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., September 18, 1923.

Hon. FRIEND W. RICHARDSON,
Governor of California, Sacramento, Calif.

YOUR HONOR: Many things have happened since I served as a juror in the case of Thomas J. Mooney which caused me to doubt the honesty of some important witnesses.

I fully agree with Judge Franklin A. Griffin in asking you to pardon Mooney.

JOHN BAZZINI,
1628 Lombard Street, San Francisco, Calif.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., October 23, 1926.

Hon. FRIEND W. RICHARDSON,
Governor State of California, Sacramento, Calif.

MY DEAR SIR: I have been advised by Thomas J. Mooney, who is now confined in the State prison at San Quentin under a life sentence, that he is about to apply for a pardon, and have been requested by him to communicate to you my attitude as the trial judge toward such application.

The facts concerning Mooney's trial, conviction, and sentence to death, and the subsequent commutation to life imprisonment, are matters of such general knowledge as to make it unnecessary at this time to detail them. At the time of his former application for executive action, I addressed a communication to Hon. William D. Stephens, then governor, setting forth at length the reason for my belief that Mooney was entitled, at least, to a new trial of his case. A copy of that communication is hereto annexed that it may be before you in the event that it is not now among the files of your office, and I now reiterate the statements contained therein.

Since the commutation of Mooney's sentence it has been developed by testimony before a grand jury of this city and county that at the very time that the witness Oxman claimed he was at the scene of the tragedy involved in this case he was in reality in the town of Woodland, Yolo County, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Hatcher. This fact the Hatchers have themselves admitted and such admission is a matter of record of the proceedings of the grand jury in the possession of the district attorney of this city and county. In addition the witness John McDonald has, under oath, publicly announced that his testimony given at the trial of Mooney was false.

I state these matters merely to show that, as time passes, the suspicion later surrounding the conviction of Mooney, instead of diminishing, actually increases.

It has always been my belief that Mooney should have had another trial in order that the evidence against him, in light of later most important developments, might be submitted to a jury and the question of his guilt or innocence determined in the manner constitutionally provided in our State. This, it seems, can not now be done, for the district attorney has publicly stated that he can produce no other witnesses than those whose testimony is now on record (always excepting, of course, Oxman, who is out of his jurisdiction), and to go to trial upon only such evidence would be farcical.

There is yet pending, in one of our departments of the superior court, one of the several murder indictments returned by the grand jury at the time of the Preparedness Day tragedy against Mooney. Upon this indictment there is, as a matter of record, a waiver by him of the plea of once in jeopardy and all other technical pleas which might be interposed, and an agreement to go to trial at any time thereon upon the single issue of not guilty. As the matter stands now, if hereafter any sufficient evidence of his guilt shall be discovered, he may then be prosecuted upon this indictment and his guilt or innocence of the crime judicially determined.

In view of all these circumstances, it seems to me that in simple justice and fair play Mooney's application could be granted.

Respectfully yours,

FRANKLIN A. GRIFFIN,
Superior Court Judge.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., November 23, 1925.

Hon. FRIEND RICHARDSON,
Governor of the State of California,
Sacramento, Calif.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: In view of the errors in testimony and other elements during the trial of Tom Mooney, I, as one of the jurors in his trial, respectfully ask that his petition for pardon be granted.

Very truly yours,

JOHN FORSYTH,
8900 Geary Street, San Francisco, Calif.

Care of Judge Franklin K. Griffin.

NEW YORK, October 10, 1924.

Hon. FRIEND RICHARDSON,
Governor of California, Sacramento, Calif.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: Since the trial of Thomas Mooney, at which I have been a member of the jury, I have learned that some witnesses testifying against Mooney admitted having given wrong testimony, and as I was considerably guided by their statements when rendering a verdict, I now feel that an injustice has been done.

I, therefore, as a juror in that trial, beg Your Excellency to kindly give this matter due consideration, and grant Mooney a pardon.

Very respectfully,

S. G. MISH.

SUPERIOR COURT,
DEPARTMENT FIVE,
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., January 20, 1928.

Hon. C. C. YOUNG,
Governor of California, Sacramento, Calif.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR: I have intended for some time to write you briefly concerning the case of Thomas J. Mooney, whose application for pardon has been presented to your office, so that you may know directly, rather than by indirection, my attitude in the matter, and the reasons which have impelled my course therein.

So far as the facts are concerned, I can not add anything to what I have already written to your predecessors in office, Governor Stephens and Governor Richardson, and I now simply refer you to my letters to them, copies of which are inclosed herein against the event that they are no longer in the files of your office.

There is, however, one aspect of the case which, with the greatest respect for your good judgment and opinion, I would discuss with you, and that is that Mooney should be paroled before his application for pardon is considered. I can not agree with this position for the reason that, in my opinion, Mooney's case is no different from any other man who has been wrongfully and upon perjured testimony convicted of a crime of which subsequent developments absolutely demonstrate his innocence. Speaking very frankly, it seems to me that the great obstacle in the way of Mooney's pardon has been his alleged bad reputation. In other words, he has been denied real justice because the opinion seems to be prevalent that he is a dangerous man to be at large and, therefore, should be, innocent or guilty, kept in prison. Conceding, for the sake of argument, that Mooney has been all he is painted, it is to say the least, most specious reasoning; indeed, no reason at all, why Mooney should be denied the justice which, under our system, is due even the most degraded. Moreover, such a doctrine is more dangerous and pernicious than any Mooney has been accused of preaching.

I am giving this letter to Mr. Older for delivery to you, and I hope and trust that the great wrong done Mooney, of which I was unwittingly a part, will now without delay, in so far as this great State may accomplish it, be remedied.

Believe me, with best wishes to you both personally and officially,

Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN GRIFFIN.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., January 25, 1924.

Mr. TOM MOONEY,
Box 31921, San Quentin, Calif.

DEAR SIR: Complying with your request of recent date for a letter to be used in an application for a pardon respecting your trial and conviction on the charge of murder for which you are now incarcerated in the State prison, I respectfully submit as follows:

I was specially detailed in charge by the late chief of police, D. A. White, to investigate the Preparedness Day parade explosion which caused the death of several of our well-known citizens and the injury of many others. It is needless at this time to give any details connected with the explosion.

The question involved is whether or not you, as one of the defendants in said case, received a fair and impartial trial, as provided by the Constitution and the laws of the land, and whether or not you were deprived of your rights by being denied a new trial on what subsequently developed concerning the testimony of witnesses in the case, particularly that of Frank C. Oxman for the prosecution.

Your motion for a new trial was denied by the highest court in this State, for whom I have the very highest regard, because it was without power to act in the matter as requested by the attorney general.

Frank C. Oxman was one of the strongest witnesses for the prosecution, and there can not be any doubt about the profound impression his testimony made, not only on the court but on the jury as well. Personally, I did not hear all his testimony, being called out of the court room during part of his examination, and from the portion I heard it was a revelation to me and marvelous in detail. Cross-examination failed in every particular to break down his story.

After what developed regarding his conduct, his desire to connect with one Rigall and the letters that were subsequently produced in relation thereto, I was then convinced, as I am now, that he was not only unreliable but a romancer, pure and simple, and ready to bolster up his story by any means within his power, and having no person in sight fell back on Rigall, a questionable character who was far away from the scene of the crime.

I was firmly convinced that Oxman should have been prosecuted for attempted subornation of perjury and acted accordingly and notwithstanding his acquittal I firmly believe now as I did then, that he was guilty as charged.

Another witness, John McDonald, came to the fore during the investigation and testified for the prosecution and later admitted that he was improperly influenced and committed perjury. He would have been arrested if he made that admission under oath.

That being true, I am convinced beyond any question of doubt that your rights were violated and that you were entitled to a new trial, and fully concur in the opinion of the trial judge and the attorney general. This is not possible now, because of legal limitations, and your only available relief is executive clemency, to which I am convinced you are fully entitled.

After all, the sanctity of the courts and the rights of a fair trial stand over and above any offense that may be committed, regardless of the enormity thereof, because that is the very foundation of our Government and therefore must not be trespassed upon.

Respectfully submitted.

DUNCAN MATHESON,
Captain of Detectives.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., February 17, 1926.

Hon. FRIEND W. RICHARDSON,
Governor of California, Sacramento, Calif.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: In view of the many elements which have been brought out in the Mooney case since the trial, and as I was one of the jurors that convicted Mooney I think it would be only an act of justice for you to grant him a pardon.

Hoping you will take the matter up, I remain, very sincerely,

THOMAS KENNEDY,
75 Sterling Street, San Francisco, Calif.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., April 12, 1924.

Mr. THOMAS MOONEY.

DEAR SIR: I have been requested by Mrs. Hammerberg to state my frame of mind concerning your trial and conviction for the Preparedness Day murders, for which you were convicted and are now serving a life sentence.

The testimony of Oxman was so striking and of such convincing nature that it, no doubt, was a strong factor in causing a verdict of guilty.

The testimony of the witness McDonald was also a strong factor in bringing about the conviction; in fact, these two witnesses were the most important witnesses in the case.

Since that time events have occurred that very strongly indicate that both of these witnesses were influenced by questionable motives and that their testimony was of little, if any, value. Furthermore, if I was a juror sitting in the case I would not in my present frame of mind consider their testimony for a single minute when a human life was being weighed in the balance.

With the two vital witnesses discredited I think the only fair thing to do is to state that I do not think you had a fair and impartial trial, as guaranteed by the Constitution.

A new trial being now impossible owing to legal limitations, I believe you are entitled to executive clemency, the only relief obtainable under the circumstances.

I was detailed with Captain Matheson to investigate the preparedness parade bomb murders.

Respectfully,

CHARLES GOFF, Captain of Police.

Hon. FRIEND W. RICHARDSON,
Governor of California, Sacramento, Calif.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: Since the trial of Thomas J. Mooney many things have come to light which reflect on the credibility of some of the witnesses, especially the testimony of Frank J. Oxman, who was the convincing factor on which I rendered my verdict.

I feel, as one of the jurors in the case, I agree with Judge Griffin in his appeal for clemency for Mooney.

Yours,

H. J. BRUNER.

STATEMENT OF BELLE M. HAMMERBERG REGARDING THE ATTITUDE OF JOHN W. MILLER, JR., JUROR IN THE TRIAL OF THOMAS J. MOONEY

From the interviews I have had with Juror J. W. Miller, jr., I find his attitude is this:

When he brought in the verdict of guilty he felt that as far as the jurors were concerned the case was finished.

He feels it would be presumption on his part to tell the governor what to do or what not to do when the governor has all the evidence before him on which to base his decision.

That he has read with interest and has been deeply impressed by the letters and affidavits I have shown him.

That he "will be glad for Tom's sake to see him free and will be one of the first to take him by the hand when he is released."

Mr. Miller has read this statement and I have left a copy of same with him.

Mr. Miller says I may now truthfully say not one of the 10 jurors objects to Mooney's release.

BELLE HAMMERBERG.

HAVRE, MONT., May 16, 1929.

Hon. B. K. WHEELER,
United States Senator from Montana,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: We, the undersigned citizens of the State of Montana, do most respectfully petition your help in behalf of justice to Mr. Tom Mooney and his fellow coworker, Mr. Billings, who were unjustly sentenced by trumped-up charges and who are still suffering in San Quentin Prison, California, by miscarriage of justice. Since the commitment everyone connected with the case—judge, jury, and the principal witnesses for the State—have come out for the defendants and pleaded for retrial with the idea in mind of their liberation.

We urge immediate action, as justice has been already too long delayed.

W. M. Trudeau, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Havre, Mont.; J. H. Seaburg, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Havre, Mont.; F. H. Clifford, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Havre, Mont.; Lynn Frans, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Havre, Mont.; Earl Whitney, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, White Fish, Mont.; R. A. Houger, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Havre, Mont.; C. C. Zartman, locomotive engineer, Havre, Mont.; Ambler R. Black, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Havre, Mont.; J. M. Hombs, Havre, Mont.; H. A. Taylor, Havre, Mont.; Walter Wagner, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Lodge 93, Havre, Mont.; Frank G. Boragas, Havre, Mont.; Wm. I. Kinzer, Havre, Mont.; J. S. Johnson, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, No. 629, Havre, Mont.; H. H. Hess, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, No. 93, Havre, Mont.; L. Dunham, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Havre, Mont.; E. E. Van Swearingen, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Havre, Mont.; J. A. Peters, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, No. 629, Williston, N. Dak.; L. S. Stover, Order of Railway Conductors, Havre, Mont.; James O'Neill, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Great Falls, Mont.; A. W. Hagerty, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Great Falls, Mont.; James O. Ring, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Havre, Mont.; R. E. Powell, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Havre, Mont.; Robt. Goodwin, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, White Fish, Mont.; R. Wells, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, White Fish, Mont.; S. O. Emery; T. I. Clayborne, Havre, Mont.; Len A. Auchberg, Havre, Mont.; Jos. A. Ring, 931 Fifth Avenue, Havre, Mont.; Glenn Gettes, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Cut Bank, Mont.; James Lenahan; Thos. Laborta, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, 213, Havre, Mont.; Lee Kezar, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Havre, Mont.; Chas. G. Davis, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Havre, Mont.; L. L. Melvin, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Havre, Mont.; J. F. Olson, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Great Falls, Mont.; Frank Wilson, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, 213, Havre, Mont.; R. C. Johnson, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, 213, Havre, Mont.; R. E. Smith, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, 392, Havre, Mont.; F. J. Kaluza, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, 392, Williston, N. Dak.; E. Brandt, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, 504, Great Falls, Mont.; J. H. Ruetten, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, 213, Havre, Mont.; B. F. Hillsebecke, Order of Railway Conductors, 272, Havre, Mont.; Wm. A. Spooner, International Brotherhood of Engine Workers, No. 393, Havre, Mont.; Fred. Mann, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Glasgow, Mont.; James L. Duffe, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Havre, Mont.; Edw. Graef, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, No. 93, Havre, Mont.; Clifford Lundown, Havre, Mont.; L. C. Enfield, Liberty Hotel, Havre, Mont.

HAVRE, MONT., May 16, 1929.

Hon. B. K. WHEELER,
United States Senator from Montana,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: We, the undersigned citizens of the State of Montana, do most respectfully petition your help in behalf of justice to Mr. Tom Mooney and his fellow coworker Mr. Billings, who were unjustly sentenced by trumped-up charges, and who are still suffering in San Quenten Prison, California, by miscarriage of justice. Since the commitment every one connected with the case—judge, jury, and the principal witnesses for the State—have come out for the defendants and pleaded for retrial, with the idea in mind of their liberation.

We urge immediate action, as justice has been already too long delayed.

Ray Kasti, Havre, Mont.; W. C. Lewis, Havre, Mont.; L. Halverson, Havre, Mont.; C. R. Carroll, Havre, Mont.; R. D. Moore, Havre, Mont.; L. M. Kelly, Havre, Mont.; F. Novak, Havre, Mont.; A. R. Langford, Havre, Mont.; F. H. Marshall, Great Falls, Mont.; W. B. Rhoades, Havre, Mont.; J. E. Gwynn, Havre, Mont.; C. E. Thomas, Havre, Mont.; Frank J. Hanna, Havre, Mont.; Thos. E. McDonough, Havre, Mont.; Pete Lomey, Havre, Mont.; Lou Enlestrand, Havre, Mont.; H. G. Teel, Havre, Mont.; S. J. Dahl, Havre, Mont.; R. G. Erler, Havre, Mont.; LeRoy Perry, Havre, Mont.; H. A. Gies, Havre, Mont.; R. J. Bergeson, Havre, Mont.; A. L. Decker, Havre, Mont.; E. P. Nichols, Spokane, Mont.; H. C. Denny, Havre, Mont.; C. H. Misemer, Havre, Mont.; C. B. Mula, Havre, Mont.; K. O. Hapdahl, Havre, Mont.; R. G. Brown, Havre, Mont.; H. U. Coster, Havre, Mont.; Earl Fritz, Havre, Mont.; S. C. Carnal, lawyer, Havre, Mont.; David E. Osborne, engineer, Havre, Mont.; H. H. Alan, insurance, Havre, Mont.; J. C. Lynch, miner, Havre, Mont.; Dan Sheehan, Helena, Mont.; Ray O'Connell, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Havre, Mont.

HAVRE, MONT., May 23, 1929.

Hon. B. K. WHEELER,
United States Senator from Montana,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: We, the undersigned citizens of the State of Montana, do most respectfully petition your help in behalf of justice to Mr. Tom Mooney and his fellow coworker Mr. Billings, who were unjustly sentenced by trumped-up charges, and who are still suffering in San Quenten Prison, Calif., by miscarriage of justice. Since the commitment, everyone connected with the case, judge, jury, and the principal witnesses for the State, have come out for the defendants and pleaded for retrial with the idea in mind of their liberation.

We urge immediate action as justice has been already too long delayed.

L. H. Hanson, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Havre, Mont.; Ernest Allaby, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Havre, Mont.; W. A. Buby, Havre, Mont.; H. J. Halford, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, 151 Seventh Street, Havre, Mont.; Thomas Dineen, railroad employee, Havre, Mont.; John H. Kearfid, Havre, Mont.; John Auld, Havre, Mont.; Chas. S. Burchard, Havre, Mont.; Stanley Cytlak; Frank Sirahian; J. F. Bolin; F. W. Powell, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen 213, Havre, Mont.; Charles R. Culnan, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen 213, Havre, Mont.; Frank Drorak, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen 93, Havre, Mont.; Thomas J. Utartin, railroad machinist, Havre, Mont.; L. W. Foster, conductor, Havre, Mont.

HAVRE, MONT., May 16, 1929.

Hon. B. K. WHEELER,
United States Senator from Montana,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: We the undersigned citizens of the State of Montana, do most respectfully petition your help in behalf of justice to Mr. Tom Mooney and his fellow coworker Mr. Billings, who were unjustly sentenced by trumped-up charges, and who are still suffering in San Quenten Prison, Calif., by miscarriage of justice. Since the commitment everyone connected with the case, judge, jury, and the principal witnesses for the State, have come out for the defendants and pleaded for retrial with the idea in mind of their liberation.

We urge immediate action as justice has been already too long delayed.

J. C. Wentworth, Havre, Mont.; P. L. Larson, Havre, Mont.; Lewis Coed, Havre, Mont.; Tom Lee, Havre, Mont.; M. Dye, Havre, Mont.; W. McKinnon, Havre, Mont.; J. R. Cleary, Havre, Mont.; William P. Howard, Havre, Mont.; Theodore Lang, Havre, Mont.; J. Ryan, Havre, Mont.; Marcus Ring, Havre, Mont.; H. A. Hanning, Havre, Mont.; Al Carthy, Havre, Mont.; B. Barde, Havre, Mont.; L. M. Slater, Havre, Mont.; T. J. Troy, Havre, Mont.; H. Gardner, Havre, Mont.; D. Decker, Havre, Mont.; P. L. Bowman, Havre, Mont.; C. E. Thomas, Havre, Mont.; Michael Safarik, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Glasgow, Mont.; Carl B. Johnson, Havre, Mont.; F. J. Backler, Havre, Mont.; E. W. Filler, Havre, Mont.; E. Jorgenson, Havre, Mont.; R. Taylor, Havre, Mont.; S. H. Casey, Havre, Mont.; L. H. Hanson, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen; B. A. Bainkman, International Brotherhood of Engine Workers, Havre, Mont.; O. E. Farde, Havre, Mont.; C. B. Gormley, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Havre, Mont.; C. L. Jansen, Order of Railway Conductors, Havre, Mont.; Peter Jambo, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Havre, Mont.; Ray Berry, Havre, Mont.; J. Ryan, Havre, Mont.; A. Carbly; J. M. Lindsey.

HAVRE, MONT., May 16, 1929.

Hon. B. K. WHEELER,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: We, the undersigned citizens of the State of Montana, do most respectfully petition your help in behalf of justice to Mr. Tom Mooney and his fellow coworker, Mr. Billings, who were unjustly sentenced by triumphal charges, and who are still suffering in San Quentin (Calif.) Prison by miscarriage of justice. Since the commitment everyone connected with the case—judge, jury, and the principal witnesses for the State—have come out for the defendants and pleaded for retrial, with the idea in mind of their liberation.

We urge immediate action, as justice has been already too long delayed.

J. J. MCDONOUGH,
Order Railway Conductors, Havre, Mont.
P. F. LEWIS,
Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Havre, Mont.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, I need not repeat what I have just stated, but I will add a word.

It so happens that I had nothing to do with the prosecution in the cases referred to. Afterwards, when this Oregonian was arrested and prosecuted, as stated, I appeared for him and he was acquitted. It is only proper to add that I never heard one word in California, nor have I heard a word coming from elsewhere, reflecting in any degree adversely on the trial of Frank Oxman. I have among the friends of Mooney and Billings many very warm friends and supporters. They naturally took a profound, deep, sincere interest in the trial of Oxman, but never, as far as I know, has there been any question raised as to the integrity of the jury in that case, the rulings of the honored judge, or as to the conduct of any counsel for or against. The record of the court shows that upon the evidence the jury felt it to be its duty to render a verdict of not guilty.

Mr. KING obtained the floor.

Mr. WATSON. Does the Senator expect to begin an address now?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I desire to address myself very briefly to the resolution before us.

When this resolution was before the Committee on the Judiciary, I briefly examined it and stated that, in my opinion, it was unnecessary. I had no particular objection to the appointment of a committee, as provided by the resolution, although I believed that it would be a work of supererogation to create it. My view was partly caused by reason of the fact that there is pending before the Committee on the Judiciary a bill, the counterpart of which has been introduced at each succeeding session of Congress since 1922, calling for the transfer to the Department of Justice of the enforcement provisions of the Volstead Act.

The Judiciary Committee was the committee which reported the Volstead Act. As Senators will recall, it was introduced in the House by Mr. Volstead, and in the Senate by former Senator Knute Nelson, a distinguished Senator and an able lawyer.

The so-called Volstead Act was not drawn by Mr. Volstead, it was not prepared by Senator Nelson, whose name it bore, when it was offered in the Senate of the United States, but by the Anti-Saloon League. When it went to the Judiciary Committee, a subcommittee of five was appointed for the consideration of the measure. The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS], the present chairman of the Judiciary Committee, was a member of the subcommittee. Senator Cummins, Senator Walsh, Senator Nelson, and myself were the other members of the subcommittee.

After full consideration by the subcommittee, it seemed to me that the enforcement of the law should be placed with the Department of Justice, charged with the enforcement of the criminal statutes of the United States. I offered an amendment in the committee to effectuate that object. The Anti-Saloon League, through its representatives, objected, insisting that the enforcement of the measure should be left to the Treasury Department.

It seemed to me absurd that the Treasury Department, charged with the collection of the revenues and the taxes of our country, should be charged with the stupendous responsibility of enforcing the criminal provisions of the Volstead Act.

It was obvious to those who were considering it, as it was obvious to the people of the United States as a whole, that the enforcement of the Volstead Act would be attended with the greatest difficulty, and, in the aggregate, would cost tens if not hundreds of millions of dollars, and require an army of employees.

The Department of Justice is presided over by an eminent lawyer. He has a corps of able assistants here in Washington, and district attorneys are named by the President of the United States for all the Federal districts throughout the United States, and those district attorneys have assistants, some of them a very large number of assistants, depending upon the extent of the criminal business within their respective districts. Then, too, the Department of Justice has under it the United States marshals and deputy marshals. It has a large number of officials under secret-service commissions to aid in ferreting out violations of the statutes, and in bringing to the bar of justice those who have violated the Federal laws.

It did seem to me, as it seems to me now, that it was an absurdity to place in the Treasury Department, charged with the collection of taxes, the enforcement of a statute, the enforcement of which, as I stated, could only be attended with the utmost difficulty and at a tremendous cost.

The years have gone by since we passed the Volstead Act. As I recall, we passed it in 1919. More and more the people have felt that there has been some fault somewhere. Some have blamed the President of the United States, others have blamed Mr. Mellon, others have indicated the officials as the culpable parties. May I say that I do not agree with some of the statements that Mr. Mellon has been derelict in the discharge of his duty in this respect. I think Mr. Mellon has sought earnestly to enforce the law. He has tried to select men of competence and ability to aid him in the enforcement of the law, but I believe that some of the persons selected were incompetent. I think the Secretary of the Treasury has yielded too much—perhaps not he, but somebody else—to the importunities of the Anti-Saloon League, or some other extraneous influence, and has named men who were not competent, who were inefficient, and too often were mere politicians. But I think that Mr. Mellon in good faith has attempted to enforce the law.

Mr. President, the failure to enforce the law has induced many good people to believe that it is impossible to enforce a law which runs counter to the traditions, to the appetites, and to the customs of millions of people of the United States. As to that, I express no opinion. I have voted for every appropriation asked for the enforcement of the law. I have given my support earnestly and sincerely to all legitimate and proper efforts to enforce the law, as I expect to do in the future.

I believe that what this resolution seeks to accomplish, at least in part, is proper, namely, to have transferred to the Department of Justice the enforcement of this law. But it is not necessary to pass this resolution in order to accomplish that. We have a bill now before the committee which would accomplish it. I had the honor to introduce it at the beginning of the session, the same measure I have consistently introduced at every session of Congress since 1922. All we need to do is to pass that measure or some other measure. I have no pride at all in the matter. Any bill that will effectuate the object of transferring to the Department of Justice the enforcement of the prohibition law I shall most heartily support.

I think the passage of this resolution is unnecessary. The Judiciary Committee is now considering this matter. The Committee on Immigration has had its attention challenged to the importance of strengthening the law in order to prohibit bootlegging upon our borders, bootlegging in immigrants, if not bootlegging in alcoholic liquor. So that two important committees of the Senate are now considering this question, and it seems to me that we are merely trying to avoid responsibility by creating more committees. That is one trouble with Congress, one trouble with the Government. We create a commission or a committee, and before it begins to function another committee is created, or, when that committee reports, their reports are filed in the archives of the Government, and soon are covered with dust, and nothing is done to execute the recommendations which are made.

We have too much law, too many commissions, too much machinery, and we are adding to the machinery, and we are not securing efficiency. So, Mr. President, without expressing any disapproval of the thought back of it, I merely express my opposition to the proposal because it is unnecessary. The President has a commission investigating these same questions. He has been given a fund of $250,000 for the purpose of making a more comprehensive investigation than that called for by the measure. So I submit there is no necessity whatever for passing the resolution now before us.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the pending amendment, which will be read.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen	Fess	Jones	Shortridge
Barkley	Fletcher	King	Smith
Bingham	Frazier	La Follette	Smoot
Borah	George	McKellar	Steiwer
Brookhart	Gillett	McNary	Swanson
Broussard	Goff	Metcalf	Thomas, Idaho
Burton	Goldsborough	Moses	Thomas, Okla.
Capper	Greene	Norbeck	Trammell
Caraway	Harris	Norris	Tydings
Connally	Harrison	Nye	Walsh, Mass.
Copeland	Hastings	Overman	Walsh, Mont.
Couzens	Hatfield	Reed	Warren
Cutting	Hawes	Robinson, Ark.	Waterman
Dale	Hayden	Sackett	Watson
Deneen	Howell	Schall	Wheeler
Edge	Johnson	Sheppard

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague [Mr. BLAINE]. I ask that this statement may stand for the day.

Mr. NORBECK. My colleague [Mr. MCMASTER] is unavoidably absent. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. COPELAND. My colleague, the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], is unavoidably absent from the Chamber.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 58) to repeal an act approved March 2, 1929, entitled "An act for the relief of C. C. Spiller, deceased," and to provide for the relief of the estate of C. C. Spiller, deceased.

The message also announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. J. Res. 80) authorizing the postponement of the date of maturity of the principal of the indebtedness of the French Republic to the United States in respect of the purchase of surplus war supplies, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled joint resolution (H. J. Res. 58) to repeal an act approved March 2, 1929, entitled "An act for the relief of C. C. Spiller, deceased," and to provide for the relief of the estate of C. C. Spiller, deceased, and it was signed by the Vice President.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mr. GREENE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that to-day, June 19, 1929, that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 669. An act to alter and amend an act entitled "An act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Lake Superior to Puget Sound, on the Pacific coast, by the northern route," approved July 2, 1864, and to alter and amend a joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution authorizing the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. to issue its bonds for the construction of its road and to secure the same by mortgage, and for other purposes," approved May 31, 1870; to declare forfeited to the United States certain claimed rights asserted by the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. or the Northern Pacific Railway Co.; to direct the institution and prosecution of proceedings looking to the adjustment of the grant, and for other purposes;

S. 1535. An act to extend the time for the construction of the bridge across the Chesapeake Bay;

S. 1548. An act extending the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the White River at or near Newport, Ark.; and

S. 1537. An act to amend subdivision (a) of section 1 of the act entitled "An act making it a felony with penalty for certain aliens to enter the United States of America under certain conditions in violation of law," approved March 4, 1929.

FRENCH DEBT SETTLEMENT

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I ask that the joint resolution just received from the House of Representatives be laid before the Senate and that it be read at length and considered at this time.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 80) authorizing the postponement of the date of maturity of the principal of the indebtedness of the French Republic to the United States in respect of the purchase of surplus war supplies was read the first time by its title, the second time at length, and considered as in Committee of the Whole, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That in the event that the agreement between the French Republic and the United States (known as the Mellon-Berenger agreement) made on behalf of the United States by the World War Foreign Debt Commission and approved by the President, providing for the funding and payment of the indebtedness of the French Republic to the United States, is ratified in France in accordance with the terms thereof prior to August 1, 1929, the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, is authorized to enter into an agreement with the French Republic providing for the postponement of the date of the maturity of the principal of its indebtedness in respect of its purchase of surplus war supplies until the Mellon-Berenger agreement has been approved or disapproved by the Congress, but in no event shall such date be postponed beyond May 1, 1930. Such agreement shall not be entered into unless the French Republic agrees to pay the interest upon such indebtedness upon August 1, 1929, and February 1, 1930, but the amounts paid as interest shall be credited against the amounts first due under the Mellon-Berenger agreement if such agreement is approved by the Congress.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I am perfectly willing to accept the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HOWELL] which he proposes to the second whereas.

Mr. McKELLAR. What is the amendment?

Mr. SMOOT. On August 1st of this year——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah will suspend. The Chair is informed that the preamble was stricken out by the House.

Mr. SMOOT. That may be true. I will accept the amendment then to reinstate the full preamble as the House originally had it, with the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. What is the amendment?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator state for the RECORD the purpose of the resolution?

Mr. SMOOT. That is what I want to do and what I was proceeding to do when I was interrupted.

The amount of $407,341,000 was for war materials purchased from the United States by France. Bonds were given for the amount. The length of the terms of the bonds was 10 years. That 10 years expires on the 1st day of August of this year. In the settlement that was known as the Mellon-Berenger settlement this amount was included. France, up to the present time, has not ratified that settlement, and I think I have stated several times upon the floor of the Senate that so far as I am concerned I am not going to ask the Senate to ratify that settlement until France ratifies it herself.

The object of the joint resolution which has just come from the House is to extend the payment of the $407,000,000 until September 30. The bill, as introduced in the House and Senate, provided payment not later than August 1, but I have heard that the House will extend that time until September 30. If France does not ratify the Mellon-Berenger agreement before that time she will be compelled to pay the $407,000,000 in cash.

Mr. MOSES. Does not the Senator mean "unless"?

Mr. SMOOT. Unless they ratify the agreement, and if they do, it becomes a part of the settlement already referred to.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, has there been any request from the French Government that the extension be granted?

Mr. SMOOT. There has been, and there is no question that if the French Government can ratify the debt settlement they will do so before that date.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator means if they have the votes to ratify it?

Mr. SMOOT. I think they have.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am not going to object to the immediate consideration of the resolution if the Senate desires to adopt it, but I want it understood that I shall vote against it.

Mr. MOSES. I shall object for the present.

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, I hope the Senator will not object.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMOOT. I yield.

Mr. SWANSON. I understand France is paying the interest.

Mr. SMOOT. The 5 per cent on the $407,000,000 France has paid every year, together with the $10,000,000 provided for in the settlement known as the Mellon-Berenger settlement. In other words, she has not only paid the 5 per cent on the $407,000,000, but has made her payments over and above the 5 per cent as provided in the proposed Mellon-Berenger settlement.

Mr. McKELLAR. Then this is simply an extension without modifying the terms until the 30th of September?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; that is all there is to it.

Mr. MOSES. The French Parliament is in session, is it not?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes.

Mr. MOSES. Does the Senator from Utah have any information as to just what is going to happen?

Mr. SMOOT. If the information I have received is correct they are going to ratify the agreement.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. If it is not approved the resolution is of no effect.

Mr. SMOOT. It will be of no effect whatever.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. If it is ratified the $407,000,000 is absorbed in the general settlement?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; if it is ratified.

Mr. MOSES. The Senator from Utah has given the information he has from the banks of the Seine. Has he information from the banks of the Potomac that if it is not ratified this payment is going to be insisted upon?

Mr. SMOOT. I can not say what would be done, but I think the Government of the United States would make the demand of France, and I am quite sure that France can pay it.

Mr. MOSES. My understanding is they have the money on deposit in the banks of New York now to pay it.

Mr. SMOOT. It is not a question of whether they have or have not. I think if the money is paid we will never get as good a settlement from France on the balance of her debt as is proposed in the Mellon-Berenger settlement.

Mr. MOSES. Is the Senator so optimistic as to think France is going to pay it?

Mr. SMOOT. I am quite sure they would pay the $407,000,000, but as to what future settlement we will make with France I do not know and no one else knows.

Mr. MOSES. I think the bookkeepers of the United States are going to keep that item on their books for a great many years to come.

Mr. SMOOT. They will not keep it on the books of the Treasury of the United States unless the $407,000,000 is paid before the last of September.

Mr. MOSES. Is the Senator going to advocate cancellation so as to get it off the books?

Mr. SMOOT. No. The French Government could pay that amount to-day, and I have no thought of agreeing to a cancellation.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator permit a question?

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly.

Mr. REED. I think there is some confusion as to the date. The $407,000,000 is due on August 1 of this year. The House measure provides that unless France ratifies the Mellon-Berenger agreement before August 1 of this year——

Mr. SMOOT. Not August 1, but September 30. I have heard that change will be made.

Mr. REED. As I understand the joint resolution it is August 1.

Mr. SMOOT. It might not be ratified by that time.

Mr. REED. It does not provide that we should, but the Senator stated that the joint resolution gave France until September 30 to ratify.

Mr. MOSES. If ratified in France.

Mr. REED. The joint resolution does not become effective unless France ratifies before August 1 of this year and if she does then the time of paying of the $407,000,000 is extended nine months.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. SMOOT. I had not noticed the dates were changed. The first date spoken of was August 1. It is to be ratified before the 1st of August in France.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, I suggest that the joint resolution be read.

Mr. WATSON. That is what I was going to ask to have done.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Chief Clerk read the joint resolution.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, that is exactly as the Finance Committee instructed the chairman to report the joint resolution to the Senate. I had been told that the date, August 1, was to be changed in the House to September 30, but in the joint resolution as it comes from the House the date has not been changed and, I repeat, it is exactly in the form in which the Finance Committee instructed the chairman to report it to the Senate.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Seantor from Utah yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; I yield to the Senator.

Mr. SCHALL. If the $400,000,000 were paid on the 1st of August and put out at compound interest at the rate of 5 per cent for the next 62 years, it would amount to more money than is proposed in the settlement, would it not?

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator is wrong about that.

Mr. SCHALL. I understand the settlement vests us over a period of 62 years 2.1 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. That includes the $407,000,000.

Mr. SCHALL. That includes the $407,000,000.

Mr. SMOOT. But that is only a small part of the debt.

Mr. SCHALL. The full debt is $4,400,000,000; the amount we are to get over a period of 62 years nets us 2.1 per cent, as I understand, and if we put the $400,000,000 out at 5 per cent interest for the next 62 years, it would be worth more to us than the settlement.

Mr. SMOOT. It is true that, treating the principal as interest, covering the 62 years, it would amount to about 2.17 per cent per annum, which would be paid to the Government of the United States, or, in other words, the debt under the Mellon-Berenger agreement would amount to over $6,000,000,000 when finally paid after the lapse of 62 years.

Mr. EDGE. What is the amount now?

Mr. SMOOT. The amount of the settlement is $4,025,000,000. France has paid $335,000,000, bringing it down to an even amount of $4,025,000,000.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, I move that the preamble of the joint resolution as stricken out by the House of Representatives be restored as amended by the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that under the rule amendments to the text of the joint resolution must be considered before any amendment to the preamble is in order, but by unanimous consent the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska to add a preamble may be considered. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I have no objection to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HOWELL].

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HOWELL].

Mr. EDGE. Let it be stated, Mr. President.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Let the preamble be first read, and then let the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska be stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The original preamble was stricken out by the House. The Senator from Nebraska now proposes an amendment restoring the preamble with an additional provision. The amendment of the Senator from Nebraska will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed by the Senator from Nebraska to insert a preamble, as follows:

Whereas an indebtedness of the French Republic to the United States in respect of the purchase of surplus war supplies in the amount of $400,000,000 is due and payable on August 1, 1929; and

Whereas the payment of such indebtedness is provided for in the agreement (known as the Mellon-Berenger agreement) made on behalf of the United States by the World War Foreign Debt Commission and approved by the President, providing for the funding and payment of the entire indebtedness of the French Republic to the United States—

The following are the words proposed to be added by the Senator from Nebraska:

which agreement, treating all payments by France as applied to interest, is equivalent (1) to the cancellation of such indebtedness and the accrued interest thereon as of June 15, 1925, totaling $4,230,777,000; and in addition (2) to the cancellation of all interest accruing on said indebtedness from and after June 15, 1925, except the equivalent of an annual payment for 62 years of approximately 2.17 per cent on said $4,230,777,000;

The preamble continues:

and

Whereas such agreement specifically provides that it shall not become effective until ratified in France and until approved by the Congress; and

Whereas the ratification in France of such agreement, in accordance with the terms thereof, is now under consideration: Now, therefore, be it

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, the amendment I have offered provides for the restoration of the preamble as originally found in the bill, amended as I have suggested. As I understand, it is acceptable to the senior Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection to it; it is merely a declaration of the facts.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, do I understand that the Senator from Utah accepts the amendment to the preamble proposed by the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. SMOOT. I accept the preamble as originally found in the joint resolution as well as the amendment to it offered by the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, much has been said abroad, and especially in the French press, respecting the attitude of the United States toward the cancellation of the European debts. We have been charged with being hard in our terms; even with being a shylock, and I believe that it is now time that we should by a definite declaration express to the French people, as well as to the people of the world elsewhere, exactly what we have done, at least in connection with the French debt. For that reason I have offered the amendment pending.

On April 29, 1926, there was signed an agreement by representatives of the French Government and the Government of the United States, subject to approval by the respective Governments, for a settlement of the French debt. Although that agreement was signed on the 29th of April, 1926, it was dated back to the 15th day of June, 1925. That agreement has not been observed by the French Government. The debt owed by the French Government to the United States has been divided by French expressions into two parts. One, it is understood, they regard as a commercial debt; that is, the debt of about $407,000,000 resulting from the purchase of war supplies by France.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. HOWELL. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. How does France designate the $1,300,000,000 which her emissaries borrowed from the Treasury of the United States after the armistice? The Senator will recall that immediately after the armistice emissaries from France came to the United States and borrowed from the Treasury a number of millions of dollars and every single month for 12 months, and sometimes several times a month, France borrowed money not for war purposes, because the war was over, but up until 1920, if I recollect correctly, she borrowed $1,300,000,000 for the purpose of carrying on her Government and for the purpose of aiding her people. I wonder how she regards that debt. Does she regard that as a commercial debt, or does she regard that as a contribution from America to her general benefit? I should like to have the Senator make a statement about that.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, the remainder of this debt, $3,823,000,000, has evidently been regarded by France as a political debt. It will be remembered that before the armistice France was loaned $1,970,000,000. She has not paid interest upon that in full and owes $606,000,000 upon that account.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. HOWELL. I yield.

Mr. KING. Is the deduction which may be drawn from that statement quite accurate? I make that inquiry in the light also of the statement made by my friend from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR]. My recollection is—and I have not examined the figures for a long time—that France did not borrow from the United States as a borrowing de novo any amount whatever after the armistice. Prior to the armistice we had extended to France credit to the extent of three or four billion dollars, whatever the amount may have been, and based upon the credit thus extended she had entered into obligations here which were connected with the carrying on of the war. The money did not go to France; it remained here to pay France's obligations to Americans for supplies which France had contracted to purchase. After the war General Dawes and others representing the United States went to France. We had there railroads and munition depots and other property which could not have been brought to the United States at any profit, which was almost valueless to us, and which we concluded it was best not to bring back to the United States; that it would be of no advantage to do so, and General Dawes, acting, I think, patriotically, and driving a good, fair, and just bargain, contracted to sell to France those supplies to which I have referred for substantially $400,000,000.

If I am in error in my statement as to what the facts are, and the character of the obligations, and the date of contracting them, I shall be very glad to be corrected by the able Senator.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. HOWELL. Just a moment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator declines to yield at present.

Mr. HOWELL. So far as the $407,000,000 are concerned, or that portion of the debt considered commercial by France, it should be understood at the outset, that when we sent our Army to France, it was demanded that we pay duties on all of the supplies, although we went there to serve and to save France. An agreement finally was reached whereby we agreed not to sell the goods, or any portion thereof, in France, in consideration of the French Government foregoing the collection of duties thereon. As a consequence, when the war closed we had on hand tremendous supplies, worth in the neighborhood of $2,000,000,000. and there was but one customer for them—France—and consequently these $2,000,000,000 worth of supplies were sold for $407,000,000, or about 20 cents on the dollar.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I dislike to interrupt the Senator, but will the Senator permit a further interruption?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska further yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. HOWELL. I do.

Mr. KING. The Senator will remember that General Dawes was before the House committee, which was carrying on a very critical examination of the activities of the preceding administration; and among the things which were being investigated was that transaction, in which General Dawes had been the controlling factor representing the United States. He spoke out very bluntly there, using an expression which has hung to his name ever since. I feel sure that the Senator entirely justifies the conduct of General Dawes, and is not seeking now to criticize him for the sale which he made.

While what the Senator says is true—that there was perhaps but one customer who would buy the railroads which we constructed, who would buy the depots which we had constructed, and which had only the value which would result from scrapping them, and many other things—of course, it is true that there was harness and munitions and other supplies that did have value; but the value was insignificant, measured by the original war cost plus the expense of transporting across the sea.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. HOWELL. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. The goods were sold for $400,000,000, and the $7,341,135 was for interest on the $400,000,000. As the Senator says, the goods, amounting to over $2,000,000,000, were sold for $400,000,000.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, I am not criticizing General Dawes for what he did. I have no reason for criticizing his action; but I do feel that there were forces in this country that prevented many of those goods from being returned, because it was feared that their return would adversely affect business, and consequently the American taxpayer was allowed to take the loss.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. HOWELL. I do.

Mr. SWANSON. I should like to ask the Senator a question. I have seen the statement made somewhere—I do not know whether it is accurate or not—that the French Government kept an account of the purchases from the United States and made an estimate of the sales made to their citizens and others, and that what they received for the goods was less than they paid. Does the Senator know whether that is true or not?

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, I know that the Turkish Government was out of funds, and that when Great Britain and France fell out over the ambitions of Greece in Asia Minor the Turkish Army was equipped with American uniforms and American supplies, and I doubt very much if France received anything to speak of for those uniforms and supplies.

Mr. SWANSON. I do not know about that one item. The inquiry I desire to make is this:

I have seen it stated repeatedly that one of the complaints France made was that she agreed to pay a great deal more for those goods than they were sold for. It was stated that she afterwards sold them to various people and kept an accurate account of the receipts, and that her treasury made a statement to the French Parliament showing that she sold the goods for less than she agreed to pay for them. I should like to know whether that is so or not.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nebraska permit me to answer the question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. HOWELL. I do.

Mr. REED. I understand that such an account was kept and was published for a few years, but that in recent years it was impossible to get the figures. Everyone here would be much interested to know how the balance stands up to date; but in recent years the French Government apparently has changed its policy and declines to give out the information. Furthermore, much of what was included in the sale for $400,000,000 consisted of docks and warehouses and railroad appliances, including rolling stock, which is still in the possession of the French Government and has not been sold.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. HOWELL. I do.

Mr. McKELLAR. As I recollect, we built railroads over there, and those railroads were transferred to the French Government directly and the French Government now operates them.

Mr. REED. We did not build any main lines, Mr. President.

Mr. McKELLAR. No; but we built a number of side lines or branch lines.

Mr. REED. We put in a lot of yards and regulating stations, many of which have since been torn up; and we did a great deal of improvement work on at least one of the main lines. We did not, however, build any new lines of railroad.

Mr. McKELLAR. I understand that.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President——

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, again answering the question which the able Senator from Tennessee put to me with reference to the prearmistice debt, I will say that there was borrowed $1,970,000,000; that the accrued interest thereon amounts to about $606,000,000, or the total of the prearmistice debt is $2,575,000,000. After the armistice there was loaned to the French Government $963,000,000, and there is accrued interest of $284,000,000, the total of the postarmistice debt being $1,248,000,000.

It has been suggested that there was some obligation upon the part of this Government to continue these loans after the armistice. Certainly there did not seem to be any such idea in the minds of the Treasury officials, because when the representatives of France and Italy at Versailles began to agitate the cancellation of debts, Assistant Secretary Rathbun wrote M. de Billy, who represented the French Government here, to the effect that the French Government could not expect any further loans if its representatives persisted in such conduct. Secretary Rathbun also wrote the representative of Italy in this country to the same effect; but afterwards we advanced as much as $300,000,000 a month to European nations and continued to advance these funds for two years following the armistice.

The consequence is that the total debt, pre and post armistice, as of June 15, 1925, is $3,823,000,000. Add to that the $407,000,000 for war supplies and we have a total French debt, as set forth by the Treasury on June 15, 1925, of $4,231,000,000, in round numbers.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. HOWELL. I do.

Mr. SWANSON. I should like to ask the Senator at what rate of interest he makes that calculation—5 per cent?

Mr. HOWELL. The same rate of interest as fixed by the Treasury Department—5 per cent.

Mr. SWANSON. What would it be if the debt bore the same rate of interest for which we settled with Great Britain? Has the Senator that statement?

Mr. HOWELL. No,

Mr. SMOOT. The 5 per cent was charged up to the day of settlement, June 15, 1925.

Mr. SWANSON. I understand that; but the aggregate, the Senator from Nebraska mentions, is on the basis of the 5 per cent that they agreed to pay on the demand notes that were in the Treasury?

Mr. HOWELL. Yes.

Mr. SWANSON. What is the amount that France would owe us if we gave her the benefit of the same rate of interest that was accorded Great Britain when she made her settlement? Does the Senator know what that would be?

Mr. HOWELL. I could not answer that question, because, if I did, I would first have to say that Great Britain pays 3.7 per cent on the face of her debt for 62 years, and then the total principal of the debt, amounting to $4,715,000,000, is canceled.

We are paying to-day 5⅛ per cent on the last Treasury notes issued. The previous short-term notes were issued on a 4¾ per cent basis. We have outstanding now in the neighborhood of ten billions of securities bearing 4¼ per cent and more. It was for this reason that the Secretary of the Treasury, thinking of the people of the United States, said that in view of the tax-exemption feature of the United States bonds, which had been issued to provide money to loan to the allied governments, and other costs attendant upon the raising of this money, the conclusion had been reached that, taken as an entity, the cost of this money to the United States was approximately 5 per cent.

Mr. President, when these debt settlements were made, it was provided that bonds should be issued to the United States, but not one of the bonds is to be free of taxation in the countries where they were issued. Yet it has often been suggested that we should determine the interest our debtors should pay upon the basis of the interest rates borne by our tax-free bonds.

As I have stated, the total of the French debt was $4,231,000,000 as of June 15, 1925. What is it up to June 15 of this year? France has paid no attention to our settlement. She has paid the interest upon the commercial bonds, the $407,000,000 she calls a commercial debt, but nothing else.

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, yes, Senator.

Mr. HOWELL. I beg pardon.

Mr. SMOOT. I know she has paid, according to the settlement, including the $407,000,000. She paid $30,000,000 several years.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, France was to pay $30,000,000 only on the 15th day of June, 1926, $30,000,000 a year later, $32,500,000 the next year, and $32,500,000 the next year. That is a total of $125,000,000. But during that same period, on securities equaling the French debt, the American people have been called upon to pay $679,000,000 in interest alone.

Mr. President, if I can read the report of the Treasury correctly, what has been paid by France is the interest upon the $407,000,000 of bonds.

However, if I am mistaken, I will ask the distinguished Senator from Utah to tell us how much France has paid up to the 15th day of June of this year.

Mr. SMOOT. In the proposed settlement was included the $407,000,000; 5 per cent on $407,000,000 is $20,000,000, and France has paid that ever since she gave us her note for it.

When the Mellon-Berenger agreement was agreed to by the war debt commission, and ever since that France has paid the rates provided for in that agreement each year, $30,000,000 and $30,000,000 and, I think, the third year $32,000,000.

Mr. HOWELL. $32,500,000 for the third year——

Mr. SMOOT. $32,500,000.

Mr. HOWELL. And the fourth year, $32,500,000. But, Mr. President, I wish that the Treasury might be called now in order that we may get the exact facts. According to my understanding, France has not paid in accordance with this agreement.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HOWELL. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the Senator from Utah is right, and France paid $30,000,000 the first two years and $32,000,000 the second two years, then we have this situation—France owing us between four and five billion dollars, and having paid only $25,000,000 in interest on the original debt.

Mr. HOWELL. What France has paid in the last four years, if she has paid in accord with the debt settlement, up to and including the 15th day of June of this year, is $125,000,000, but during the same four years the American people have paid, in interest upon outstanding securities equal in amount, $680,000,000.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. HOWELL. I yield.

Mr. SWANSON. I am anxious to get in my mind accurate information regarding this matter.

As I have understood it from my investigation, France owes us two debts. She owes us this commercial debt, and she owes us this other debt. The commercial debt carries interest at the rate of 5 per cent. That was included in the settlement covering all the debts, what is called the Mellon-Berenger settlement.

France has treated the matter from the time of that settlement as if it had been ratified by both Governments, that is the aggregate, but since it is not ratified, she will continue to pay 5 per cent on the $400,000,000, and, according to the agreement, pay an additional amount, so that she will comply with the settlement made with the Secretary of the Treasury and the commission. I have always understood that she has done that, so that if she ratifies it she will have paid up to that time, if she does not ratify it she will have paid fully 5 per cent interest on the $400,000,000.

That is what I understand the situation to be. I would like to ask the Senator if that is correct.

Mr. SMOOT. I have a letter here from the Undersecretary of the Treasury in which he says:

> I inclose herewith a memorandum which summarizes the essential facts in respect to the French debt to this Government, both on account of war advances and the sale of war stocks. The Mellon-Berenger agreement was negotiated in the spring of 1926. In addition to the interest on the war stocks debt, in 1927 the French Government paid us $10,600,000.

Just as I have said, and they have paid every year since, just what the proposed settlement provided for each year. In other words, they have not ratified it—in fact, I have been led to believe, as has the Treasury, that they could not ratify it, that the feeling in France was such that they could not, but France has paid the interest upon the debt for the war stocks purchases. That is the situation.

Mr. HOWELL. I accept the correction. The last statement I noted from the Treasury was to the effect that for these four past years something like $80,000,000 has been paid on account of the French indebtedness, and I was not aware that the difference between that and $125,000,000, amounting to some $45,000,000, had been paid in addition. I felt so positive about this that I have been rather dogmatic, for which I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. HOWELL. I yield.

Mr. CARAWAY. Merely as a matter of information, possibly not material, in the length of time the French have declined to ratify their settlement with us, even with the practical surrender of the principal, how much money has France loaned to the powers that are spoken of as the "Little Entente" to keep up their standing armies in order to threaten the peace of all of southeast Europe, while she has been refusing to pay her debt to us? Does the Senator have a statement of how much money she has thus paid?

Mr. HOWELL. I have no such information.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HOWELL. I yield.

Mr. FLETCHER. The amendment the Senator proposes is not in conflict with the statement made by the Senator from Utah a moment ago as to the payments France has made.

Mr. HOWELL. It is not.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HOWELL. I yield.

Mr. WATSON. As everybody on the Senate side now knows, from information brought over by newspaper boys and universally circulated around among the Senators, the House has adjourned until the 23d day of September. All this is valueless unless the Senator from Nebraska will consent to withdraw his preamble amendment, because it will be three months before the House will get back, and the very day mentioned here is the 1st of August. I appeal to the Senator to withdraw the amendment, so that the original proposition may go through, and stand as it was before he offered the amendment which the Senator from Utah accepted.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I want to say to the Senator from Nebraska that word has come to me that the leaders could not hold a quorum in the House, and they had to adjourn. I appeal to the Senator to allow the resolution to be passed.

Mr. NORRIS. Before the Senator does that I wish he would yield to me.

Mr. HOWELL. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator's amendment, it is conceded, states the facts.

Mr. SMOOT. It does.

Mr. NORRIS. It tells the truth.

Mr. SMOOT. It tells the truth.

Mr. NORRIS. And my colleague offers it because of misrepresentations made over the country and in France about what the facts are. If he withdraws his amendment now, the report will go out that even the American Senate admits that the facts stated here are not true, and I am afraid the effect will be much worse than though he had never suggested it.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. NORRIS. Why should my colleague withdraw it? What harm can there be if this is not approved until the House comes back? It seems to me the Senator has here a proposition that is admitted to be just and admitted to be true. I dislike to see my colleague take it back and run the risk of being misunderstood.

Mr. SMOOT rose.

Mr. KING. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. HOWELL. I first yield to the senior Senator from Utah, who rose first.

Mr. SMOOT. I want to say to Senators that every statement made in the proposed amendment to the resolution offered by the Senator from Nebraska is a fact. All the facts are in the RECORD. This will all go out to the country. The French people have been led to believe we were Shylocks, that we were demanding of them more than it was possible for them to pay.

All the facts will be known now not only to the people of the United States, but to the French people, on account of the offering of the amendment by the Senator and the discussion of the matter upon the floor to-day.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I would like to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me, I want to suggest to the Senator from Nebraska, apropos of the suggestion of his colleague, that if there is anything in the point made by the able senior Senator, it could be cured if we would pass immediately, almost contemporaneously with this, a resolution something to the following effect:

Resolved, That the Senate has passed the foregoing resolution—

Identifying it—

with the interpretation of the Senate as recited in the preamble hereto annexed.

Mr. HARRISON. I was going to make the same suggestion.

Mr. KING. So that we might get the effect of it by passing an independent resolution.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, if that is agreed to——

Mr. SMOOT. I am perfectly willing to agree to it, because, as I state again, the Senator's preamble states only the facts, and I would like to have the people of France, as well as the American people, know the facts.

Mr. HOWELL. Very well, Mr. President; I will conclude my remarks and then prepare a resolution in accord with the suggestion.

Mr. President, if we reduce, using a 4¼ per cent interest table, the total payments made by France on account of this great debt of $4,231,000,000 to 62 equal annual installments, which can be readily done, it will be found that France is repaying us only enough to pay interest upon this $4,231,000,000 at the rate of 2.17 per cent per annum for 62 years, and then there is nothing left to pay and nothing ever will be paid upon this great principal sum of $4,231,000,000—in short, it is to be canceled. This fact ought to be known by the French people, that France is not repaying us enough to pay the interest which the American people are called upon to pay every year upon an amount of outstanding United States securities equivalent to the French debt. The deficit annually is about $78,000,000 on a 4¼ per cent basis and, as I stated, the last securities floated by the Treasury of the United States were on a basis of 5⅛ per cent. In other words, the French debt is still costing us money and will continue to cost us money throughout the entire 62 years or as long as we have any war debt, and, of course, if we pay off our war debt it will in fact be costing us money just the same, and we are not to get back a dollar of the principal amount of $4,231,000,000.

In conclusion, excluding the Greek debt, for which I have no data, this French debt practically concludes the settlement of 12 European debts, totaling $11,970,220,000. Taking them all together we cancel this nearly $12,000,000,000 and receive for 62 years only 2.64 per cent annually on account of the interest charges we must pay every year, yet the average cost of money to the Treasury of the United States at this time, including the bonds and securities issued at 3⅞ per cent, free of all taxation, is about 4 per cent. As a consequence our European debtors are still costing us millions every year, for after having canceled their debts of nearly $12,000,000,000, our taxpayers must pay annually an interest deficit on an equal amount of Government securities of $154,000,000. All debt payments taken together will fall that much short of paying our interest charges on $11,970,000,000 of war obligations—yet we are called Shylocks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator withdraw his amendment?

Mr. HOWELL. I withdraw the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution is in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment. If there are no amendments it will be reported to the Senate.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, and read the third time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the joint resolution pass?

Mr. MCKELLAR. I ask for a division.

On a division the joint resolution was passed.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 53) to create a joint congressional committee relating to the reorganization and concentration of the agencies connected with prohibition enforcement, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is the amendment of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. HAWES].

Mr. KING. Let the amendment be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. HAWES] proposes to amend, on page 2, line 3, after the word "enforcement," by inserting the following:

To investigate official lawlessness and report the number of men, women, and children killed and wounded upon land and sea in connection with prohibition enforcement.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Missouri desires to modify his amendement.

Mr. HAWES. The Senator from Washington believes the language employed in the amendment is broad, that it might include prosecuting or district attorneys; so I ask permission to change the amendment so that the first clause will read:

To investigate official misconduct of prohibition enforcement officers.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, may I ask a question of the Senator from Washington? Does the measure outside of the proposed amendment contemplate investigating the number of officers who in the performance of their duty have been murdered or injured by bootleggers?

Mr. JONES. The original resolution did not contemplate anything of the kind, but that is covered, I think, by the amendment of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I merely want to observe that it seems to me it would be a very one-sided affair to make an inquiry as to the number who have been injured by officers and upon the other hand not make inquiry as to the number who had been injured by the rum runners. We hear a great deal more about what happens to a public officer than we do about what happens to the rum runners who carry their shotguns loaded with buckshot and who carry their smoke screens and who make life nothing but misery for the officers trying to enforce the law. We do not hear much about their side of it, but if some officer unfortunately—and I do not excuse them—perchance injures or kills an innocent person, that case is taken up and magnified and in my opinion it helps to encourage law violation in the country. It has a great deal to do with the encouragement of law violation in the country.

Mr. JONES. I agree with the Senator, but as I understand the amendment of the Senator from Missouri, it covers both sides of the proposition.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I want it to cover both sides. I am not for any proposition that will stultify the Senate by inquiring into the number of deaths of men where officers make a mistake and not inquiring into the number of deaths of officers going about their business in a legitimate way who have been murdered and killed through the use of smoke screens and other devices.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, as long as we have had law in this country and in the countries from which we came, officers of the law have lost their lives and limbs and have been injured in the enforcement of the law. But this is a new departure. I never heard of a man being tried for murder for arresting a murderer or bank robber or counterfeiter. This lawlessness is a new crime in American history, and it is directed toward one statute of all the long list of statutes we have in America. I am perfectly willing that a list of those men who were wounded

